Ain't Scared of Your Jails (1960-1961) Black college students take a leadership role in the civil rights movement as lunch counter sit-ins spread across the South. "Freedom Riders" also try to desegregate interstate buses, but they are brutally attacked as they travel. No Easy Walk (1961-1963) The civil rights movement discovers the power of mass demonstrations as the Rev. Martin Luther King, Jr. emerges as its most visible leader. Some demonstrations succeed; others fail. But the triumphant March on Washington, D.C., under King's leadership, shows a mounting national support for civil rights. President John F. Kennedy proposes the Civil Rights Act.

A report of an extraordinary political scandal. The scale of corruption still coming to light dwarfs anything since Watergate. In one sense it's the age-old tale of greed, but greed encouraged now by the way our system works. Deep in the plea bargains of Jack Abramoff and his cronies is the admission that they conspired to use campaign contributions to bribe politicians; campaign finance is the core of the corruption. They took great pains to cover their tracks and they might have pulled it off except for a handful of honest people, and the work of some enterprising print reporters, Senate investigators, and the ethics team at the Department of Justice. Following the money in this story leads us through a bizarre maze of cocktail parties, golf courses, private jets, four-star restaurants, sweatshops and the chandeliered rooms frequented by the high and mighty in Washington. Stay with the twists and turns and the pieces fall into place. But keep in mind that what you're seeing is only a partial picture; we have not seen the end of Capitol crimes.

Few people ever meet a dwarf face-to-face. In this personal journey, documentary filmmaker Steve Delano shows firsthand how a genetic mutation marks a person for life. He reveals the isolation of his school years, his "ludicrous" strategies to fit in as well as the mixed blessings of dwarfism. In this film, Delano exercises the license of stature and his irreverent sense of humor to confront head-on conventional representations and misperceptions about dwarfs. From growing up a "freak" - a form of forced celebrity - to finally accepting and asserting his difference, Delano provides an idiosyncratic perspective based on a tip-toe life, and contemplates a future where genetic engineering may eliminate "people of difference" altogether.

It is a visual wonderland, where imposing mountains rise almost two vertical miles above sprawling salt flats and canyons are painted in strokes of blue, pink, violet, and green from sunrise to sunset. This is Death Valley - one of the most inhospitable places on the planet. Nowhere else is a landscape so exquisite yet brutal, stunning yet harsh. Here, temperatures spike into the 130s, the earth cracks like broken clay, and when the hot wind blows, all you can taste is dust and salt. But, ironically, it is water that has shaped this super-arid home of true survivors.

Few people ever meet a dwarf face-to-face. In this personal journey, documentary filmmaker Steve Delano shows firsthand how a genetic mutation marks a person for life. He reveals the isolation of his school years, his "ludicrous" strategies to fit in as well as the mixed blessings of dwarfism. In this film, Delano exercises the license of stature and his irreverent sense of humor to confront head-on conventional representations and misperceptions about dwarfs. From growing up a "freak" - a form of forced celebrity - to finally accepting and asserting his difference, Delano provides an idiosyncratic perspective based on a tip-toe life, and contemplates a future where genetic engineering may eliminate "people of difference" altogether.

A report of an extraordinary political scandal. The scale of corruption still coming to light dwarfs anything since Watergate. In one sense it's the age-old tale of greed, but greed encouraged now by the way our system works. Deep in the plea bargains of Jack Abramoff and his cronies is the admission that they conspired to use campaign contributions to bribe politicians; campaign finance is the core of the corruption. They took great pains to cover their tracks and they might have pulled it off except for a handful of honest people, and the work of some enterprising print reporters, Senate investigators, and the ethics team at the Department of Justice. Following the money in this story leads us through a bizarre maze of cocktail parties, golf courses, private jets, four-star restaurants, sweatshops and the chandeliered rooms frequented by the high and mighty in Washington. Stay with the twists and turns and the pieces fall into place. But keep in mind that what you're seeing is only a partial picture; we have not seen the end of Capitol crimes.

Five years after the attacks on 9/11 and the massive, multibillion-dollar reorganization of government agencies that followed, Pulitzer Prize-winning reporter Lowell Bergman investigates the domestic counterterrorism effort and asks whether we are any better prepared to prevent another catastrophic attack. Relying on interviews with high-level sources in the U. S. government, Bergman reveals ongoing interagency rivalry as well as troubling flaws in what has been the largest reorganization of the government in half a century. The documentary focuses on who is the real enemy within the United States and whether we are prepared to defeat him.

The Foley fallout out: behind the headlines. And the worsening situation in Iraq: what officials are now admitting tonight on Washington Week. Rep. Stephanie Tubbs Jones said, "We have a job to do and we got to do our job". That job? Getting to the bottom of the sordid congressional page scandal which has resulted in resignation, investigation, and consternation and close congressional races around the country. From a campaign ad: For over a year they knowingly ignored the welfare of children. Rep. Dennis Hastert (R-IL), (as seen from a tape.) "Ultimately, as someone has said in Washington before, the buck stops here." We take a closer look. Meanwhile, the situation in Iraq gets only worse. According to a military spokesman, "Attacks have steadily increased in Baghdad during these past weeks". And an influential U.S. senator sounds the warning bell. Covering these stories this week: Janet Hook of the Los Angeles Times, John Harwood of CNBC and the Wall Street Journal, John Harris of the Washington Post, and Linda Robinson of U.S. News and World Report.

Few people ever meet a dwarf face-to-face. In this personal journey, documentary filmmaker Steve Delano shows firsthand how a genetic mutation marks a person for life. He reveals the isolation of his school years, his "ludicrous" strategies to fit in as well as the mixed blessings of dwarfism. In this film, Delano exercises the license of stature and his irreverent sense of humor to confront head-on conventional representations and misperceptions about dwarfs. From growing up a "freak" - a form of forced celebrity - to finally accepting and asserting his difference, Delano provides an idiosyncratic perspective based on a tip-toe life, and contemplates a future where genetic engineering may eliminate "people of difference" altogether.

Secrets of the Dead: Umbrella Assassin is an amazing Cold War story about a Bulgarian dissident who was shot with a poison pellet from an umbrella gun while he was waiting at a bus stop. For many reasons over the last 30 years, the investigations were thwarted, but in our film we go back and re-examine it from start to finish. We even name the triggerman, who is still on the loose in Europe. This is a forensic investigation that looks at how the gun and the poison pellet actually worked, but it's also a bigger Cold War political investigation that explores why the various investigations were stonewalled, and how the KGB may have been working with the Bulgarians to pull off the assassination. Even though the assassination happened a long time ago, the story is relevant right now because the statute of limitations on the murder is about to run out, so within a few years the assassin will have nothing left to worry about. To complicate things even more, Bulgaria is currently applying to be a member of the European Union so they are not particularly interested in having this investigation into their shady past reignited.

FRONTLINE reports from the lawless Pakistani tribal areas along the Afghanistan-Pakistan border and reveals how the area has fallen under the control of a resurgent Taliban militia, which uses it as a launching pad for attacks on U.S. and coalition forces in Afghanistan. Despite the presence of more than 70,000 Pakistani troops, the Taliban has claimed two tribal agencies, North and South Waziristan, as Taliban republics. The area, off limits to U.S. troops by agreement with Pakistan's president and long suspected of harboring Osama bin Laden and his deputy Ayman al-Zawahiri, is now considered a failed state. President Pervez Musharraf tells FRONTLINE reporter Martin Smith that Pakistan's strategy, which includes cash payments to militants who lay down their arms, has clearly foundered. In a region little understood because it is closed to most observers, FRONTLINE investigates a secret front in the war on terror.

North Korea front and center, what's at stake in the midterm elections, and the latest Foley fallout, tonight on "Washington Week." "The proclaimed actions taken by North Korea are unacceptable", said President George Bush. North Korea ups the ante, calling the world's bluff with what it says was a successful nuclear weapons test. Kofi Annan [UN Secretary General] claims, "It complicates an already difficult security situation in the Korean Peninsula". But if the test did happen, what are the United States and the United Nations prepared to do about it? "We shouldn't allow meetings and more meetings and more meetings and more meetings to be an excuse for inaction," says John Bolton [U.S. ambassador to the UN]. Keeping all the balls in the air: the president takes to the podium and to the road to defend his presidency and to toss out a political lifeline to congressional Republicans. Pres. Bush says "I'm proud to be standing with the current Speaker of the House, who is going to be the future Speaker of the House". But polls show GOP incumbents around the country struggling. We look at the key contests. Also, the effect Washington scandals may be having on these precarious midterm elections. The Foley fallout out: behind the headlines. And the worsening situation in Iraq: what officials are now admitting tonight on Washington Week. Rep. Stephanie Tubbs Jones said, "We have a job to do and we got to do our job". That job? Getting to the bottom of the sordid congressional page scandal which has resulted in resignation, investigation, and consternation and close congressional races around the country. From a campaign ad: For over a year they knowingly ignored the welfare of children. Rep. Dennis Hastert (R-IL), (as seen from a tape.) "Ultimately, as someone has said in Washington before, the buck stops here." We take a closer look. Meanwhile, the situation in Iraq gets only worse. According to a military spokesman, "Attacks have steadily increased in Baghdad during these past weeks". And an influential U.S. senator sounds the warning bell. Covering these stories this week: Janet Hook of the Los Angeles Times, John Harwood of CNBC and the Wall Street Journal, John Harris of the Washington Post, and Linda Robinson of U.S. News and World Report.

Ain't Scared of Your Jails (1960-1961) Black college students take a leadership role in the civil rights movement as lunch counter sit-ins spread across the South. "Freedom Riders" also try to desegregate interstate buses, but they are brutally attacked as they travel. No Easy Walk (1961-1963) The civil rights movement discovers the power of mass demonstrations as the Rev. Martin Luther King, Jr. emerges as its most visible leader. Some demonstrations succeed; others fail. But the triumphant March on Washington, D.C., under King's leadership, shows a mounting national support for civil rights. President John F. Kennedy proposes the Civil Rights Act.

In June 1900, Major Walter Reed, Chief Surgeon of the U.S. Army, led a medical team to Cuba on a mission to investigate yellow fever. For more than 200 years, the disease had terrorized the United States, killing an estimated 100,000 people in the 19th century alone. Shortly after Reed and his team arrived in Havana, they began testing the radical theories of Carlos Finlay, a Cuban doctor who believed that mosquitoes spread yellow fever. This program documents the heroic efforts of Reed's medical team, some of whom put their own lives on the line to verify Finlay's theory. When yellow fever struck New Orleans in 1905, an aggressive mosquito eradication campaign successfully ended the epidemic. It was the last yellow fever outbreak in the United States and the first major public health triumph of the 20th century.

What is the one principle, belief, or cause for which you would sacrifice everything - including your life? Ethical, spiritual, and ideological values that are central to the human experience find their voice in the documentary film, Last Best Hope, an intimate, riveting, little-known story about the ordinary men and women in the Belgian Resistance and their extraordinary acts to save and repatriate downed Allied airmen during the Second World War. At the heart of the story is 85-year old American Bill Grosvenor, a P-47 Thunderbolt pilot who fell from the skies over Belgium and into the hands of the Resistance in 1943. Nearly sixty years later, Grosvenor is reunited with his helpers in Belgium who fought against tyranny and oppression in their homes, in their neighborhoods, and in the streets of Brussels. Resistance fighters share for the first time their daring and heartrending stories, allowing Last Best Hope to explore the myriad motivations that propel one stranger to help another, despite the risk to his or her own life and everything dear. As unexpectedly as the Gestapo snared Grosvenor in an early morning safehouse raid, Last Best Hope transports the viewer to another place and time with a universal message about faith, hope, and the undefeatable power of the human spirit. Stunning and cathartic, Last Best Hope takes even the most jaded WWII film buff by surprise.

Bill Gates and Warren Buffett, the two richest men in America, are close friends. Though a generation apart in age and founders of two very different businesses, the two have deep admiration and affection for each other. They also share a common sense of responsibility to aggressively use their wealth to improve the world. Gates favors health, while Buffett focuses on nuclear disarmament. Occasionally, they get together with members of the next generation of business leaders to answer their questions. On September 30, the two men spent the day at the University of Nebraska at Lincoln, where they filled the Lied Center with students and faculty from the College of Business Administration. This high-definition program captures the energy, intelligence and humor of the event.

Separating a political campaign from the big money that feeds it (and the accompanying special interest that all too often corrupts it) seems like a quixotic endeavor at best. But don't tell that to a "cleanly-elected" politician in Arizona or Maine, or to Proposition 89 supporters in California. To them, the fight to make elections free, fair, and publicly funded is nothing short of a peoples' revolution in American politics. The more we investigated, the more obvious it became that we needed a full hour to cover the "Clean Election" movement and its ramifications on our democracy. And so, this Friday we present "Votes for Sale?" the story of a grass roots rebellion that is inspiring citizens coast to coast, but also creating a contentious debate about how far a candidate should be allowed to go to win your vote.

People earning the smallest paychecks in America often rely on that money to support their entire families. Six states will be voting to raise their minimum wage in the upcoming election. One of them is Missouri, where the topic has become a hot political issue.

Meanwhile, Texas, home to more minimum wage workers than any other state, has no ballot initiative to raise the minimum wage, leaving workers with very desperate choices. These are the people who clean our clothes, our offices, and our hotel rooms, while most of us look the other way. How we treat them - and not just during election cycles - says a lot about our national character. In two separate reports, one on-air and one online, NOW looks at the impact of low wages on both politics and families, and what steps some are taking to fight for a "living wage".

"Magnetic Storm"--On March 13, 1989, the lights went out all across Canada and the eastern seaboard of the United States as far south as New York. The most serious power grid failure in American history was caused by a magnetic storm in the earth's upper atmosphere, itself triggered by the eruption of a huge flare from the surface of the Sun. Unusual as this event may seem, many scientists today are beginning to worry that it may be a harbinger of things to come, and that changes to the planet's magnetic field could make earth ever more vulnerable to deadly radiation from space. This film explores one of the least-known but most serious threats to life on earth.

In June 1900, Major Walter Reed, Chief Surgeon of the U.S. Army, led a medical team to Cuba on a mission to investigate yellow fever. For more than 200 years, the disease had terrorized the United States, killing an estimated 100,000 people in the 19th century alone. Shortly after Reed and his team arrived in Havana, they began testing the radical theories of Carlos Finlay, a Cuban doctor who believed that mosquitoes spread yellow fever. This program documents the heroic efforts of Reed's medical team, some of whom put their own lives on the line to verify Finlay's theory. When yellow fever struck New Orleans in 1905, an aggressive mosquito eradication campaign successfully ended the epidemic. It was the last yellow fever outbreak in the United States and the first major public health triumph of the 20th century.

"Magnetic Storm"--On March 13, 1989, the lights went out all across Canada and the eastern seaboard of the United States as far south as New York. The most serious power grid failure in American history was caused by a magnetic storm in the earth's upper atmosphere, itself triggered by the eruption of a huge flare from the surface of the Sun. Unusual as this event may seem, many scientists today are beginning to worry that it may be a harbinger of things to come, and that changes to the planet's magnetic field could make earth ever more vulnerable to deadly radiation from space. This film explores one of the least-known but most serious threats to life on earth.

For nearly a century, humans forgot their glorious past and huddled in a state of ignorance and fear. Scientists have uncovered evidence from around the world that indicates that the early Dark Ages may have been triggered by an actual event that occurred around 535 A.D. Science writer David Keys believes that the cause was a natural phenomenon of cataclysmic proportions. Determined to discover the exact nature of this catastrophe, and to understand its political, economic and social repercussions, he embarks on a scientific odyssey that ranges from Greenland to the Antarctica; from the Americas to the Far East. At the center of a stunningly-complex chain of events seems to be a loud bang (according to Keys this was a volcanic explosion equal to two thousand million Hiroshima size bombs.) The subsequent environmental calamity, he believes, affected human civilization from Mongolia to Constantinople, precipitating plague, famine, death, great migration, the fall of the great Mexican city of Teotihuacan, the Anglo-Saxon victory over the Celts, and may even have played a role in the rise of Islam.

She was described in the press as the "Baby of the Century." When Louise Brown, the world's first successful test tube baby, was born in Great Britain on July 25, 1978, the event was heralded as the beginning of a technological revolution in human reproduction. It was also the culmination of a decade-long effort, involving scientists on both sides of the Atlantic, to help a woman conceive through in vitro fertilization, or IVF. This is the story of two doctors - New York gynecologist Landrum Shettles and British physiologist Robert Edwards - whose work became the focus of debate over the limits of science and a precursor of the current debate over cloning and stem cell research.

People earning the smallest paychecks in America often rely on that money to support their entire families. Six states will be voting to raise their minimum wage in the upcoming election. One of them is Missouri, where the topic has become a hot political issue.

Meanwhile, Texas, home to more minimum wage workers than any other state, has no ballot initiative to raise the minimum wage, leaving workers with very desperate choices. These are the people who clean our clothes, our offices, and our hotel rooms, while most of us look the other way. How we treat them - and not just during election cycles - says a lot about our national character. In two separate reports, one on-air and one online, NOW looks at the impact of low wages on both politics and families, and what steps some are taking to fight for a "living wage".

In June 1900, Major Walter Reed, Chief Surgeon of the U.S. Army, led a medical team to Cuba on a mission to investigate yellow fever. For more than 200 years, the disease had terrorized the United States, killing an estimated 100,000 people in the 19th century alone. Shortly after Reed and his team arrived in Havana, they began testing the radical theories of Carlos Finlay, a Cuban doctor who believed that mosquitoes spread yellow fever. This program documents the heroic efforts of Reed's medical team, some of whom put their own lives on the line to verify Finlay's theory. When yellow fever struck New Orleans in 1905, an aggressive mosquito eradication campaign successfully ended the epidemic. It was the last yellow fever outbreak in the United States and the first major public health triumph of the 20th century.

In the aftermath of the fall of Saddam Hussein, a group of Americans led by Ambassador L. Paul Bremer III set off to Baghdad to build a new nation and establish democracy in the Arab Middle East. One year later, with Bremer forced to secretly exit what some have called "the most dangerous place on earth," the group left behind lawlessness, insurgency, economic collapse, death, destruction - and much of their idealism. Three years later, as the U.S. continues to look for an exit strategy, the government the Americans helped create and the infrastructure they designed are being tested. FRONTLINE producer Michael Kirk follows the early efforts and ideals of this group as they tried to seize control and disband the Iraqi police, army and Baathist government - and how they became hardened along the way to the realities of postwar Iraq. The program is based on numerous first-person interviews and extensive documentation from the FRONTLINE team that produced "Rumsfeld's War," "The Torture Question" and "The Dark Side."

Separating a political campaign from the big money that feeds it (and the accompanying special interest that all too often corrupts it) seems like a quixotic endeavor at best. But don't tell that to a "cleanly-elected" politician in Arizona or Maine, or to Proposition 89 supporters in California. To them, the fight to make elections free, fair, and publicly funded is nothing short of a peoples' revolution in American politics. The more we investigated, the more obvious it became that we needed a full hour to cover the "Clean Election" movement and its ramifications on our democracy. And so, this Friday we present "Votes for Sale?" the story of a grass roots rebellion that is inspiring citizens coast to coast, but also creating a contentious debate about how far a candidate should be allowed to go to win your vote.

People earning the smallest paychecks in America often rely on that money to support their entire families. Six states will be voting to raise their minimum wage in the upcoming election. One of them is Missouri, where the topic has become a hot political issue. Meanwhile, Texas, home to more minimum wage workers than any other state, has no ballot initiative to raise the minimum wage, leaving workers with very desperate choices. These are the people who clean our clothes, our offices, and our hotel rooms, while most of us look the other way. How we treat them - and not just during election cycles - says a lot about our national character. In two separate reports, one on-air and one online, NOW looks at the impact of low wages on both politics and families, and what steps some are taking to fight for a "living wage".

Election year meltdown: the House and the Senate both up for grabs as the White House grapples with setbacks in Iraq and North Korea, tonight on "Washington Week." Forget about red states and blue states: Republicans this year are seeing only a sea of purple in one bad poll after another. As House incumbents battle pre-election investigation. Rep. Curt Weldon (R-Pa) says, "I would not have wished this for anyone and three weeks before the election it makes the campaign that much more difficult." And some Republicans speculate about what will happen if they lose the Senate, too. Sen. John McCain (R-Az) said, "I think I'll just commit suicide. I don't want to face that eventuality because I don't think it's going to happen." Meanwhile, the president hits the campaign trail while coping with bad news from Iraq and sobering news from North Korea that has rattled old allies. "The United States has the will and the capability to meet the full range - and I underscore full range - of its deterrent and security commitments", claims Secretary Of State Condoleezza Rice. Threats, political and international. Covering those stories this week: Dan Balz of the Washington Post, Michael Duffy of Time Magazine, Doyle McManus of the Los Angeles Times, and Andrea Mitchell of NBC News.

All elections all the time, we cover the Republicans, the Democrats, the money, and the ads, tonight on Washington Week. "No one can predict the future with absolute certainty, so you ought to just back off, take a look at it, relax, understand that it's complicated, it's difficult," said Secretary Of Defense Donald Rumsfeld. Donald Rumsfeld was referring to the war in Iraq, but he could have been talking about the looming midterm elections. Senator Hillary Clinton (D-NY) said, "If we can take back the Congress, we will stop that radical, right-wing, Bush-Cheney agenda." Everybody is talking tough about the war, about the election, about the political stakes, and about each other. An unidentified woman in a political ad claims, "I met Harold at the Playboy party." The rubber is hitting the road, and we'll cover it all tonight with Peter Baker of the Washington Post, Janet Hook of the Los Angeles Times, James Barnes of National Journal, and Jeanne Cummings of the Wall Street Journal.

She was described in the press as the "Baby of the Century." When Louise Brown, the world's first successful test tube baby, was born in Great Britain on July 25, 1978, the event was heralded as the beginning of a technological revolution in human reproduction. It was also the culmination of a decade-long effort, involving scientists on both sides of the Atlantic, to help a woman conceive through in vitro fertilization, or IVF. The first colonists to leave Britain for America settled in Virginia, full of hope for their new home and dreaming of riches. But after just six months, 80 of the 100 were dead. The perceived wisdom is that they died of malaria or another disease. But, recent exhumations reveal a surprising discovery. The bodies contain high levels of arsenic. Were they poisoned? And could the culprit have been a Catholic intent on stopping the Protestants colonizing the New World?

She was described in the press as the "Baby of the Century." When Louise Brown, the world's first successful test tube baby, was born in Great Britain on July 25, 1978, the event was heralded as the beginning of a technological revolution in human reproduction. It was also the culmination of a decade-long effort, involving scientists on both sides of the Atlantic, to help a woman conceive through in vitro fertilization, or IVF. This is the story of two doctors - New York gynecologist Landrum Shettles and British physiologist Robert Edwards - whose work became the focus of debate over the limits of science and a precursor of the current debate over cloning and stem cell research.

The future of the Internet is up for grabs. Last year, the FCC eliminated "net neutrality" rules, which allowed every American and every company to access the Internet equally. Today, big corporations are lobbying Washington to turn the World Wide Web into a toll road, threatening democracy's newest forum. Yet the public knows little about what's happening behind closed doors on Capitol Hill. Some activists put it this way: a few mega media giants own the content and control the delivery of radio, television, and the press; if we let them take control of the Internet as well, who will pay the price?

"Magnetic Storm"--On March 13, 1989, the lights went out all across Canada and the eastern seaboard of the United States as far south as New York. The most serious power grid failure in American history was caused by a magnetic storm in the earth's upper atmosphere, itself triggered by the eruption of a huge flare from the surface of the Sun. Unusual as this event may seem, many scientists today are beginning to worry that it may be a harbinger of things to come, and that changes to the planet's magnetic field could make earth ever more vulnerable to deadly radiation from space. This film explores one of the least-known but most serious threats to life on earth.

Working alone in Iraq over eight months, filmmaker Laura Poitras (P.O.V. "Flag Wars") created an extraordinary, intimate portrait of Iraqis living under U.S. occupation. Her principal focus is Dr. Riyadh, an Iraqi medical doctor, father of six and Sunni political candidate. An outspoken critic of the occupation, he is equally passionate about the need to establish democracy in Iraq, arguing that Sunni participation in the January 2005 elections is essential. Yet all around him, Dr. Riyadh sees only chaos, as his waiting room fills each day with patients suffering the physical and mental effects of ever-increasing violence. Poitras gained remarkable access to the Sunni community, U.S. military and the U.N., resulting in this powerful mosaic of daily life in Iraq not seen in the mainstream media.

In the aftermath of the fall of Saddam Hussein, a group of Americans led by Ambassador L. Paul Bremer III set off to Baghdad to build a new nation and establish democracy in the Arab Middle East. One year later, with Bremer forced to secretly exit what some have called "the most dangerous place on earth," the group left behind lawlessness, insurgency, economic collapse, death, destruction - and much of their idealism. Three years later, as the U.S. continues to look for an exit strategy, the government the Americans helped create and the infrastructure they designed are being tested. FRONTLINE producer Michael Kirk follows the early efforts and ideals of this group as they tried to seize control and disband the Iraqi police, army and Baathist government - and how they became hardened along the way to the realities of postwar Iraq. The program is based on numerous first-person interviews and extensive documentation from the FRONTLINE team that produced "Rumsfeld's War," "The Torture Question" and "The Dark Side."

What is the one principle, belief, or cause for which you would sacrifice everything - including your life? Ethical, spiritual, and ideological values that are central to the human experience find their voice in the documentary film, Last Best Hope, an intimate, riveting, little-known story about the ordinary men and women in the Belgian Resistance and their extraordinary acts to save and repatriate downed Allied airmen during the Second World War. At the heart of the story is 85-year old American Bill Grosvenor, a P-47 Thunderbolt pilot who fell from the skies over Belgium and into the hands of the Resistance in 1943. Nearly sixty years later, Grosvenor is reunited with his helpers in Belgium who fought against tyranny and oppression in their homes, in their neighborhoods, and in the streets of Brussels. Resistance fighters share for the first time their daring and heartrending stories, allowing Last Best Hope to explore the myriad motivations that propel one stranger to help another, despite the risk to his or her own life and everything dear. As unexpectedly as the Gestapo snared Grosvenor in an early morning safehouse raid, Last Best Hope transports the viewer to another place and time with a universal message about faith, hope, and the undefeatable power of the human spirit. Stunning and cathartic, Last Best Hope takes even the most jaded WWII film buff by surprise.

Election year meltdown: the House and the Senate both up for grabs as the White House grapples with setbacks in Iraq and North Korea, tonight on "Washington Week." Forget about red states and blue states: Republicans this year are seeing only a sea of purple in one bad poll after another. As House incumbents battle pre-election investigation. Rep. Curt Weldon (R-Pa) says, "I would not have wished this for anyone and three weeks before the election it makes the campaign that much more difficult." And some Republicans speculate about what will happen if they lose the Senate, too. Sen. John McCain (R-Az) said, "I think I'll just commit suicide. I don't want to face that eventuality because I don't think it's going to happen." Meanwhile, the president hits the campaign trail while coping with bad news from Iraq and sobering news from North Korea that has rattled old allies. "The United States has the will and the capability to meet the full range - and I underscore full range - of its deterrent and security commitments", claims Secretary Of State Condoleezza Rice. Threats, political and international. All elections all the time, we cover the Republicans, the Democrats, the money, and the ads, tonight on Washington Week. "No one can predict the future with absolute certainty, so you ought to just back off, take a look at it, relax, understand that it's complicated, it's difficult," said Secretary Of Defense Donald Rumsfeld. Donald Rumsfeld was referring to the war in Iraq, but he could have been talking about the looming midterm elections. Senator Hillary Clinton (D-NY) said, "If we can take back the Congress, we will stop that radical, right-wing, Bush-Cheney agenda." Everybody is talking tough about the war, about the election, about the political stakes, and about each other. An unidentified woman in a political ad claims, "I met Harold at the Playboy party." The rubber is hitting the road, and we'll cover it all tonight with Peter Baker of the Washington Post, Janet Hook of the Los Angeles Times, James Barnes of National Journal, and Jeanne Cummings of the Wall Street Journal.

America's aging baby boomers are headed for a shock as they near retirement. In addition to Social Security, the pillars of retirement income for Americans have been either lifetime corporate pensions or employee-contribution plans such as 401Ks. But both retirement strategies are in trouble. Buffeted by pension cuts, corporate bankruptcies, and the 2001-2002 stock market crash, most boomers now expect to be working into their retirement years.

Version: SD-Base

Length: 60

Airdate: 11/13/2006 8:00:00 PM/502

Service: PBS

Format: Documentary

The story of Jesse James remains one of America's most cherished myths and one of its most wrong-headed. Jesse James, so the legend goes, was a Western outlaw, though, in fact, he never went west; America's own Robin Hood, though he robbed from the poor as well as the rich, and kept it all for himself; and a gunfighter whose victims, in reality, were almost always unarmed. Less heroic than brutal, James was in fact a product, from first to last, of the American Civil War; a Confederate partisan of expansive ambition, unbending politics and surprising cunning, who gladly helped invent his own valiant legend. A member of a vicious band of Missouri guerrillas during the war, James sought redemption afterwards. But as this AMERICAN EXPERIENCE production reveals, year by year, he rode further from it, redeeming instead the great and glorious memory of the Old South. In a life steeped in prolific violence and bloodshed, he met what was perhaps the most fitting end; like so many of his own victims, James himself was an unarmed man, shot in the back.

Segment Length: 00:56:46

In 1926, just a few months before her death, Will Rogers described Annie Oakley as "the greatest woman rifle shot the world has ever produced." As the star attraction of Buffalo Bill's Wild West Show, she thrilled audiences around the world with her daring shooting feats and her act helped fuel turn-of-the-century nostalgia for the vanished, mythical world of the American West. Over time she became an American legend-the loud, brassy, cocksure shooter celebrated in the musical "Annie Get Your Gun." But that legend had little to do with the real Annie Oakley. Although famous as a Western sharpshooter, Oakley lived her entire life east of the Mississippi. A champion in a man's sport, she forever changed ideas about the abilities of women, yet she opposed female suffrage. Her fame and fortune came from her skill with guns, yet she was a Quaker. This probing AMERICAN EXPERIENCE production examines the dramatic life of a uniquely American icon whose complex character manifested many of the paradoxes of the nation.

At the end of 1853, San Francisco was a city on the fast track. It had twelve daily newspapers, nine insurance companies, consulates of twenty-seven foreign governments, and six-story buildings where sand dunes once stood. A few years earlier, the seaside town had been a sleepy village of just 800 people. But the sight of gold in the rushing waters of the American River sent a ripple around the world and set the stage for an event that would forever change a city, a fledgling state, and the nation. "The Gold Rush transformed California, but more importantly, it transformed America," says historian J.S. Holliday. "Next to the Civil War in the nineteenth century, no other event had a greater impact, more long-lasting reverberations than the Gold Rush." On Monday, November 6, American Experience presents The Gold Rush. From producer/director Randall MacLowry (Stephen Foster, A Brilliant Madness) and writer Michelle Ferrari (Las Vegas: An Unconventional History, Seabiscuit, Miss America, New Orleans), this new documentary features interviews with acclaimed writer Isabel Allende, and noted historians James Rawls, Kevin Starr, and Richard White, among others. Incorporating rare and exquisite daguerreotypes and original recreations, this film offers a vivid new portrait of a seminal event in America's history.

Format: Documentary
Segment Length: 00:53:31

In 1941, the world was at war and the Allies were desperate to slow the tide of Nazi domination. The Germans needed 100 gallons of water to make one ton of steel. Barnes Wallis, a British aircraft designer, set out to develop a unique weapon that would detonate dams -- a bomb that could skip across water, cling to its target and explode at a specific depth to deliver its coup de grace. This program investigates the urgent rush to create, test and deploy the new bomb, and the efforts to train an elite squadron of pilots for the unusually dangerous low-level night flights to drop it far inside enemy lines. Using archival footage, modern tests of the original principles and equipment, and interviews with experts, participants in the raids and their surviving relatives, the program provides insight into the ingenuity of the man who built the bomb under incredible pressure, as well as the dedication and bravery of the airmen from Britain, Canada, America, Australia and New Zealand who risked (and lost) their lives in one of the most daring missions of WWII.

With the development of the airplane propeller, the Wright brothers launched a revolution that continues a century later. Wilbur and Orville may have hoped their Wright Flyer would put an end to warfare, but instead, in just a few short years, the airplane became a key tool in military combat. The pace of technological change was fast and furious as the airplane quickly evolved from a reconnaissance tool, to an artillery spotter, to a bomber, to a fighter. As its utility expanded, the airplane redefined warfare in the 20th century.

This last development may have had the most destructive and terrifying effects, giving rise to the Blitz over London, the firebombing of Germany, and the atomic bombings of Hiroshima and Nagasaki.

Missed opportunities, a vital arms race and the secrets hidden among the spoils of war come vividly to life in the third program of WARPLANE. In the latter days of World War II, Britain and Germany feverishly advanced early dreams of a jet airplane, a defining piece of mid- 20th-century technology that would revolutionize existing airplane roles and create an entirely new generation of mission-specific machines. With the world in the grip of the Cold War, combat planes became faster and more agile, spy planes cruised over enemy territory at dizzying heights and dazzling speeds, and jet-powered helicopters entered military service. Designers, test pilots and combat crews took huge risks as they pushed the technological envelope, and within 58 years of Orville Wright's historic flight at Kitty Hawk, man had broken through the boundaries of both sound and space.

Over the trenches of World War I, the "eye in the sky" had been indispensable. Since that time, developers have worked endlessly to make planes harder to spot and shoot down. Speed worked at first, then the ability to fly high, but each advance was eventually met by a counter-advance that all but neutralized it. Until, that is, the birth of the computer. With the computer age came avionics - systems to control planes that humans could never fly. These systems, combined with new materials, designs and paints, as well as the unwavering commitment and singular vision of men like Skunk Works' Ben Rich, gave rise to the most recent revolution in military aviation - stealth planes that are all but invisible to enemy eyes. Like the jet engine before it, stealth technology has transformed warfare, and together with ever-advanced precision ordnance and purely autonomous planes, has positioned the world's most advanced air forces for a future here in-cockpit pilots may no longer be necessary.

On May 6, 2005, the residents of Spokane, Washington, awoke to one of the strangest headlines in the town's history: "West Tied to Sex Abuse in '70s, Using Office to Lure Young Men". The popular, socially conservative Republican mayor of Spokane, Jim West, had been outed by the town's newspaper The Spokesman-Review. The paper told the sordid story of a man with two lives: in public, he had once sponsored legislation forbidding gays from teaching in public schools, while in private, the paper alleged, he was trawling for young men online, using the trappings of his office to lure them into sexual relationships. But as bizarre as the revelations were, so too were the newspaper's methods. For months, a middle-aged "forensic computer specialist" had posed as an eighteen-year-old boy online, engaging the mayor in a relationship that became more and more intimate, ultimately exploding on the front page of the newspaper. With unfettered access to all the principal players, FRONTLINE explores how this story forced an all-American town to confront its most basic feelings about homosexuality and sheds new light on the confusing, often contradictory, experience of gay people themselves in a place far from the main battlefields of the culture wars.

Iraq. The word itself has transcended geography and now has a new definition: "problem." But how big a problem it is still depends on who you ask. With a crucial mid-term election days away, NOW put Iraq's "problem" status to the test by traveling to one of the most pro-military communities in the country. In Texas' 31st Congressional district, home to America's largest active army base, we take a penetrating and surprising look at the people and politics of President Bush's home state. On NOW Online (www.pbs.org/now), watch web-exclusive video reports about two Texas candidates, both veterans, both making the war the center of their campaigns, but each coming at it from a radically different point of view. Finally, no one could ever accuse journalist Andrew Sullivan of being shy with his opinions. In an insightful interview, he talks to David Brancaccio about what the mid-term elections will mean for Republicans now and in the future. Are they doomed? Andrew says yes...and no.

When's the last time we had an Election Night that actually ended on Election Night? That's certainly not the only question people came away with after the dust finally settled to reveal that Democrats had seized control of both houses of Congress. In this week's show we're tackling some of those questions with the help of Salon.com editor-in-chief Joan Walsh. At the same time, we're taking a look back at the issues and people featured in our pre-election coverage to see if those political and personal stories had happy or sad endings (hint: both). On NOW Online (www.pbs.org/now), check out how hot-button ballot initiatives fared around the country, with a generous helping of NOW insight. And take our online poll to let us know if you think President Bush and Nancy Pelosi can play nice.

America's aging baby boomers are headed for a shock as they near retirement. In addition to Social Security, the pillars of retirement income for Americans have been either lifetime corporate pensions or employee-contribution plans such as 401Ks. But both retirement strategies are in trouble. Buffeted by pension cuts, corporate bankruptcies, and the 2001-2002 stock market crash, most boomers now expect to be working into their retirement years.

The story of Jesse James remains one of America's most cherished myths and one of its most wrong-headed. Jesse James, so the legend goes, was a Western outlaw, though, in fact, he never went west; America's own Robin Hood, though he robbed from the poor as well as the rich, and kept it all for himself; and a gunfighter whose victims, in reality, were almost always unarmed. Less heroic than brutal, James was in fact a product, from first to last, of the American Civil War; a Confederate partisan of expansive ambition, unbending politics and surprising cunning, who gladly helped invent his own valiant legend. A member of a vicious band of Missouri guerrillas during the war, James sought redemption afterwards. But as this AMERICAN EXPERIENCE production reveals, year by year, he rode further from it, redeeming instead the great and glorious memory of the Old South. In a life steeped in prolific violence and bloodshed, he met what was perhaps the most fitting end; like so many of his own victims, James himself was an unarmed man, shot in the back.

On May 6, 2005, the residents of Spokane, Washington, awoke to one of the strangest headlines in the town's history: "West Tied to Sex Abuse in '70s, Using Office to Lure Young Men". The popular, socially conservative Republican mayor of Spokane, Jim West, had been outed by the town's newspaper The Spokesman-Review. The paper told the sordid story of a man with two lives: in public, he had once sponsored legislation forbidding gays from teaching in public schools, while in private, the paper alleged, he was trawling for young men online, using the trappings of his office to lure them into sexual relationships. But as bizarre as the revelations were, so too were the newspaper's methods. For months, a middle-aged "forensic computer specialist" had posed as an eighteen-year-old boy online, engaging the mayor in a relationship that became more and more intimate, ultimately exploding on the front page of the newspaper. With unfettered access to all the principal players, FRONTLINE explores how this story forced an all-American town to confront its most basic feelings about homosexuality and sheds new light on the confusing, often contradictory, experience of gay people themselves in a place far from the main battlefields of the culture wars.

In an era when Dick, Jane and discipline ruled America's schools, Albert Cullum allowed Shakespeare, Sophocles and Shaw to reign in his fifth-grade classroom. Weaving archival footage with interviews of Cullum and his former students, this film is a portrait of the lives transformed by a maverick teacher who enabled children to embrace their inner greatness.

America's aging baby boomers are headed for a shock as they near retirement. In addition to Social Security, the pillars of retirement income for Americans have been either lifetime corporate pensions or employee-contribution plans such as 401Ks. But both retirement strategies are in trouble. Buffeted by pension cuts, corporate bankruptcies, and the 2001-2002 stock market crash, most boomers now expect to be working into their retirement years.

For nearly a century, humans forgot their glorious past and huddled in a state of ignorance and fear. Scientists have uncovered evidence from around the world that indicates that the early Dark Ages may have been triggered by an actual event that occurred around 535 A.D. Science writer David Keys believes that the cause was a natural phenomenon of cataclysmic proportions. Determined to discover the exact nature of this catastrophe, and to understand its political, economic and social repercussions, he embarks on a scientific odyssey that ranges from Greenland to the Antarctica; from the Americas to the Far East. At the center of a stunningly-complex chain of events seems to be a loud bang (according to Keys this was a volcanic explosion equal to two thousand million Hiroshima size bombs.) The subsequent environmental calamity, he believes, affected human civilization from Mongolia to Constantinople, precipitating plague, famine, death, great migration, the fall of the great Mexican city of Teotihuacan, the Anglo-Saxon victory over the Celts, and may even have played a role in the rise of Islam.

On May 6, 2005, the residents of Spokane, Washington, awoke to one of the strangest headlines in the town's history: "West Tied to Sex Abuse in '70s, Using Office to Lure Young Men". The popular, socially conservative Republican mayor of Spokane, Jim West, had been outed by the town's newspaper The Spokesman-Review. The paper told the sordid story of a man with two lives: in public, he had once sponsored legislation forbidding gays from teaching in public schools, while in private, the paper alleged, he was trawling for young men online, using the trappings of his office to lure them into sexual relationships. But as bizarre as the revelations were, so too were the newspaper's methods. For months, a middle-aged "forensic computer specialist" had posed as an eighteen-year-old boy online, engaging the mayor in a relationship that became more and more intimate, ultimately exploding on the front page of the newspaper. With unfettered access to all the principal players, FRONTLINE explores how this story forced an all-American town to confront its most basic feelings about homosexuality and sheds new light on the confusing, often contradictory, experience of gay people themselves in a place far from the main battlefields of the culture wars.

Iraq. The word itself has transcended geography and now has a new definition: "problem." But how big a problem it is still depends on who you ask. With a crucial mid-term election days away, NOW put Iraq's "problem" status to the test by traveling to one of the most pro-military communities in the country. In Texas' 31st Congressional district, home to America's largest active army base, we take a penetrating and surprising look at the people and politics of President Bush's home state. On NOW Online (www.pbs.org/now), watch web-exclusive video reports about two Texas candidates, both veterans, both making the war the center of their campaigns, but each coming at it from a radically different point of view. Finally, no one could ever accuse journalist Andrew Sullivan of being shy with his opinions. In an insightful interview, he talks to David Brancaccio about what the mid-term elections will mean for Republicans now and in the future. Are they doomed? Andrew says yes...and no.

With critical midterm elections just days away, we tell you what to watch for and why. Tonight, on "Washington Week," a year of debate over the war. Rep. Christopher Shays: (From tape.) said, "I support our being in Iraq. I don't care its impact on my election". A year of scandal. "Congressman Foley duped a lot of people, and he deceived me, too", claims Rep. Dennis Hastert (R-IL). From a political ad, Conrad Burns took $150,000 from convicted lobbyist Jack Abramoff and his associates. And a year of voter discontent. Sen. Joseph Lieberman (D-CT) said, "It would be a mistake for the voters to use me as a way to get a message to George Bush". A campaign with its share of verbal miscues. Sen. George Allen (R-VA), said, "This fellow here over here with the yellow shirt - Macaca or whatever his name is", and Sen. John Kerry (D-Ma) "You study hard and you do your homework and you make an effort to be smart, you can do well. If you don't, you get stuck in Iraq." And a campaign with cutting edge issues. Sen. Jim Talent (R-MO) said, "I supported the marriage amendment. I believe marriage is a relationship between a man and a woman." "Stem cell research offers hope to millions of Americans", said Michael J. Fox. The president this week made a last ditch appeal to reliable Republicans. President George Bush said, "It's good to be in a part of the world where the cowboy hats outnumber the ties." But for Republicans, the bad signs are outnumbering the good. Elections 2006, with analysis and reporting by Dan Balz of the Washington Post, John Harwood of CNBC and the Wall Street Journal, Jackie Calmes of the Wall Street Journal, and Michael Duffy of TIME Magazine.

Washington turned upside down: the Democrats in, Rumsfeld out. Tonight, on "Washington Week." President George Bush said, "If you look at race by race, it was close. The cumulative effect, however, was not too close. It was a thumping." Even the president could not find a silver lining this time, as Democrats partied from coast to coast. Rep. Nancy Pelosi (D-CA) said, "Tonight is a great victory for the American people." Republicans licked their wounds. Senator George Allen (R-VA) declares, "The people of Virginia, they have spoken, and I respect their decision." Don Rumsfeld lost his job and Pres. Bush said, "I named a good man to succeed Donald Rumsfeld, former CIA Director Bob Gates." And both parties rethought the way they do business. Tonight we'll assess the impact of Election 2006, with Gloria Borger of CBS News and US News, Martha Raddatz of ABC News, Doyle McManus of the Los Angeles Times, and James Barnes of National Journal.

On October 19, 1901, the people of Paris turned out by the thousands to watch a dashing, impeccably dressed Brazilian-born inventor, Alberto Santos-Dumont, conquer skies. His fragile, gas-powered balloon made an astounding half-hour flight over the city and around the Eiffel Tower, and later, he piloted Europe's first- ever airplane flight. For a brief moment of glory, Santos-Dumont was the toast of Paris and acclaimed around the world. Then, eclipsed by the growing fame of the Wright Brothers, Santos-Dumont began slipping into illness and depression. During World War I, the airplane, which he believed to be his own invention, became a lethal weapon, eventually driving him to despair and suicide. Featuring captivating recreations and replicas of Santos' pioneering balloons and airplanes, NOVA reveals the daring flights and dramatic life of a neglected genius.

Missed opportunities, a vital arms race and the secrets hidden among the spoils of war come vividly to life in the third program of WARPLANE. In the latter days of World War II, Britain and Germany feverishly advanced early dreams of a jet airplane, a defining piece of mid- 20th-century technology that would revolutionize existing airplane roles and create an entirely new generation of mission-specific machines. With the world in the grip of the Cold War, combat planes became faster and more agile, spy planes cruised over enemy territory at dizzying heights and dazzling speeds, and jet-powered helicopters entered military service. Designers, test pilots and combat crews took huge risks as they pushed the technological envelope, and within 58 years of Orville Wright's historic flight at Kitty Hawk, man had broken through the boundaries of both sound and space.

Over the trenches of World War I, the "eye in the sky" had been indispensable. Since that time, developers have worked endlessly to make planes harder to spot and shoot down. Speed worked at first, then the ability to fly high, but each advance was eventually met by a counter-advance that all but neutralized it. Until, that is, the birth of the computer. With the computer age came avionics - systems to control planes that humans could never fly. These systems, combined with new materials, designs and paints, as well as the unwavering commitment and singular vision of men like Skunk Works' Ben Rich, gave rise to the most recent revolution in military aviation - stealth planes that are all but invisible to enemy eyes. Like the jet engine before it, stealth technology has transformed warfare, and together with ever-advanced precision ordnance and purely autonomous planes, has positioned the world's most advanced air forces for a future here in-cockpit pilots may no longer be necessary.

On October 19, 1901, the people of Paris turned out by the thousands to watch a dashing, impeccably dressed Brazilian-born inventor, Alberto Santos-Dumont, conquer skies. His fragile, gas-powered balloon made an astounding half-hour flight over the city and around the Eiffel Tower, and later, he piloted Europe's first- ever airplane flight. For a brief moment of glory, Santos-Dumont was the toast of Paris and acclaimed around the world. Then, eclipsed by the growing fame of the Wright Brothers, Santos-Dumont began slipping into illness and depression. During World War I, the airplane, which he believed to be his own invention, became a lethal weapon, eventually driving him to despair and suicide. Featuring captivating recreations and replicas of Santos' pioneering balloons and airplanes, NOVA reveals the daring flights and dramatic life of a neglected genius.

This era of aviation history saw a number of major developments: an increased understanding of aerodynamics that allowed engineers to build planes that could fly faster and farther; the invention of radar, which enabled defensive forces to detect approaching aircraft; the rise of the fighter ace pilots; and improved bomb delivery systems. This last development may have had the most destructive and terrifying effects, giving rise to the Blitz over London, the firebombing of Germany, and the atomic bombings of Hiroshima and Nagasaki.

Missed opportunities, a vital arms race and the secrets hidden among the spoils of war come vividly to life in the third program of WARPLANE. In the latter days of World War II, Britain and Germany feverishly advanced early dreams of a jet airplane, a defining piece of mid- 20th-century technology that would revolutionize existing airplane roles and create an entirely new generation of mission-specific machines. With the world in the grip of the Cold War, combat planes became faster and more agile, spy planes cruised over enemy territory at dizzying heights and dazzling speeds, and jet-powered helicopters entered military service. Designers, test pilots and combat crews took huge risks as they pushed the technological envelope, and within 58 years of Orville Wright's historic flight at Kitty Hawk, man had broken through the boundaries of both sound and space.

Iraq. The word itself has transcended geography and now has a new definition: "problem." But how big a problem it is still depends on who you ask. With a crucial mid-term election days away, NOW put Iraq's "problem" status to the test by traveling to one of the most pro-military communities in the country. In Texas' 31st Congressional district, home to America's largest active army base, we take a penetrating and surprising look at the people and politics of President Bush's home state. On NOW Online (www.pbs.org/now), watch web-exclusive video reports about two Texas candidates, both veterans, both making the war the center of their campaigns, but each coming at it from a radically different point of view. Finally, no one could ever accuse journalist Andrew Sullivan of being shy with his opinions. In an insightful interview, he talks to David Brancaccio about what the mid-term elections will mean for Republicans now and in the future. Are they doomed? Andrew says yes...and no.

In 1941, the world was at war and the Allies were desperate to slow the tide of Nazi domination. The Germans needed 100 gallons of water to make one ton of steel. Barnes Wallis, a British aircraft designer, set out to develop a unique weapon that would detonate dams -- a bomb that could skip across water, cling to its target and explode at a specific depth to deliver its coup de grace. This program investigates the urgent rush to create, test and deploy the new bomb, and the efforts to train an elite squadron of pilots for the unusually dangerous low-level night flights to drop it far inside enemy lines. Using archival footage, modern tests of the original principles and equipment, and interviews with experts, participants in the raids and their surviving relatives, the program provides insight into the ingenuity of the man who built the bomb under incredible pressure, as well as the dedication and bravery of the airmen from Britain, Canada, America, Australia and New Zealand who risked (and lost) their lives in one of the most daring missions of WWII.

In the summer of 1942, two ace fighter pilots -- one American and one Japanese -- faced off during a dramatic dogfight in the skies over Guadalcanal. Eventually the Japanese pilot shot down the American, who crash landed behind enemy lines but managed to escape before being captured. Using both pilots' comprehensive (but sometimes contradictory) memoirs, and following a forensic expedition to the recently-found American plane, "Dogfight Over Guadalcanal" examines and recreates every anxious second of the WWII showdown over the Pacific, revealing just how evenly matched the two men were and how they both survived, despite serious injuries.

In 1926, just a few months before her death, Will Rogers described Annie Oakley as "the greatest woman rifle shot the world has ever produced." As the star attraction of Buffalo Bill's Wild West Show, she thrilled audiences around the world with her daring shooting feats and her act helped fuel turn-of-the-century nostalgia for the vanished, mythical world of the American West. Over time she became an American legend-the loud, brassy, cocksure shooter celebrated in the musical "Annie Get Your Gun." But that legend had little to do with the real Annie Oakley. Although famous as a Western sharpshooter, Oakley lived her entire life east of the Mississippi. A champion in a man's sport, she forever changed ideas about the abilities of women, yet she opposed female suffrage. Her fame and fortune came from her skill with guns, yet she was a Quaker. This probing AMERICAN EXPERIENCE production examines the dramatic life of a uniquely American icon whose complex character manifested many of the paradoxes of the nation.

Segment Length: 00:56:46

With 35 million people in America now age sixty-five and older, "the old old"-those over 85-are now considered the fastest growing segment of the U.S. population. While medical advances have enabled an unprecedented number of Americans to live longer and healthier lives, this new longevity has also had unintended consequences. For millions of Americans, living longer also means serious chronic illness and a protracted physical decline that can require an immense amount of care, often for years and sometimes even decades. Yet just as the need for care is rising, the number of available caregivers is dwindling. With families more dispersed than ever and a healthcare system overburdened, many experts fear that we are on the threshold of a major crisis in care.

A tiny government agency has a well-intentioned mission: to channel federal contracts to charities that train and employ workers who are blind or have severe disabilities. Known as JWOD, the program is so obscure that even some members of Congress are unaware of its existence. But when journalists from THE OREGONIAN exposed abuses by JWOD's biggest contractor, the program took on a much higher, if unwanted, profile.

The average American family today carries 10 credit cards. Credit card debt and personal bankruptcies are now at an all time high. With no legal limit on the amount of interest or fees that can be charged, credit cards have become the most profitable sector of the American banking industry: more than $30 billion in profits last year alone. FRONTLINE and the New York Times examine how the credit card industry became so pervasive, so lucrative and so politically powerful.

For the past few months, we've been watching the school system in New Orleans undergo an amazing comeback. But the story of what some call the most expansive charter school experiment in history is really about the children, parents and educators on the front line of the Big Easy's upheaval. On this week's broadcast and in a web-exclusive video profile, NOW takes a closer look at the New Orleans plan and some residents living at the tenuous crossroads of despair and hope. As a special extra, read NOW Producer Brian Epstein's essay about his experiences documenting this story and how a chance encounter affected his outlook. In this week of Thanksgiving, we give thanks to YOU for watching, downloading, and supporting our efforts to reconnect America to the ideals upon which it was founded. Now pass the cranberry sauce!

How did this unique relationship develop? What can the latest breakthroughs in genetics tell us of the secrets of dog origins and breeding? And can dog sociologists and psychiatrists unravel the puzzling, lovable, and often maddening quirks of dog behavior? Despite such variation, all domestic dogs, as well as their common ancestor, the gray wolf, have virtually identical genes. How can science explain this incredible diversity? In Dogs, NOVA launches an entertaining and affectionate search for the secrets of dog variation and behavior. We'll visit state-of-the-art dog labs where the latest developments in genetic mapping and even cloning are in the air. Along the way, breeders and dog experts as well as scientists will help explore the bond we share with these remarkable animals, seeking insights into the future of our oldest and closest relationship with another animal species.

In March we first told you the story of Peggy Buryj, the mother of a U.S. soldier killed in Iraq. Many questions remained unanswered about her son's final moments -- how he died and why -- without much information or help from the army. Now, with Congress more likely than ever to reevaluate our country's military tactics in Iraq, we revisit her case and other instances of the army misinforming families of soldiers killed in Iraq and Afghanistan. Also on the show, David Brancaccio talks with a 25-year veteran of the Central Intelligence Agency about past intelligence blunders and what to expect next. Online, NOW's Maria Hinojosa interviews the always-interesting and outspoken U.S. Rep. Charles Rangel. What does he really think of Dick Cheney?

With 35 million people in America now age sixty-five and older, "the old old"-those over 85-are now considered the fastest growing segment of the U.S. population. While medical advances have enabled an unprecedented number of Americans to live longer and healthier lives, this new longevity has also had unintended consequences. For millions of Americans, living longer also means serious chronic illness and a protracted physical decline that can require an immense amount of care, often for years and sometimes even decades. Yet just as the need for care is rising, the number of available caregivers is dwindling. With families more dispersed than ever and a healthcare system overburdened, many experts fear that we are on the threshold of a major crisis in care.

Last week we told you the Democrats are in charge. This week we ask what difference will it make? Tonight on Washington Week. Rep. Nancy Pelosi (D-CA) said, "As we say in church let there be peace on Earth and let it begin with us, let the healing begin". Maybe not so fast. Before the victory parties even ended Democrats were fighting among themselves in the House overshadowing the more orderly transition in the Senate. Sen. Mitch McConnell (R-KY) said, "We will be a robust minority, a vigorous minority and hopefully a minority that is only in that condition for a couple of years". Marked by one remarkable comeback. But will Democratic control make a difference in Iraq? Will it make a difference as presidential hopefuls prepare for 2008? And will it make a difference on issues that affect your life? Tonight, the environment. Covering these stories, Charles Babington of the Washington Post, Michael Duffy of Time Magazine, Jeanne Cummings of the Wall Street Journal, and Margaret Kriz of National Journal.

Bush prepares to meet with Iraq's prime minister as the search goes on for ideas on what to do. What are the options for the U.S. and where are they likely to come from, tonight on "Washington Week." Kofi Annan [UN Secretary General] says, "The U.S. in a way is trapped in Iraq; trapped in the sense that it cannot stay and it cannot leave." After one of the most violent weeks in Iraq since the war began, now what? President Bush hopes for some answers soon from Jim Baker's Iraq study group with no shortage of advice. Rep. Duncan Hunter claims, "I have an alternative and it's called 'Go Iraqi.'" Sen. John McCain says, "Another 20,000 troops-" Sen. Barack Obama suggests, "Phased redeployment-." In the meantime, a summit next week with Iraq's prime minister. Why now? What's behind the move by Iran and Syria to offer help of their own? And whatever the president decides, how much support is he likely to get, especially from his own party. Covering these stories: Linda Robinson of US News and World Report, Helene Cooper of the New York Times, Barbara Slavin of USA Today, and Peter Baker of the Washington Post.

Author Bruce Feiler brings his award winning book to life as he takes an archeological odyssey to visit the inscrutable desert landscape where the world's greatest religions were born. The three-part series takes viewers to some of the Bible's most inspiring places -- from the heights of Mount Ararat, where according to the Bible Noah's ark landed; to the desert in Turkey, where Abraham first heard the words of God and to the summit of Mt. Sinai, where Moses received the Ten Commandments. Combining breathtaking images, sweeping landscapes and intimate snapshots, the documentary puts a visual face on the stories that continue to inspire the human spirit. The first episode, "Go Forth: From Creation to Abraham," focuses on initial problems entering hostile areas in the Middle East, meeting Avner Goren -- a leading biblical archaeologist who becomes his traveling partner - - and the forbidding and dangerous environment of the Mesopotamian highlands, where civilization was born.

Egypt. Land of the Pharaohs--and of the Bible. Bruce Feiler continues his journey through the greatest stories ever told, by retracing Joseph's path to Egypt after his brothers sell him into bondage. When Joseph interprets the Pharaoh's dreams, he rises from slave to the heights of power and even brings his brothers and father Jacob to live in Egypt. Feiler takes us from the great temple of Karnak in Luxor, formerly ancient Thebes--to the pyramids and sphinx of Giza, and descends into the royal burial tombs in the Valley of the Kings. As he treks by camel, boat, horseback and even pyramid-climbing, he discovers how the ancient Egyptian culture and religion influenced the Israelites during their centuries-long stay in Egypt, especially in the importance placed on dreams and story-telling. Feiler explores the ancient ruins of cities where the Israelites were said to toil under an oppressive pharaoh. Beginning at the shallow waters of the Nile, Feiler retraces the story of one of the Bible's greatest figures, Moses, and his eventual confrontation with Pharaoh to let his people go. Did the Israelites build the pyramids? What could have caused the ten plagues? Was it really the Red Sea Moses crossed? As Feiler confronts these questions, on the very body of water that could have been where the waters were parted, he realizes that it isn't the location, or even the event that's important, but that it was experienced as an act of God.

The Sinai Desert. In the concluding chapter of "Walking the Bible," Bruce Feiler follows the Israelite's 40 year trek through what the Bible calls a "great and terrible wilderness." Feiler experiences the stark reality of the Sinai desert where it's a struggle simply to survive. He finds the locations said to be where God provided water and food for the Israelites - and discovers the secret of the tamarisk tree, which secretes a sweet, honey-like substance called "manna." In the shadow of the mountain believed to be the Biblical Mount Sinai, Feiler visits St. Catherine's Monastery, the oldest operating church in the world. He attends the services, a powerful, unchanged ritual of 1,500 years, and sees what's claimed to be the real "burning bush" in which God spoke to Moses. One of the monks, Texas-born Father Justin, shows him the Monastery's world-renowned library of priceless religious art and manuscripts. Later, when Feiler climbs Mt. Sinai where Moses is said to have received the Ten Commandments, he is struck by the spiritual significance of the land, and its relationship to the people, and to God. As he follows the 40 year route of the Israelites, he visits a local Bedouin family who also derive sustenance from the desert and travels to the "lost city" of Petra in Jordan, where the Israelites may have lived for many years. Nearing the end of Moses' journey, Feiler climbs Mt. Nebo, where God shows Moses the Promised Land the Israelites are about to enter. At the end of his own journey, Feiler realizes that although Moses is denied entrance himself, it is not the land after all that is important for Moses. It is his meeting with God.

With 35 million people in America now age sixty-five and older, "the old old"-those over 85-are now considered the fastest growing segment of the U.S. population. While medical advances have enabled an unprecedented number of Americans to live longer and healthier lives, this new longevity has also had unintended consequences. For millions of Americans, living longer also means serious chronic illness and a protracted physical decline that can require an immense amount of care, often for years and sometimes even decades. Yet just as the need for care is rising, the number of available caregivers is dwindling. With families more dispersed than ever and a healthcare system overburdened, many experts fear that we are on the threshold of a major crisis in care.

A tiny government agency has a well-intentioned mission: to channel federal contracts to charities that train and employ workers who are blind or have severe disabilities. Known as JWOD, the program is so obscure that even some members of Congress are unaware of its existence. But when journalists from THE OREGONIAN exposed abuses by JWOD's biggest contractor, the program took on a much higher, if unwanted, profile.

This program tells the story behind the construction and destruction of one of the most heralded World War II engineering feats: the 250-mile River Kwai railway in Thailand. Forced to work under savage conditions by the Japanese army, more than 100,000 Allied POWs and Asian laborers lost their lives in the building of the railway, which immediately became a top target of the Allied forces. To destroy it, they had to rely on new and relatively untested technological weapons -- AZON bombs, the guided, radio-controlled precursors to the modern military's smart bombs. Using first-hand survivor testimony, modern science, a blend of reconstructions and archival footage, and never-before-seen photographs of the railway as it was being constructed, "Bridge on the River Kwai" will piece together the real story behind the birth and death of this lost railway. Among those featured in the program is Frank Nelson, one of many specially trained American cadets responsible for destroying the railway, who will speak publicly for the first time about his experience at the head of the AZON squadron.

Edward R. Murrow: This Reporter "This" is London." With those trademark words, crackling over the airwaves from a city in the midst of the blitzkrieg, Edward R. Murrow began a journalistic career that had no equal. From the opening days of World War II through his death in 1965, the CBS executive-turned-star-reporter had an unparalleled influence on the development of broadcast journalism. His voice was universally recognized, and a generation of radio and television journalists emulated his style. His pioneering television documentaries have more than once been credited with changing the course of history, and to this day his name is synonymous with courage and perseverance in the search for the truth.

FRONTLINE offers two starkly contrasting images: one of empty storefronts in Circleville, Ohio, where the local TV manufacturing plant has closed down; the other, a sea of high rises in the South China boomtown of Shenzhen. The connection between American job losses and soaring Chinese exports? Wal-Mart. For Wal-Mart, China has become the cheapest, most reliable production platform in the world, the source of up to $25 billion in annual imports that help the company deliver everyday low prices to 100 million customers a week. But while some economists credit Wal-Mart's single-minded focus on low costs with helping contain U.S. inflation, others charge that the company is the main force driving the massive overseas shift to China in the production of American consumer goods, resulting in hundreds of thousands of lost jobs and a lower standard of living here at home.

Public opinion polls unanimously show that trust in mainstream media—the institution most responsible for keeping us informed and aware—is at an all-time low. How did we get here, and more importantly, how can we repair the damage? This week, NOW poses those questions to legendary television producer and People for the American Way founder Norman Lear. We also talk to Martin Kaplan, associate dean of USC's Annenberg School of Communication. Is mainstream media serving public or corporate interests? Issues and answers from people who've spent their lives minding the media. This week on NOW.

While some businesses exercise their compassion muscles exclusively during the holiday season, others find ways to mix benevolence into their bottom lines throughout the year. This week, David Brancaccio talks to two influential executives who say that capitalism can actually make the world a better place, including substantially helping some of its poorest people. Before you put on your cynical hat, check out this week's show. Visit NOW Online to learn more about micro-lending, a simple banking concept that pays great dividends to people who have only hope to offer as collateral. Also online, Maria Hinojosa serves up a "NOW on the News" web audio interview with Sen. Jeff Bingaman, who is about to take over as the new chairman of the Energy and National Resources Committee.

"Small Fortunes: Microcredit and the Future of Poverty" explores the issues of poverty and microcredit as it features profiles of numerous recipients of small loans in locales ranging from India to the Philippines to New York City. The one-hour documentary tells the stories of how short-term loans of even a few dollars have resulted in dramatic changes in lifestyles for families who otherwise would have no means of lifting themselves out of poverty. The film also interviews bankers, economists, scholars and other experts on past, present and potential successes of microcredit programs.

Episode three introduces viewers to Muhammad Yunus, known as the "banker to the poor," and one of the fathers of the concept of social entrepreneurship. With the simple but powerful realization that the poor need to be able to borrow money more than the rich do, Yunus founded Grameen Bank, which has today provided $3.8 billion in loans to 2.4 million families in Bangladesh and inspired similar credit operations in 100 countries. Leveraging the traditional craft of women in Rio de Janeiro, Maria Teresa "Tete" Leal founded a sewing cooperative called Coopa-Roca that produces high-quality, high-style clothes while maintaining fair labor practices for the women. Less glamorous as an occupation, but critically important, garbage collection is often a neglected service among the poor. In Peru, Albina Ruiz worried about the health impact of living in the filth of uncollected waste. Creating a micro-enterprise to do the job that the government was ignoring, Ruiz now has projects in 20 cities that provide garbage collection for over three million residents and employ 150 people. Creating businesses that break the cycle of poverty is the genius of social entrepreneurs.

"Small Fortunes: Microcredit and the Future of Poverty" explores the issues of poverty and microcredit as it features profiles of numerous recipients of small loans in locales ranging from India to the Philippines to New York City. The one-hour documentary tells the stories of how short-term loans of even a few dollars have resulted in dramatic changes in lifestyles for families who otherwise would have no means of lifting themselves out of poverty. The film also interviews bankers, economists, scholars and other experts on past, present and potential successes of microcredit programs.

What makes a teacher worth listening to? This In the Mix special features diverse teens who describe how educators have had a positive impact on their attitudes, academics, and even behavior. It also highlights the creative ways in which some teachers are making education fun and relevant to their students, and their efforts to make even the most difficult subjects accessible to their teen audience. Segments include: a dance teacher who shows her students how to express their emotions through dance and teaches them the discipline they will need to be successful; a physics teacher who uses hands-on demonstrations and occurrences from everyday life to illustrate the principles of physics; a French teacher who imparts his passion for knowledge to his students; a group of poetry teachers who use unconventional methods to get their apathetic students involved; and a school for at-risk students who have returned after dropping out, which fosters a family environment to support and encourage its challenged students.

Mont Blanc is one of the world's most popular destinations for Alpine climbers and scientists: no other peak has such a long record of mountaineering and glaciology. But 200 years of winter sports, science, and tourism have done nothing to tame this mountain. The hazards generated by rock falls, ice avalanches, and sudden flooding are still poorly understood and almost impossible to control. We follow a team of daring 'glacionauts' as they descend into a labyrinth of unexplored ice caves to find trapped flood water that menaces the populated valleys below.

Frank Gehry is a rare architect, indeed, garnering both critical acclaim and popular recognition - just note the 'hoopla' attached to the opening of the Disney Concert Hall in Los Angeles last year. His designs dramatically blur the line between art and architecture, creating dynamic structures and unpredictable interiors. Gehry's close friend, the award winning producer-director Sidney Pollack, directs this - his first feature documentary - with an approach akin to Gehry's own impromptu, free-hand style. They appear together, capturing the shy, elusive architect and illuminating his innovative process - including expansive depictions of Gehry's most important architectural wonders, from the Guggenheim Museum in Bilbao, Spain to the Experience Music Project museum in Seattle, Washington.

This film focuses not just on Cole's celebrity, but on the Civil Rights movement and how this performer uniquely broke through major racial barriers in the entertainment industry - he was the first black American to have his own national radio show, in 1948, and he was the first black American to have his own television show, in 1956. His musical origins were as a young Chicago jazz pianist but he became known as - and accepted as, even in those turbulent times - a melodious, smooth singer of such popular songs as Mona Lisa, Too Young, It's Only a Paper Moon, Unforgettable and the Christmas season perennial Chestnuts Roasting on an Open Fire. With open access to the Cole family - including, of course, his daughter Natalie - and his record label (EMI) archives, a picture of great courage is painted.

While some businesses exercise their compassion muscles exclusively during the holiday season, others find ways to mix benevolence into their bottom lines throughout the year. This week, David Brancaccio talks to two influential executives who say that capitalism can actually make the world a better place, including substantially helping some of its poorest people. Before you put on your cynical hat, check out this week's show. Visit NOW Online to learn more about micro-lending, a simple banking concept that pays great dividends to people who have only hope to offer as collateral. Also online, Maria Hinojosa serves up a "NOW on the News" web audio interview with Sen. Jeff Bingaman, who is about to take over as the new chairman of the Energy and National Resources Committee.

Neo-conservative ideology has been the guiding force behind President George W. Bush's foreign policy. But in the 2006 mid-term elections, the GOP suffered what Bush described as a "thumping." In a quick response to the election results, Defense Secretary Donald Rumsfeld, the administration's leading patron of neo-conservative policies, was ousted.

Now the president seems to be reinforcing his ranks with members of his father's more traditionally conservative administration. Is President Bush turning his back on neo-conservatism? Can the neo-conservatives reshape their image and retain their relevance? Host Ben Wattenberg is joined by Josh Muravchik, a resident scholar at the American Enterprise Institute, author of several books including The Future of the United Nations and most recently an article in the journal Foreign Policy entitled "How to Save the Neocons."

What happens when best laid plans veer off course? The inside story on the summit and the memo, tonight, on "Washington Week." President George Bush said, "He's the right guy for Iraq, and we're going to help him." A presidential vote of confidence in Nouri al-Maliki that raised more questions than it answered. Did the Iraqi prime minister snub the president? Is Iraq really prepared to take control on the war on the ground by next summer? Has the country already lapsed into civil war? Kofi Annan [Un Secretary General] said, "We could be there. In fact, we are almost there." And if it has, is the U.S. staying or is it going? The bipartisan Iraq Study Group tackles some of those questions next week. We'll tell you what we already know. And in Congress, why elections matter. This week: subpoena power. How the Democrats plan to investigate, well, everything. Covering these stories this week, Martha Raddatz of ABC News, David Sanger of The New York Times, and Karen Tumulty of TIME Magazine.

The war in Iraq is, A, grave; B, a lost cause; or C, sliding toward chaos. What went wrong and what happens next, tonight on "Washington Week." LEE HAMILTON [Iraq Study Group Co-Chairman]: "The situation in Iraq is grave and deteriorating." JAMES BAKER [Iraq Study Group Co-Chairman]: "It is time to find a new way forward - a new approach." The long awaited report earned some cautious praise and some criticism. SEN. JOSEPH LIEBERMAN (D-CT): "I'm skeptical that it's realistic to think that Iran wants to help the United States succeed in Iraq." But what will the president do? Concede the downside --PRESIDENT GEORGE BUSH: "It's bad in Iraq. Does that help?"--or search for an upside? We explore. And why elections matter: this week the Supreme Court weighs in on school integration. Covering these stories, Michael Duffy at Time Magazine, Doyle McManus of the Los Angeles Times, and Linda Greenhouse of the New York Times.

Certainties and uncertainties about the war, control of the Senate, and the shape of the 2008 presidential race, tonight on "Washington Week." President George W. Bush stated, "I'm not going to be rushed into making a difficult decision." The president dialing down expectations on what comes next in Iraq, but many Americans and some politicians appear even more unhappy now than they were on election day. Sen. John McCain (R-AZ) "I'd like to say that I believe conditions have improved. Certainly in Baghdad they have not." U.S. allies appear uncertain as well. We tell you what Saudi Arabia is telling the president. At home, uncertainty on the political front as a senator's illness throws political control into doubt. And another senator's ambitions throw the 2008 nomination battle into an uproar. Sen. Barack Obama exclaims, "This is our time." Plus, why elections matter. The lame duck job market: what happens when a party loses power? Covering these stories tonight, John Harwood of CNBC and the Wall Street Journal, Helene Cooper of the New York Times, Dan Balz of the Washington Post, and Alexis Simendinger of the National Journal.

Episode three introduces viewers to Muhammad Yunus, known as the "banker to the poor," and one of the fathers of the concept of social entrepreneurship. With the simple but powerful realization that the poor need to be able to borrow money more than the rich do, Yunus founded Grameen Bank, which has today provided $3.8 billion in loans to 2.4 million families in Bangladesh and inspired similar credit operations in 100 countries. Leveraging the traditional craft of women in Rio de Janeiro, Maria Teresa "Tete" Leal founded a sewing cooperative called Coopa-Roca that produces high-quality, high-style clothes while maintaining fair labor practices for the women. Less glamorous as an occupation, but critically important, garbage collection is often a neglected service among the poor. In Peru, Albina Ruiz worried about the health impact of living in the filth of uncollected waste. Creating a micro-enterprise to do the job that the government was ignoring, Ruiz now has projects in 20 cities that provide garbage collection for over three million residents and employ 150 people. Creating businesses that break the cycle of poverty is the genius of social entrepreneurs.

In this portrait of the world's most famous physicist, Albert Einstein's other roles as humanitarian and philosopher are examined. A tireless defender of individual liberties, Einstein stuck tenaciously to unique ideals both in the human sphere and in his scientific inquiries. This film explores Einstein's unswerving idealism through the groundbreaking work in physics that gained him international acclaim to his life in America after being forced to leave Germany in 1933. The unknown physicist who shocked the world with his revolutionary theories as well as the older man who witnessed the catastrophic consequences of these theories with the making and use of the atomic bomb are portrayed.

This program tells the story behind the construction and destruction of one of the most heralded World War II engineering feats: the 250-mile River Kwai railway in Thailand. Forced to work under savage conditions by the Japanese army, more than 100,000 Allied POWs and Asian laborers lost their lives in the building of the railway, which immediately became a top target of the Allied forces. To destroy it, they had to rely on new and relatively untested technological weapons -- AZON bombs, the guided, radio-controlled precursors to the modern military's smart bombs. Using first-hand survivor testimony, modern science, a blend of reconstructions and archival footage, and never-before-seen photographs of the railway as it was being constructed, "Bridge on the River Kwai" will piece together the real story behind the birth and death of this lost railway. Among those featured in the program is Frank Nelson, one of many specially trained American cadets responsible for destroying the railway, who will speak publicly for the first time about his experience at the head of the AZON squadron.

This program tells the story behind the construction and destruction of one of the most heralded World War II engineering feats: the 250-mile River Kwai railway in Thailand. Forced to work under savage conditions by the Japanese army, more than 100,000 Allied POWs and Asian laborers lost their lives in the building of the railway, which immediately became a top target of the Allied forces. To destroy it, they had to rely on new and relatively untested technological weapons -- AZON bombs, the guided, radio-controlled precursors to the modern military's smart bombs. Using first-hand survivor testimony, modern science, a blend of reconstructions and archival footage, and never-before-seen photographs of the railway as it was being constructed, "Bridge on the River Kwai" will piece together the real story behind the birth and death of this lost railway. Among those featured in the program is Frank Nelson, one of many specially trained American cadets responsible for destroying the railway, who will speak publicly for the first time about his experience at the head of the AZON squadron.

Frank Gehry is a rare architect, indeed, garnering both critical acclaim and popular recognition - just note the 'hoopla' attached to the opening of the Disney Concert Hall in Los Angeles last year. His designs dramatically blur the line between art and architecture, creating dynamic structures and unpredictable interiors. Gehry's close friend, the award winning producer-director Sidney Pollack, directs this - his first feature documentary - with an approach akin to Gehry's own impromptu, free-hand style. They appear together, capturing the shy, elusive architect and illuminating his innovative process - including expansive depictions of Gehry's most important architectural wonders, from the Guggenheim Museum in Bilbao, Spain to the Experience Music Project museum in Seattle, Washington.

What happens when best laid plans veer off course? The inside story on the summit and the memo, tonight, on "Washington Week." President George Bush said, "He's the right guy for Iraq, and we're going to help him." A presidential vote of confidence in Nouri al-Maliki that raised more questions than it answered. Did the Iraqi prime minister snub the president? Is Iraq really prepared to take control on the war on the ground by next summer? Has the country already lapsed into civil war? Kofi Annan [Un Secretary General] said, "We could be there. In fact, we are almost there." And if it has, is the U.S. staying or is it going? The bipartisan Iraq Study Group tackles some of those questions next week. We'll tell you what we already know. And in Congress, why elections matter. This week: subpoena power. How the Democrats plan to investigate, well, everything. Covering these stories this week, Martha Raddatz of ABC News, David Sanger of The New York Times, and Karen Tumulty of TIME Magazine.

The war in Iraq is, A, grave; B, a lost cause; or C, sliding toward chaos. What went wrong and what happens next, tonight on "Washington Week." LEE HAMILTON [Iraq Study Group Co-Chairman]: "The situation in Iraq is grave and deteriorating." JAMES BAKER [Iraq Study Group Co-Chairman]: "It is time to find a new way forward - a new approach." The long awaited report earned some cautious praise and some criticism. SEN. JOSEPH LIEBERMAN (D-CT): "I'm skeptical that it's realistic to think that Iran wants to help the United States succeed in Iraq." But what will the president do? Concede the downside --PRESIDENT GEORGE BUSH: "It's bad in Iraq. Does that help?"--or search for an upside? We explore. And why elections matter: this week the Supreme Court weighs in on school integration. Covering these stories, Michael Duffy at Time Magazine, Doyle McManus of the Los Angeles Times, and Linda Greenhouse of the New York Times.

Certainties and uncertainties about the war, control of the Senate, and the shape of the 2008 presidential race, tonight on "Washington Week." President George W. Bush stated, "I'm not going to be rushed into making a difficult decision." The president dialing down expectations on what comes next in Iraq, but many Americans and some politicians appear even more unhappy now than they were on election day. Sen. John McCain (R-AZ) "I'd like to say that I believe conditions have improved. Certainly in Baghdad they have not." U.S. allies appear uncertain as well. We tell you what Saudi Arabia is telling the president. At home, uncertainty on the political front as a senator's illness throws political control into doubt. And another senator's ambitions throw the 2008 nomination battle into an uproar.

Sen. Barack Obama exclaims, "This is our time." Plus, why elections matter. The lame duck job market: what happens when a party loses power? Covering these stories tonight, John Harwood of CNBC and the Wall Street Journal, Helene Cooper of the New York Times, Dan Balz of the Washington Post, and Alexis Simendinger of the National Journal.

Hollywood -- it is stamped as a virtual imprint on our imaginations, a celluloid image frozen in time. Judy Garland also had one of the most frequently recorded voices of the last century. She was magic, almost mythical. She is as iconic as she is misunderstood. There were her problems, to be sure, but the proof is in the performances. From "The Wizard of Oz" to the Palladium, from the Oscars to the Grammys. With singular entree to the MGM library, including vaulted screen tests and rehearsal footage, the film is wrapped in Judy's voice, actually telling her story in her own words. So many outsiders have tried to tell this story and so many friends and family have weighed in -- now Judy gets center stage, all to herself. This is her ultimate comeback.

Everyone knew Walter Cronkite from the CBS Evening News, where he earned distinction as "The Most Trusted Man in America" during his 19 years at the anchor desk. Throughout his award-winning career - which began as a field reporter in World War II - Cronkite covered such historic events as the first trip to the moon; the assassinations of President John F. Kennedy, Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., and Senator Robert Kennedy; the Watergate scandal; the Vietnam War; the Iran hostage crisis; and John Glenn's return to space. Through it all, he steadfastly adhered to a credo of fast, accurate and unbiased news reporting. After stepping down as anchorman almost 25 years ago, his story continued - Walter Cronkite still leads the life of a genuine Renaissance man - author, sailor, producer and patron, his public concern for, and commitment to, our world has never faltered.

In the mid-1850s, thousands of Latter-day Saint emigrants crowded the docks of Liverpool, dreaming of a new life in the Salt Lake Valley. After an arduous ocean voyage and an overland trip to Iowa, they loaded their belongings into handcarts, which they then began pulling the nearly 1,300 miles to the Salt Lake Valley. But for the Willie and Martin companies, numerous delays in an already late start led to a near-catastrophe, as the emigrants found themselves running out of provisions and stranded in treacherous snowstorms on the high plains of Wyoming. This is the story of those who were stranded and those who came to their rescue in one of the greatest acts of heroism of the 19th century.

Irving Berlin pulled himself up from poverty on New York's Lower East Side to become America's most famous and enduring songwriter. Born Israel Baline in Belarus, then part of the Russian empire, on May 11, 1888, he immigrated with his family to America at age five and later taught himself rudimentary piano while working as a singing waiter in a bar and brothel in New York's Chinatown. By age twenty-three, he was the wunderkind of Tin Pan Alley with more than two hundred hit songs and hundreds more to come--songs like "White Christmas," "Easter Parade," and "God Bless America." Who was Irving Berlin, and what does his music say about America?

Irving Berlin pulled himself up from poverty on New York's Lower East Side to become America's most famous and enduring songwriter. Born Israel Baline in Belarus, then part of the Russian empire, on May 11, 1888, he immigrated with his family to America at age five and later taught himself rudimentary piano while working as a singing waiter in a bar and brothel in New York's Chinatown. By age twenty-three, he was the wunderkind of Tin Pan Alley with more than two hundred hit songs and hundreds more to come--songs like "White Christmas," "Easter Parade," and "God Bless America." Who was Irving Berlin, and what does his music say about America?

Americans are swimming in a sea of messages. Each year, legions of ad people, copywriters, market researchers, pollsters, consultants, and even linguists - most of whom work for one of six giant companies - spend billions of dollars and millions of man-hours trying to determine how to persuade consumers what to buy, whom to trust, and what to think. Increasingly, these techniques are migrating to the high-stakes arena of politics, shaping policy and influencing how Americans choose their leaders. In "The Persuaders," FRONTLINE exposes the inner workings of the marketing and advertising industries, and the new and surprising methods they use to decipher who we are and what we want.

A FISH STORY is the tale of two women who lead their communities in a battle for control of the ocean. Angela Sanfilippo of Gloucester, Massachusetts, and Shareen Davis of Chatham, Massachusetts were born into fishing families and married men who continue to make a living from the sea. Fishing defines who they are and has sustained their communities for generations. But their way of life is threatened when a powerful coalition of national environmental groups file a lawsuit that could put hundreds of fishermen out of business. Three hundred years of fishing tradition and the health of the ocean hangs in the balance.

A FISH STORY is the tale of two women who lead their communities in a battle for control of the ocean. Angela Sanfilippo of Gloucester, Massachusetts, and Shareen Davis of Chatham, Massachusetts were born into fishing families and married men who continue to make a living from the sea. Fishing defines who they are and has sustained their communities for generations. But their way of life is threatened when a powerful coalition of national environmental groups file a lawsuit that could put hundreds of fishermen out of business. Three hundred years of fishing tradition and the health of the ocean hangs in the balance.

As snow falls and Christmas lights glow in Jackson Hole, a holiday season of a different sort settles in just beyond the town, in the great winter world of Yellowstone. Breathtaking landscapes frame intimate scenes of wolves and coyotes, elk and bison, bears and otters as they make their way through their most challenging season of the year. NATURE journeys in the footsteps of the men who first explored the park, and travels with their modern-day counterpart on his own journey of discovery. From the unique crystals of individual snowflakes to the grand sweep of Yellowstone's Hayden Valley, this is a Christmas like no other.

On December 26, 2004, a series of tidal waves killed hundreds of thousands and devastated communities around the Indian Ocean. With around 100 tsunamis striking the world's coastlines each decade, NOVA investigates what made the recent event so powerful and catastrophic. In a special report show within days of this shocking disaster, NOVA's "Wave that Shook the World" presents a clear explanation and analysis of the tragedy, revealing exactly how these deadly waves were triggered by one of the most powerful earthquakes recorded this century.

Perspectives: "A Look Ahead to the Year 2007" — What religion stories are likely to make news in the New Year? E.J. Dionne, columnist for The Washington Post and a senior fellow at the Brookings Institution, Jeffrey Goldberg, Washington correspondent for The New Yorker, and Rachel Zoll, religion writer for the Associated Press, join host Bob Abernethy for an annual discussion and analysis of the news stories predicted to make headlines in 2007. Among the topics discussed in this studio segment are: civil war in Iraq and the U.S. response; American intervention in re-establishing Israeli-Palestinian dialogue; the international and domestic policy agenda to be set by the new Democratic-controlled Congress; the shifting attitudes of evangelical Christians toward social and environmental issues; the threat of schism within the U.S. Episcopal Church and the Anglican Communion's reaction to the Church's first female presiding bishop; the role of religion in the political process; Iran and Korea's nuclear programs; and Pope Benedict's efforts to restore the Catholic Church in Europe. Belief and Practice: "The Hajj" — The Islamic ritual of "the Hajj," or spiritual journey to Mecca is underway in Saudi Arabia. Muslims who are physically and financially able to fulfill this obligation are expected to do so at least once in their lifetime. Over two million pilgrims are expected this year, including 30-40,000 from the United States, more than ever before. Preparations begin months in advance and special Hajj travel agencies offer package pricing including food, lodging and transportation. Imam Shaker Elsayed of Dar Al Hijrah Mosque in Falls Church, Virginia explains how Muslims prepare for this holy observance and the obligations of the "Fifth Pillar of Islam."

In the mid-1850s, thousands of Latter-day Saint emigrants crowded the docks of Liverpool, dreaming of a new life in the Salt Lake Valley. After an arduous ocean voyage and an overland trip to Iowa, they loaded their belongings into handcarts, which they then began pulling the nearly 1,300 miles to the Salt Lake Valley. But for the Willie and Martin companies, numerous delays in an already late start led to a near-catastrophe, as the emigrants found themselves running out of provisions and stranded in treacherous snowstorms on the high plains of Wyoming. This is the story of those who were stranded and those who came to their rescue in one of the greatest acts of heroism of the 19th century.

Everyone knew Walter Cronkite from the CBS Evening News, where he earned distinction as "The Most Trusted Man in America" during his 19 years at the anchor desk. Throughout his award-winning career - which began as a field reporter in World War II - Cronkite covered such historic events as the first trip to the moon; the assassinations of President John F. Kennedy, Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., and Senator Robert Kennedy; the Watergate scandal; the Vietnam War; the Iran hostage crisis; and John Glenn's return to space. Through it all, he steadfastly adhered to a credo of fast, accurate and unbiased news reporting. After stepping down as anchorman almost 25 years ago, his story continued - Walter Cronkite still leads the life of a genuine Renaissance man - author, sailor, producer and patron, his public concern for, and commitment to, our world has never faltered.

Americans are swimming in a sea of messages. Each year, legions of ad people, copywriters, market researchers, pollsters, consultants, and even linguists - most of whom work for one of six giant companies - spend billions of dollars and millions of man-hours trying to determine how to persuade consumers what to buy, whom to trust, and what to think. Increasingly, these techniques are migrating to the high-stakes arena of politics, shaping policy and influencing how Americans choose their leaders. In "The Persuaders," FRONTLINE exposes the inner workings of the marketing and advertising industries, and the new and surprising methods they use to decipher who we are and what we want.

Everyone knew Walter Cronkite from the CBS Evening News, where he earned distinction as "The Most Trusted Man in America" during his 19 years at the anchor desk. Throughout his award-winning career - which began as a field reporter in World War II - Cronkite covered such historic events as the first trip to the moon; the assassinations of President John F. Kennedy, Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., and Senator Robert Kennedy; the Watergate scandal; the Vietnam War; the Iran hostage crisis; and John Glenn's return to space. Through it all, he steadfastly adhered to a credo of fast, accurate and unbiased news reporting. After stepping down as anchorman almost 25 years ago, his story continued - Walter Cronkite still leads the life of a genuine Renaissance man - author, sailor, producer and patron, his public concern for, and commitment to, our world has never faltered.

Americans are swimming in a sea of messages. Each year, legions of ad people, copywriters, market researchers, pollsters, consultants, and even linguists - most of whom work for one of six giant companies - spend billions of dollars and millions of man-hours trying to determine how to persuade consumers what to buy, whom to trust, and what to think. Increasingly, these techniques are migrating to the high-stakes arena of politics, shaping policy and influencing how Americans choose their leaders. In "The Persuaders," FRONTLINE exposes the inner workings of the marketing and advertising industries, and the new and surprising methods they use to decipher who we are and what we want.

How could the evidence used to make the case for war with Iraq have been so wrong? In this rebroadcast of a stunning February 2006 NOW on PBS report, Larry Wilkerson, an administration insider who helped craft Secretary of State Colin Powell's landmark argument for war to the United Nations, claims he unwittingly "participated in a hoax." On Friday, December 22, 2006 at 8:30 p.m. on PBS (check local listings), NOW reports on the serious doubts that existed about the key evidence being used by the American government at the very time Powell's speech was being planned and delivered. "I recall vividly the Secretary of State walking into my office," Wilkerson told NOW. "And he said, looking out the window, just musing, 'I wonder what we'll do if we put half a million troops on the ground in Iraq -- and don't find a single weapon of mass destruction?'"

Perspectives: "A Look Ahead to the Year 2007" — What religion stories are likely to make news in the New Year? E.J. Dionne, columnist for The Washington Post and a senior fellow at the Brookings Institution, Jeffrey Goldberg, Washington correspondent for The New Yorker, and Rachel Zoll, religion writer for the Associated Press, join host Bob Abernethy for an annual discussion and analysis of the news stories predicted to make headlines in 2007. Among the topics discussed in this studio segment are: civil war in Iraq and the U.S. response; American intervention in re-establishing Israeli-Palestinian dialogue; the international and domestic policy agenda to be set by the new Democratic-controlled Congress; the shifting attitudes of evangelical Christians toward social and environmental issues; the threat of schism within the U.S. Episcopal Church and the Anglican Communion's reaction to the Church's first female presiding bishop; the role of religion in the political process; Iran and Korea's nuclear programs; and Pope Benedict's efforts to restore the Catholic Church in Europe. Belief and Practice: "The Hajj" — The Islamic ritual of "the Hajj," or spiritual journey to Mecca is underway in Saudi Arabia. Muslims who are physically and financially able to fulfill this obligation are expected to do so at least once in their lifetime. Over two million pilgrims are expected this year, including 30-40,000 from the United States, more than ever before. Preparations begin months in advance and special Hajj travel agencies offer package pricing including food, lodging and transportation. Imam Shaker Elsayed of Dar Al Hijrah Mosque in Falls Church, Virginia explains how Muslims prepare for this holy observance and the obligations of the "Fifth Pillar of Islam."

The urge to surge: how the war in Iraq is changing on the ground there and on the ground here, tonight on "Washington Week." Secretary Of Defense Robert Gates said, "What's the mission? What's the purpose? Can we do this? How big should an increase be?" This was the week where the discussion about troop surges in Iraq turned from whether to when. The president led the charge. President George Bush said, (From tape.) "We enter this New Year clear-eyed about the challenges in Iraq." And his generals obediently, if reluctantly, follow. General John Abizaid said, "The Baghdad security situation requires more Iraqi troops, and that's the direction that we're headed right now." So what happens next? Does the Israeli-Palestinian crisis move to the front burner? What about Iran? Syria? Also, presidential politics: who's in, who's out. And could you pick any of them out of a lineup? Covering these stories this week, Michael Duffy of Time Magazine, Doyle McManus of the Los Angeles Times, Andrea Mitchell of NBC News, and James Barnes of National Journal.

In the mid-1850s, thousands of Latter-day Saint emigrants crowded the docks of Liverpool, dreaming of a new life in the Salt Lake Valley. After an arduous ocean voyage and an overland trip to Iowa, they loaded their belongings into handcarts, which they then began pulling the nearly 1,300 miles to the Salt Lake Valley. But for the Willie and Martin companies, numerous delays in an already late start led to a near-catastrophe, as the emigrants found themselves running out of provisions and stranded in treacherous snowstorms on the high plains of Wyoming. This is the story of those who were stranded and those who came to their rescue in one of the greatest acts of heroism of the 19th century.

Building a submarine without the resources of a big shipyard and using only scavenged or off-the-shelf parts is an unusual idea by any standard. But Peter Robbins has dreamed of submarines all his life, and he is an unusually determined man. Over the course of four years, Robbins staked everything he owned to build his own submarine, the Alicia, in a bid to explore, first-hand, the sunken wrecks of German U-boats. As an engineer, he is fascinated by the precision of U-boat technology; as an entrepreneur, he is intrigued by the prospect of underwater tourism. Assembled from more than two million parts, at a cost of $1.5 million, will the Alicia be the success he hoped for? NOVA dives into uncharted waters for the maiden voyage of one man's lifelong dream.

How could the evidence used to make the case for war with Iraq have been so wrong? In this rebroadcast of a stunning February 2006 NOW on PBS report, Larry Wilkerson, an administration insider who helped craft Secretary of State Colin Powell's landmark argument for war to the United Nations, claims he unwittingly "participated in a hoax." On Friday, December 22, 2006 at 8:30 p.m. on PBS (check local listings), NOW reports on the serious doubts that existed about the key evidence being used by the American government at the very time Powell's speech was being planned and delivered. "I recall vividly the Secretary of State walking into my office," Wilkerson told NOW. "And he said, looking out the window, just musing, 'I wonder what we'll do if we put half a million troops on the ground in Iraq -- and don't find a single weapon of mass destruction?'"

Perspectives: "A Look Ahead to the Year 2007" — What religion stories are likely to make news in the New Year? E.J. Dionne, columnist for The Washington Post and a senior fellow at the Brookings Institution, Jeffrey Goldberg, Washington correspondent for The New Yorker, and Rachel Zoll, religion writer for the Associated Press, join host Bob Abernethy for an annual discussion and analysis of the news stories predicted to make headlines in 2007. Among the topics discussed in this studio segment are: civil war in Iraq and the U.S. response; American intervention in re-establishing Israeli-Palestinian dialogue; the international and domestic policy agenda to be set by the new Democratic-controlled Congress; the shifting attitudes of evangelical Christians toward social and environmental issues; the threat of schism within the U.S. Episcopal Church and the Anglican Communion's reaction to the Church's first female presiding bishop; the role of religion in the political process; Iran and Korea's nuclear programs; and Pope Benedict's efforts to restore the Catholic Church in Europe. Belief and Practice: "The Hajj" — The Islamic ritual of "the Hajj," or spiritual journey to Mecca is underway in Saudi Arabia. Muslims who are physically and financially able to fulfill this obligation are expected to do so at least once in their lifetime. Over two million pilgrims are expected this year, including 30-40,000 from the United States, more than ever before. Preparations begin months in advance and special Hajj travel agencies offer package pricing including food, lodging and transportation. Imam Shaker Elsayed of Dar Al Hijrah Mosque in Falls Church, Virginia explains how Muslims prepare for this holy observance and the obligations of the "Fifth Pillar of Islam."

The urge to surge: how the war in Iraq is changing on the ground there and on the ground here, tonight on "Washington Week." Secretary Of Defense Robert Gates said, "What's the mission? What's the purpose? Can we do this? How big should an increase be?" This was the week where the discussion about troop surges in Iraq turned from whether to when. The president led the charge. President George Bush said, (From tape.) "We enter this New Year clear-eyed about the challenges in Iraq." And his generals obediently, if reluctantly, follow. General John Abizaid said, "The Baghdad security situation requires more Iraqi troops, and that's the direction that we're headed right now." So what happens next? Does the Israeli-Palestinian crisis move to the front burner? What about Iran? Syria? Also, presidential politics: who's in, who's out. And could you pick any of them out of a lineup? Covering these stories this week, Michael Duffy of Time Magazine, Doyle McManus of the Los Angeles Times, Andrea Mitchell of NBC News, and James Barnes of National Journal.

Hollywood -- it is stamped as a virtual imprint on our imaginations, a celluloid image frozen in time. Judy Garland also had one of the most frequently recorded voices of the last century. She was magic, almost mythical. She is as iconic as she is misunderstood. There were her problems, to be sure, but the proof is in the performances. From "The Wizard of Oz" to the Palladium, from the Oscars to the Grammys. With singular entree to the MGM library, including vaulted screen tests and rehearsal footage, the film is wrapped in Judy's voice, actually telling her story in her own words. So many outsiders have tried to tell this story and so many friends and family have weighed in -- now Judy gets center stage, all to herself. This is her ultimate comeback.

Life gets turned upside down for Kimberlee and Aimee Fung when their father decides to leave his well-paying corporate executive job in San Francisco and move the family to Bakersfield, CA. Moving in with grandparents and helping out with the family business, a massage parlor called "Touch of the Orient," add to the remodeling of their lives. If the social pressure of starting at a new high school in the middle of the school year weren't enough, Kimberlee and Aimee are among only a handful of Asian American kids at North High. They soon realize that every choice they make--from where to sit at lunch to what clubs to join-- will determine where and if they fit in.

A FISH STORY is the tale of two women who lead their communities in a battle for control of the ocean. Angela Sanfilippo of Gloucester, Massachusetts, and Shareen Davis of Chatham, Massachusetts were born into fishing families and married men who continue to make a living from the sea. Fishing defines who they are and has sustained their communities for generations. But their way of life is threatened when a powerful coalition of national environmental groups file a lawsuit that could put hundreds of fishermen out of business. Three hundred years of fishing tradition and the health of the ocean hangs in the balance.

Both boys and girls face a drop in confidence as they enter puberty. This program helps teens develop self-esteem by focusing on physical, mental and emotional strengths. We follow teens as they participate in challenging activities and workshops given by psychologists and celebrity role models, including athletes Tiffeny Millbrett and Lisa Leslie. Along with an adolescent development expert, they answer questions and give specific advice on setting goals, coping with mistakes, negative thinking, bullying, choosing friends, dealing with emotions, problem solving and other critical issues. Boys and girls also speak out about the pressure to fit in and other stresses. Viewers see how these teens learn to create their own definitions of strength and self-esteem. The program is primarily directed to middle school grades, but it is also relevant for high school use.

The special will feature interviews with teens who have been touched by divorce, either through divorced or separated parents, step families, or friends whose parents are divorced. Profiled teens will be from various ethnic backgrounds and will range in age between 14-18 years old. Through personal testimonials, the special will shed light on how to cope with the emotions that often accompany divorce (anger, guilt, shame, fear, denial, confusion and sadness), dealing with problems created by custody arrangements, helping younger siblings cope and where to find help. Counselors who work with teens will also provide their expertise on this issue.

This special telecast, hosted by Cuba Gooding, Jr., is a behind-the-scenes look at an extraordinary effort by the producers of SESAME STREET to help the approximately 700,000 children under the age of five who are waiting for a deployed mother or father to come home. What the producers discovered as they examined the effects of deployment on young American military families were stories of courage, hope and pride. This touching program is full of valuable information for parents in the military and those who care about them.
