Series Title: America's Lost Landscape: The Tallgrass Prairie
Version: SD-Base
Length: 60
Airdate: 4/1/2007 10:00:00 PM/502
O.B. Date: 4/1/2007 10:00:00 PM
Service: PBS
Format: Documentary
Segment Length: 00:00:00

America's Lost Landscape examines the record of human struggle, triumph, and defeat that prairie history exemplifies, including the history and culture of America's aboriginal inhabitants. The story of how and why the prairie was changed by Euro-American settlement is thoughtfully nuanced. The film also highlights prairie preservation efforts and explores how the tallgrass prairie ecosystem may serve as a model for a sustainable agriculture of the future.

Many of America's finest writers have wrestled with the inequities that belie the American Dream - class and money and, often, a false promise of upward mobility. These themes are reflected through universal characters found in Theodore Dreiser's Sister Carrie and Edith Wharton's House of Mirth; in F. Scott Fitzgerald's The Great Gatsby and John Steinbeck's The Grapes of Wrath; in Ann Petry's The Street, in Gish Jen's Typical American and in Saul Bellow's Seize the Day. Passages from each book, as well as later novels that reflect more diverse voices, are dramatized through haunting still photography, woven together with original and archival footage to form an evocative, intimate tapestry.

In April 1945, the largest battleship ever built set out on the ultimate suicide mission. With its crew of 3,000, Battleship Yamato, the pride of Japan's fleet, sailed to a solo confrontation with the 1500-strong United States Navy. Attacked by a swarm of U. S. dive bombers, the battleship sank within minutes. A NOVA team discovers the wreck and retells the Yamato's extraordinary saga through the eyes of the few Japanese crew who survived the sinking and are still living today. State-of-the-art CGI animation shows viewers what the colossal battleship was like in all its glory at the time of its launching. The program opens a dramatic perspective on the great age of battleships and why it ended so abruptly with the Yamato's disastrous sinking.

Science fiction writers have come up with strange depictions of alien life, but nothing to rival creatures with a beak like a parrot, no bones, three hearts, blue blood, skin that can change colors and arms growing out of lips. Scientists call them cephalopods (squid and octopus); they inhabit a world where cannibalism is a daily practice, mating can involve amputation, trickery is rife and size means everything - and nothing. Viewers follow a cameraman into the abyss and share his adventures with the planet's most cryptic and clever monsters.

We have seen them dressed in costumes and dancing at circuses, living solitary lives at zoos or giving our children a thrill with a ride on their back. But the largest land animals live a life that is completely foreign to us when left to their own in the wild--one complete with battles and births, kidnappings and camaraderie. More than fifteen years ago, Martyn Colbeck began to document in film and photos the lives of African elephants. For the better part of two decades, he has grown particularly close to the elephant matriarch, Echo, and her close-knit family, who have never failed to astonish, amuse, and inspire him.

Along her 9000-mile voyage to nest, our loggerhead tour guide in VOYAGE OF THE LONELY TURTLE encounters hammerhead sharks, deep ocean tempests, and man-made death traps in the form of fishing nets and hooks. Her body of well-suited armor and specialized adaptations for deep-ocean dwelling will help the sea turtle evade many of the ocean's menaces. But this is just one set of challenges to overcome. Here is another: she must find her way across the Pacific, from Mexico to a small stretch of beach in Japan, a precise location that she has been to just once before, as a two-inch hatchling, decades ago.

Forget everything you thought you knew about the 2008 presidential campaign. We'll tell you why tonight on "Washington Week." Sen. Hillary Clinton said, "I'm proud that I have such strong financial support from across the country." Mitt Romney (R-MA) [Former Governor] said, "It's time to have somebody go to Washington who knows how to change things for the better." Candidates raking in big bucks redefine the presidential campaign, the Democrats outraise the Republicans, Romney outraises McCain, and Barack Obama surprises just about everybody. While even with Congress out of town, the war of words over Iraq continues. Pres. George W. Bush said, "Members of Congress say they support the troops. Now they need to show that support in deed as well as in words." Sen. Harry Reid (D-NV) said, "He is the president of the United States, not king of the United States." What's really going on? And the Supreme Court weighs in on global warming: more bad news for President Bush?

Political chaos on Iraq, both here and there. Alberto Gonzales: the e-mail trail. And a personal word about the Don Imus debacle, tonight on "Washington Week." The Iraqi Parliament under siege. The U.S. Military under stress. Secretary of defense Robert Gates said, "I think what this recognizes, though, is that our forces are stretched. There's no question about that." Senator Jim Webb (D-VA) said, "I think there are limits to human endurance, and there are limits to what families can put up with." The White House in search of a solution. Can the war in Iraq be saved? Senator John McCain is taking his presidential ambitions on the answer. Senator John McCain (R-AZ) said, "For my part - for my part - I would rather lose a campaign than a war." And Attorney General Alberto Gonzales stakes his career on the answers he gives an angry Congress about missing White House e-mails. Senator Patrick Leahy (D-VT) said, "They can't say they've been lost. That's like saying "the dog ate my homework." Dana Perino [Dep White House Press Secretary] said, "I will admit it, you know, there was - we screwed up and we're trying to fix it." Plus

This program is the definitive history of the world's most dangerous terrorist organization. It is also the first film to attempt to fully get inside the heads of the men who led Al Qaeda, exploring the ideas that motivated and drove them. With rare footage and firsthand testimony from those who fought, planned, argued, met or lived with them, this is the inside story of Al Qaeda's three leaders -- Osama Bin Laden, Ayman Zawahiri and the recently killed leader of Al Qaeda in Iraq, Abu Musab Al Zarqawi. It is also the story of how the peaceful and noble religion of Islam was perverted by Islamist terrorists in the name of jihad.

Inside an underground bunker in a secret location in Kabul, soldiers from an international military force monitor daily attacks from the Taliban, which has re-emerged this year as a major threat to Afghanistan's weak national government. The bunker is manned by members of the small NATO force now in charge of countering a growing insurgency there, as the United States shifts many of its own combat troops to Iraq. In "The Other War," FRONTLINE/WORLD correspondent Sam Kiley confronts the reality of the West's struggling campaign in Afghanistan, with exclusive access to the NATO command in Afghanistan and provocative reporting from the front lines in the run up to a major offensive the Taliban has promised this spring.

Forget everything you thought you knew about the 2008 presidential campaign. We'll tell you why tonight on "Washington Week." Sen. Hillary Clinton said, "I'm proud that I have such strong financial support from across the country." Mitt Romney (R-MA) [Former Governor] said, "It's time to have somebody go to Washington who knows how to change things for the better." Candidates raking in big bucks redefine the presidential campaign, the Democrats outraise the Republicans, Romney outraises McCain, and Barack Obama surprises just about everybody. While even with Congress out of town, the war of words over Iraq continues. Pres. George W. Bush said, "Members of Congress say they support the troops. Now they need to show that support in deed as well as in words." Sen. Harry Reid (D-NV) said, "He is the president of the United States, not king of the United States." What's really going on? The debate over the Turin Shroud's origins has raged furiously since its first documented appearance in Lirey, France, in the 1350s. Is it the authentic burial shroud of Jesus Christ, or just a brilliant medieval fake? In 1988, three of the world's foremost carbon-dating labs announced in agreement that the Shroud could be dated only as far back as the 13th or 14th century. Then in the summer of 2002, Mechthild Flury-Lemberg, one of the world's foremost textile restorers, was invited to Turin to undertake an unprecedented renovation of the shroud, which called for the removal of both the backing cloth and all the medieval patches. It marked the first time a fabrics expert had worked so closely with the precious relic, and what she eventually uncovered shook the study of the shroud to its foundations. "Science of the Shroud" reveals the brand-new forensic evidence that Christianity's most treasured existing relic is indeed 2,000 years old, dating from the time of Christ. Adding to the latest fervor are bacteriologists' experiments that may prove once and for all how the image on the cloth was ever imprinted, and forensic experts' analysis of the wounds on the image that appear to closely reflect those described in the New Testament.

This program is the definitive history of the world's most dangerous terrorist organization. It is also the first film to attempt to fully get inside the heads of the men who led Al Qaeda, exploring the ideas that motivated and drove them. With rare footage and firsthand testimony from those who fought, planned, argued, met or lived with them, this is the inside story of Al Qaeda's three leaders -- Osama Bin Laden, Ayman Zawahiri and the recently killed leader of Al Qaeda in Iraq, Abu Musab Al Zarqawi. It is also the story of how the peaceful and noble religion of Islam was perverted by Islamist terrorists in the name of jihad.

In April 1945, the largest battleship ever built set out on the ultimate suicide mission. With its crew of 3,000, Battleship Yamato, the pride of Japan's fleet, sailed to a solo confrontation with the 1500-strong United States Navy. Attacked by a swarm of U. S. dive bombers, the battleship sank within minutes. A NOVA team discovers the wreck and retells the Yamato's extraordinary saga through the eyes of the few Japanese crew who survived the sinking and are still living today. State-of-the-art CGI animation shows viewers what the colossal battleship was like in all its glory at the time of its launching. The program opens a dramatic perspective on the great age of battleships and why it ended so abruptly with the Yamato's disastrous sinking.

Political chaos on Iraq, both here and there. Alberto Gonzales: the e-mail trail. And a personal word about the Don Imus debacle, tonight on "Washington Week." The Iraqi Parliament under siege. The U.S. Military under stress. Secretary of defense Robert Gates said, "I think what this recognizes, though, is that our forces are stretched. There's no question about that." Senator Jim Webb (D-VA) said, "I think there are limits to human endurance, and there are limits to what families can put up with." The White House in search of a solution. Can the war in Iraq be saved? Senator John McCain is taking his presidential ambitions on the answer. Senator John McCain (R-AZ) said, "For my part - for my part - I would rather lose a campaign than a war." And Attorney General Alberto Gonzales stakes his career on the answers he gives an angry Congress about missing White House e-mails. Senator Patrick Leahy (D-VT) said, "They can't say they've been lost. That's like saying "the dog ate my homework." Dana Perino [Dep White House Press Secretary] said, "I will admit it, you know, there was - we screwed up and we're trying to fix it." Plus radio host Don Imus is fired. What that says about trash talk, journalists, and politics. Covering the week: Linda Robinson of U.S. News and World Report, David Sanger of the New York Times, Dan Balz of the Washington Post, and Pete Williams of NBC News.

Of the 1.6 million Jewish children who lived in Europe before WWII, only 100,000 survived the Holocaust. Most were hidden children, shuttered away in attics, cellars, convents or farms. This hour long documentary, is Maud Dahme's story of courage, hope and bravery in the face of evil and death. It chronicles the wartime experiences of Dahme, one of an estimated 5,000 Jewish children hidden from the Nazis by righteous gentiles in the Netherlands.

Abortion, gun violence, Gonzales and Iraq. How the world changed, this week on "Washington Week." (Bells ringing.) Gun violence claims 32 lives at Virginia Tech. Rep. Jim Moran (D-VA.): (From tape.) It is we, the people's representatives, who have to stand up and do something about this so that it doesn't have to occur again. Will it change the debate in Washington? Can it? Attorney General Alberto Gonzales said, "I don't remember. I don't recall. I have no recollection about that." With Republicans jumping ship. Sen. Tom Coburn (R-OK) said, "I believe the best way to put this behind us is your resignation." Can Alberto Gonzales survive? The Supreme Court changes course on abortion, supporting a ban on a controversial procedure. And on Iraq, the White House is drawn into a larger debate.

President George W. Bush said, "We should not legislate defeat in this vital war." Sen. Harry Reid (D-NV) said, "As long as we follow the president's path in Iraq, the war is lost." Covering the week, Jeanne Cummings of "The Politico", Pierre Thomas of ABC News, Linda Greenhouse of "The New York Times," and Peter Baker of "The Washington Post."

Housing in the United States is taking a big hit as "too-good-to-be-true" home loans fail, refinancing dries up, and foreclosures surge. How did the market plummet so quickly -- and are current homeowners paying the price? NOW revisits a California town whose real estate fortunes have taken a hard turn for the worse. Also on the show, we spend more time with the Coalition of Immokalee Workers -- a group of determined Florida farm workers who pick the tomatoes that may wind up on your fast food. For nearly a decade they've also been picking a fight with some of the food giants of corporate America to get a better wage for themselves and their families...and they've been winning.

"Rosevelt's America" is a cinema verite profile of the struggles of a Lieberman refugee to build a new life in America. After being tortured and narrowly escaping execution during Liberia's civil war, Rosevelt Henderson makes his way to America with three of his children, but is forced to leave his pregnant wife behind. He works as a janitor, airport van driver and assembly line worker in order to support his family and help his wife flee their war-torn country. After two year of juggling low wage jobs, Rosevelt's perseverance pays off and he is reunited with his wife, Frances, and his baby daughter. By witnessing Rosevelt's day-to-day struggles, frustrations and achievements, viewers come to appreciate the distance he has traveled during his harrowing journey from torture and desperation in his native Liberia to security and stability in his newly adopted Hamlin. Ultimately "Rosevelt's America" becomes an inspiring story of quiet determination and dignity under duress.

As the Earth heats up at a dangerous rate and fossil fuels become scarcer, ordinary citizens and businesses are bypassing the federal government to lead the way in exploring a clean, renewable source of power: the sun. In this report, NOVA shines a light on how and why people across America and the world are "going solar," using radiant energy of the sun to power homes, businesses, and even entire communities. But can everyday people really make a difference by using solar power? And can solar technologies, with their high cost and logistical challenges, truly play a bigger role in powering the future of humanity? The grand hopes, latest innovations, roiling controversies, and practical realities of solar power all come to the fore in this program.

Housing in the United States is taking a big hit as "too-good-to-be-true" home loans fail, refinancing dries up, and foreclosures surge. How did the market plummet so quickly -- and are current homeowners paying the price? NOW revisits a California town whose real estate fortunes have taken a hard turn for the worse. Also on the show, we spend more time with the Coalition of Immokalee Workers -- a group of determined Florida farm workers who pick the tomatoes that may wind up on your fast food. For nearly a decade they've also been picking a fight with some of the food giants of corporate America to get a better wage for themselves and their families...and they've been winning.

Following 9/11, the U.S. government adopted some controversial new policies to help prevent terrorism here at home, including eavesdropping on Americans' phone calls, secret demands for records under the Patriot Act and the use of FBI sting operations. The Bush Administration contends these tactics have helped save American lives, but critics say they have taken a toll on our liberties. "Security Versus Liberty: The Other War" explores this urgent national debate by talking with both critics and advocates of the new policies and telling the compelling real-life stories of people whose lives have been directly affected. "The Brotherhood" investigates the Muslim Brotherhood's dedication to the spread of a fundamental form of Islam throughout the world -- but is it also supporting terrorists? Award-winning Newsweek journalists Mark Hosenball and Michael Isikoff investigate a movement that preaches peaceful co-existence while offering inspiration for jihadi groups.

Abortion, gun violence, Gonzales and Iraq. How the world changed, this week on "Washington Week." (Bells ringing.) Gun violence claims 32 lives at Virginia Tech. Rep. Jim Moran (D-VA.): (From tape.) It is we, the people's representatives, who have to stand up and do something about this so that it doesn't have to occur again. Will it change the debate in Washington? Can it? Attorney General Alberto Gonzales said, "I don't remember. I don't recall. I have no recollection about that." With Republicans jumping ship. Sen. Tom Coburn (R-OK) said, "I believe the best way to put this behind us is your resignation." Can Alberto

Gonzales survive? The Supreme Court changes course on abortion, supporting a ban on a controversial procedure. And on Iraq, the White House is drawn into a larger debate. President George W. Bush said, "We should not legislate defeat in this vital war." Sen. Harry Reid (D-NV) said, "As long as we follow the president's path in Iraq, the war is lost." Covering the week, Jeanne Cummings of "The Politico", Pierre Thomas of ABC News, Linda Greenhouse of "The New York Times," and Peter Baker of "The Washington Post."

The war debate becomes veto-bate. Democrats spar for '08, Wolfowitz waits, and the stock market inflates, tonight on "Washington Week." Rep. Nancy Pelosi (D-CA) [Speaker of the House] said, "The American people are calling for accountability. I hope that the president will heed their call." President George W. Bush said, "It is what it is and will be vetoed, and my veto will be sustained." The debate over pulling troops out of Iraq comes to a head. Is there any room left for compromise? Sen. Hillary Clinton (D-NY) said, "If this president does not get us out of Iraq, when I'm president, I will." The Democrats who want to take the president's place go to South Carolina for their first big debate. Sen. Barack Obama (D-IL) said, "I am proud that I opposed this was from the start." John Edwards said, "Senator Clinton and anyone else who voted for this war has to search themselves and decide whether they believe they voted the right way." Did anyone break out of the pack? Paul Wolfowitz, one of the war's architects, fights to save his job at the World Bank. And the economy sends drastically mixed signals: weak growth but a surging stock market. What's that all about? The reporters covering the week: Michael Viqueira of NBC News, Karen Tumulty of Time magazine, Tom Gjelten of National Public Radio, and David Wessel of the Wall Street Journal.

"Roosevelt's America" is a cinema verite profile of the struggles of a Lieberman refugee to build a new life in America. After being tortured and narrowly escaping execution during Liberia's civil war, Roosevelt Henderson makes his way to America with three of his children, but is forced to leave his pregnant wife behind. He works as a janitor, airport van driver and assembly line worker in order to support his family and help his wife flee their war-torn country. After two year of juggling low wage jobs, Roosevelt's perseverance pays off and he is reunited with his wife, Frances, and his baby daughter. By witnessing Roosevelt's day-to-day struggles, frustrations and achievements, viewers come to appreciate the distance he has traveled during his harrowing journey from torture and desperation in his native Liberia to security and stability in his newly adopted Hamlin. Ultimately "Roosevelt's America" becomes an inspiring story of quiet determination and dignity under duress.

Housing in the United States is taking a big hit as "too-good-to-be-true" home loans fail, refinancing dries up, and foreclosures surge. How did the market plummet so quickly -- and are current homeowners paying the price? NOW revisits a California town whose real estate fortunes have taken a hard turn for the worse. Also on the show, we spend more time with the Coalition of Immokalee Workers -- a group of determined Florida farm workers who pick the tomatoes that may wind up on your fast food. For nearly a decade they've also been picking a fight with some of the food giants of corporate America to get a better wage for themselves and their families...and they've been winning.

Four years ago on May 1, President Bush landed on the aircraft carrier USS Lincoln wearing a flight suit and delivered a speech in front of a giant "Mission Accomplished" banner. He was hailed by media stars as a "breathtaking" example of presidential leadership in toppling Saddam Hussein. Despite profound questions over the failure to locate weapons of mass destruction and the increasing violence in Baghdad, many in the press confirmed the White House's claim that the war was won. MSNBC's Chris Matthews declared, "We're all neo-cons now;" NPR's Bob Edwards said, "The war in Iraq is essentially over;" and Fortune magazine's Jeff Birnbaum said, "It is amazing how thorough the victory in Iraq really was in the broadest context."

Back in 1999, Salon columnist Andrew Leonard coined the term, "Open-Source Journalism" while describing a story where a writer for JANE'S submitted an article for critique prior to publication to "Slashdot," after which readers "sliced and diced the story into tiny pieces," to such degree that an editor at the magazine later announced that the article would not be published after all. Leonard poses the question: Will better journalism ensue if more reporters and editors beta test their own work? Hard to say -- in the deadline-crazed world of technology journalism, there's often hardly enough time to get a story properly copy edited and proofed, let alone reviewed by hundreds of frothing critics. Still, the principle is worth taking a look at. There's an immense amount of expertise on the Net -- sites like Slashdot are pioneering new territory as they facilitate access to that knowledge, to the great and last benefit of all. The tremendous growth in readership of political blogs in the last five years, such as Josh Marshall's Talkingpointsmemo, which receives close to a million visitors a month, has put this concept to test outside just the technology news arena. As Marshall explains in a blog post from April 3, 2005: "It would have been impossible for me, for instance, to have written most of what I've written on Social Security over the last few months if I didn't have literally thousands of people reading their local papers and letting me know what they're seeing or reporting back from townhall meetings or giving me the heads up on things that are about to break on the hill. That's not a replacement for journalism; it's different. But it's potentially very powerful." Have blogs and the Internet in general strengthened or weakened the craft of journalism?

"Roosevelt's America" is a cinema verite profile of the struggles of a Lieberman refugee to build a new life in America. After being tortured and narrowly escaping execution during Liberia's civil war, Roosevelt Henderson makes his way to America with three of his children, but is forced to leave his pregnant wife behind. He works as a janitor, airport van driver and assembly line worker in order to support his family and help his wife flee their war-torn country. After two year of juggling low wage jobs, Roosevelt's perseverance pays off and he is reunited with his wife, Frances, and his baby daughter. By witnessing Roosevelt's day-to-day struggles, frustrations and achievements, viewers come to appreciate the distance he has traveled during his harrowing journey from torture and desperation in his native Liberia to security and stability in his newly adopted Hamlin. Ultimately "Roosevelt's America" becomes an inspiring story of quiet determination and dignity under duress.

Following 9/11, the U.S. government adopted some controversial new policies to help prevent terrorism here at home, including eavesdropping on Americans' phone calls, secret demands for records under the Patriot Act and the use of FBI sting operations. The Bush Administration contends these tactics have helped save American lives, but critics say they have taken a toll on our liberties. "Security Versus Liberty: The Other War" explores this urgent national debate by talking with both critics and advocates of the new policies and telling the compelling real-life stories of people whose lives have been directly affected. "The Brotherhood" investigates the Muslim Brotherhood's dedication to the spread of a fundamental form of Islam throughout the world -- but is it also supporting terrorists? Award-winning Newsweek journalists Mark Hosenball and Michael Isikoff investigate a movement that preaches peaceful co-existence while offering inspiration for jihadi groups.

Nearly four years after President Bush declared an end to combat in Iraq, the country is still fraught with daily casualties, costly commitments, and an ongoing debate on how to end the violence. How did it come to this? NOW's David Brancaccio speaks with two very different, but unforgettable men who allege that U.S. bungling in Iraq created and fueled the deadly insurgency. Paul Hughes, a retired Army colonel, was part of the transition team after the U.S. invasion of Iraq. He says key decisions were made that ignored the realities of Iraq. Omar Fekeiki was a Washington Post reporter and translator who risked his life to help U.S. journalists. Both Hughes and Fekeiki are featured in a new Sundance prize-winning documentary, "No End in Sight," which exposes what it calls "a chain of critical errors, denial, and incompetence that has galvanized a violent quagmire." Fekeiki's identity was hidden in the documentary for his protection, but he chose to appear unmasked on NOW for the first time.

Abortion, gun violence, Gonzales and Iraq. How the world changed, this week on "Washington Week." (Bells ringing.) Gun violence claims 32 lives at Virginia Tech. Rep. Jim Moran (D-VA): (From tape.) It is we, the people's representatives, who have to stand up and do something about this so that it doesn't have to occur again. Will it change the debate in Washington? Can it? Attorney General Alberto Gonzales said, "I don't remember. I don't recall. I have no recollection about that." With Republicans jumping ship. Sen. Tom Coburn (R-OK) said, "I believe the best way to put this behind us is your resignation." Can Alberto Gonzales survive? The Supreme Court changes course on abortion, supporting a ban on a controversial procedure. And on Iraq, the White House is drawn into a larger debate. President George W. Bush said, "We should not legislate defeat in this vital war." Sen. Harry Reid (D-NV) said, "As long as we follow the president's path in Iraq, the war is lost." Covering the week, Jeanne Cummings of "The Politico", Pierre Thomas of ABC News, Linda Greenhouse of "The New York Times," and Peter Baker of "The Washington Post."

The war debate becomes veto-bate. Democrats spar for '08, Wolfowitz waits, and the stock market inflates, tonight on "Washington Week." Rep. Nancy Pelosi (D-CA) [Speaker of the House] said, "The American people are calling for accountability. I hope that the president will heed their call." President George W. Bush said, "It is what it is and will be vetoed, and my veto will be sustained." The debate over pulling troops out of Iraq comes to a head. Is there any room left for compromise? Sen. Hillary Clinton (D-NY) said, "If this president does not get us out of Iraq, when I'm president, I will." The Democrats who want to take the president's place go to South Carolina for their first big debate. Sen. Barack Obama (D-IL) said, "I am proud that I opposed this was from the start." John Edwards said, "Senator Clinton and anyone else who voted for this war has to search themselves and decide whether they believe they voted the right way." Did anyone break out of the pack? Paul Wolfowitz, one of the war's architects, fights to save his job at the World Bank. And the economy sends drastically mixed signals: weak growth but a surging stock market. What's that all about? The reporters covering the week: Michael Viqueira of NBC News, Karen Tumulty of Time magazine, Tom Gjelten of National Public Radio, and David Wessel of the Wall Street Journal.

At the very center of Christianity, in one of the holiest cities on Earth, a mystery as old as the Christian faith is close to being solved. An academic couple from Oxford -- respected archaeologists both -- have within their grasp the proof as to whether or not Jerusalem's Church of the Holy Sepulcher houses the place where Jesus Christ was crucified and buried. After a decade of delicate probing Martin Biddle and his wife, Birthe Kjolbye-Biddle, have unearthed some astonishing truths about this venerable plot and gone some way to confirming that Christ was buried here, 2,000 years ago. Today's archaeologists use diplomacy, intelligence, traditional archaeological and architectural techniques, and state-of-the-art equipment to unveil the truth. The Biddles have been able to call upon a veritable arsenal of cutting edge technology such as thermal mapping, 3D computerized models and keyhole cameras that can inch through the slightest cracks. The equipment reveals the remains of the earlier structures and the original rock-cut tomb hidden within the walls of the present 19th-century "edicule" or "little house." Marking the site of the original tomb of Christ, the edicule has, incredibly, never been subject to any kind of archaeological study or scientific investigation.

Back in 1999, Salon columnist Andrew Leonard coined the term, "Open-Source Journalism" while describing a story where a writer for JANE'S submitted an article for critique prior to publication to "Slashdot," after which readers "sliced and diced the story into tiny pieces," to such degree that an editor at the magazine later announced that the article would not be published after all. Leonard poses the question: Will better journalism ensue if more reporters and editors beta test their own work? Hard to say -- in the deadline-crazed world of technology journalism, there's often hardly enough time to get a story properly copy edited and proofed, let alone reviewed by hundreds of frothing critics. Still, the principle is worth taking a look at. There's an immense amount of expertise on the Net -- sites like Slashdot are pioneering new territory as they facilitate access to that knowledge, to the great and last benefit of all. The tremendous growth in readership of political blogs in the last five years, such as Josh Marshall's Talkingpointsmemo, which receives close to a million visitors a month, has put this concept to test outside just the technology news arena. As Marshall explains in a blog post from April 3, 2005: "It would have been impossible for me, for instance, to have written most of what I've written on Social Security over the last few months if I didn't have literally thousands of people reading their local papers and letting me know what they're seeing or reporting back from townhall meetings or giving me the heads up on things that are about to break on the hill. That's not a replacement for journalism; it's different. But it's potentially very powerful." Have blogs and the Internet in general strengthened or weakened the craft of journalism?

Following 9/11, the U.S. government adopted some controversial new policies to help prevent terrorism here at home, including eavesdropping on Americans' phone calls, secret demands for records under the Patriot Act and the use of FBI sting operations. The Bush Administration contends these tactics have helped save American lives, but critics say they have taken a toll on our liberties. "Security Versus Liberty: The Other War" explores this urgent national debate by talking with both critics and advocates of the new policies and telling the compelling real-life stories of people whose lives have been directly affected. "The Brotherhood" investigates the Muslim Brotherhood's dedication to the spread of a fundamental form of Islam throughout the world -- but is it also supporting terrorists? Nearly four years after President Bush declared an end to combat in Iraq, the country is still fraught with daily casualties, costly commitments, and an ongoing debate on how to end the violence. How did it come to this? NOW's David Brancaccio speaks with two very different, but unforgettable men who allege that U.S. bungling in Iraq created and fueled the deadly insurgency. Paul Hughes, a retired Army colonel, was part of the transition team after the U.S. invasion of Iraq. He says key decisions were made that ignored the realities of Iraq. Omar Fekeiki was a Washington Post reporter and translator who risked his life to help U.S. journalists. Both Hughes and Fekeiki are featured in a new Sundance prize-winning documentary, "No End in Sight," which exposes what it calls "a chain of critical errors, denial, and incompetence that has galvanized a violent quagmire." Fekeiki's identity was hidden in the documentary for his protection, but he chose to appear unmasked on NOW for the first time.

The war debate becomes veto-bate. Democrats spar for '08, Wolfowitz waits, and the stock market inflates, tonight on "Washington Week." Rep. Nancy Pelosi (D-CA) [Speaker of the House] said, "The American people are calling for accountability. I hope that the president will heed their call." President George W. Bush said, "It is what it is and will be vetoed, and my veto will be sustained." The debate over pulling troops out of Iraq comes to a head. Is there any room left for compromise? Sen. Hillary Clinton (D-NY) said, "If this president does not get us out of Iraq, when I'm president, I will." The Democrats who want to take the president's place go to South Carolina for their first big debate. Sen. Barack Obama (D-IL) said, "I am proud that I opposed this was from the start." John Edwards said, "Senator Clinton and anyone else who voted for this war has to search themselves and decide whether they believe they voted the right way." Did anyone break out of the pack? Paul Wolfowitz, one of the war's architects, fights to save his job at the World Bank. And the economy sends drastically mixed signals: weak growth but a surging stock market. What's that all about? The reporters covering the week: Michael Viqueira of NBC News, Karen Tumulty of Time magazine, Tom Gjelten of National Public Radio, and David Wessel of the Wall Street Journal.

Amelia Earhart was the first woman to fly solo across the Atlantic, and the first to cross the North American continent alone. Her exploits as an aviator, her beauty and intelligence, her independence and charm made her a national heroine. Seemingly invincible, Earhart tirelessly traveled and lectured, a champion of aviation and equal opportunity for women. But her cheering public didn't know the cost of her courage. The record-breaking flights, the aerial exhibitions and races, the interviews to support her favorite causes, the endless speeches and promotional commitments, together with household responsibilities, health problems, and financial worries, combined to push Earhart to the point of exhaustion. In 1937, she set out to accomplish yet another first: to circle the earth along the equator on an east-west flight. Friends warned that her preparations were hurried, even careless. When her plane disappeared without a trace, the "First Lady of the Air" was instantly transformed into an American legend.

Of all founding fathers, Alexander Hamilton had the least promising beginning. He was born illegitimate on the Caribbean island of Nevis, orphaned at age eleven and taken out of school to support himself. Hamilton learned at an early age to take advantage of his boundless intelligence, persuasiveness and self-discipline, and like many a young immigrant of great talent but few resources, he made his way to New York City. There, he passed the New York bar exam with less than a year of legal study. Gifted with words, the precocious Hamilton was also very much a man of action. During the Revolutionary War, he distinguished himself as a military hero and as General George Washington's most trusted advisor.

The flaming explosion of the Hindenburg over Lakehurst, New Jersey in 1937 is one of the most famous disasters of the 20th century. It took more than 100 years to develop what was, in its day, the fastest, most technologically advanced and most luxurious form of transportation in the world. It took only 34 seconds to destroy it. The accident that put an end to the golden age of airships is widely believed to have been caused by the ignition of hydrogen gas used for lift. But Addison Bain, a retired NASA scientist, was not satisfied with that explanation. A hydrogen specialist who believed that it is the clean and safe fuel of the future, he set out on a personal quest of theorizing and experimentation to prove that the Hindenburg's real flaw was only skin deep.

Ahmet Ertegun, a young Turk - literally - with an immigrant's passion for the African-American music he heard in the rigidly segregated Washington, DC, nightclubs of the 1940s, recognized that "all popular music stems from black music, be it jazz or rock 'n' roll or rap." He exported these unique sounds to England, where they merged with the European sensibility, and then imported that fusion back across the ocean. "The Atlantic Sound," which sprang from the small record label Ertegun co-founded in 1947, was a revolutionary new genre, single-handedly influencing the future direction of contemporary music. Ertegun wrote music, produced music, defined careers and changed lives. "He found Ray Charles, he introduced Eric Clapton to Aretha Franklin, he fell asleep on Mick Jagger," says Rolling Stone founder Jann Wenner in AMERICAN MASTERS "Atlantic Records: The House That Ahmet Built."

When veteran government auditor Bobby Maxwell learned oil giant Kerr McGee was not paying the $10 million he says it owed in oil royalties, he prepared an order to Kerr McGee to pay up. Making sure the government gets its money from energy companies was Maxwell's job in the Minerals Management Service (MMS), a division of the Department of the Interior. But Maxwell claims his bosses at the MMS quashed that order. After filing a lawsuit under the False Claims Act, which protects and encourages whistleblowers, Maxwell lost his job. This week, NOW talks with Maxwell about the personal and professional price he says he paid in pursuit of fairness, and examines an industry under fire for keeping too much of the enormous revenue it makes for drilling on land and waters owned by us all. Are oil and gas companies being protected--and even feted--by the government agency charged with regulating them? "I felt very strongly that the American taxpayers just had $10 million stolen out of their pocket," Maxwell tells NOW Senior Correspondent Maria Hinojosa. "And that that needed to be remedied."

9/11 has indelibly altered America in ways that people are now starting to earnestly question: not only perpetual orange alerts, barricades and body frisks at the airport, but greater government scrutiny of people's records and electronic surveillance of their communications. The watershed, officials tell FRONTLINE, was the government's shift after 9/11 to a strategy of pre-emption at home -- not just prosecuting terrorists for breaking the law, but trying to find and stop them before they strike.

When veteran government auditor Bobby Maxwell learned oil giant Kerr McGee was not paying the $10 million he says it owed in oil royalties, he prepared an order to Kerr McGee to pay up. Making sure the government gets its money from energy companies was Maxwell's job in the Minerals Management Service (MMS), a division of the Department of the Interior. But Maxwell claims his bosses at the MMS quashed that order. After filing a lawsuit under the False Claims Act, which protects and encourages whistleblowers, Maxwell lost his job. This week, NOW talks with Maxwell about the personal and professional price he says he paid in pursuit of fairness, and examines an industry under fire for keeping too much of the enormous revenue it makes for drilling on land and waters owned by us all. Are oil and gas companies being protected--and even feted--by the government agency charged with regulating them? "I felt very strongly that the American taxpayers just had $10 million stolen out of their pocket," Maxwell tells NOW Senior Correspondent Maria Hinojosa. "And that that needed to be remedied."

Can animals save human lives by helping us predict tidal waves and other deadly natural phenomena? Observations of animal behavior at the onset of the catastrophic Indian Ocean tsunami have given a major impetus to research into this intriguing question. What, if anything, do animals sense, and how can we use that ability? These issues are at the heart of this program, which explores the moments leading up to the tsunami and assesses how close we are to solving this important puzzle.

Do Mexican Immigrants Aim to "Reconquer" U.S? Minuteman founder says Mexicans sneak over the border to take back country "stolen from their ancestors." In a NOW on the News web-exclusive audio interview, Chris Simcox, the head of the Minuteman Civil Defense Corps, a citizen group that patrols the U.S-Mexican border, says this week's immigration protests expose an "anti-American, anti-European sentiment." "We see that on college campuses across the country -- the vitriol, the hate, the hate groups that exist on college campuses -- and then take to the streets calling for a 'reconquista' of the United States," Simcox tells Senior Correspondent Maria Hinojosa.

Ahmet Ertegun, a young Turk - literally - with an immigrant's passion for the African-American music he heard in the rigidly segregated Washington, DC, nightclubs of the 1940s, recognized that "all popular music stems from black music, be it jazz or rock 'n' roll or rap." He exported these unique sounds to England, where they merged with the European sensibility, and then imported that fusion back across the ocean. "The Atlantic Sound," which sprang from the small record label Ertegun co-founded in 1947, was a revolutionary new genre, single-handedly influencing the future direction of contemporary music. Ertegun wrote music, produced music, defined careers and changed lives. "He found Ray Charles, he introduced Eric Clapton to Aretha Franklin, he fell asleep on Mick Jagger," says Rolling Stone founder Jann Wenner in AMERICAN MASTERS "Atlantic Records: The House That Ahmet Built."

Of all founding fathers, Alexander Hamilton had the least promising beginning. He was born illegitimate on the Caribbean island of Nevis, orphaned at age eleven and taken out of school to support himself. Hamilton learned at an early age to take advantage of his boundless intelligence, persuasiveness and self-discipline, and like many a young immigrant of great talent but few resources, he made his way to New York City. There, he passed the New York bar exam with less than a year of legal study. Gifted with words, the precocious Hamilton was also very much a man of action. During the Revolutionary War, he distinguished himself as a military hero and as General George Washington's most trusted advisor.

BILL MOYERS: When people are having a good time, you don't want to be the skunk in the garden. And people were having such a good time at that big White House welcome for Queen Elizabeth II. The NEW YORK TIMES says Her Majesty was "making Americans go weak in the knees." Sometimes we colonials seem so dazzled by British royalty that I wonder if General Washington did defeat Cornwallis at Yorktown. But a less playful thought also occurred. Watching the first and royal families all gussied up I couldn't help but think of Prince Harry, the Queen's grandson, who is headed for Iraq with a cavalry regiment, even though he's a conspicuous target for assassination or kidnapping. There's angst that other members of his regiment will be put at graver risk because of his celebrity. So guess what his comrades -- his fellow soldiers -- are doing? Rather than petition the Queen to keep the young man home, they have gotten shirts printed up with the words across them: "I'm Harry." In other words, the commoners and the Prince are in this together: one for all and all for one. What a notion -- that war should be the great equalizer, that no one's son or daughter is privileged from duty or danger. I wonder how the last four years might have been different if only our president had asked sacrifice from everyone. Instead, mostly folks from the working class and professional soldiers are doing the dying, while the rich spend their tax cuts. War on the cheap, except for those fighting it. Watching all the wrangling in Washington this week over timetables and exit strategies and benchmarks, I wondered if it all wouldn't come quickly to a halt if the next time they pow-wow and palaver, the president and Congress were asked to wear shirts with the words written across them, "I'm Harry."

9/11 has indelibly altered America in ways that people are now starting to earnestly question: not only perpetual orange alerts, barricades and body frisks at the airport, but greater government scrutiny of people's records and electronic surveillance of their communications. The watershed, officials tell FRONTLINE, was the government's shift after 9/11 to a strategy of pre-emption at home -- not just prosecuting terrorists for breaking the law, but trying to find and stop them before they strike.

When veteran government auditor Bobby Maxwell learned oil giant Kerr McGee was not paying the $10 million he says it owed in oil royalties, he prepared an order to Kerr McGee to pay up. Making sure the government gets its money from energy companies was Maxwell's job in the Minerals Management Service (MMS), a division of the Department of the Interior. But Maxwell claims his bosses at the MMS quashed that order. After filing a lawsuit under the False Claims Act, which protects and encourages whistleblowers, Maxwell lost his job. This week, NOW talks with Maxwell about the personal and professional price he says he paid in pursuit of fairness, and examines an industry under fire for keeping too much of the enormous revenue it makes for drilling on land and waters owned by us all. Are oil and gas companies being protected--and even feted--by the government agency charged with regulating them? "I felt very strongly that the American taxpayers just had $10 million stolen out of their pocket," Maxwell tells NOW Senior Correspondent Maria Hinojosa. "And that that needed to be remedied."

The Republican field and the fast forward political campaign, plus truth and consequences on Iraq at the Capitol, the White House, and in a high profile new book, tonight on "Washington Week." Mayor Rudolph Giuliani (R-NY) said, "Those are the things that Ronald Reagan taught us: you lead from optimism, you lead from hope, and we should never retreat in the face of terrorism." Embracing presidents past. Sen. John McCain (R-AZ) said, "I want to thank Mrs. Reagan for the many kindnesses extended to me and my fellow prisoners of war many years ago when we came home." Gov. Mitt Romney (R-MA) said, "I took the same course that Ronald Reagan and George Herbert Walker Bush and Henry Hyde took and I said I was wrong, and changed my mind and said I'm pro-life." Not as much affection though for the current president. What does that say about the direction of the 2008 campaign? In Washington, a long awaited veto becomes real. President George W. Bush said, "Setting a dateline for withdrawal is setting a date for failure, and that would be irresponsible." Rep. Nancy Pelosi (D-CA) said, "Now into the fifth year of a failed policy, this administration should get a clue: it's not working." But is compromise already afoot? And George Tenet's version of the run up to war - the hardcover edition. But why is he telling us now? The reporters covering the stories: John Harris of the Politico, Gloria Borger of CBS

News and U.S. News, Jeff Zeleny of the New York Times, and Michael Duffy of TIME magazine.

The White House and the Congress at loggerheads over the war. New faces in Europe and old issues facing the GOP, tonight on "Washington Week." Republicans looking for the exits. Sen. Arlen Specter (R-PA), "There is a sense here certainly about the Democrats and growing among Republicans that there has to be some progress - significant progress to sustain it beyond September." Can the president calm his own party long enough to win this war? President George W. Bush, "It makes sense to have benchmarks as a part of our discussion on how to go forward." Or will he have to use his veto pen once again? In Europe, new faces replace an old nemesis and an old friend. Tony Blair (From tape.), "Today I announce my decision to stand down from the leadership of the Labor Party." Political change abroad and its effect on U.S. policy. And on the 2008 campaign trail, Republicans battle their own pasts, their own policies, and even the Pope. Often hailed as both the first modern scientist and the last of the ancient magicians, Isaac Newton reduced nature's chaos to a single set of mathematical laws. More than three centuries later, those laws still govern the way we analyze and forecast the motions of everything from roller coasters to comets. Besides his fundamental breakthroughs in physics, optics and calculus, Newton poured vast energy into fruitless explorations of alchemy and religion. With lively period re-creations of key moments in his career and replications of his experiments in optics and alchemy, NOVA explores how Newton became the giant upon whose shoulders all later scientists found a place to stand.

BILL MOYERS: When people are having a good time, you don't want to be the skunk in the garden. And people were having such a good time at that big White House welcome for Queen Elizabeth II. The NEW YORK TIMES says Her Majesty was "making Americans go weak in the knees." Sometimes we colonials seem so dazzled by British royalty that I wonder if General Washington did defeat Cornwallis at Yorktown. But a less playful thought also occurred. Watching the first and royal families all gussied up I couldn't help but think of Prince Harry, the Queen's grandson, who is headed for Iraq with a cavalry regiment, even though he's a conspicuous target for assassination or kidnapping. There's angst that other members of his regiment will be put at graver risk because of his celebrity. So guess what his comrades -- his fellow soldiers -- are doing? Rather than petition the Queen to keep the young man home, they have gotten shirts printed up with the words across them: "I'm Harry." In other words, the commoners and the Prince are in this together: one for all and all for one. What a notion -- that war should be the great equalizer, that no one's son or daughter is privileged from duty or danger. I wonder how the last four years might have been different if only our president had asked sacrifice from everyone. Instead, mostly folks from the working class and professional soldiers are doing the dying, while the rich spend their tax cuts. War on the cheap, except for those fighting it. Watching all the wrangling in Washington this week over timetables and exit strategies and benchmarks, I wondered if it all wouldn't come quickly to a halt if the next time they pow-wow and palaver, the president and Congress were asked to wear shirts with the words written across them, "I'm Harry."

9/11 has indelibly altered America in ways that people are now starting to earnestly question: not only perpetual orange alerts, barricades and body frisks at the airport, but greater government scrutiny of people's records and electronic surveillance of their communications. The watershed, officials tell FRONTLINE, was the government's shift after 9/11 to a strategy of pre-emption at home -- not just prosecuting terrorists for breaking the law, but trying to find and stop them before they strike.

The Republican field and the fast forward political campaign, plus truth and consequences on Iraq at the Capitol, the White House, and in a high profile new book, tonight on "Washington Week." Mayor Rudolph Giuliani (R-NY) said, "Those are the things that Ronald Reagan taught us: you lead from optimism, you lead from hope, and we should never retreat in the face of terrorism." Embracing presidents past. Sen. John McCain (R-AZ) said, "I want to thank Mrs. Reagan for the many kindnesses extended to me and my fellow prisoners of war many years ago when we came home." Gov. Mitt Romney (R-MA) said, "I took the same course that Ronald Reagan and George Herbert Walker Bush and Henry Hyde took and I said I was wrong, and changed my mind and said I'm pro-life." Not as much affection though for the current president. What does that say about the direction of the 2008 campaign? In Washington, a long awaited veto becomes real. President George W. Bush said, "Setting a dateline for withdrawal is setting a date for failure, and that would be irresponsible." Rep. Nancy Pelosi (D-CA) said, "Now into the fifth year of a failed policy, this administration should get a clue: it's not working." But is compromise already afoot? And George Tenet's version of the run up to war - the hardcover edition. But why is he telling us now? The reporters covering the stories: John Harris of the Politico, Gloria Borger of CBS News and U.S. News, Jeff Zeleny of the New York Times, and Michael Duffy of TIME magazine.

Can the president calm his own party long enough to win this war? President George W. Bush, "It makes sense to have benchmarks as a part of our discussion on how to go forward." Or will he have to use his veto pen once again? In Europe, new faces replace an old nemesis and an old friend. Tony Blair (From tape.), "Today I announce my decision to stand down from the leadership of the Labor Party." Political change abroad and its effect on U.S. policy. And on the 2008 campaign trail, Republicans battle their own pasts, their own policies, and even the Pope. Amelia Earhart was the first woman to fly solo across the Atlantic, and the first to cross the North American continent alone. Her exploits as an aviator, her beauty and intelligence, her independence and charm made her a national heroine. Seemingly invincible, Earhart tirelessly traveled and lectured, a champion of aviation and equal opportunity for women. But her cheering public didn't know the cost of her courage. The record-breaking flights, the aerial exhibitions and races, the interviews to support her favorite causes, the endless speeches and promotional commitments, together with household responsibilities, health problems, and financial worries, combined to push Earhart to the point of exhaustion. In 1937, she set out to accomplish yet another first: to circle the earth along the equator on an east-west flight. Friends warned that her preparations were hurried, even careless. When her plane disappeared without a trace, the "First Lady of the Air" was instantly transformed into an American legend.

In 1926, just a few months before her death, Will Rogers described Annie Oakley as "the greatest woman rifle shot the world has ever produced." As the star attraction of Buffalo Bill's Wild West Show, she thrilled audiences around the world with her daring shooting feats and her act helped fuel turn-of-the-century nostalgia for the vanished, mythical world of the American West. Over time she became an American legend-the loud, brassy, cocksure shooter celebrated in the musical "Annie Get Your Gun." But that legend had little to do with the real Annie Oakley. Although famous as a Western sharpshooter, Oakley lived her entire life east of the Mississippi. A champion in a man's sport, she forever changed ideas about the abilities of women, yet she opposed female suffrage. Her fame and fortune came from her skill with guns, yet she was a Quaker. This probing AMERICAN EXPERIENCE production examines the dramatic life of a uniquely American icon whose complex character manifested many of the paradoxes of the nation.

On June 24, 1948, the Soviet Union blocked railroad and street access to West Berlin, starving the population and choking commerce. Allied forces refused to cede the city, and for nearly a year, succeeded in doing what even the best military minds considered impossible - supply two million civilians and 20,000 allied soldiers entirely from the air. Operating on a strict plan masterminded by U.S. General William Turner, allied forces landed planes every three minutes and delivered more than 4,500 tons of supplies each day. Former German soldiers built airfields and repaired engines for the enemies they had been shooting out of the sky just three years before. American and British pilots, so recently delivering death, were now angels of mercy, supplying coal, flour, coffee and chocolate to the beleaguered city. Through the personal stories of those who were there, this program provides a striking look at the first battle of the Cold War and the largest humanitarian campaign the world had ever seen.

The pen is mightier than the sword. Case in point: a desperate, furtive plea smuggled to a New York reporter from deep within the impregnable confines of Western Australia's Fremantle Prison. It was a letter that launched not a thousand ships, but a single, humble American whaler that stood its watery ground against a heavily armed British steamer for the noble cause of freedom and independence. The whaler was the Catalpa, its captain was George Anthony and its precious human cargo consisted of six Irish political prisoners, who had languished and suffered at the Fremantle prison for a decade.

We have always had a deep sense of longing for the handmade. Perhaps because each of us, in our own way, has had a craft experience. Sometimes it's an object passed down to us, or one that crosses our path, and connects us to others in traditions, heritage and rituals. You've begun your understanding and appreciation with our TV series. Now go further with the other elements of this comprehensive journey. MEMORY - How do we recall our history? Through words? Images? Events? The true link to our collective past -- and keeping it alive -- is through our objects, drawing power from their influences. Sometimes humble, sometimes extravagant, objects stay with us. They are the ties that bind us to our past, no matter how distant that past may be.

On May 6, 2005, the residents of Spokane, Washington, awoke to one of the strangest headlines in the town's history: "West Tied to Sex Abuse in '70s, Using Office to Lure Young Men". The popular, socially conservative Republican mayor of Spokane, Jim West, had been outed by the town's newspaper The Spokesman-Review. The paper told the sordid story of a man with two lives: in public, he had once sponsored legislation forbidding gays from teaching in public schools, while in private, the paper alleged, he was trawling for young men online, using the trappings of his office to lure them into sexual relationships. But as bizarre as the revelations were, so too were the newspaper's methods. For months, a middle-aged "forensic computer specialist" had posed as an eighteen-year-old boy online, engaging the mayor in a relationship that became more and more intimate, ultimately exploding on the front page of the newspaper. With unfettered access to all the principal players, FRONTLINE explores how this story forced an all-American town to confront its most basic feelings about homosexuality and sheds new light on the confusing, often contradictory, experience of gay people themselves in a place far from the main battlefields of the culture wars.

On May 6, 2005, the residents of Spokane, Washington, awoke to one of the strangest headlines in the town's history: "West Tied to Sex Abuse in '70s, Using Office to Lure Young Men". The popular, socially conservative Republican mayor of Spokane, Jim West, had been outed by the town's newspaper The Spokesman-Review. The paper told the sordid story of a man with two lives: in public, he had once sponsored legislation forbidding gays from teaching in public schools, while in private, the paper alleged, he was trawling for young men online, using the trappings of his office to lure them into sexual relationships. But as bizarre as the revelations were, so too were the newspaper's methods. For months, a middle-aged "forensic computer specialist" had posed as an eighteen-year-old boy online, engaging the mayor in a relationship that became more and more intimate, ultimately exploding on the front page of the newspaper. With unfettered access to all the principal players, FRONTLINE explores how this story forced an all-American town to confront its most basic feelings about homosexuality and sheds new light on the confusing, often contradictory, experience of gay people themselves in a place far from the main battlefields of the culture wars.

A deal on immigration reform - maybe; a cloud over the attorney general and the White House; and politics meets religion: past and present. I'm John Harwood sitting in for Gwen Ifill tonight on "Washington Week." Sen. Edward Kennedy (D-MA) said, "Politics is the art of the possible." Lawmakers and the president trumpet a deal on immigration, but the details are trouble in Congress and on the presidential campaign trip. Rep. Tom Tancredo said, "This is another amnesty. No matter how much lipstick you want to put on the pig, it is still a pig called amnesty." The president's men: one out, one in, one left hanging after dramatic congressional testimony. James Comey said, "The door opened and in walked Mr. Gonzales." What is the faith of the embattled attorney general? And the passing of a controversial preacher spotlights the mix of politics and religion. With unconventional candidates in both parties, where will conservative Christians go in 2008? Covering these stories this week: Jeanne Cummings of the Politico, Peter Baker of the Washington Post, Alexis Simendinger of National Journal, and Karen Tumulty of Time Magazine.

War rhetoric at home, war reality on the ground, war politics on the campaign trail, and new revelations at the Department of Justice, tonight, on "Washington Week." Rep Dave Obey (D-WI) said, "I hate disagreement. I'm going to vote against the major portion of this agreement even though I negotiated." Rep. John Boehner (R-OH) said, "And I think at the top of our list is providing for the safety and security of the American people. That's at the top of our list." Congress sends the president a bill to pay for the war in Iraq, but with no timetables to force its end. Rep. Nancy Pelosi said, "The American people do not think that it is necessary for us to be refereeing a civil war in Iraq." But the majority Democrats lost this round, how and why? And how will any of this stem the increasing violence on the ground? Meanwhile, presidential candidates weigh in on Iraq: John Edwards said, "The worst thing about the Global War on Terror approach is that it's backfired." But also on immigration, Iowa, and each other. Sen. John McCain (R-AZ) said, "As I mentioned, maybe he can get out that varmint gun of his and chase those Guatemalans off his lawn." Plus the other Monica. Monica Goodling said, "I know I crossed the line." The culture of politics at Alberto Gonzales's Justice Department. Covering these stories: Michael Viqueira of NBC News, Linda Robinson of US News and World Report, Dan Balz of The Washington Post, and Pierre Thomas of ABC News.

We have always had a deep sense of longing for the handmade. Perhaps because each of us, in our own way, has had a craft experience. Sometimes it's an object passed down to us, or one that crosses our path, and connects us to others in traditions, heritage and rituals.

You've begun your understanding and appreciation with our TV series. Now go further with the other elements of this comprehensive journey. MEMORY - How do we recall our history? Through words? Images? Events? The true link to our collective past -- and keeping it alive -- is through our objects, drawing power from their influences. Sometimes humble, sometimes extravagant, objects stay with us. They are the ties that bind us to our past, no matter how distant that past may be.

It was one of the greatest triumphs of the U.S. Army in 1942, and one of the boldest homeland security initiatives ever undertaken. A job, some said, that was better suited for Paul Bunyan than it was for inexperienced military men. But on November 20, 1942, on a remote vista in Yukon Territory, several hundred men braved the bitter cold to mark the end of an ordeal that few people thought possible: the completion of the Alaska Highway. American Experience presents Building the Alaska Highway, the story of nearly eleven thousand Army engineers who battled freezing temperatures, ice and snow, mountains, mud, muskeg, and mosquitoes to blaze a 1500-mile road through one of the harshest landscapes in North America, and take a huge step forward in defending the nation from threats in the Pacific. The program interweaves interviews with historians and engineers who built the highway, and presents archival footage and beautiful cinematography of the sub-Arctic route the road took. The film also features never-before-seen home movies of the Alaska Highway.

"The Trans-Alaska Pipeline changed just about everything and everyone it touched," says Davis, "from the people who opposed it to the people who supported it, the people who built it, and the state of Alaska." Workers battled Arctic weather to construct an 800-mile pipeline that traversed three mountain ranges, 34 rivers, and 800 streams, and that withstood earthquakes and extreme cold. The men, machines and money the pipeline brought to Alaska would forever transform the wilderness.

Can the quality of healthcare in developing nations be transformed by the same principle that makes fast food such a success here? NOW travels to Kenya to investigate an enterprising idea: franchising not burger and donut shops, but health services and drugs in rural Africa. American businessmen are teaming with African entrepreneurs to spread for-profit clinics around the country in the hopes of providing quality, affordable medical care to even Kenya's poorest people. But can they overcome obstacles like extreme poverty, corruption, fraudulent services, and long distances to establish a sustained solution to a chronic problem? "If we had as many franchise outlets delivering health care in developing countries as Subway has sandwich shops, we've estimated that we could serve about 120 million people a year." Businessman Scott Hillstrom, who conceived the idea, told NOW's David Brancaccio.

On May 6, 2005, the residents of Spokane, Washington, awoke to one of the strangest headlines in the town's history: "West Tied to Sex Abuse in '70s, Using Office to Lure Young Men". The popular, socially conservative Republican mayor of Spokane, Jim West, had been outed by the town's newspaper The Spokesman-Review. The paper told the sordid story of a man with two lives: in public, he had once sponsored legislation forbidding gays from teaching in public schools, while in private, the paper alleged, he was trawling for young men online, using the trappings of his office to lure them into sexual relationships. But as bizarre as the revelations were, so too were the newspaper's methods. For months, a middle-aged "forensic computer specialist" had posed as an eighteen-year-old boy online, engaging the mayor in a relationship that became more and more intimate, ultimately exploding on the front page of the newspaper. With unfettered access to all the principal players, FRONTLINE explores how this story forced an all-American town to confront its most basic feelings about homosexuality and sheds new light on the confusing, often contradictory, experience of gay people themselves in a place far from the main battlefields of the culture wars.

A deal on immigration reform - maybe; a cloud over the attorney general and the White House; and politics meets religion: past and present. I'm John Harwood sitting in for Gwen Ifill tonight on "Washington Week." Sen. Edward Kennedy (D-MA) said, "Politics is the art of the possible." Lawmakers and the president trumpet a deal on immigration, but the details are trouble in Congress and on the presidential campaign trip. Rep. Tom Tancredo said, "This is another amnesty. No matter how much lipstick you want to put on the pig, it is still a pig called amnesty." The president's men: one out, one in, one left hanging after dramatic congressional testimony. James Comey said, "The door opened and in walked Mr. Gonzales." What is the faith of the embattled attorney general? And the passing of a controversial preacher spotlights the mix of politics and religion. With unconventional candidates in both parties, where will conservative Christians go in 2008? Covering these stories this week: Jeanne Cummings of the Politico, Peter Baker of the Washington Post, Alexis Simendinger of National Journal, and Karen Tumulty of Time Magazine.

On May 6, 2005, the residents of Spokane, Washington, awoke to one of the strangest headlines in the town's history: "West Tied to Sex Abuse in '70s, Using Office to Lure Young Men". The popular, socially conservative Republican mayor of Spokane, Jim West, had been outed by the town's newspaper The Spokesman-Review. The paper told the sordid story of a man with two lives: in public, he had once sponsored legislation forbidding gays from teaching in public schools, while in private, the paper alleged, he was trawling for young men online, using the trappings of his office to lure them into sexual relationships. But as bizarre as the revelations were, so too were the newspaper's methods. For months, a middle-aged "forensic computer specialist" had posed as an eighteen-year-old boy online, engaging the mayor in a relationship that became more and more intimate, ultimately exploding on the front page of the newspaper. With unfettered access to all the principal players, FRONTLINE explores how this story forced an all-American town to confront its most basic feelings about homosexuality and sheds new light on the confusing, often contradictory, experience of gay people themselves in a place far from the main battlefields of the culture wars.

Through eyewitness and insider accounts, this program tells the inside story of Tony Blair's rise to Number 10 Downing, providing a new view of the Labour Party's most successful leader -- a man who is ruthless, never compromises, is supremely confident of his judgment and may have sacrificed part of his domestic agenda for a foreign policy that almost destroyed him. In a period when U.S. and British policy and politics have never been more entwined, the inside story of Britain's prime minister is revelatory and directly relevant to American viewers.

A deal on immigration reform - maybe; a cloud over the attorney general and the White House; and politics meets religion: past and present. I'm John Harwood sitting in for Gwen Ifill tonight on "Washington Week." Sen. Edward Kennedy (D-MA) said, "Politics is the art of the possible." Lawmakers and the president trumpet a deal on immigration, but the details are trouble in Congress and on the presidential campaign trip. Rep. Tom Tancredo said, "This is another amnesty. No matter how much lipstick you want to put on the pig, it is still a pig called amnesty." The president's men: one out, one in, one left hanging after dramatic congressional testimony. James Comey said, "The door opened and in walked Mr. Gonzales." What is the faith of the embattled attorney general? And the passing of a controversial preacher spotlights the mix of politics and religion. With unconventional candidates in both parties, where will conservative Christians go in 2008? Covering these stories this week: Jeanne Cummings of the Politico, Peter Baker of the Washington Post, Alexis Simendinger of National Journal, and Karen Tumulty of Time Magazine.

War rhetoric at home, war reality on the ground, war politics on the campaign trail, and new revelations at the Department of Justice, tonight, on "Washington Week." Rep Dave Obey (D-WI) said, "I hate disagreement. I'm going to vote against the major portion of this agreement even though I negotiated." Rep. John Boehner (R-OH) said, "And I think at the top of our list is providing for the safety and security of the American people. That's at the top of our list." Congress sends the president a bill to pay for the war in Iraq, but with no timetables to force its end. Rep. Nancy Pelosi said, "The American people do not think that it is necessary for us to be refereeing a civil war in Iraq." But the majority Democrats lost this round, how and why? And how will any of this stem the increasing violence on the ground? Meanwhile, presidential candidates weigh in on Iraq: John Edwards said, "The worst thing about the Global War on Terror approach is that it's backfired." But also on immigration, Iowa, and each other. Sen. John McCain (R-AZ) said, "As I mentioned, maybe he can get out that varmint gun of his and chase those Guatemalans off his lawn." Plus the other Monica. Monica Goodling said, "I know I crossed the line." The culture of politics at Alberto Gonzales's Justice Department. Covering these stories: Michael Viqueira of NBC News, Linda Robinson of US News and World Report, Dan Balz of The Washington Post, and Pierre Thomas of ABC News.

Can the quality of healthcare in developing nations be transformed by the same principle that makes fast food such a success here? NOW travels to Kenya to investigate an enterprising idea: franchising not burger and donut shops, but health services and drugs in rural Africa. American businessmen are teaming with African entrepreneurs to spread for-profit clinics around the country in the hopes of providing quality, affordable medical care to even Kenya's poorest people. But can they overcome obstacles like extreme poverty, corruption, fraudulent services, and long distances to establish a sustained solution to a chronic problem? "If we had as many franchise outlets delivering health care in developing countries as Subway has sandwich shops, we've estimated that we could serve about 120 million people a year." Businessman Scott Hillstrom, who conceived the idea, told NOW's David Brancaccio.

There are seven million Jehovah's Witnesses in 230 countries worldwide. They spend 1.3 billion hours a year ministering door-to-door, making them one of America's favorite punch lines. Despite their 130-plus-year history, this Christian group is still often derided and misunderstood. KNOCKING opens the door on Jehovah's Witnesses, revealing how they have impacted society in ways far greater and more surprising than the spreading of their faith.

A deal on immigration reform - maybe; a cloud over the attorney general and the White House; and politics meets religion: past and present. I'm John Harwood sitting in for Gwen Ifill tonight on "Washington Week." Sen. Edward Kennedy (D-MA) said, "Politics is the art of the possible." Lawmakers and the president trumpet a deal on immigration, but the details are trouble in Congress and on the presidential campaign trip. Rep. Tom Tancredo said, "This is another amnesty. No matter how much lipstick you want to put on the pig, it is still a pig called amnesty." The president's men: one out, one in, one left hanging after dramatic congressional testimony. James Comey said, "The door opened and in walked Mr. Gonzales." What is the faith of the embattled attorney general? And the passing of a controversial preacher spotlights the mix of politics and religion. With unconventional candidates in both parties, where will conservative Christians go in 2008? Covering these stories this week: Jeanne Cummings of the Politico, Peter Baker of the Washington Post, Alexis Simendinger of National Journal, and Karen Tumulty of Time Magazine.

Ever since its grand opening in 1904, New York City's subway has remained the largest subway system in the world, with more than 700 miles of track and a billion passengers per year. This feat of modern engineering started as the brainchild of Alfred Beach, who built an experimental subway in 1868 to respond to New York's growing population and incredibly crowded streets. Local politicians who had a monetary interest in the current transportation system halted his progress and the tunnel was closed. The city continued overcrowding the streets until 1888 when a major blizzard shut down the city and Mayor Hewitt proposed building the system that transformed New York forever. Backed by a financier and an engineer, work began on the subway. This program chronicles the challenges faced by the engineer who designed the subway between a maze of buildings and through a river; by the miners and immigrants who risked their lives to build the tracks and tunnels; and by the city's residents, who endured years of blasting and construction.

On June 24, 1948, the Soviet Union blocked railroad and street access to West Berlin, starving the population and choking commerce. Allied forces refused to cede the city, and for nearly a year, succeeded in doing what even the best military minds considered impossible - supply two million civilians and 20,000 allied soldiers entirely from the air. Operating on a strict plan masterminded by U.S. General William Turner, allied forces landed planes every three minutes and delivered more than 4,500 tons of supplies each day. Former German soldiers built airfields and repaired engines for the enemies they had been shooting out of the sky just three years before. American and British pilots, so recently delivering death, were now angels of mercy, supplying coal, flour, coffee and chocolate to the beleaguered city. Through the personal stories of those who were there, this program provides a striking look at the first battle of the Cold War and the largest humanitarian campaign the world had ever seen.

In the summer of 1942, two ace fighter pilots -- one American and one Japanese -- faced off during a dramatic dogfight in the skies over Guadalcanal. Eventually the Japanese pilot shot down the American, who crash landed behind enemy lines but managed to escape before being captured. Using both pilots' comprehensive (but sometimes contradictory) memoirs, and following a forensic expedition to the recently-found American plane, "Dogfight Over Guadalcanal" examines and recreates every anxious second of the WWII showdown over the Pacific, revealing just how evenly matched the two men were and how they both survived, despite serious injuries.

War rhetoric at home, war reality on the ground, war politics on the campaign trail, and new revelations at the Department of Justice, tonight, on "Washington Week." Rep Dave Obey (D-WI) said, "I hate disagreement. I'm going to vote against the major portion of this agreement even though I negotiated." Rep. John Boehner (R-OH) said, "And I think at the top of our list is providing for the safety and security of the American people. That's at the top of our list." Congress sends the president a bill to pay for the war in Iraq, but with no timetables to force its end. Rep. Nancy Pelosi said, "The American people do not think that it is necessary for us to be refereeing a civil war in Iraq." But the majority Democrats lost this round, how and why? And how will any of this stem the increasing violence on the ground? Meanwhile, presidential candidates weigh in on Iraq: John Edwards said, "The worst thing about the Global War on Terror approach is that it's backfired." But also on immigration, Iowa, and each other. Sen. John McCain (R-AZ) said, "As I mentioned, maybe he can get out that varmint gun of his and chase those Guatemalans off his lawn." In 1926, just a few months before her death, Will Rogers described Annie Oakley as "the greatest woman rifle shot the world has ever produced." As the star attraction of Buffalo Bill's Wild West Show, she thrilled audiences around the world with her daring shooting feats and her act helped fuel turn-of-the-century nostalgia for the vanished, mythical world of the American West. Over time she became an American legend-the loud, brassy, cocksure shooter celebrated in the musical "Annie Get Your Gun." But that legend had little to do with the real Annie Oakley. Although famous as a Western sharpshooter, Oakley lived her entire life east of the Mississippi. A champion in a man's sport, she forever changed ideas about the abilities of women, yet she opposed female suffrage. Her fame and fortune came from her skill with guns, yet she was a Quaker. This probing AMERICAN EXPERIENCE production examines the dramatic life of a uniquely American icon whose complex character manifested many of the paradoxes of the nation.

In 1789, more than 200 female thieves, prostitutes and con-artists, rounded up from London's most notorious prisons, were shipped off to an Australian penal colony aboard a leaky vessel named the Lady Juliana. Once aboard, the wily women turned their banishment into opportunity, transforming their ship into a rowdy floating brothel. By the time they reached Botany Bay, they were fit, healthy and some were even self-supporting. Instead of a life of servitude, they took control and - along with their offspring - helped guarantee a new world's future. With dramatic reconstructions, powerful imagery and actual ship journals, this program brings to light the true story of the Lady Juliana. Through intensive research and the use of long-hidden historical records, the film also tracks down the women's contemporary descendants and watches as they uncover the surprising truth about their ancestors.

This film profiles the lives of A.P., Sara and Maybelle Carter, the "first family of country music," beginning with their childhood and following their story through 1943, when they stopped playing and recording together. Their music solaced a nation during the darkest days of the depression. The words to their songs captured the painful and moving stories of poor America's history and proved that simple songs about ordinary people are as timeless, moving and relevant as the most studied classics in history. The Carter Family's songs and style remain the most copied in American folk and country music, influencing artists across all genres, including Bob Dylan, Willie Nelson, Johnny Cash, Emmylou Harris, Ray Charles, Linda Ronstadt and Sheryl Crow.

"Two Days in October"--Based on the book They Marched Into Sunlight by the Pulitzer Prize-winning writer David Maraniss, this AMERICAN EXPERIENCE production tells the story of two turbulent days in October 1967. In Vietnam, a U.S. battalion unwittingly marches into a Viet Cong trap. Sixty-one young men are killed and as many wounded. The ambush prompts some in power to wonder whether the war might be un-winnable. Half a world away, angry students on the campus of the University of Wisconsin protest the presence of Dow Chemical, makers of napalm. The demonstration spirals out of control, marking the first time that a student protest of the war turns violent. Told almost entirely by the people who took part in the harrowing events of those two days - American and Viet Cong soldiers, police officers, relatives of men killed in battle, protesting students, members of a political mime troupe and university administrators - the film opens a window onto a moment that divided a nation and a war that continues to haunt us.

On Christmas Eve, 1968, one of the largest audiences in television history tuned in to an extraordinary sight: a live telecast of the moon's surface as seen from Apollo 8. The historic journey of the first manned space flight to leave Earth's gravitational pull and orbit the moon captivated people around the world who welcomed a technological triumph in space after a year marked by assassinations, riots and war on Earth. As this AMERICAN EXPERIENCE production reveals, however, the mission's success was far from assured. The Apollo 8 astronauts had just four months to prepare for the risky mission and catastrophic failure would have brought a halt to America's goal of putting a man on the moon before the end of the decade. With images and audio never before broadcast, this film recounts the flight many consider to be NASA's most daring and important. Interviews with Apollo 8 astronauts, their wives, mission technicians and journalists take viewers inside the high-stakes space race of the late 1960s to reveal how a bold decision by NASA administrators put a struggling Apollo program back on track and allowed America to reach the moon before the Soviets.

The movie "The Great Escape," starring Steve McQueen, was based on fact - on the most daring and technically ingenious prison escape of World War II. The location was a remote, high-security internment camp for Allied airmen. Known as Stalag Luft III, the camp was at Sagan in present-day Poland. The escape emerged from a stunningly ambitious plan: Allied POWs set out to dig three tunnels more than three hundred feet long and thirty feet below ground, which they nicknamed 'Tom,' 'Dick,' and 'Harry,' so that if the Germans discovered one tunnel there would still be a fallback. NOVA follows a team of archaeologists on a hunt for the single surviving tunnel, 'Dick,' that the Germans never found. Accompanying the team was a group of three of the original escapers, who returned to the scene of their daring escapade for the first time in sixty years. The film shows the ingenious methods and devices improvised by the prisoners: how they surveyed the tunnels, disguised the entrance traps, and engineered an amazing air pump and railway system, all from materials scavenged from the camp. But when the time for the breakout came, the thrill of the escape would take an unexpected and tragic turn.

Many Americans assume that the First Amendment prevents the mixing of politics and religion. They would be surprised to learn that this is not what the Founding Fathers intended when they established the nation and wrote the Constitution and Bill of Rights. In fact, they had a radically different interpretation of the role of religion in state and federal governments. Just what was their view? Why was it different? Where did the "wall of separation" metaphor come from? And how did its meaning evolve into what we consider it today? WALL OF SEPARATION addresses these questions, with historical storytelling and scholarly interviews on both sides of the issues. Actor Liev Schreiber narrates.

This film profiles the lives of A.P., Sara and Maybelle Carter, the "first family of country music," beginning with their childhood and following their story through 1943, when they stopped playing and recording together. Their music solaced a nation during the darkest days of the depression. The words to their songs captured the painful and moving stories of poor America's history and proved that simple songs about ordinary people are as timeless, moving and relevant as the most studied classics in history. The Carter Family's songs and style remain the most copied in American folk and country music, influencing artists across all genres, including Bob Dylan, Willie Nelson, Johnny Cash, Emmylou Harris, Ray Charles, Linda Ronstadt and Sheryl Crow.

Director Mike Figgis' film examines the circumstances of the vibrant period in the 1960s, when the UK provided the fertile ground for a new kind of blues music -- entirely influenced by the authentic black blues of the USA, paying homage to the originators of the music and making a global audience aware of the likes of Robert Johnson, Muddy Waters, Howlin' Wolf, Freddie King, et. al. Figgis himself participated, albeit in a minor way, in this period of history, playing in a blues band with Bryan Ferry, a band that was the nucleus for the first Roxy Music. A series of musical interviews with the key players of the blues movement is augmented with a live session at the famous Abbey Road Beatles studio. Tom Jones, Jeff Beck, Van Morrison and Lulu all improvise around some classic blues standards - - accompanied by a superb band made up of younger and not-so-young musicians. The results are electrifying.

On June 5, 1989, one day after Chinese troops expelled thousands of demonstrators from Tiananmen Square in Beijing; a solitary, unarmed protester stood his ground before a column of tanks advancing down the Avenue of Eternal Peace. Captured by Western photographers watching nearby, this extraordinary confrontation became an icon of the fight for freedom around the world. Veteran filmmaker Antony Thomas investigates the mystery of the tank man -- his identity, his fate, and his significance for the Chinese leadership. The search for the tank man reveals China's startling social compact -- its embrace of capitalism while dissent is squashed -- designed to stifle the nationwide unrest of 1989. This policy has allowed educated elites and entrepreneurs to profit handsomely, while the majority of Chinese still face brutal working conditions and low wages, and all Chinese must endure strict political and social controls. Some of these controls regulate speech on the Internet -- and have generated criticism over the involvement of major U.S. corporations such as Yahoo!, Cisco, Microsoft, and Google.

In the 1970's and 80's, Land Developer Gary Bradley worked to transform Austin, Texas' pristine hill country into lucrative residential subdivisions, making both headlines and lots of money. When local residents learned of new plans to develop 4,000 acres over nearby Barton Creek, they rose up to stop Bradley and his partners in their tracks. Whereas the developers had strong connections in the Texas legislature -- and a powerful ally in eventual Governor George W. Bush -- the city had an even stronger connection to their unspoiled home. NOW's David Brancaccio talks with filmmaker Laura Dunn about her documentary, "The Unforeseen," which captures the drama, passion, and heartfelt convictions on all sides of the conflict without making easy targets of any of them.

It started with a severed foot in a vacant lot. By the time the painstaking FBI investigation ended, a powerful Mafia crime family was shattered, and its once-invincible "don" faced life behind bars. With firsthand accounts from FBI special agents, this program explores the brave new world of federal investigation, which combines old-fashioned undercover work with cutting-edge financial sleuthing and forensics. The latest SECRETS OF THE DEAD installment tracks the dramatic downfall of "Big Joey" Massino, delving into the largely unheralded FBI effort to cripple the mob. Joseph D. Pistone, who posed as tough-talking jewel thief Donnie Brasco and whose time in the Mafia was later made into the movie Donnie Brasco, provides insight. Tony-winner Liev Schreiber narrates.

Immigration reform - dead or just on life support? Scooter Libby heading to jail or toward a pardon? And Russia's Vladimir Putin: friend or wily foe? Tonight, on "Washington Week." The immigration fight consumes the U.S. Senate. Sen. Edward Kennedy (D-MA) said, "Every day we have - we continue without this legislation, we have these well trained, well disciplined, highly motivated bodyguards out there chasing people across the desert that are landscapers." Sen. Trent Lott (R-TN) said, "Do we have the courage, tenacity, and the ability to get anything done anymore?" Sen. Mitch McConnell (R-KY) said, "I doubt if the prospects will get better with the passage of time. And it dominates the Republican candidates' debate." Rudy Giuliani said, "The problem with this immigration plan is that it has no real unifying purpose. It's a typical Washington mess." While Democrats squabble over the war. Sen. Hillary Clinton (D-NY) said, "This is George Bush's war. He is responsible for this war." Policy and politics collide. Scooter Libby gets the book thrown at him - two and a half years in jail. Will it stick? The president abroad - President George W. Bush said, "He made some interesting suggestions." - playing diplomatic chicken with an increasingly hostile Russian leader, plus a shake-up at the Pentagon. Covering these stories this week: Charles Babington of the Associated Press, James Barnes of National Journal, Pierre Thomas of ABC News, and Michael Duffy of Time Magazine.

The substance of politics and the politics of substance on Darfur, immigration, Iran, global warming, healthcare, and the science of getting elected, tonight on "Washington Week." President George W. Bush said, "I made clear that the time for promises was over and that President Bashir had to do something to end the suffering." By the end of next year, America and other nations will set a long-term global goal for reducing greenhouse gases. The Bush administration sets the terms for debates that could define his legacy at home and abroad. Secretary Of State Condoleezza Rice said, "We are prepared to change 27 years of American policy and sit with Iran to talk about whatever Iran would like to talk about." What do this week's pronouncements tell us about where the nation is heading? While in the 2008 presidential campaign, the field expands. Senator Fred Thompson said, "Do you ever wonder why when our problems seem to be getting larger that so many of our politicians seem to be getting smaller?" Why not an actor? Senator Thompson said, "Everybody says that." And the Democrats roll out their healthcare plans: what they have in mind and why they're talking about it now. Alfred Kinsey was a little-known biologist at Indiana University when, in the 1940s, he began compiling exhaustive data from tens of thousands of interviews about the sexual practices of men and women. The results of that research were the explosive, best-selling "Kinsey Reports." Implicit in the revolutionary study was a plea for greater tolerance. "Such terms as abnormal, unnatural, oversexed, and undersexed," wrote Harper's Magazine, "have little validity in the light of Professor Kinsey's revelations." The man behind the inflammatory reports seemed at first glance an unlikely "revolutionary." Publicly, he was an erudite, tweedy academic, but in private Kinsey was far more complex. As his interest in sex research deepened so did his wide-ranging sexual experimentation. Though his work was groundbreaking and up-ended established ideas about sexual practices in America, his own sexual orientation and personal beliefs almost certainly shaped and biased his findings. Through interviews with his research assistants, his children, people who took his sex questionnaire, his biographers, and intellectual historians, this probing documentary assesses Kinsey's remarkable achievements, while examining how his personal life shaped his career.

In 1918, at the tail end of the First World War, a flu pandemic ripped through the world with such speed and virulence that by the end of the following year an estimated 40 million people would be dead-outstripping by four-fold the number of victims claimed by the war. Where did this particular flu strain come from, and what made it so deadly? "Killer Flu" will show how 85 years later, virologists and epidemiologists the world over are still hunting down the answers to those two critical questions. Their quest has been imbued with a sense of urgency; modern health experts are bracing themselves for a return of the 1918 flu strain, with many suggesting a similar pandemic will occur within the next decade. The show features the work of American pathologist Jeffrey Taubenberger, who found lung tissue from a 1918 flu victim that contained fragments of the undamaged 1918 virus. For the past six years, Taubenberger has been working to map the virus's genetic code one gene at a time in an effort to learn the secret of its killing prowess. He has even introduced some of the old virus's genes into present-day live virus and injected it into lung tissue to better study the way it attacks its victims. His hope is to apply his research on the 1918 virus to the emergence of new influenza strains.

Twenty-Sixth Presiding Bishop and Primate of the Episcopal Church, Bishop Jefferts Schori became in November 2006 the first woman to lead a national church in the 520 year history of Anglicanism. She serves as chief pastor to the Episcopal Church's 2.4 million members in 16 countries and 10 dioceses, as well as the American representative to the worldwide Anglican Communion, a body of 38 provinces and 77 million worshippers. Bishop Jefferts Schori has assumed her leadership position at a particularly tumultuous time for the Episcopal Church, specifically due to mounting criticism from more conservative sectors of the Anglican Communion, in parts of Africa and Asia, regarding Episcopal stances on homosexuality, same-sex partnerships, and other social issues. In her first national interview since being elected, she told CNN that she does not believe homosexuality is a sin.

In the 1970's and 80's, Land Developer Gary Bradley worked to transform Austin, Texas' pristine hill country into lucrative residential subdivisions, making both headlines and lots of money. When local residents learned of new plans to develop 4,000 acres over nearby Barton Creek, they rose up to stop Bradley and his partners in their tracks. Whereas the developers had strong connections in the Texas legislature -- and a powerful ally in eventual Governor George W. Bush -- the city had an even stronger connection to their unspoiled home. NOW's David Brancaccio talks with filmmaker Laura Dunn about her documentary, "The Unforeseen," which captures the drama, passion, and heartfelt convictions on all sides of the conflict without making easy targets of any of them.

Immigration reform - dead or just on life support? Scooter Libby heading to jail or toward a pardon? And Russia's Vladimir Putin: friend or wily foe? Tonight, on "Washington Week." The immigration fight consumes the U.S. Senate. Sen. Edward Kennedy (D-MA) said, "Every day we have - we continue without this legislation, we have these well trained, well disciplined, highly motivated bodyguards out there chasing people across the desert that are landscapers." Sen. Trent Lott (R-TN) said, "Do we have the courage, tenacity, and the ability to get anything done anymore?" Sen. Mitch McConnell (R-KY) said, "I doubt if the prospects will get better with the passage of time. And it dominates the Republican candidates' debate." Rudy Giuliani said, "The problem with this immigration plan is that it has no real unifying purpose. It's a typical Washington mess." While Democrats squabble over the war. Sen. Hillary Clinton (D-NY) said, "This is George Bush's war. He is responsible for this war." Policy and politics collide. Scooter Libby gets the book thrown at him - two and a half years in jail. Will it stick? The president abroad - President George W. Bush said, "He made some interesting suggestions." - playing diplomatic chicken with an increasingly hostile Russian leader, plus a shake-up at the Pentagon. The president and supporters of immigration reform bring their plan back from the death. President Bush said, "Gracias." But ultimately, will Congress go along? A new wave of violence reinforces old doubts on Iraq. Senator Harry Reid (D-NV) said, "The bloodiest three months of the war has been since the surge took place." Secretary John Negroponte said, "We expect that fight for security will get harder over the coming months as we engage an increasingly desperate enemy." While at the White House, officials brace for new legal challenges. Senator Arlen Specter (R-PA) said, "Have I lost confidence in Attorney General Gonzales? Absolutely yes." Is the fight to remove the attorney general ending - Attorney General Alberto Gonzales said, "I don't recall specifically" -- or just beginning? In the aftermath of the fall of Saddam Hussein, a group of Americans led by Ambassador L. Paul Bremer III set off to Baghdad to build a new nation and establish democracy in the Arab Middle East. One year later, with Bremer forced to secretly exit what some have called "the most dangerous place on earth," the group left behind lawlessness, insurgency, economic collapse, death, destruction - and much of their idealism. Three years later, as the U.S. continues to look for an exit strategy, the government the Americans helped create and the infrastructure they designed are being tested. FRONTLINE producer Michael Kirk follows the early efforts and ideals of this group as they tried to seize control and disband the Iraqi police, army and Baathist government - and how they became hardened along the way to the realities of postwar Iraq. The program is based on numerous first-person interviews and extensive documentation from the FRONTLINE team that produced "Rumsfeld's War," "The Torture Question" and "The Dark Side."

Many Americans assume that the First Amendment prevents the mixing of politics and religion. They would be surprised to learn that this is not what the Founding Fathers intended when they established the nation and wrote the Constitution and Bill of Rights. In fact, they had a radically different interpretation of the role of religion in state and federal governments. Just what was their view? Why was it different? Where did the "wall of separation" metaphor come from? And how did its meaning evolve into what we consider it today? WALL OF SEPARATION addresses these questions, with historical storytelling and scholarly interviews on both sides of the issues. Actor Liev Schreiber narrates.

The substance of politics and the politics of substance on Darfur, immigration, Iran, global warming, healthcare, and the science of getting elected, tonight on "Washington Week." President George W. Bush said, "I made clear that the time for promises was over and that President Bashir had to do something to end the suffering." By the end of next year, America and other nations will set a long-term global goal for reducing greenhouse gases. The Bush administration sets the terms for debates that could define his legacy at home and abroad. Secretary Of State Condoleezza Rice said, "We are prepared to change 27 years of American policy and sit with Iran to talk about whatever Iran would like to talk about." What do this week's pronouncements tell us about where the nation is heading? While in the 2008 presidential campaign, the field expands. Senator Fred Thompson said, "Do you ever wonder why when our problems seem to be getting larger that so many of our politicians seem to be getting smaller?" Why not an actor? Senator Thompson said, "Everybody says that." And the Democrats roll out their healthcare plans: what they have in mind and why they're talking about it now. Immigration reform - dead or just on life support? Scooter Libby heading to jail or toward a pardon? And Russia's Vladimir Putin: friend or wily foe? Tonight, on "Washington Week." The immigration fight consumes the U.S. Senate. Sen. Edward Kennedy (D-MA) said, "Every day we have - we continue without this legislation, we have these well trained, well disciplined, highly motivated bodyguards out there chasing people across the desert that are landscapers." Sen. Trent Lott (R-TN) said, "Do we have the courage, tenacity, and the ability to get anything done anymore?" Sen. Mitch McConnell (R-KY) said, "I doubt if the prospects will get better with the passage of time. And it dominates the Republican candidates' debate." Rudy Giuliani said, "The problem with this immigration plan is that it has no real unifying purpose. It's a typical Washington mess." While Democrats squabble over the war. Sen. Hillary Clinton (D-NY) said, "This is George Bush's war. He is responsible for this war." Policy and politics collide. Scooter Libby gets the book thrown at him - two and a half years in jail. Will it stick? The president abroad - President George W. Bush said, "He made some interesting suggestions." - playing diplomatic chicken with an increasingly hostile Russian leader, plus a shake-up at the Pentagon. Covering these stories this week: Charles Babington of the Associated Press, James Barnes of National Journal, Pierre Thomas of ABC News, and Michael Duffy of Time Magazine.

Fresh developments on immigration reform, Iraq, White House legal woes, and the 2008 campaign, tonight on "Washington Week." President George W. Bush said, "Each day our nation fails to act, the problem only grows worse." Senator Edward Kennedy (D-MA) said, "Doing nothing is not an alternative. It's not an alternative." The president and supporters of immigration reform bring their plan back from the death. President Bush said, "Gracias." But ultimately, will Congress go along? A new wave of violence reinforces old doubts on Iraq. Senator Harry Reid (D-NV) said, "The bloodiest three months of the war has been since the surge took place." Secretary John Negroponte said, "We expect that fight for security will get harder over the coming months as we engage an increasingly desperate enemy." While at the White House, officials brace for new legal challenges. Senator Arlen Specter (R-PA) said, "Have I lost confidence in Attorney General Gonzales? Absolutely yes." Is the fight to remove the attorney general ending - Attorney General Alberto Gonzales said, "I don't recall specifically" -- or just beginning? And how is all this playing out on the 2008 campaign trail? Will Republicans have to answer for their president? Twenty-Sixth Presiding Bishop and Primate of the Episcopal Church, Bishop Jefferts Schori became in November 2006 the first woman to lead a national church in the 520 year history of Anglicanism. She serves as chief pastor to the Episcopal Church's 2.4 million members in 16 countries and 10 dioceses, as well as the American representative to the worldwide Anglican Communion, a body of 38 provinces and 77 million worshippers. Bishop Jefferts Schori has assumed her leadership position at a particularly tumultuous time for the Episcopal Church, specifically due to mounting criticism from more conservative sectors of the Anglican Communion, in parts of Africa and Asia, regarding Episcopal stances on homosexuality, same-sex partnerships, and other social issues. In her first national interview since being elected, she told CNN that she does not believe homosexuality is a sin.

On Christmas Eve, 1968, one of the largest audiences in television history tuned in to an extraordinary sight: a live telecast of the moon's surface as seen from Apollo 8. The historic journey of the first manned space flight to leave Earth's gravitational pull and orbit the moon captivated people around the world who welcomed a technological triumph in space after a year marked by assassinations, riots and war on Earth. As this AMERICAN EXPERIENCE production reveals, however, the mission's success was far from assured. The Apollo 8 astronauts had just four months to prepare for the risky mission and catastrophic failure would have brought a halt to America's goal of putting a man on the moon before the end of the decade. With images and audio never before broadcast, this film recounts the flight many consider to be NASA's most daring and important. Interviews with Apollo 8 astronauts, their wives, mission technicians and journalists take viewers inside the high-stakes space race of the late 1960s to reveal how a bold decision by NASA administrators put a struggling Apollo program back on track and allowed America to reach the moon before the Soviets.

On June 5, 1989, one day after Chinese troops expelled thousands of demonstrators from Tiananmen Square in Beijing; a solitary, unarmed protester stood his ground before a column of tanks advancing down the Avenue of Eternal Peace. Captured by Western photographers watching nearby, this extraordinary confrontation became an icon of the fight for freedom around the world. Veteran filmmaker Antony Thomas investigates the mystery of the tank man -- his identity, his fate, and his significance for the Chinese leadership. The search for the tank man reveals China's startling social compact -- its embrace of capitalism while dissent is squashed -- designed to stifle the nationwide unrest of 1989. This policy has allowed educated elites and entrepreneurs to profit handsomely, while the majority of Chinese still face brutal working conditions and low wages, and all Chinese must endure strict political and social controls. Some of these controls regulate speech on the Internet -- and have generated criticism over the involvement of major U.S. corporations such as Yahoo!, Cisco, Microsoft, and Google.

In 1918, at the tail end of the First World War, a flu pandemic ripped through the world with such speed and virulence that by the end of the following year an estimated 40 million people would be dead—outstripping by four-fold the number of victims claimed by the war. Where did this particular flu strain come from, and what made it so deadly? "Killer Flu" will show how 85 years later, virologists and epidemiologists the world over are still hunting down the answers to those two critical questions. Their quest has been imbued with a sense of urgency; modern health experts are bracing themselves for a return of the 1918 flu strain, with many suggesting a similar pandemic will occur within the next decade. The show features the work of American pathologist Jeffrey Taubenberger, who found lung tissue from a 1918 flu victim that contained fragments of the undamaged 1918 virus. For the past six years, Taubenberger has been working to map the virus's genetic code one gene at a time in an effort to learn the secret of its killing prowess. He has even introduced some of the old virus's genes into present-day live virus and injected it into lung tissue to better study the way it attacks its victims. His hope is to apply his research on the 1918 virus to the emergence of new influenza strains.

It started with a severed foot in a vacant lot. By the time the painstaking FBI investigation ended, a powerful Mafia crime family was shattered, and its once-invincible "don" faced life behind bars. With firsthand accounts from FBI special agents, this program explores the brave new world of federal investigation, which combines old-fashioned undercover work with cutting-edge financial sleuthing and forensics. The latest SECRETS OF THE DEAD installment tracks the dramatic downfall of "Big Joey" Massino, delving into the largely unheralded FBI effort to cripple the mob. Joseph D. Pistone, who posed as tough-talking jewel thief Donnie Brasco and whose time in the Mafia was later made into the movie Donnie Brasco, provides insight. Tony-winner Liev Schreiber narrates.

Alfred Kinsey was a little-known biologist at Indiana University when, in the 1940s, he began compiling exhaustive data from tens of thousands of interviews about the sexual practices of men and women. The results of that research were the explosive, best-selling "Kinsey Reports." Implicit in the revolutionary study was a plea for greater tolerance. "Such terms as abnormal, unnatural, oversexed, and undersexed," wrote Harper's Magazine, "have little validity in the light of Professor Kinsey's revelations." The man behind the inflammatory reports seemed at first glance an unlikely "revolutionary." Publicly, he was an erudite, tweedy academic, but in private Kinsey was far more complex. As his interest in sex research deepened so did his wide-ranging sexual experimentation. Though his work was groundbreaking and up-ended established ideas about sexual practices in America, his own sexual orientation and personal beliefs almost certainly shaped and biased his findings. Through interviews with his research assistants, his children, people who took his sex questionnaire, his biographers, and intellectual historians, this probing documentary assesses Kinsey's remarkable achievements, while examining how his personal life shaped his career.

Twenty-Sixth Presiding Bishop and Primate of the Episcopal Church, Bishop Jefferts Schori became in November 2006 the first woman to lead a national church in the 520 year history of Anglicanism. She serves as chief pastor to the Episcopal Church's 2.4 million members in 16 countries and 10 dioceses, as well as the American representative to the worldwide Anglican Communion, a body of 38 provinces and 77 million worshippers. Bishop Jefferts Schori has assumed her leadership position at a particularly tumultuous time for the Episcopal Church, specifically due to mounting criticism from more conservative sectors of the Anglican Communion, in parts of Africa and Asia, regarding Episcopal stances on homosexuality, same-sex partnerships, and other social issues. In her first national interview since being elected, she told CNN that she does not believe homosexuality is a sin.

"Two Days in October"--Based on the book They Marched Into Sunlight by the Pulitzer Prize-winning writer David Maraniss, this AMERICAN EXPERIENCE production tells the story of two turbulent days in October 1967. In Vietnam, a U.S. battalion unwittingly marches into a Viet Cong trap. Sixty-one young men are killed and as many wounded. The ambush prompts some in power to wonder whether the war might be un-winnable. Half a world away, angry students on the campus of the University of Wisconsin protest the presence of Dow Chemical, makers of napalm. The demonstration spirals out of control, marking the first time that a student protest of the war turns violent. Told almost entirely by the people who took part in the harrowing events of those two days - American and Viet Cong soldiers, police officers, relatives of men killed in battle, protesting students, members of a political mime troupe and university administrators - the film opens a window onto a moment that divided a nation and a war that continues to haunt us.

In the aftermath of the fall of Saddam Hussein, a group of Americans led by Ambassador L. Paul Bremer III set off to Baghdad to build a new nation and establish democracy in the Arab Middle East. One year later, with Bremer forced to secretly exit what some have called "the most dangerous place on earth," the group left behind lawlessness, insurgency, economic collapse, death, destruction - and much of their idealism. Three years later, as the U.S. continues to look for an exit strategy, the government the Americans helped create and the infrastructure they designed are being tested. FRONTLINE producer Michael Kirk follows the early efforts and ideals of this group as they tried to seize control and disband the Iraqi police, army and Baathist government - and how they became hardened along the way to the realities of postwar Iraq. The program is based on numerous first-person interviews and extensive documentation from the FRONTLINE team that produced "Rumsfeld's War," "The Torture Question" and "The Dark Side."

The movie "The Great Escape," starring Steve McQueen, was based on fact - on the most daring and technically ingenious prison escape of World War II. The location was a remote, high-security internment camp for Allied airmen. Known as Stalag Luft III, the camp was at Sagan in present-day Poland. The escape emerged from a stunningly ambitious plan: Allied POWs set out to dig three tunnels more than three hundred feet long and thirty feet below ground, which they nicknamed 'Tom,' 'Dick,' and 'Harry,' so that if the Germans discovered one tunnel there would still be a fallback. NOVA follows a team of archaeologists on a hunt for the single surviving tunnel, 'Dick,' that the Germans never found. Accompanying the team was a group of three of the original escapers, who returned to the scene of their daring escapade for the first time in sixty years. The film shows the ingenious methods and devices improvised by the prisoners: how they surveyed the tunnels, disguised the entrance traps, and engineered an amazing air pump and railway system, all from materials scavenged from the camp. But when the time for the breakout came, the thrill of the escape would take an unexpected and tragic turn.

A PLACE OF OUR OWN is the English-language companion to the Spanish-language series LOS NIÑOS EN SU CASA. Both series are designed for parents and anyone else who takes care of young children: grandparents, nannies, babysitters and home daycare providers. The series covers subjects such as tantrums, literacy, preventing obesity, and speech and language delays. These Peabody Award-winning series combine an entertainment format -- the daytime talk/demonstration show -- with solid educational information on how young children learn, and what adults need to know to help them be prepared for kindergarten and beyond.

With its well-heeled mobsters and glamorous showgirls, fantastical megacasinos and dazzling displays of neon, Las Vegas is the world's most famous monument to reckless abandon and unbridled excess. Produced to coincide with the city's 100th anniversary, this AMERICAN EXPERIENCE film traces the often surprising, endlessly entertaining history of the country's most outrageous playground: from its beginnings as a remote frontier way station to its Depression-era incarnation as the "Gateway to the Hoover Dam"; from its mid-century heyday as the gangster metropolis known as "Sin City" to its recent renaissance as the fastest growing city in the United States. The program features interviews with well-known Las Vegas insiders - Steve and Elaine Wynn, Brian Greenspun - as well as everyday citizens in search of the American dream in this corporately financed desert fantasyland. Michael Murphy narrates.

John Adams was brilliant, argumentative, sometimes irascible. Abigail Adams was a savvy observer of the tumultuous political scene, not afraid to speak her mind in an age when women were excluded from politics. Together they forged one of the greatest partnerships in American history. In the tradition of its award-winning Presidents series, American Experience's John & Abigail Adams chronicles both an inspiring political marriage and the birth of a nation. Under the direction of Peter Jones (Bataan Rescue, The Great Transatlantic Cable), two formidable actors -- Simon Russell Beale (John Adams), recipient of the 2003 Laurence Olivier Theatre Best Actor Award for his performance in "Uncle Vanya," and Linda Emond (Abigail Adams), an accomplished stage actress who previously portrayed Abigail in the Broadway rendition of "1776" -- bring the couple to life. Historians, including David McCullough, author of the bestselling John Adams and the recent 1776, Joanne Freeman, and Joseph Ellis, provide insight on the couple and their legacy. A visionary and gifted political thinker, Adams moved a reluctant colonial Congress to declare independence from England, and single-handedly secured millions of dollars in loans to keep the American army from collapse. He penned the Massachusetts constitution, which served as the basis for the U.S. Constitution. He was the nation's first ambassador to England, its first vice president, and its second president. Through it all, Abigail remained his most trusted political advisor and confidante.

One journalist described it as a chance "to see justice catch up with evil." On November 20, 1945, the twenty-two surviving representatives of the Nazi elite stood before an international military tribunal at the Palace of Justice in Nuremberg, Germany; they were charged with the systematic murder of millions of people. The ensuing trial pitted US Chief Prosecutor and Supreme Court Judge Robert Jackson against Hermann Goering, the former head of the Nazi air force whom Hitler had once named to be his successor. Jackson hoped that the trial would make a statement that crimes against humanity would never again go unpunished. Proving the guilt of the defendants, however, was more difficult than Jackson anticipated. This AMERICAN EXPERIENCE production draws upon rare archival material and eyewitness accounts to recreate the dramatic tribunal that defines trial procedure for state criminals to this day.

For more than 30 years it would be known as "the blackest day in aviation history." On September 6, 1970, members of the militant Palestinian group, the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine (PLFP), hijacked four commercial airplanes. They commandeered a fifth aircraft three days later. Wanting to attract attention to the Palestinian cause and secure the release of several of their comrades, the PLFP spectacularly blew up four of the planes. Today the commanders who planned and carried out the attack resist comparison to the terrorists who masterminded the events of September 11, 2001: members of the PLFP were not religious extremists, but secular Marxist Leninists. And of the almost 600 passengers taken hostage, none were killed. Yet more than three decades later, it is clear that a connection exists between the two seminal events: September 6, 1970 gave birth to a new era of terrorism. In telling this dramatic, complicated story, award-winning producer Ilan Ziv interviews leaders of the PLFP, militants who carried out the attack, journalists who covered the hijackings, crew members and passengers. More than just recounting the events of those tense September days, this AMERICAN EXPERIENCE production examines how and when Middle East militants began to see civilians as legitimate pawns in their struggles for self-determination.

The triumphant author of such innovative works as "The Iceman Cometh," "A Touch of the Poet," and the autobiographical masterpiece "Long Day's Journey Into Night," America's only Nobel Prize-winning playwright once described writing as his "vacation from living." Eugene O'Neill's dedication to his craft was astounding. In fewer than 25 years, he wrote 20 long plays, several of which were three times the usual length. The work won him four Pulitzer Prizes. Much of his writing was influenced by his troubled childhood, his parents' difficult relationship, his mother's morphine addiction and his brother's alcoholism. At the age of 55, O'Neill was forced by a neurological disorder to put down his pen. He spent the next ten years in a frenzied frustration that he knew could end only in death. This AMERICAN EXPERIENCE production by award-winning director Ric Burns, (New York: A Documentary Film) tells O'Neill's turbulent story from his childhood through the ascendant years of his magnificent, prolific career to his lonely, painful death at the age of 65.

Joseph Goebbels was the Nazi propaganda mastermind who helped launch Hitler's rise to power. A twentieth-century icon of maniacal cruelty, his name is synonymous with cynical, unscrupulous and, at times, successful propaganda. In this AMERICAN EXPERIENCE production Goebbels speaks for himself through the film's only narration: voice-over readings of his personal diaries by actor Kenneth Brannagh. Rare historical footage from German archives traces the life of the second most powerful man in the Third Reich, detailing his initial attraction to the Nazi party and his adoration of Hitler. The film offers a chilling glimpse into Goebbels' brilliant but disturbing mind, revealing how he continually stage managed his life and reinvented himself - from his early days as a radical "popular socialist" to his tragic end. The result is a fascinating psychological portrait of a man who careened extravagantly between self-pity, wild extermination fantasies and political excesses.

In June 1900, Major Walter Reed, Chief Surgeon of the U.S. Army, led a medical team to Cuba on a mission to investigate yellow fever. For more than 200 years, the disease had terrorized the United States, killing an estimated 100,000 people in the 19th century alone. Shortly after Reed and his team arrived in Havana, they began testing the radical theories of Carlos Finlay, a Cuban doctor who believed that mosquitoes spread yellow fever. This program documents the heroic efforts of Reed's medical team, some of whom put their own lives on the line to verify Finlay's theory. When yellow fever struck New Orleans in 1905, an aggressive mosquito eradication campaign successfully ended the epidemic. It was the last yellow fever outbreak in the United States and the first major public health triumph of the 20th century.

For years, the U.S. healthcare system has been assailed from all sides. At best, it's portrayed as a frustrating bureaucracy. At worst, it's costing people their very lives. In his new documentary, "Sicko," Michael Moore has turned his eye toward our American Healthcare system, as dominated and regulated by insurance companies, health maintenance organizations and legislators who are too often bought off by "Big Pharmacy" and HMOs. As part of his research, Moore asked for – and received – thousands of healthcare nightmare stories, many of which are retold in the film. He also takes a hard look at how our system stacks up against those of Canada, France, Great Britain--and Cuba. NOW Host David Brancaccio sits down with the controversial chronicler of American culture to find out what makes him tick, and why our healthcare system ticks him off.

The Supreme Court exits stage right. Plus the president loses ground in Iraq and immigration, but pushes back anyway, tonight on "Washington Week." The Supreme Court ends its turn with a bang, ruling against urban desegregation plans, rolling back campaign finance reform, rejecting a student's free speech claims; and in a surprise today, reversing itself on a case involving Guantanamo prisoner's rights. We assess the term. On Capitol Hill, a White House smack-down as Republicans abandon the president on immigration and distance themselves on Iraq. Sen. Richard Lugar (R-IN) said, "The costs and risks of continuing down the current path outweigh the potential benefits that might be achieved." But the White House pushes back, asserting its executive right to ignore Senate subpoenas. Sen. Patrick Leahy (D-VT) said, "It is stonewalling of the worst kind, and I think the reaction is now spreading to both parties in the Senate." A remarkable week for all three branches of government. Covering the stories, Linda Greenhouse of the New York Times, Joan Biskupic of the USA Today, Doyle McManus of the Los Angeles Times, and Alexis Simendinger of National Journal.

Debates surrounding the introduction of earlier media have highlighted the novel attributes of each technology, but the promises and concerns have been fundamentally similar. In general, proponents of media innovation argue that the new technology benefits children by opening up new worlds to them, while opponents argue that new media might be used to substitute for real life in learning ethical principles, undermining children's morality and causing them to engage in illicit sexual and criminal behavior. Research on children and media also has followed a recurrent pattern, reflecting the shifting focus of public concerns. In each case, initial studies have tended to examine which demographic groups of children were gaining access most quickly, how much time they spent with the new technology, and their preferences for different genres or types of use. Then, as the technology became more pervasive, research has tended to shift toward a greater emphasis on how the content of media exposure may be affecting children. In fact, the overwhelming similarity in the research studies from epoch to epoch--across movies, radio, and television--is quite striking.

In June 1900, Major Walter Reed, Chief Surgeon of the U.S. Army, led a medical team to Cuba on a mission to investigate yellow fever. For more than 200 years, the disease had terrorized the United States, killing an estimated 100,000 people in the 19th century alone. Shortly after Reed and his team arrived in Havana, they began testing the radical theories of Carlos Finlay, a Cuban doctor who believed that mosquitoes spread yellow fever. This program documents the heroic efforts of Reed's medical team, some of whom put their own lives on the line to verify Finlay's theory. When yellow fever struck New Orleans in 1905, an aggressive mosquito eradication campaign successfully ended the epidemic. It was the last yellow fever outbreak in the United States and the first major public health triumph of the 20th century.

Poisons, toxins and venoms are the defense and attack mechanisms of the natural world. Gila monsters are armed with toxic saliva, cone shells use poison harpoons, scorpions sting, snakes and spiders inject their victims with venom, blue-ringed octopuses and poison dart frogs kill anything that touches their skin. Almost any of these deadly weapons could kill a human in moments. Yet scientists are finding impressive new possibilities for them - new drugs, new cures, new ways to save lives.

When New Orleans' failing public school system got washed away with the flood waters, the city embarked upon an ambitious and controversial overhaul with an emphasis on charter schools. Charter schools are publicly funded but independently managed schools that proponents hail for innovation, and opponents argue have not yet proven themselves. NOW returns to Lafayette Academy, a charter school where students and teachers have struggled in the past school year with mismanagement and a lack of resources. NOW also visits the fifth graders at KIPP Believe College Prep, part of a successful national charter school network called the "Knowledge Is Power Program." "I think the great thing about being a charter school in New Orleans right now is that we have the autonomy and the power to create the school that we want to create," KIPP School Director Adam Meinig tells NOW's David Brancaccio. Also on the show, a moving "Enterprising Ideas" profile of a novel program that makes new cars affordable for the working poor.

When David Vetter died at the age of 12, he was already world famous: the boy in the plastic bubble. Mythologized as the plucky, handsome child who had defied the odds, his life story is in fact even more dramatic. It is a tragic tale that pits ambitious doctors against a bewildered, frightened young couple. It is a story of unendingly committed caregivers and resourceful scientists on the cutting edge of medical research. This AMERICAN EXPERIENCE raises some of the most difficult ethical questions of our age. Did doctors, in a rush to save a child, condemn the boy to a life not worth living? Did they, in the end, effectively decide how to kill him?

She was described in the press as the "Baby of the Century." When Louise Brown, the world's first successful test tube baby, was born in Great Britain on July 25, 1978, the event was heralded as the beginning of a technological revolution in human reproduction. It was also the culmination of a decade-long effort, involving scientists on both sides of the Atlantic, to help a woman conceive through in vitro fertilization, or IVF. This is the story of two doctors - New York gynecologist Landrum Shettles and British physiologist Robert Edwards - whose work became the focus of debate over the limits of science and a precursor of the current debate over cloning and stem cell research.

There's no question teens are overweight and don't get enough exercise. In this program, teen reporters point out the current and future dangers of an unhealthy lifestyle, such as heart disease, cancer and type 2 diabetes. To help viewers make smart choices, they give easy to use information about reading labels to check the fat and sugar in food; ways to exercise at home; how to change family habits; and much more. They also visit a school that makes nutrition and fitness part of the curriculum; and a Boys & Girls Club where middle school teens learn nutrition basics and fun activities. Through humor, surprising facts and compelling personal stories, teens and parents see how they can also gain more energy and self-esteem through a healthy lifestyle.

LOS NIÑOS EN SU CASA is the Spanish-language companion to the English-language series A PLACE OF OUR OWN. Both series are designed for parents and anyone else who takes care of young children: grandparents, nannies, babysitters and home daycare providers. The series covers subjects such as tantrums, literacy, preventing obesity, and speech and language delays. These Peabody award winning series combine an entertainment format -- the daytime talk/demonstration show -- with solid educational information on how young children learn, and what adults need to know to help children be prepared for kindergarten and beyond.

When David Vetter died at the age of 12, he was already world famous: the boy in the plastic bubble. Mythologized as the plucky, handsome child who had defied the odds, his life story is in fact even more dramatic. It is a tragic tale that pits ambitious doctors against a bewildered, frightened young couple. It is a story of unendingly committed caregivers and resourceful scientists on the cutting edge of medical research. This AMERICAN EXPERIENCE raises some of the most difficult ethical questions of our age. Did doctors, in a rush to save a child, condemn the boy to a life not worth living? Did they, in the end, effectively decide how to kill him?

In June 1900, Major Walter Reed, Chief Surgeon of the U.S. Army, led a medical team to Cuba on a mission to investigate yellow fever. For more than 200 years, the disease had terrorized the United States, killing an estimated 100,000 people in the 19th century alone. Shortly after Reed and his team arrived in Havana, they began testing the radical theories of Carlos Finlay, a Cuban doctor who believed that mosquitoes spread yellow fever. This program documents the heroic efforts of Reed's medical team, some of whom put their own lives on the line to verify Finlay's theory. When yellow fever struck New Orleans in 1905, an aggressive mosquito eradication campaign successfully ended the epidemic. It was the last yellow fever outbreak in the United States and the first major public health triumph of the 20th century.

There's no question teens are overweight and don't get enough exercise. In this program, teen reporters point out the current and future dangers of an unhealthy lifestyle, such as heart disease, cancer and type 2 diabetes. To help viewers make smart choices, they give easy to use information about reading labels to check the fat and sugar in food; ways to exercise at home; how to change family habits; and much more. They also visit a school that makes nutrition and fitness part of the curriculum; and a Boys & Girls Club where middle school teens learn nutrition basics and fun activities. Through humor, surprising facts and compelling personal stories, teens and parents see how they can also gain more energy and self-esteem through a healthy lifestyle.

For years, the U.S. healthcare system has been assailed from all sides. At best, it's portrayed as a frustrating bureaucracy. At worst, it's costing people their very lives. In his new documentary, "Sicko," Michael Moore has turned his eye toward our American Healthcare system, as dominated and regulated by insurance companies, health maintenance organizations and legislators who are too often bought off by "Big Pharmacy" and HMOs. As part of his research, Moore asked for – and received – thousands of healthcare nightmare stories, many of which are retold in the film. He also takes a hard look at how our system stacks up against those of Canada, France, Great Britain--and Cuba. NOW Host David Brancaccio sits down with the controversial chronicler of American culture to find out what makes him tick, and why our healthcare system ticks him off.

The Supreme Court exits stage right. Plus the president loses ground in Iraq and immigration, but pushes back anyway, tonight on "Washington Week." The Supreme Court ends its turn with a bang, ruling against urban desegregation plans, rolling back campaign finance reform, rejecting a student's free speech claims; and in a surprise today, reversing itself on a case involving Guantanamo prisoner's rights. We assess the term. On Capitol Hill, a White House smack-down as Republicans abandon the president on immigration and distance themselves on Iraq. Sen. Richard Lugar (R-IN) said, "The costs and risks of continuing down the current path outweigh the potential benefits that might be achieved." But the White House pushes back, asserting its executive right to ignore Senate subpoenas. Sen. Patrick Leahy (D-VT) said, "It is stonewalling of the worst kind, and I think the reaction is now spreading to both parties in the Senate." A remarkable week for all three branches of government. Covering the stories, Linda Greenhouse of the New York Times, Joan Biskupic of the USA Today, Doyle McManus of the Los Angeles Times, and Alexis Simendinger of National Journal.

Debates surrounding the introduction of earlier media have highlighted the novel attributes of each technology, but the promises and concerns have been fundamentally similar. In general, proponents of media innovation argue that the new technology benefits children by opening up new worlds to them, while opponents argue that new media might be used to substitute for real life in learning ethical principles, undermining children's morality and causing them to engage in illicit sexual and criminal behavior. Research on children and media also has followed a recurrent pattern, reflecting the shifting focus of public concerns. In each case, initial studies have tended to examine which demographic groups of children were gaining access most quickly, how much time they spent with the new technology, and their preferences for different genres or types of use. Then, as the technology became more pervasive, research has tended to shift toward a greater emphasis on how the content of media exposure may be affecting children. In fact, the overwhelming similarity in the research studies from epoch to epoch--across movies, radio, and television--is quite striking.

This documentary traces the history of the spiritual - a uniquely American art form. Created in the fields and slave shacks of the American South, these folksongs allowed slaves to communicate secretly with each other, giving them the power to console, heal and resist. THE SPIRITUALS eloquently recounts the bitter history from which the art form arose and follows the American Spiritual Ensemble as they attempt to preserve the vanishing folksongs of the slaves.

In 2006, PITTSBURGH TRIBUNE-REVIEW reporter Carl Prine resumed his investigations of chemical safety in the United States, this time focusing on the nation's railroad transportation system. Prine discovered that trains loaded with toxic and explosive chemicals pass through major metropolitan areas with inadequate or no security, and in some areas present a target extremely vulnerable to terrorist attack. During his investigation, Prine visited Seattle, Tacoma, Atlanta, Pittsburgh, Las Vegas, San Francisco's Bay Area, and parts of New Jersey. EXPOSÉ returns with Prine to Las Vegas and other locales, where he demonstrates just how easy it is to access the rail cars carrying potentially lethal chemicals. EXPOSÉ also speaks with Senator Joseph R. Biden, Jr. (D-DE) who discusses the rail security bill inspired by Prine's reporting.

As the United States begins one final effort to secure victory through a "surge" of troops, FRONTLINE investigates how strategic and tactical mistakes brought Iraq to virtual civil war. The film recounts how the early mandate to create the conditions for a quick exit of the American military lead to chaos, failure, and sectarian strife. In The Endgame, producer Michael Kirk (Rumsfeld's War, The Torture Question, The Dark Side, and The Lost Year in Iraq) traces why the president decided to risk what military planners once warned could be the worst way to fight in Iraq-door--to-door--and assesses the likelihood of its success. Top administration figures, military commanders, and journalists offer inside details about the new strategy.

For years, the U.S. healthcare system has been assailed from all sides. At best, it's portrayed as a frustrating bureaucracy. At worst, it's costing people their very lives. In his new documentary, "Sicko," Michael Moore has turned his eye toward our American Healthcare system, as dominated and regulated by insurance companies, health maintenance organizations and legislators who are too often bought off by "Big Pharmacy" and HMOs. As part of his research, Moore asked for – and received – thousands of healthcare nightmare stories, many of which are retold in the film. He also takes a hard look at how our system stacks up against those of Canada, France, Great Britain--and Cuba. NOW Host David Brancaccio sits down with the controversial chronicler of American culture to find out what makes him tick, and why our healthcare system ticks him off.

Everybody in the pool: if you're not at least thinking about running for president, you're not in the game. A look at the unannounced field, tonight on "Washington Week." Michael Bloomberg said, "Now don't you just hate those rumors about running for president? What do these men have in common: Bloomberg, Gore, Gingrich, Nader, Thompson?" Fred Thompson said, "There's always room for one more." All playing wait and see for 2008. We take a look at the outsider primary and at the problems lying in wait for the next president: Iraq - Secretary Robert Gates said, "I think that we'll just have to wait and see the progress of these offensives." and the complicated peace process elsewhere in the Middle East. President George W. Bush said, "We recognize that it was Hamas that attacked the unity government. They made a choice of violence." Does the U.S. have a plan for peace? Covering these stories this week: Michael Duffy of Time Magazine, Jeffrey Birnbaum of the Washington Post, Linda Robinson of U.S. News and World Report, and Helene Cooper of the New York Times.

The Supreme Court exits stage right. Plus the president loses ground in Iraq and immigration, but pushes back anyway, tonight on "Washington Week." The Supreme Court ends its turn with a bang, ruling against urban desegregation plans, rolling back campaign finance reform, rejecting a student's free speech claims; and in a surprise today, reversing itself on a case involving Guantanamo prisoner's rights. We assess the term. On Capitol Hill, a White House smack-down as Republicans abandon the president on immigration and distance themselves on Iraq. Sen. Richard Lugar (R-IN) said, "The costs and risks of continuing down the current path outweigh the potential benefits that might be achieved." But the White House pushes back, asserting its executive right to ignore Senate subpoenas. Sen. Patrick Leahy (D-VT) said, "It is stonewalling of the worst kind, and I think the reaction is now spreading to both parties in the Senate." A remarkable week for all three branches of government. Covering the stories, Linda Greenhouse of the New York Times, Joan Biskupic of the USA Today, Doyle McManus of the Los Angeles Times, and Alexis Simendinger of National Journal.

With its well-heeled mobsters and glamorous showgirls, fantastical mega-casinos and dazzling displays of neon, Las Vegas is the world's most famous monument to reckless abandon and unbridled excess. Produced to coincide with the city's 100th anniversary, this AMERICAN EXPERIENCE film traces the often surprising, endlessly entertaining history of the country's most outrageous playground: from its beginnings as a remote frontier way station to its Depression-era incarnation as the "Gateway to the Hoover Dam"; from its mid-century heyday as the gangster metropolis known as "Sin City" to its recent renaissance as the fastest growing city in the United States. The program features interviews with well-known Las Vegas insiders - Steve and Elaine Wynn, Brian Greenspun - as well as everyday citizens in search of the American dream in this corporately financed desert fantasyland. Michael Murphy narrates.

Debates surrounding the introduction of earlier media have highlighted the novel attributes of each technology, but the promises and concerns have been fundamentally similar. In general, proponents of media innovation argue that the new technology benefits children by opening up new worlds to them, while opponents argue that new media might be used to substitute for real life in learning ethical principles, undermining children's morality and causing them to engage in illicit sexual and criminal behavior. Research on children and media also has followed a recurrent pattern, reflecting the shifting focus of public concerns. In each case, initial studies have tended to examine which demographic groups of children were gaining access most quickly, how much time they spent with the new technology, and their preferences for different genres or types of use. Then, as the technology became more pervasive, research has tended to shift toward a greater emphasis on how the content of media exposure may be affecting children. In fact, the overwhelming similarity in the research studies from epoch to epoch--across movies, radio, and television--is quite striking.

Poisons, toxins and venoms are the defense and attack mechanisms of the natural world. Gila monsters are armed with toxic saliva, cone shells use poison harpoons, scorpions sting, snakes and spiders inject their victims with venom, blue-ringed octopuses and poison dart frogs kill anything that touches their skin. Almost any of these deadly weapons could kill a human in moments. Yet scientists are finding impressive new possibilities for them - new drugs, new cures, new ways to save lives.

Through a mix of crime-lab science, archeology, and history, this NOVA/National Geographic special presents new evidence that is changing what we know about the final days of the once-mighty Inca Empire. This probing story of archeological discovery begins in a cemetery crammed with skeletons that offer tantalizing clues about a fierce 16th-century battle between warriors of the collapsing Inca Empire and Spanish invaders. Now, the long-accepted account of a swift Spanish conquest of the Inca—achieved with guns, steel, and horses--is being replaced by a more complete story based on surprising new evidence, including what may be the first gunshot wound in the Americas.

In 2006, PITTSBURGH TRIBUNE-REVIEW reporter Carl Prine resumed his investigations of chemical safety in the United States, this time focusing on the nation's railroad transportation system. Prine discovered that trains loaded with toxic and explosive chemicals pass through major metropolitan areas with inadequate or no security, and in some areas present a target extremely vulnerable to terrorist attack. During his investigation, Prine visited Seattle, Tacoma, Atlanta, Pittsburgh, Las Vegas, San Francisco's Bay Area, and parts of New Jersey. EXPOSÉ returns with Prine to Las Vegas and other locales, where he demonstrates just how easy it is to access the rail cars carrying potentially lethal chemicals. One journalist described it as a chance "to see justice catch up with evil." On November 20, 1945, the twenty-two surviving representatives of the Nazi elite stood before an international military tribunal at the Palace of Justice in Nuremberg, Germany; they were charged with the systematic murder of millions of people. The ensuing trial pitted US Chief Prosecutor and Supreme Court Judge Robert Jackson against Hermann Goering, the former head of the Nazi air force whom Hitler had once named to be his successor. Jackson hoped that the trial would make a statement that crimes against humanity would never again go unpunished. Proving the guilt of the defendants, however, was more difficult than Jackson anticipated. This AMERICAN EXPERIENCE production draws upon rare archival material and eyewitness accounts to recreate the dramatic tribunal that defines trial procedure for state criminals to this day.

For more than 30 years it would be known as "the blackest day in aviation history." On September 6, 1970, members of the militant Palestinian group, the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine (PLFP), hijacked four commercial airplanes. They commandeered a fifth aircraft three days later. Wanting to attract attention to the Palestinian cause and secure the release of several of their comrades, the PLFP spectacularly blew up four of the planes. Today the commanders who planned and carried out the attack resist comparison to the terrorists who masterminded the events of September 11, 2001: members of the PLFP were not religious extremists, but secular Marxist Leninists. And of the almost 600 passengers taken hostage, none were killed. Yet more than three decades later, it is clear that a connection exists between the two seminal events: September 6, 1970 gave birth to a new era of terrorism. In telling this dramatic, complicated story, award-winning producer Ilan Ziv interviews leaders of the PLFP, militants who carried out the attack, journalists who covered the hijackings, crew members and passengers. More than just recounting the events of those tense September days, this AMERICAN EXPERIENCE production examines how and when Middle East militants began to see civilians as legitimate pawns in their struggles for self-determination.

Joseph Goebbels was the Nazi propaganda mastermind who helped launch Hitler's rise to power. A twentieth-century icon of maniacal cruelty, his name is synonymous with cynical, unscrupulous and, at times, successful propaganda. In this AMERICAN EXPERIENCE production Goebbels speaks for himself through the film's only narration: voice-over readings of his personal diaries by actor Kenneth Brannagh. Rare historical footage from German archives traces the life of the second most powerful man in the Third Reich, detailing his initial attraction to the Nazi party and his adoration of Hitler. The film offers a chilling glimpse into Goebbels' brilliant but disturbing mind, revealing how he continually stage managed his life and reinvented himself - from his early days as a radical "popular socialist" to his tragic end. The result is a fascinating psychological portrait of a man who careened extravagantly between self-pity, wild extermination fantasies and political excesses.

Everybody in the pool: if you're not at least thinking about running for president, you're not in the game. A look at the unannounced field, tonight on "Washington Week." Michael Bloomberg said, "Now don't you just hate those rumors about running for president? What do these men have in common: Bloomberg, Gore, Gingrich, Nader, Thompson?" Fred Thompson said, "There's always room for one more." All playing wait and see for 2008. We take a look at the outsider primary and at the problems lying in wait for the next president: Iraq - Secretary Robert Gates said, "I think that we'll just have to wait and see the progress of these offensives." and the complicated peace process elsewhere in the Middle East. President George W. Bush said, "We recognize that it was Hamas that attacked the unity government. They made a choice of violence." Does the U.S. have a plan for peace? Covering these stories this week: Michael Duffy of Time Magazine, Jeffrey Birnbaum of the Washington Post, Linda Robinson of U.S. News and World Report, and Helene Cooper of the New York Times.

The Supreme Court exits stage right. Plus the president loses ground in Iraq and immigration, but pushes back anyway, tonight on "Washington Week." The Supreme Court ends its turn with a bang, ruling against urban desegregation plans, rolling back campaign finance reform, rejecting a student's free speech claims; and in a surprise today, reversing itself on a case involving Guantanamo prisoner's rights. We assess the term. On Capitol Hill, a White House smack-down as Republicans abandon the president on immigration and distance themselves on Iraq. Sen. Richard Lugar (R-IN) said, "The costs and risks of continuing down the current path outweigh the potential benefits that might be achieved." But the White House pushes back, asserting its executive right to ignore Senate subpoenas. Sen. Patrick Leahy (D-VT) said, "It is stonewalling of the worst kind, and I think the reaction is now spreading to both parties in the Senate." A remarkable week for all three branches of government. Covering the stories, Linda Greenhouse of the New York Times, Joan Biskupic of the USA Today, Doyle McManus of the Los Angeles Times, and Alexis Simendinger of National Journal.

When David Vetter died at the age of 12, he was already world famous: the boy in the plastic bubble. Mythologized as the plucky, handsome child who had defied the odds, his life story is in fact even more dramatic. It is a tragic tale that pits ambitious doctors against a bewildered, frightened young couple. It is a story of unendingly committed caregivers and resourceful scientists on the cutting edge of medical research. This AMERICAN EXPERIENCE raises some of the most difficult ethical questions of our age. Did doctors, in a rush to save a child, condemn the boy to a life not worth living? Did they, in the end, effectively decide how to kill him?

A PLACE OF OUR OWN is the English-language companion to the Spanish-language series LOS NIÑOS EN SU CASA. Both series are designed for parents and anyone else who takes care of young children: grandparents, nannies, babysitters and home daycare providers. The series covers subjects such as tantrums, literacy, preventing obesity, and speech and language delays. These Peabody Award-winning series combine an entertainment format -- the daytime talk/demonstration show -- with solid educational information on how young children learn, and what adults need to know to help them be prepared for kindergarten and beyond.

Debates surrounding the introduction of earlier media have highlighted the novel attributes of each technology, but the promises and concerns have been fundamentally similar. In general, proponents of media innovation argue that the new technology benefits children by opening up new worlds to them, while opponents argue that new media might be used to substitute for real life in learning ethical principles, undermining children's morality and causing them to engage in illicit sexual and criminal behavior. Research on children and media also has followed a recurrent pattern, reflecting the shifting focus of public concerns. In each case, initial studies have tended to examine which demographic groups of children were gaining access most quickly, how much time they spent with the new technology, and their preferences for different genres or types of use. Then, as the technology became more pervasive, research has tended to shift toward a greater emphasis on how the content of media exposure may be affecting children. In fact, the overwhelming similarity in the research studies from epoch to epoch--across movies, radio, and television--is quite striking.

This program, hosted by Jason Biggs, explores what schools, groups and individuals are doing to promote racial, religious and cultural understanding at a time when growing numbers of Arab-Americans and Muslims are being victimized. A Sikh teen has been harassed and Muslim teens from various countries clarify various aspects of their religions. They discuss how they have been affected and explain the differences between them and the extremists. We also hear from Palestinian and Israeli teens who are searching for solutions to the Middle East conflict. Plus, we see how a diverse group of young peer educators from Global Kids are working to prevent any form of stereotyping.

There's no question teens are overweight and don't get enough exercise. In this program, teen reporters point out the current and future dangers of an unhealthy lifestyle, such as heart disease, cancer and type 2 diabetes. To help viewers make smart choices, they give easy to use information about reading labels to check the fat and sugar in food; ways to exercise at home; how to change family habits; and much more. They also visit a school that makes nutrition and fitness part of the curriculum; and a Boys & Girls Club where middle school teens learn nutrition basics and fun activities. Through humor, surprising facts and compelling personal stories, teens and parents see how they can also gain more energy and self-esteem through a healthy lifestyle.

When New Orleans' failing public school system got washed away with the flood waters, the city embarked upon an ambitious and controversial overhaul with an emphasis on charter schools. Charter schools are publicly funded but independently managed schools that proponents hail for innovation, and opponents argue have not yet proven themselves. NOW returns to Lafayette Academy, a charter school where students and teachers have struggled in the past school year with mismanagement and a lack of resources. NOW also visits the fifth graders at KIPP Believe College Prep, part of a successful national charter school network called the "Knowledge Is Power Program." "I think the great thing about being a charter school in New Orleans right now is that we have the autonomy and the power to create the school that we want to create," KIPP School Director Adam Meinig tells NOW's David Brancaccio. Also on the show, a moving "Enterprising Ideas" profile of a novel program that makes new cars affordable for the working poor.
