Time: 7:30pm
Service: Executive Program Services
Format: Health

The epidemic of Obesity has lead to rise in Type II diabetes and this has become a major health crisis in the United States. Type II Diabetes is responsible for a number of significant health conditions including kidney disease, lower limb amputation, blindness and cardiovascular disease that can result in heart attacks and strokes. But the good news is that there are ways to prevent type II diabetes in some people, and for those who have already been diagnosed there are ways to keep patients from developing those potential devastating complications. In this program we'll explore the science of the obesity/diabetes/cardiovascular disease connection. Plus we'll see how newer approaches to treatments, diet plans and exercise routines can help patients better manage their disease.

Format: Health

An inherited metabolic disorder known as Gaucher disease was first described by the French physician Philippe Gaucher in 1882. It is the most common of a class of diseases called lysosomal storage diseases. Gaucher disease is characterized by a wide array of symptoms and the severity of the disease ranges from undetectable to lethal. This devastating disease can affect any ethnic group; however the most common form of Gaucher disease is seen in people of eastern European (Ashkenazi) Jewish descent. In this program we will explore the history of this condition and meet patients who talk about their struggles with Gaucher's Disease. We will also highlight the treatments that are offering hope for people living with this mysterious condition.

Plus we'll hear the encouraging news from doctors who believe that MS is very treatable if therapy is started early.

Series Title: Healthy Body, Healthy Minds #1605
"Living with Migraines"
Length: 30 minutes
Airdates: Thursday May 6, 2010
Time: 7:30pm
Service: Executive Program Services
Format: Health

At some point of our lives, we all seem to get what we feel is a headache or a migraine, but for some- migraines can be a debilitating condition that has daily complications. In addition to the pain and discomfort, migraine headaches can keep sufferers up in the middle of the night, making them feel tired and lethargic the next day. A more intense type of headache called "cluster headaches"...sometimes known as suicide headaches because of the withering nature of the pain... are far less common but much more debilitating. In this program we explore the many types of treatments for these headaches...some have been around for a while, and others are fairly new: one class of newer treatments is commonly known as sumatriptans. These medicines have been effective in relieving the symptoms associated with migraines and cluster headaches. But as you'll see, migraine patients often have to search to find the most effective treatment for their particular type of headache.

The good news is today patients have newer options and better patient care.

The new public television special, In Search of the Good Corporate Citizen, goes behind the headlines to reveal the stories of real people who gambled on ethics while also focusing on why scandals happen and seeks realistic, forward-thinking solutions. Is it possible to profit without sacrificing integrity? This program seeks to find out. Hosted by moderator Thomas Donaldson of the Wharton business school, this thought-provoking one-hour special walks a panel of high-level, Fortune 500 executives and other experts into a discussion of ethical business scenarios. As the discussion progresses, the moderator ramps up the level of complication and drama by introducing field pieces and personal profiles that bring to life the topic at hand. Topics include Selling with Integrity, Balancing Short and Long Term Goals, Raising Difficult Ethical Issues So They Get Heard, and Environmental Expenditures that Could Mean Disappointing Wall Street. The panelists featured in the special include Ben Heineman, former General Council of GE; Bill George, former CEO of Medtronic (and board member of Goldman Sachs and ExxonMobil); and Donna Boehme, former Chief Ethics and Compliance Officer at BP.

Series Title: Sound of the Soul
Length: 60 minutes
Airdates: Saturday April 17, 2010
Time: 11:00pm
Service: NETA
Format: Religion

SOUND OF THE SOUL begins with the historic city of Fez itself: its heritage of tolerance as an ancient sanctuary for Muslim, Jewish and Christian inhabitants; its mystical Islamic foundations; its evocative medieval sites. This is the ideal location for an exceptional festival that brings together a unique array of musicians, a transcendent chorus of African Berber women, a Portuguese Fado singer, a French early music ensemble, and players and vocalists from Afghanistan, England, Russia, Ireland, Mauritania, Turkey and even a gospel band from Harlem. All are intermixed with unforgettable Moroccan Sufi performers and all are connected through their artistry by profound expressions of love and longing. An Episcopal priest in the crowd notes: "Every religion on earth is very dependent upon the arts, because the arts are the most direct and immediate way of communicating profound passions and profound beliefs." In a world increasingly polarized by religious conflicts and fundamentalist forces SOUND OF THE SOUL reverberates with unity, understanding and most of all, hope. This is the way the world could be without religious intolerance. This thought-provoking documentary vividly portrays an Arab country where people of different faiths and cultures have lived together in relative peace for centuries. A Sephardic chanteuse, singing from the only public stage for Jewish artists in the Arab world muses: "I think the organizers of the festival are very brave, because it is not really easy at this time in history to invite Jews to play in public. But everything here felt fine. It was a very powerful moment" SOUND OF THE SOUL captures the multifaceted nature of this extraordinary celebration by deftly weaving together the parallel threads of commentaries from various musicians, discussions from a fascinating international symposium and unforgettable concert footage, ultimately revealing the true power of an Afghan singer's affirmation: "Music has no religion, no borders no boundaries. Music is the sound of the soul."

Series Title: Journeyman
Length: 60 minutes
Airdates: Saturday April 3, 2010
Time: 11:00pm
Service: NETA
Format: Ethnics/Family/Violence

JOURNEYMAN is a one-hour documentary which follows Mike and Joe, two teenage boys from diverse backgrounds who struggle with depression and violence. Their behavior has brought them to the attention of the system as "at risk" boys. Through Mike and Joe Journeyman explores an emotional and psychological crisis evident in American boys and men, which is finally being noticed in the mainstream because of the increasing violence and poor school performance of boys. Journeyman's second and converging story is about the boy's mentors who are on their own emotional journey, learning through the mentoring relationship to uncover and face their own unresolved issues from childhood. What is it actually like to live the life of a teenage boy in our America? JOURNEYMAN charts the journey of two teenage boys on their lost-and- found journey to authentic manhood through some unique people, programs, and rituals that are helping them on their way. Journeyman won 2008 best documentary awards at the Gloria and Landlocked film festivals.

Eight years in the making, RIVER OF RENEWAL chronicles the ongoing battle over the resources of Northern California's and Oregon's Klamath Basin. For its American Indian filmmaker, this is a journey of self-discovery as he uncovers the elemental bond between California native tribes, the river, and its legendary denizen, the salmon. The film reveals how different dominant groups over the generations have extracted resources from the Klamath Basin with disastrous consequences including the collapse of wild salmon populations. RIVER OF RENEWAL shows the collision between sustainability and exploitation of our precious and diminishing resources. The outcome may be the largest dam removal project in history and the restoration of a once vital river.

Today's focus on green building is giving us a better understanding of the potential impacts our school buildings have, not only on the environment, but on our children's - and their teachers'- health and development. Armed with this new knowledge, many school districts across the country are taking "green" to a new level. Considering that one in five Americans spend their days in K-12 schools, this green-school movement is positioned to become a significant contributor to improving our nation's environmental and public health. The challenge, however, is in establishing green school definitions and standards that will meet the needs of under-represented people, struggling schools, diverse communities and geographical regions.

Chef Giuliano Hazan understands that cooking is about satisfying different hungers – hunger for pleasure, hunger for flavor, hunger for togetherness. At the early age of 17, Giuliano began working as an assistant at his mother's renowned School of Classic Italian Cooking. He committed himself to mastering the simple, genuine flavors of Italian cuisine. Now, more than three decades later, Chef Hazan is an author, teacher, entrepreneur, and one of the foremost authorities on Italian cooking. If it can be made from wood, 82-year-old Merle Lilly wants to make it. Houses, boats, furniture, an airplane, a carousel horse, a bald eagle, a mandolin, all beautifully hand-crafted from the hard fibrous stuff of trees. Fond of traveling cross-country, it's nearly impossible for this Sarasota man to pass up a good chunk of wood. Find out what Merle Lilly has made from his woodpile lately. They come from circuses, Hollywood film sets, irresponsible breeders and even people's backyards – over 200 creatures in need of food, shelter and compassion. Length: 60 minutes
Airdates: Sunday May 30, 2010
Time: 8:30pm
Service: NETA

Format: War/History

LOST & FOUND: The Legacy of the USS Lagarto recounts the discovery of a WWII US Navy submarine; the first found since the war ended. Missing for more than 60 years, Lagarto and her crew of 86 men vanished during war patrol in the Pacific in 1945. Divers John Chatterton and Richie Kohler, who discovered an unknown sunken German U-Boat near New Jersey described in the best-seller "Shadow Divers," take viewers to the final resting spot of the American sub at the bottom of the Gulf of Thailand. Their underwater high definition video reveals the evidence of Lagarto's fierce battle involving split-second decisions against a Japanese convoy. Computer-generated imaging reconstructs battle tactics of the Japanese Imperial Navy that sent Lagarto to the bottom where the remains of her crew are entombed to this day. Producers Harvey Moshman and Chuck Coppola also explore more than 60 years' worth of emotional wounds still felt by fellow submariners and families of Lagarto's crew. LOST & FOUND details how Midwestern dairy farmers and cherry pickers were recruited to learn welding and pipfitting to build submarines in the tiny shipyard of Manitowoc, Wisconsin on the edge of Lake Michigan, so far from the nearest ocean. The program shows the town's sacrifice and pride then and now. LOST & FOUND is the story of a town, a submarine and families intertwined who show that it is never too late to honor those who've gone before us.

Every 48 years, the inhabitants of the remote Indian state of Mizoram suffer a horrendous ordeal known locally as mautam. An indigenous species of bamboo, blanketing 30 percent of Mizoram's 8,100 square miles, blooms once every half-century, spurring an explosion in the rat population which feeds off the bamboo's fruit. The rats run amok, destroying crops and precipitating a crippling famine throughout Mizoram. NOVA follows this gripping tale of nature's capacity to engender human suffering, and investigates the botanical mystery of why the bamboo flowers and why the rats attack with clockwork precision every half-century.

Now in his early 90s, I.M. Pei was invited to design a modern museum to house the antiquities of Suzhou. This film follows this personal and architectural journey from west to east, an expansive full-circle, a literal coming home -- a realization of Pei's lifelong dream. But also, his biggest challenge and, seven and a half years in the making, a work that he ultimately defines as "my biography." While Pei's perspective is always in the forefront, local residents, design specialists, Suzhou officials, architects, designers and scholars comment on Pei's life and work.

Maximum Capacity. Saving tax dollars--can an innovative program make big cuts in America's prison population? The number of inmates in American prisons is outpacing the system's ability to hold them all. In one startling example, California prisons hold well over 50,000 more inmates than they're designed for, even though the state has built a dozen new prisons in the last 15 years. One of the biggest reasons is rampant recidivism. This week, NOW goes inside an Illinois prison that may have the answer to California's problems. With its innovative plan to keep released inmates from coming back, the Sheridan Correctional Center is trying to redefine "tough on crime" by being the largest fully dedicated drug prison in the country. The approach involves aggressive counseling, job training, and following the convicts after they get out. Can their novel approach keep convicts out of jail for good?

A Town Revitalized? Can one of America's most unorthodox mayors revitalize a town on the verge of collapse? The national economic disaster hit the city of Braddock Pennsylvania like a wrecking ball. But Braddock Mayor John Fetterman--dubbed "America's Coolest Mayor" by The New York Times--is taking very unconventional approaches to reinventing the town and re-inspiring its residents. Home to the nation's first A&P supermarket and Andrew Carnegie's first steel mill, Braddock is being revitalized with new youth and art programs, renovations of abandoned real estate, and bold plans to attract artists and green industries. This week, NOW sits down with Mayor Fetterman to learn how the 6'8" 370-pound political novice is trying to turn his town around, and if other devastated communities can and should follow his large footsteps.

Mississippi: Is This America? (1963-1964): Mississippi's grass-roots civil rights movement becomes an American concern when college students travel south to help register black voters and three activists are murdered. The Mississippi Freedom Democratic Party challenges the regular Mississippi delegation at the Democratic Convention in Atlantic City; Bridge to Freedom (1965): A decade of lessons is applied in the climactic and bloody march from Selma to Montgomery, Alabama. A major victory is won when the federal Voting Rights Bill passes, but civil rights leaders know they have new challenges ahead.

American Inequality: Another study, "The Spirit Level" by Richard Wilkinson and Kate Pickett, shows that the U.S. has the greatest income inequality among the major developed countries. Get the stats and read an interview with the authors. Bryan Stevenson and Michelle Alexander: In the months before his death, Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. had expanded his focus on racial justice to include reducing economic inequality. On this week's 42nd anniversary of King's assassination, Bill Moyers sits down with attorneys Bryan Stevenson and Michelle Alexander to discuss how far we've really come as a country, how poor and working class Americans have been falling behind and what America must do to fulfill Dr. King's vision. Moyers on Inequality: A Bill Moyers essay. Reflections on King's Dreams: Revisit Dr. King's evolving theories of social and economic justice through his speeches. Plus, a Bill Moyers essay. U.S. Prisons and Drug Laws: The U.S. has five percent of the world's population and 25 percent of the world's prisoners -- how did we get here?

Maximum Capacity. Saving tax dollars--can an innovative program make big cuts in America's prison population? The number of inmates in American prisons is outpacing the system's ability to hold them all. In one startling example, California prisons hold well over 50,000 more inmates than they're designed for, even though the state has built a dozen new prisons in the last 15 years. One of the biggest reasons is rampant recidivism. This week, NOW goes inside an Illinois prison that may have the answer to California's problems. With its innovative plan to keep released inmates from coming back, the Sheridan Correctional Center is trying to redefine "tough on crime" by being the largest fully dedicated drug prison in the country. The approach involves aggressive counseling, job training, and following the convicts after they get out. Can their novel approach keep convicts out of jail for good?

Drilling for energy and for support on health care, shaking hands with the troops on a surprise trip overseas, and uncovering a possible threat to domestic security, tonight on Washington Week. The president rallies for support of the health care law as new poll numbers show low marks for him and Congress. The president says, give it a chance. President Barack Obama said, "The polls haven't changed yet. Well, yes, it just happened last week." Looking to expand the energy sources, the administration takes the first steps in allowing more oil and gas drilling offshore. Sec. Ken Salazar said, "This is a good balance between conservation and development that gives us the energy security that we need." But how much energy would it actually produce at how much risk to the environment? Half a world away, a reminder of the struggles in Afghanistan and Iraq, as the president visits American troops. President Obama said, "We did not choose this war. This was not an act of America wanting to expand its influence." But did he make any headway with the government in Afghanistan plagued by corruption? And the FBI rounds up nine members of a militia style group in Michigan charged with plotting violence against police. FBI Agent: They could kill a lot of people just by themselves. What does it tell us about the threat of domestic terrorism? Those stories this week from the reporters who covered them: Dan Balz of the Washington Post, John Harwood of CNBC and the New York Times, Martha Raddatz of ABC News, and Michael Duffy of Time Magazine.

Just when you thought the news might slow down, we have a new Supreme Court vacancy, that plus nukes, Karzai, Steele, and tea party politics, tonight on Washington Week. After nearly 90 years on the planet and 34 years on the bench, Justice John Paul Stevens steps aside. We look at his past and the court's future. Just as consequential, two old Cold War foes agree to limit nuclear weapons. President Barack Obama said, "A nuclear weapon in the hands of a terrorist is a danger to people everywhere." While the U.S. wrestles with a newly troubled partnership. President Hamid Karzai said, "Afghanistan is the home of Afghans and we own this place and our partners are here to help in a cause that's all of us." A White House Reporter asked, "Is Karzai our ally?" Robert Gibbs replied, "Karzai is the democratically elected leader of Afghanistan." And at home, the Republican Party searches for a way to crowd its activists. Sarah Palin said, "Don't retreat, reload. And that is not a call for violence." And its party chairman. Michael Steele said, "I hear the leadership. We're taking steps to make sure that we're even more, how should we say, fiscally conservative in our spending." Covering the week: Joan Biskupic of USA Today, David Sanger of the New York Times, Doyle McManus of the Los Angeles Times, and Charles Babington of the Associated Press.

Now in his early 90s, I.M. Pei was invited to design a modern museum to house the antiquities of Suzhou. This film follows this personal and architectural journey from west to east, an expansive full-circle, a literal coming home -- a realization of Pei's lifelong dream. But also, his biggest challenge and, seven and a half years in the making, a work that he ultimately defines as "my biography." While Pei's perspective is always in the forefront, local residents, design specialists, Suzhou officials, architects, designers and scholars comment on Pei's life and work.

Two and a half millennia ago, a new religion was born in northern India, generated from the ideas of a single man, the Buddha, a mysterious Indian sage who famously gained enlightenment while he sat under a large, shapely fig tree. The Buddha never claimed to be God or his emissary on earth. He said only that he was a human being who, in a world of unavoidable pain and suffering, had found a kind of serenity that others could find too. This documentary by award-winning filmmaker David Grubin tells the story of his life, a journey especially relevant in our own bewildering times of violent change and spiritual confusion. Richard Gere narrates.

A Town Revitalized? Can one of America's most unorthodox mayors revitalize a town on the verge of collapse? The national economic disaster hit the city of Braddock Pennsylvania like a wrecking ball. But Braddock Mayor John Fetterman--dubbed "America's Coolest Mayor" by The New York Times--is taking very unconventional approaches to reinventing the town and re-inspiring its residents. Home to the nation's first A&P supermarket and Andrew Carnegie's first steel mill, Braddock is being revitalized with new youth and art programs, renovations of abandoned real estate, and bold plans to attract artists and green industries. This week, NOW sits down with Mayor Fetterman to learn how the 6'8" 370-pound political novice is trying to turn his town around, and if other devastated communities can and should follow his large footsteps.

Awakenings (1954-1956): Individual acts of courage inspire black Southerners to fight for their rights: Mose Wright testifies against the white men who murdered young Emmett Till, and Rosa Parks refuses to give up her bus seat to a white man in Montgomery, Alabama; Fighting Back (1957-1962): States' rights loyalists and federal authorities collide in the 1957 battle to integrate Little Rock's Central High School, and again in James Meredith's 1962 challenge to segregation at the University of Mississippi. Both times, a Southern governor squares off with a U.S. president, violence erupts -- and integration is carried out.

This documentary tells the story of the nation's best high school basketball coach, Bob Hurley, Sr. In his 36 years at St. Anthony's, he's won 23 state titles, three national championships with 957 career wins. The film reveals the coach's life-long struggle to inspire and motivate those around him to keep the doors open of a poor, inner-city Catholic High School in Jersey City, New Jersey. This is also the story about the teenage athletes fighting their way out of the poverty and desolation that surrounds them armed with little more than a basketball and the hard wisdom of a fierce, demanding coach.

Drilling for energy and for support on health care, shaking hands with the troops on a surprise trip overseas, and uncovering a possible threat to domestic security, tonight on Washington Week. The president rallies for support of the health care law as new poll numbers show low marks for him and Congress. The president says, give it a chance. President Barack Obama said, "The polls haven't changed yet. Well, yes, it just happened last week." Looking to expand the energy sources, the administration takes the first steps in allowing more oil and gas drilling offshore. Sec. Ken Salazar said, "This is a good balance between conservation and development that gives us the energy security that we need." But how much energy would it actually produce at how much risk to the environment? Half a world away, a reminder of the struggles in Afghanistan and Iraq, as the president visits American troops. President Obama said, "We did not choose this war. This was not an act of America wanting to expand its influence." But did he make any headway with the government in Afghanistan plagued by corruption? And the FBI rounds up nine members of a militia style group in Michigan charged with plotting violence against police. FBI Agent: They could kill a lot of people just by themselves. What does it tell us about the threat of domestic terrorism? Those stories this week from the reporters who covered them: Dan Balz of the Washington Post, John Harwood of CNBC and the New York Times, Martha Raddatz of ABC News, and Michael Duffy of Time Magazine.

On January 12, 2010, Haiti was leveled by one of the most devastating earthquakes in recorded history. Those responsible for handling the catastrophe, including the Haitian state and the United Nations, were crippled by the magnitude of the disaster and struggled to respond. In the confused aftermath, survivors were left without food, water or shelter. FRONTLINE correspondent Martin Smith and team arrived in Port-au-Prince within days, and in this powerful report, bears witness to the disaster and the ill-coordinated relief efforts in the poorest country in the Western hemisphere. Drawing on interviews with key officials and humanitarian experts from Port-au-Prince to New York, The Quake asks, can the world do better? And how?

Drilling for energy and for support on health care, shaking hands with the troops on a surprise trip overseas, and uncovering a possible threat to domestic security, tonight on Washington Week. The president rallies for support of the health care law as new poll numbers show low marks for him and Congress. The president says, give it a chance. President Barack Obama said, "The polls haven't changed yet. Well, yes, it just happened last week." Looking to expand the energy sources, the administration takes the first steps in allowing more oil and gas drilling offshore. Sec. Ken Salazar said, "This is a good balance between conservation and development that gives us the energy security that we need." But how much energy would it actually produce at how much risk to the environment? Half a world away, a reminder of the struggles in Afghanistan and Iraq, as the president visits American troops. President Obama said, "We did not choose this war. This was not an act of America wanting to expand its influence." But did he make any headway with the government in Afghanistan plagued by corruption? And the FBI rounds up nine members of a militia style group in Michigan charged with plotting violence against police. FBI Agent:

They could kill a lot of people just by themselves. What does it tell us about the threat of domestic terrorism? Those stories this week from the reporters who covered them: Dan Balz of the Washington Post, John Harwood of CNBC and the New York Times, Martha Raddatz of ABC News, and Michael Duffy of Time Magazine.

Health care reform was the first big policy deal taken on by the Obama administration. Many say the young president has bet the mid-term elections, possibly his presidency, on the outcome. In a new investigation FRONTLINE goes behind closed doors at the White House, in Congress and the boardrooms of the giant health-care lobby to examine the political battles and costly compromises that defined Barack Obama's endeavor. From early positive efforts, through the bitter battles with the Tea Party, the elation of apparent success at Christmas, to the crushing failure in the Massachusetts Senatorial election, FRONTLINE follows the story and reveals the first in-depth look at how the Obama administration operates. In Obama's Deal, FRONTLINE veteran producer Michael Kirk (Bush's War, Dreams of Obama, Inside the Meltdown, The Warning) provides a sobering expose of the realities of American politics, the power of special interest groups, and the role of money in policy making.

Health care reform was the first big policy deal taken on by the Obama administration. Many say the young president has bet the mid-term elections, possibly his presidency, on the outcome. In a new investigation FRONTLINE goes behind closed doors at the White House, in Congress and the boardrooms of the giant health-care lobby to examine the political battles and costly compromises that defined Barack Obama's endeavor. From early positive efforts, through the bitter battles with the Tea Party, the elation of apparent success at Christmas, to the crushing failure in the Massachusetts Senatorial election, FRONTLINE follows the story and reveals the first in-depth look at how the Obama administration operates. In Obama's Deal, FRONTLINE veteran producer Michael Kirk (Bush's War, Dreams of Obama, Inside the Meltdown, The Warning) provides a sobering expose of the realities of American politics, the power of special interest groups, and the role of money in policy making.

Drilling for energy and for support on health care, shaking hands with the troops on a surprise trip overseas, and uncovering a possible threat to domestic security, tonight on Washington Week. The president rallies for support of the health care law as new poll numbers show low marks for him and Congress. The president says, give it a chance. President Barack Obama said, "The polls haven't changed yet. Well, yes, it just happened last week." Looking to expand the energy sources, the administration takes the first steps in allowing more oil and gas drilling offshore. Sec. Ken Salazar said, "This is a good balance between conservation and development that gives us the energy security that we need." But how much energy would it actually produce at how much risk to the environment? Half a world away, a reminder of the struggles in Afghanistan and Iraq, as the president visits American troops. President Obama said, "We did not choose this war. This was not an act of America wanting to expand its influence." But did he make any headway with the government in Afghanistan plagued by corruption? And the FBI rounds up nine members of a militia style group in Michigan charged with plotting violence against police. FBI Agent: They could kill a lot of people just by themselves. What does it tell us about the threat of domestic terrorism? Those stories this week from the reporters who covered them: Dan Balz of the Washington Post, John Harwood of CNBC and the New York Times, Martha Raddatz of ABC News, and Michael Duffy of Time Magazine.

Just when you thought the news might slow down, we have a new Supreme Court vacancy, that plus nukes, Karzai, Steele, and tea party politics, tonight on Washington Week. After nearly 90 years on the planet and 34 years on the bench, Justice John Paul Stevens steps aside. We look at his past and the court's future. Just as consequential, two old Cold War foes agree to limit nuclear weapons. President Barack Obama said, "A nuclear weapon in the hands of a terrorist is a danger to people everywhere." While the U.S. wrestles with a newly troubled partnership. President Hamid Karzai said, "Afghanistan is the home of Afghans and we own this place and our partners are here to help in a cause that's all of us." A White House Reporter asked, "Is Karzai our ally?" Robert Gibbs replied, "Karzai is the democratically elected leader of Afghanistan." And at home, the Republican Party searches for a way to crowd its activists. Sarah Palin said, "Don't retreat, reload. And that is not a call for violence." And its party chairman. Michael Steele said, "I hear the leadership. We're taking steps to make sure that we're even more, how should we say, fiscally conservative in our spending." Covering the week: Joan Biskupic of USA Today, David Sanger of the New York Times, Doyle McManus of the Los Angeles Times, and Charles Babington of the Associated Press.

Just when you thought the news might slow down, we have a new Supreme Court vacancy, that plus nukes, Karzai, Steele, and tea party politics, tonight on Washington Week. After nearly 90 years on the planet and 34 years on the bench, Justice John Paul Stevens steps aside. We look at his past and the court's future. Just as consequential, two old Cold War foes agree to limit nuclear weapons. President Barack Obama said, "A nuclear weapon in the hands of a terrorist is a danger to people everywhere." While the U.S. wrestles with a newly troubled partnership. President Hamid Karzai said, "Afghanistan is the home of Afghans and we own this place and our partners are here to help in a cause that's all of us." A White House Reporter asked, "Is Karzai our ally?" Robert Gibbs replied, "Karzai is the democratically elected leader of Afghanistan." And at home, the Republican Party searches for a way to crowd its activists. Sarah Palin said, "Don't retreat, reload. And that is not a call for violence." And its party chairman. Michael Steele said, "I hear the leadership. We're taking steps to make sure that we're even more, how should we say, fiscally conservative in our spending." Covering the week: Joan Biskupic of USA Today, David Sanger of the New York Times, Doyle McManus of the Los Angeles Times, and Charles Babington of the Associated Press.

Bryan Stevenson and Michelle Alexander: In the months before his death, Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. had expanded his focus on racial justice to include reducing economic inequality. On this week's 42nd anniversary of King's assassination, Bill Moyers sits down with attorneys Bryan Stevenson and Michelle Alexander to discuss how far we've really come as a country, how poor and working class Americans have been falling behind and what America must do to fulfill Dr. King's vision. Moyers on Inequality: A Bill Moyers essay. Reflections on King's Dreams: Revisit Dr. King's evolving theories of social and economic justice through his speeches. Plus, a Bill Moyers essay. U.S. Prisons and Drug Laws: The U.S. has five percent of the world's population and 25 percent of the world's prisoners -- how did we get here?

Two and a half millennia ago, a new religion was born in northern India, generated from the ideas of a single man, the Buddha, a mysterious Indian sage who famously gained enlightenment while he sat under a large, shapely fig tree. The Buddha never claimed to be God or his emissary on earth. He said only that he was a human being who, in a world of unavoidable pain and suffering, had found a kind of serenity that others could find too. This documentary by award-winning filmmaker David Grubin tells the story of his life, a journey especially relevant in our own bewildering times of violent change and spiritual confusion. Richard Gere narrates.

In a two-hour special, NOVA examines how a simple instrument, the telescope, has fundamentally changed our understanding of our place in the universe. What began as a curiosity-two spectacle lenses held a foot apart-ultimately revolutionized human thought across science, philosophy and religion. Telescope takes viewers on a global adventure of discovery, dramatizing the innovations in technology and the achievements in science that have marked the rich history of the telescope. This tale of human ingenuity involves some of the most colorful figures of the scientific world-Galileo, Kepler, Newton, William Herschel, George Hale, and Edwin Hubble-leading up to today's colossal telescopes, housed in space-age cathedrals or orbiting high above the Earth. Now at the center of an international space race, a new generation of ever-larger telescopes is poised to reveal answers to longstanding questions about our universe-and, in turn, to raise new questions.

Maximum Capacity. Saving tax dollars--can an innovative program make big cuts in America's prison population? The number of inmates in American prisons is outpacing the system's ability to hold them all. In one startling example, California prisons hold well over 50,000 more inmates than they're designed for, even though the state has built a dozen new prisons in the last 15 years. One of the biggest reasons is rampant recidivism. This week, NOW goes inside an Illinois prison that may have the answer to California's problems. With its innovative plan to keep released inmates from coming back, the Sheridan Correctional Center is trying to redefine "tough on crime" by being the largest fully dedicated drug prison in the country. The approach involves aggressive counseling, job training, and following the convicts after they get out. Can their novel approach keep convicts out of jail for good?

Ain't Scared of Your Jails (1960-1961): Black college students take a leadership role in the civil rights movement as lunch counter sit-ins spread across the South. "Freedom Riders" also try to desegregate interstate buses, but they are brutally attacked as they travel; No Easy Walk (1961-1963): The civil rights movement discovers the power of mass demonstrations as the Rev. Martin Luther King, Jr. emerges as its most visible leader. Some demonstrations succeed; others fail. But the triumphant March on Washington, D.C., under King's leadership, shows a mounting national support for civil rights. President John F. Kennedy proposes the Civil Rights Act.

Drilling for energy and for support on health care, shaking hands with the troops on a surprise trip overseas, and uncovering a possible threat to domestic security, tonight on Washington Week. The president rallies for support of the health care law as new poll numbers show low marks for him and Congress. The president says, give it a chance. President Barack Obama said, "The polls haven't changed yet. Well, yes, it just happened last week." Looking to expand the energy sources, the administration takes the first steps in allowing more oil and gas drilling offshore. Sec. Ken Salazar said, "This is a good balance between conservation and development that gives us the energy security that we need." But how much energy would it actually produce at how much risk to the environment? Half a world away, a reminder of the struggles in Afghanistan and Iraq, as the president visits American troops. President Obama said, "We did not choose this war. This was not an act of America wanting to expand its influence." But did he make any headway with the government in Afghanistan plagued by corruption? And the FBI rounds up nine members of a militia style group in Michigan charged with plotting violence against police. FBI Agent: They could kill a lot of people just by themselves. What does it tell us about the threat of domestic terrorism? Those stories this week from the reporters who covered them: Dan Balz of the Washington Post, John Harwood of CNBC and the New York Times, Martha Raddatz of ABC News, and Michael Duffy of Time Magazine.

Just when you thought the news might slow down, we have a new Supreme Court vacancy, that plus nukes, Karzai, Steele, and tea party politics, tonight on Washington Week. After nearly 90 years on the planet and 34 years on the bench, Justice John Paul Stevens steps aside. We look at his past and the court's future. Just as consequential, two old Cold War foes agree to limit nuclear weapons. President Barack Obama said, "A nuclear weapon in the hands of a terrorist is a danger to people everywhere." While the U.S. wrestles with a newly troubled partnership. President Hamid Karzai said, "Afghanistan is the home of Afghans and we own this place and our partners are here to help in a cause that's all of us." A White House Reporter asked, "Is Karzai our ally?" Robert Gibbs replied, "Karzai is the democratically elected leader of Afghanistan." And at home, the Republican Party searches for a way to crowd its activists. Sarah Palin said, "Don't retreat, reload. And that is not a call for violence." And its party chairman. Michael Steele said, "I hear the leadership. We're taking steps to make sure that we're even more, how should we say, fiscally conservative in our spending." Covering the week: Joan Biskupic of USA Today, David Sanger of the New York Times, Doyle McManus of the Los Angeles Times, and Charles Babington of the Associated Press.

In Food, Inc., filmmaker Robert Kenner lifts the veil on our nation's food industry, exposing the highly mechanized underbelly that's been hidden from the American consumer with the consent of our government's regulatory agencies, USDA and FDA. Our nation's food supply is now controlled by a handful of corporations that often put profit ahead of consumer health, the livelihood of the American farmer, the safety of workers and our own environment. We have bigger-breasted chickens, the perfect pork chop, insecticide-resistant soybean seeds, even tomatoes that won't go bad, but we also have new strains of E. coli--the harmful bacteria that causes illness for an estimated 73,000 Americans annually. We are riddled with widespread obesity, particularly among children, and an epidemic level of diabetes among adults.

What drove a company of American soldiers -- ordinary young men deployed to liberate a small foreign nation from an oppressive neighbor -- to murder more than 300 unarmed Vietnamese civilians? Were they "just following orders," as some later declared? Or, as others argued, did they break under the pressure of a misguided military strategy that measured victory by body count? Today, as the United States once again finds itself questioning the morality of actions taken in the name of war, Academy Award-nominated filmmaker Barak Goodman ("The Lobotomist," "Scottsboro: An American Tragedy") focuses his lens on the 1968 My Lai massacre, its subsequent cover-up and the heroic efforts of the soldiers who broke rank to halt the atrocities. "My Lai" draws upon eyewitness accounts of Vietnamese survivors and men of the Charlie Company 11th Infantry Brigade and recently discovered audio recordings from the Peers Inquiry to recount one of the darkest chapters of the Vietnam War.

The first hour of this series about the deep and surprising history of Appalachia explores the region's unique mosaic of plant, animal and early human life. As Pulitzer Prize-winning scientist E.O. Wilson notes, "A history of a region includes not just the people, but the creatures and the living environment." Geology is destiny. The Appalachian Mountains hold their treasure of mineral and timber wealth because they were born of a primeval ocean. Early North Americans settled here because giant mammals gave them vast food supplies. Over thousands of years, they formed highly sophisticated cultures, until 1540 when Hernando de Soto ruined them in his violent, single-minded hunt for gold. The tribes that remained after de Soto's brutal swath adopted the gun as their chief technology. England, Spain and France would court these skilled hunters and warriors as allies in the early struggle to dominate America. Academy Award-winning actress Sissy Spacek narrates.

"Roosevelt's America" is a cinema verite profile of the struggles of a Lieberman refugee to build a new life in America. After being tortured and narrowly escaping execution during Liberia's civil war, Roosevelt Henderson makes his way to America with three of his children, but is forced to leave his pregnant wife behind. He works as a janitor, airport van driver and assembly line worker in order to support his family and help his wife flee their war-torn country. After two year of juggling low wage jobs, Roosevelt's perseverance pays off and he is reunited with his wife, Frances, and his baby daughter. By witnessing Roosevelt's day-to-day struggles, frustrations and achievements, viewers come to appreciate the distance he has traveled during his harrowing journey from torture and desperation in his native Liberia to security and stability in his newly adopted Hamlin. Ultimately "Rosevelt's America" becomes an inspiring story of quiet determination and dignity under duress.

TUBA U: BASSO PROFUNDO follows an unusual 22-piece musical ensemble into the recording studio, across the U.S. and onto the stage of renowned Carnegie Hall. Featuring the career of tuba maestro Winston Morris, the compositions of Pulitzer Prize-winning composer Gunther Schuller, a visit to German tuba makers and the 100-member Tubas of Mass Destruction, this is the anatomy of one instrument that speaks to the dedication and discipline shared by players of all instruments. The program examines the value of the individual within the context of the ensemble and assures viewers that some unexpected and unusual things are indeed worthy of a lifetime of commitment. TUBA U dispels assumptions of size, value and ability, addressing prejudice - even if a very quirky one. Filled with "who knew?" moments, the documentary takes a look at the history, physicality and personalities of the tuba.

In Food, Inc., filmmaker Robert Kenner lifts the veil on our nation's food industry, exposing the highly mechanized underbelly that's been hidden from the American consumer with the consent of our government's regulatory agencies, USDA and FDA. Our nation's food supply is now controlled by a handful of corporations that often put profit ahead of consumer health, the livelihood of the American farmer, the safety of workers and our own environment. We have bigger-breasted chickens, the perfect pork chop, insecticide-resistant soybean seeds, even tomatoes that won't go bad, but we also have new strains of E. coli--the harmful bacteria that causes illness for an estimated 73,000 Americans annually. We are riddled with widespread obesity, particularly among children, and an epidemic level of diabetes among adults.

In the aftermath of the worst financial crisis since the Great Depression, "Mind Over Money" explores why mainstream economists failed to predict the crash of 2008 and why we so often make irrational financial decisions. It reveals surprising, hidden money drives in us all and explores controversial new arguments about the world of finance. Before the current crash, most Wall Street analysts believed that markets are "efficient" -- that investors are reasonable and always operate in their own self-interest. Most of the time, these assumptions of classical economics work well enough. But in extreme situations, people panic and conventional theories collapse. In the face of the recent crash, can a new science that aims to incorporate human psychology into finance--behavioral economics--do better? We'll see how the brains and bodies of Wall Street traders respond as they buy and sell stocks. We'll watch as an ingenious experiment reveals how too many spending choices and the way they're framed can overwhelm consumers' ability to make rational decisions. Through these real-life experiments, NOVA showed how mood, decision-making, and economic activity are all tightly interwoven. By delivering unexpected insights from leading analysts and powerful experiments, "Mind Over Money" exposes the mysterious and surprising nature of the two most powerful forces on our planet: the human mind and money.

The next big fight: will the government be able to impose strict new controls on the big banks? We talk about that, nuclear politics, Supreme Court politics, and tea party politics, tonight on Washington Week. Sen. Harry Reid (D-NV) said, "Wall Street took advantage of America. It's now our turn to look at Wall Street, have them contribute to a better America." Sounds simple enough, but a bank regulation bill that seemed like a slam dunk only a short time ago has run into a partisan buzzsaw on Capitol Hill. Treasury Secretary Timothy Geithner said, "I think we're very, very close." Sen. Mitch McConnell (R-KY) said, "This bill wouldn't solve the problems that led to the financial crisis. It would make them worse." Might the same thing happen to President Obama's eventual Supreme Court nominee or to the plan embraced by global leaders this week to reduce nuclear weapons -- buzzsaws everywhere, much of it building under the tea party flag. Ms. Sarah Palin said, "I'm not calling anyone un-American, but the unintended consequences of these actions, the results are un-American." Covering the week: David Wessel of the Wall Street Journal, Gloria Borger of CNN, Peter Baker of the New York Times, and John Dickerson of Slate Magazine and CBS News.

Fixing Wall Street, why it's not like fixing health care, plus auto bailouts and climate controversy, tonight on Washington Week. Down to the wire or yet another big reform bill. President Barack Obama said, "What's not legitimate is to suggest that somehow the legislation being proposed is going to encourage future taxpayer bailouts, as some have claimed. That makes for a good sound bite, but it's not factually accurate. It is not true." Sen. Mitch McConnell (R-KY) said, "The administration has said it wants to end bailouts. I say to them, prove it." But this time, both sides say there is hope for bipartisanship. As election year fire is focused instead at financial institutions once deemed too big to fail. At the same time, General Motors, which also receives government rescue help, begins to bounce back. Mr. Edward Whitacre, "I am very pleased to announce that, as of today, General Motors has repaid in full and with interest. Worth clapping about." But there is always another big debate just around the corner, next stop, energy reform. Covering the week, John Harwood of CNBC and the New York Times, Janet Hook of the Los Angeles Times, David Shepardson of the Detroit News, and Jeanne Cummings of Politico.

Health care reform was the first big policy deal taken on by the Obama administration. Many say the young president has bet the mid-term elections, possibly his presidency, on the outcome. In a new investigation FRONTLINE goes behind closed doors at the White House, in Congress and the boardrooms of the giant health-care lobby to examine the political battles and costly compromises that defined Barack Obama's endeavor. From early positive efforts, through the bitter battles with the Tea Party, the elation of apparent success at Christmas, to the crushing failure in the Massachusetts Senatorial election, FRONTLINE follows the story and reveals the first in-depth look at how the Obama administration operates. In Obama's Deal, FRONTLINE veteran producer Michael Kirk (Bush's War, Dreams of Obama, Inside the Meltdown, The Warning) provides a sobering expose of the realities of American politics, the power of special interest groups, and the role of money in policy making.

Arnold Schwarzenegger is betting on green. He wants to roll California's greenhouse gas emissions back to their 1990 levels, and he's promising Californians that their lifestyles and their pocketbooks won't feel the pinch. But is Schwarzenegger gambling with his state's economy? With help from eco-celebrities like Ed Begley, Jr. and Bill Nye "The Science Guy," NOVA examines California's aggressive pursuit of a sustainable energy future. From San Francisco's Luscious Garage, where mechanics create custom plug-in hybrids for customers like Google, to the Tehachapi Valley, where thousands of wind turbines are spinning out electricity, NOVA visits the places where green energy is already becoming a reality. Yet some critics fear that, as the nation struggles through an economic meltdown, the state's new policies are inviting dire consequences. Will California be a role model for the rest of the country or a cautionary tale?

This was the week when the best laid plans went awry--on energy and immigration policy, on the Wall Street crackdown and Florida politics. We'll explain the hows and the whys tonight on Washington Week. Janet Napolitano, Secretary of Homeland Security said, "This is a spill of national significance." Hundreds of thousands of gallons of crude oil, threatening a huge natural disaster in the Gulf. President Barack Obama said, "Local economies and livelihoods of the people of the Gulf Coast, as well as the ecology of the region is at stake." Wind power, nuclear, clean coal, off shore oil drilling--do the risks outweigh the benefits? And thanks to a tough new Arizona law, will energy reform also be knocked off-course by a renewed debate over immigration? Gov. Jan Brewer (R-AZ) said, "Decades of federal inaction and misguided policy have created a dangerous and unacceptable situation." In Florida, one rising Republican star gets knocked off course and out of his party by another. Gov. Charlie Crist (Independent-FL) said, "My decision to run for the United States Senate as a candidate without party affiliation in many ways says more about our nation and our state than it does about me." Marco Rubio, Republican candidate for U.S. Senate - Florida said, "I know this campaign is not about me, it's about what I'm running for and what I'm running on." And a proposed Wall Street crackdown gets knocked back on course after a dramatic Capitol Hill showdown. Covering the week, Margaret Kriz Hobson of National Journal; Naftali Bendavid of the Wall Street Journal; Karen Tumulty of the Washington Post; and Eamon Javers of Politico.

In the aftermath of the worst financial crisis since the Great Depression, "Mind Over Money" explores why mainstream economists failed to predict the crash of 2008 and why we so often make irrational financial decisions. It reveals surprising, hidden money drives in us all and explores controversial new arguments about the world of finance. Before the current crash, most Wall Street analysts believed that markets are "efficient" -- that investors are reasonable and always operate in their own self-interest. Most of the time, these assumptions of classical economics work well enough. But in extreme situations, people panic and conventional theories collapse. In the face of the recent crash, can a new science that aims to incorporate human psychology into finance--behavioral economics--do better? We'll see how the brains and bodies of Wall Street traders respond as they buy and sell stocks. We'll watch as an ingenious experiment reveals how too many spending choices and the way they're framed can overwhelm consumers' ability to make rational decisions. Through these real-life experiments, NOVA showed how mood, decision-making, and economic activity are all tightly interwoven. By delivering unexpected insights from leading analysts and powerful experiments, "Mind Over Money" exposes the mysterious and surprising nature of the two most powerful forces on our planet: the human mind and money.

The next big fight: will the government be able to impose strict new controls on the big banks? We talk about that, nuclear politics, Supreme Court politics, and tea party politics, tonight on Washington Week. Sen. Harry Reid (D-NV) said, "Wall Street took advantage of America. It's now our turn to look at Wall Street, have them contribute to a better America." Sounds simple enough, but a bank regulation bill that seemed like a slam dunk only a short time ago has run into a partisan buzzsaw on Capitol Hill. Treasury Secretary Timothy Geithner said, "I think we're very, very close." Sen. Mitch McConnell (R-KY) said, "This bill wouldn't solve the problems that led to the financial crisis. It would make them worse." Might the same thing happen to President Obama's eventual Supreme Court nominee or to the plan embraced by global leaders this week to reduce nuclear weapons -- buzzsaws everywhere, much of it building under the tea party flag. Ms. Sarah Palin said, "I'm not calling anyone un-American, but the unintended consequences of these actions, the results are un-American." Covering the week: David Wessel of the Wall Street Journal, Gloria Borger of CNN, Peter Baker of the New York Times, and John Dickerson of Slate Magazine and CBS News.

This was the week when the best laid plans went awry--on energy and immigration policy, on the Wall Street crackdown and Florida politics. We'll explain the hows and the whys tonight on Washington Week. Janet Napolitano, Secretary of Homeland Security said, "This is a spill of national significance." Hundreds of thousands of gallons of crude oil, threatening a huge natural disaster in the Gulf. President Barack Obama said, "Local economies and livelihoods of the people of the Gulf Coast, as well as the ecology of the region is at stake." Wind power, nuclear, clean coal, off shore oil drilling--do the risks outweigh the benefits? And thanks to a tough new Arizona law, will energy reform also be knocked off-course by a renewed debate over immigration? Gov. Jan Brewer (R-AZ) said, "Decades of federal inaction and misguided policy have created a dangerous and unacceptable situation." In Florida, one rising Republican star gets knocked off course and out of his party by another. Gov. Charlie Crist (Independent-FL) said, "My decision to run for the United States Senate as a candidate without party affiliation in many ways says more about our nation and our state than it does about me." Marco Rubio, Republican candidate for U.S. Senate - Florida said, "I know this campaign is not about me, it's about what I'm running for and what I'm running on." And a proposed Wall Street crackdown gets knocked back on course after a dramatic Capitol Hill showdown. Covering the week, Margaret Kriz Hobson of National Journal; Naftali Bendavid of the Wall Street Journal; Karen Tumulty of the Washington Post; and Eamon Javers of Politico.

Arnold Schwarzenegger is betting on green. He wants to roll California's greenhouse gas emissions back to their 1990 levels, and he's promising Californians that their lifestyles and their pocketbooks won't feel the pinch. But is Schwarzenegger gambling with his state's economy? With help from eco-celebrities like Ed Begley, Jr. and Bill Nye "The Science Guy," NOVA examines California's aggressive pursuit of a sustainable energy future. From San Francisco's Luscious Garage, where mechanics create custom plug-in hybrids for customers like Google, to the Tehachapi Valley, where thousands of wind turbines are spinning out electricity, NOVA visits the places where green energy is already becoming a reality. Yet some critics fear that, as the nation struggles through an economic meltdown, the state's new policies are inviting dire consequences. Will California be a role model for the rest of the country or a cautionary tale?

In the aftermath of the worst financial crisis since the Great Depression, "Mind Over Money" explores why mainstream economists failed to predict the crash of 2008 and why we so often make irrational financial decisions. It reveals surprising, hidden money drives in us all and explores controversial new arguments about the world of finance. Before the current crash, most Wall Street analysts believed that markets are "efficient" -- that investors are reasonable and always operate in their own self-interest. Most of the time, these assumptions of classical economics work well enough. But in extreme situations, people panic and conventional theories collapse. In the face of the recent crash, can a new science that aims to incorporate human psychology into finance--behavioral economics--do better? We'll see how the brains and bodies of Wall Street traders respond as they buy and sell stocks. We'll watch as an ingenious experiment reveals how too many spending choices and the way they're framed can overwhelm consumers' ability to make rational decisions. Through these real-life experiments, NOVA showed how mood, decision-making, and economic activity are all tightly interwoven. By delivering unexpected insights from leading analysts and powerful experiments, "Mind Over Money" exposes the mysterious and surprising nature of the two most powerful forces on our planet: the human mind and money.

The next big fight: will the government be able to impose strict new controls on the big banks? We talk about that, nuclear politics, Supreme Court politics, and tea party politics, tonight on Washington Week. Sen. Harry Reid (D-NV) said, "Wall Street took advantage of America. It's now our turn to look at Wall Street, have them contribute to a better America." Sounds simple enough, but a bank regulation bill that seemed like a slam dunk only a short time ago has run into a partisan buzzsaw on Capitol Hill. Treasury Secretary Timothy Geithner said, "I think we're very, very close." Sen. Mitch McConnell (R-KY) said, "This bill wouldn't solve the problems that led to the financial crisis. It would make them worse." Might the same thing happen to President Obama's eventual Supreme Court nominee or to the plan embraced by global leaders this week to reduce nuclear weapons -- buzzsaws everywhere, much of it building under the tea party flag. Ms. Sarah Palin said, "I'm not calling anyone un-American, but the unintended consequences of these actions, the results are un-American." Covering the week: David Wessel of the Wall Street Journal, Gloria Borger of CNN, Peter Baker of the New York Times, and John Dickerson of Slate Magazine and CBS News.

Fixing Wall Street, why it's not like fixing health care, plus auto bailouts and climate controversy, tonight on Washington Week. Down to the wire or yet another big reform bill. President Barack Obama said, "What's not legitimate is to suggest that somehow the legislation being proposed is going to encourage future taxpayer bailouts, as some have claimed. That makes for a good sound bite, but it's not factually accurate. It is not true." Sen. Mitch McConnell (R-KY) said, "The administration has said it wants to end bailouts. I say to them, prove it." But this time, both sides say there is hope for bipartisanship. As election year fire is focused instead at financial institutions once deemed too big to fail. At the same time, General Motors, which also receives government rescue help, begins to bounce back. Mr. Edward Whitacre, "I am very pleased to announce that, as of today, General Motors has repaid in full and with interest. Worth clapping about." But there is always another big debate just around the corner, next stop, energy reform. Covering the week, John Harwood of CNBC and the New York Times, Janet Hook of the Los Angeles Times, David Shepardson of the Detroit News, and Jeanne Cummings of Politico.

This was the week when the best laid plans went awry--on energy and immigration policy, on the Wall Street crackdown and Florida politics. We'll explain the hows and the whys tonight on Washington Week. Janet Napolitano, Secretary of Homeland Security said, "This is a spill of national significance." Hundreds of thousands of gallons of crude oil, threatening a huge natural disaster in the Gulf. President Barack Obama said, "Local economies and livelihoods of the people of the Gulf Coast, as well as the ecology of the region is at stake." Wind power, nuclear, clean coal, off shore oil drilling--do the risks outweigh the benefits? And thanks to a tough new Arizona law, will energy reform also be knocked off-course by a renewed debate over immigration? Gov. Jan Brewer (R-AZ) said, "Decades of federal inaction and misguided policy have created a dangerous and unacceptable situation." In Florida, one rising Republican star gets knocked off course and out of his party by another. Gov. Charlie Crist (Independent-FL) said, "My decision to run for the United States Senate as a candidate without party affiliation in many ways says more about our nation and our state than it does about me." Marco Rubio, Republican candidate for U.S. Senate - Florida said, "I know this campaign is not about me, it's about what I'm running for and what I'm running on." And a proposed Wall Street crackdown gets knocked back on course after a dramatic Capitol Hill showdown. Covering the week, Margaret Kriz Hobson of National Journal; Naftali Bendavid of the Wall Street Journal; Karen Tumulty of the Washington Post; and Eamon Javers of Politico.

The first hour of this series about the deep and surprising history of Appalachia explores the region's unique mosaic of plant, animal and early human life. As Pulitzer Prize-winning scientist E.O. Wilson notes, "A history of a region includes not just the people, but the creatures and the living environment." Geology is destiny. The Appalachian Mountains hold their treasure of mineral and timber wealth because they were born of a primeval ocean. Early North Americans settled here because giant mammals gave them vast food supplies. Over thousands of years, they formed highly sophisticated cultures, until 1540 when Hernando de Soto ruined them in his violent, single-minded hunt for gold. The tribes that remained after de Soto's brutal swath adopted the gun as their chief technology. England, Spain and France would court these skilled hunters and warriors as allies in the early struggle to dominate America. Academy Award-winning actress Sissy Spacek narrates.

Arnold Schwarzenegger is betting on green. He wants to roll California's greenhouse gas emissions back to their 1990 levels, and he's promising Californians that their lifestyles and their pocketbooks won't feel the pinch. But is Schwarzenegger gambling with his state's economy? With help from eco-celebrities like Ed Begley, Jr. and Bill Nye "The Science Guy," NOVA examines California's aggressive pursuit of a sustainable energy future. From San Francisco's Luscious Garage, where mechanics create custom plug-in hybrids for customers like Google, to the Tehachapi Valley, where thousands of wind turbines are spinning out electricity, NOVA visits the places where green energy is already becoming a reality. Yet some critics fear that, as the nation struggles through an economic meltdown, the state's new policies are inviting dire consequences. Will California be a role model for the rest of the country or a cautionary tale?

Fixing Wall Street, why it's not like fixing health care, plus auto bailouts and climate controversy, tonight on Washington Week. Down to the wire or yet another big reform bill. President Barack Obama said, "What's not legitimate is to suggest that somehow the legislation being proposed is going to encourage future taxpayer bailouts, as some have claimed. That makes for a good sound bite, but it's not factually accurate. It is not true." Sen. Mitch McConnell (R-KY) said, "The administration has said it wants to end bailouts. I say to them, prove it." But this time, both sides say there is hope for bipartisanship. As election year fire is focused instead at financial institutions once deemed too big to fail. At the same time, General Motors, which also receives government rescue help, begins to bounce back. Mr. Edward Whitacre, "I am very pleased to announce that, as of today, General Motors has repaid in full and with interest. Worth clapping about." But there is always another big debate just around the corner, next stop, energy reform. Covering the week, John Harwood of CNBC and the New York Times, Janet Hook of the Los Angeles Times, David Shepardson of the Detroit News, and Jeanne Cummings of Politico.

This was the week when the best laid plans went awry--on energy and immigration policy, on the Wall Street crackdown and Florida politics. We'll explain the hows and the whys tonight on Washington Week. Janet Napolitano, Secretary of Homeland Security said, "This is a spill of national significance." Hundreds of thousands of gallons of crude oil, threatening a huge natural disaster in the Gulf. President Barack Obama said, "Local economies and livelihoods of the people of the Gulf Coast, as well as the ecology of the region is at stake." Wind power, nuclear, clean coal, off shore oil drilling--do the risks outweigh the benefits? And thanks to a tough new Arizona law, will energy reform also be knocked off-course by a renewed debate over immigration? Gov. Jan Brewer (R-AZ) said, "Decades of federal inaction and misguided policy have created a dangerous and unacceptable situation." In Florida, one rising Republican star gets knocked off course and out of his party by another. Gov. Charlie Crist (Independent-FL) said, "My decision to run for the United States Senate as a candidate without party affiliation in many ways says more about our nation and our state than it does about me." Marco Rubio, Republican candidate for U.S. Senate - Florida said, "I know this campaign is not about me, it's about what I'm running for and what I'm running on." And a proposed Wall Street crackdown gets knocked back on course after a dramatic Capitol Hill showdown. Covering the week, Margaret Kriz Hobson of National Journal; Naftali Bendavid of the Wall Street Journal; Karen Tumulty of the Washington Post; and Eamon Javers of Politico.

Public health scientists and clinicians tout vaccines as one of the greatest achievements of modern medicine. But for many ordinary Americans vaccines have become controversial. Young parents are concerned at the sheer number of shots-some 26 inoculations for 14 different diseases by age 6-and follow alternative vaccination schedules advocated by gurus like Dr. Robert Sears. Other parents go further. In communities like Ashland, Oregon, up to one-third of parents are choosing not to vaccinate their kids at all. And some advocacy groups, like Generation Rescue, argue that vaccines are no longer a public health miracle but a scourge; they view vaccines as responsible for alarming rises in certain disorders, including ADHD and autism. This is the vaccine war: On one side sits scientific medicine and the public health establishment; on the other a populist coalition of parents, celebrities (like Jenny McCarthy), politicians and activists. It's a war that increasingly takes place on the Internet with both sides using the latest social media tools, including Facebook and Twitter, to win the hearts and minds of the public.

"Roosevelt's America" is a cinema verite profile of the struggles of a Lieberman refugee to build a new life in America. After being tortured and narrowly escaping execution during Liberia's civil war, Roosevelt Henderson makes his way to America with three of his children, but is forced to leave his pregnant wife behind. He works as a janitor, airport van driver and assembly line worker in order to support his family and help his wife flee their war-torn country. After two year of juggling low wage jobs, Roosevelt's perseverance pays off and he is reunited with his wife, Frances, and his baby daughter. By witnessing Roosevelt's day-to-day struggles, frustrations and achievements, viewers come to appreciate the distance he has traveled during his harrowing journey from torture and desperation in his native Liberia to security and stability in his newly adopted Hamlin. Ultimately "Roosevelt's America" becomes an inspiring story of quiet determination and dignity under duress.

In Food, Inc., filmmaker Robert Kenner lifts the veil on our nation's food industry, exposing the highly mechanized underbelly that's been hidden from the American consumer with the consent of our government's regulatory agencies, USDA and FDA. Our nation's food supply is now controlled by a handful of corporations that often put profit ahead of consumer health, the livelihood of the American farmer, the safety of workers and our own environment. We have bigger-breasted chickens, the perfect pork chop, insecticide-resistant soybean seeds, even tomatoes that won't go bad, but we also have new strains of E. coli--the harmful bacteria that causes illness for an estimated 73,000 Americans annually. We are riddled with widespread obesity, particularly among children, and an epidemic level of diabetes among adults.

Health care reform was the first big policy deal taken on by the Obama administration. Many say the young president has bet the mid-term elections, possibly his presidency, on the outcome. In a new investigation FRONTLINE goes behind closed doors at the White House, in Congress and the boardrooms of the giant health-care lobby to examine the political battles and costly compromises that defined Barack Obama's endeavor. From early positive efforts, through the bitter battles with the Tea Party, the elation of apparent success at Christmas, to the crushing failure in the Massachusetts Senatorial election, FRONTLINE follows the story and reveals the first in-depth look at how the Obama administration operates. In Obama's Deal, FRONTLINE veteran producer Michael Kirk (Bush's War, Dreams of Obama, Inside the Meltdown, The Warning) provides a sobering expose of the realities of American politics, the power of special interest groups, and the role of money in policy making.

Public health scientists and clinicians tout vaccines as one of the greatest achievements of modern medicine. But for many ordinary Americans vaccines have become controversial. Young parents are concerned at the sheer number of shots-some 26 inoculations for 14 different diseases by age 6-and follow alternative vaccination schedules advocated by gurus like Dr. Robert Sears. Other parents go further. In communities like Ashland, Oregon, up to one-third of parents are choosing not to vaccinate their kids at all. And some advocacy groups, like Generation Rescue, argue that vaccines are no longer a public health miracle but a scourge; they view vaccines as responsible for alarming rises in certain disorders, including ADHD and autism. This is the vaccine war: On one side sits scientific medicine and the public health establishment; on the other a populist coalition of parents, celebrities (like Jenny McCarthy), politicians and activists. It's a war that increasingly takes place on the Internet with both sides using the latest social media tools, including Facebook and Twitter, to win the hearts and minds of the public.

Frogs have been hopping the planet for more than 350 million years. They've evolved into some of the most wondrous, diverse and beloved animals on earth. Suddenly, they're slipping away. We've already lost one-third of our amphibians and more are disappearing each day. Some say it's the greatest extinction since the dinosaurs. Ecosystems are beginning to unravel, important medical cures are vanishing and we're losing a dear old friend. It's a global crisis, mobilizing scientists around the world to stem the tide - before the next frog crosses the thin green line.

Fixing Wall Street, why it's not like fixing health care, plus auto bailouts and climate controversy, tonight on Washington Week. Down to the wire or yet another big reform bill. President Barack Obama said, "What's not legitimate is to suggest that somehow the legislation being proposed is going to encourage future taxpayer bailouts, as some have claimed. That makes for a good sound bite, but it's not factually accurate. It is not true." Sen. Mitch McConnell (R-KY) said, "The administration has said it wants to end bailouts. I say to them, prove it." But this time, both sides say there is hope for bipartisanship. As election year fire is focused instead at financial institutions once deemed too big to fail. At the same time, General Motors, which also receives government rescue help, begins to bounce back. Mr. Edward Whitacre, "I am very pleased to announce that, as of today, General Motors has repaid in full and with interest. Worth clapping about." But there is always another big debate just around the corner, next stop, energy reform. Covering the week, John Harwood of CNBC and the New York Times, Janet Hook of the Los Angeles Times, David Shepardson of the Detroit News, and Jeanne Cummings of Politico.

This was the week when the best laid plans went awry--on energy and immigration policy, on the Wall Street crackdown and Florida politics. We'll explain the hows and the whys tonight on Washington Week. Janet Napolitano, Secretary of Homeland Security said, "This is a spill of national significance." Hundreds of thousands of gallons of crude oil, threatening a huge natural disaster in the Gulf. President Barack Obama said, "Local economies and livelihoods of the people of the Gulf Coast, as well as the ecology of the region is at stake." Wind power, nuclear, clean coal, off shore oil drilling--do the risks outweigh the benefits? And thanks to a tough new Arizona law, will energy reform also be knocked off-course by a renewed debate over immigration? Gov. Jan Brewer (R-AZ) said, "Decades of federal inaction and misguided policy have created a dangerous and unacceptable situation." In Florida, one rising Republican star gets knocked off course and out of his party by another. Gov. Charlie Crist (Independent-FL) said, "My decision to run for the United States Senate as a candidate without party affiliation in many ways says more about our nation and our state than it does about me." Marco Rubio, Republican candidate for U.S. Senate - Florida said, "I know this campaign is not about me, it's about what I'm running for and what I'm running on." And a proposed Wall Street crackdown gets knocked back on course after a dramatic Capitol Hill showdown. Covering the week, Margaret Kriz Hobson of National Journal; Naftali Bendavid of the Wall Street Journal; Karen Tumulty of the Washington Post; and Eamon Javers of Politico.

"Roosevelt's America" is a cinema verite profile of the struggles of a Lieberman refugee to build a new life in America. After being tortured and narrowly escaping execution during Liberia's civil war, Roosevelt Henderson makes his way to America with three of his children, but is forced to leave his pregnant wife behind. He works as a janitor, airport van driver and assembly line worker in order to support his family and help his wife flee their war-torn country. After two year of juggling low wage jobs, Roosevelt's perseverance pays off and he is reunited with his wife, Frances, and his baby daughter. By witnessing Roosevelt's day-to-day struggles, frustrations and achievements, viewers come to appreciate the distance he has traveled during his harrowing journey from torture and desperation in his native Liberia to security and stability in his newly adopted Hamlin. Ultimately "Roosevelt's America" becomes an inspiring story of quiet determination and dignity under duress.

In Food, Inc., filmmaker Robert Kenner lifts the veil on our nation's food industry, exposing the highly mechanized underbelly that's been hidden from the American consumer with the consent of our government's regulatory agencies, USDA and FDA. Our nation's food supply is now controlled by a handful of corporations that often put profit ahead of consumer health, the livelihood of the American farmer, the safety of workers and our own environment. We have bigger-breasted chickens, the perfect pork chop, insecticide-resistant soybean seeds, even tomatoes that won't go bad, but we also have new strains of E. coli--the harmful bacteria that causes illness for an estimated 73,000 Americans annually. We are riddled with widespread obesity, particularly among children, and an epidemic level of diabetes among adults.

Health care reform was the first big policy deal taken on by the Obama administration. Many say the young president has bet the mid-term elections, possibly his presidency, on the outcome. In a new investigation FRONTLINE goes behind closed doors at the White House, in Congress and the boardrooms of the giant health-care lobby to examine the political battles and costly compromises that defined Barack Obama's endeavor. From early positive efforts, through the bitter battles with the Tea Party, the elation of apparent success at Christmas, to the crushing failure in the Massachusetts Senatorial election, FRONTLINE follows the story and reveals the first in-depth look at how the Obama administration operates. In Obama's Deal, FRONTLINE veteran producer Michael Kirk (Bush's War, Dreams of Obama, Inside the Meltdown, The Warning) provides a sobering expose of the realities of American politics, the power of special interest groups, and the role of money in policy making.

The next big fight: will the government be able to impose strict new controls on the big banks? We talk about that, nuclear politics, Supreme Court politics, and tea party politics, tonight on Washington Week. Sen. Harry Reid (D-NV) said, "Wall Street took advantage of America. It's now our turn to look at Wall Street, have them contribute to a better America." Sounds simple enough, but a bank regulation bill that seemed like a slam dunk only a short time ago has run into a partisan buzzsaw on Capitol Hill. Treasury Secretary Timothy Geithner said, "I think we're very, very close." Sen. Mitch McConnell (R-KY) said, "This bill wouldn't solve the problems that led to the financial crisis. It would make them worse." Might the same thing happen to President Obama's eventual Supreme Court nominee or to the plan embraced by global leaders this week to reduce nuclear weapons -- buzzsaws everywhere, much of it building under the tea party flag. Ms. Sarah Palin said, "I'm not calling anyone un-American, but the unintended consequences of these actions, the results are un-American." Covering the week: David Wessel of the Wall Street Journal, Gloria Borger of CNN, Peter Baker of the New York Times, and John Dickerson of Slate Magazine and CBS News.

Fixing Wall Street, why it's not like fixing health care, plus auto bailouts and climate controversy, tonight on Washington Week. Down to the wire or yet another big reform bill. President Barack Obama said, "What's not legitimate is to suggest that somehow the legislation being proposed is going to encourage future taxpayer bailouts, as some have claimed. That makes for a good sound bite, but it's not factually accurate. It is not true." Sen. Mitch McConnell (R-KY) said, "The administration has said it wants to end bailouts. I say to them, prove it." But this time, both sides say there is hope for bipartisanship. As election year fire is focused instead at financial institutions once deemed too big to fail. At the same time, General Motors, which also receives government rescue help, begins to bounce back. Mr. Edward Whitacre, "I am very pleased to announce that, as of today, General Motors has repaid in full and with interest. Worth clapping about." But there is always another big debate just around the corner, next stop, energy reform. Covering the week, John Harwood of CNBC and the New York Times, Janet Hook of the Los Angeles Times, David Shepardson of the Detroit News, and Jeanne Cummings of Politico.

This was the week when the best laid plans went awry--on energy and immigration policy, on the Wall Street crackdown and Florida politics. We'll explain the hows and the whys tonight on Washington Week. Janet Napolitano, Secretary of Homeland Security said, "This is a spill of national significance." Hundreds of thousands of gallons of crude oil, threatening a huge natural disaster in the Gulf. President Barack Obama said, "Local economies and livelihoods of the people of the Gulf Coast, as well as the ecology of the region is at stake." Wind power, nuclear, clean coal, off shore oil drilling--do the risks outweigh the benefits? And thanks to a tough new Arizona law, will energy reform also be knocked off-course by a renewed debate over immigration? Gov. Jan Brewer (R-AZ) said, "Decades of federal inaction and misguided policy have created a dangerous and unacceptable situation." In Florida, one rising Republican star gets knocked off course and out of his party by another. Gov. Charlie Crist (Independent-FL) said, "My decision to run for the United States Senate as a candidate without party affiliation in many ways says more about our nation and our state than it does about me." Marco Rubio, Republican candidate for U.S. Senate - Florida said, "I know this campaign is not about me, it's about what I'm running for and what I'm running on." And a proposed Wall Street crackdown gets knocked back on course after a dramatic Capitol Hill showdown. Covering the week, Margaret Kriz Hobson of National Journal; Naftali Bendavid of the Wall Street Journal; Karen Tumulty of the Washington Post; and Eamon Javers of Politico.

The first hour of this series about the deep and surprising history of Appalachia explores the region's unique mosaic of plant, animal and early human life. As Pulitzer Prize-winning scientist E.O. Wilson notes, "A history of a region includes not just the people, but the creatures and the living environment." Geology is destiny. The Appalachian Mountains hold their treasure of mineral and timber wealth because they were born of a primeval ocean. Early North Americans settled here because giant mammals gave them vast food supplies. Over thousands of years, they formed highly sophisticated cultures, until 1540 when Hernando de Soto ruined them in his violent, single-minded hunt for gold. The tribes that remained after de Soto's brutal swath adopted the gun as their chief technology. England, Spain and France would court these skilled hunters and warriors as allies in the early struggle to dominate America. Academy Award-winning actress Sissy Spacek narrates.

Public health scientists and clinicians tout vaccines as one of the greatest achievements of modern medicine. But for many ordinary Americans vaccines have become controversial. Young parents are concerned at the sheer number of shots-some 26 inoculations for 14 different diseases by age 6-and follow alternative vaccination schedules advocated by gurus like Dr. Robert Sears. Other parents go further. In communities like Ashland, Oregon, up to one-third of parents are choosing not to vaccinate their kids at all. And some advocacy groups, like Generation Rescue, argue that vaccines are no longer a public health miracle but a scourge; they view vaccines as responsible for alarming rises in certain disorders, including ADHD and autism. This is the vaccine war: On one side sits scientific medicine and the public health establishment; on the other a populist coalition of parents, celebrities (like Jenny McCarthy), politicians and activists. It's a war that increasingly takes place on the Internet with both sides using the latest social media tools, including Facebook and Twitter, to win the hearts and minds of the public.

Arnold Schwarzenegger is betting on green. He wants to roll California's greenhouse gas emissions back to their 1990 levels, and he's promising Californians that their lifestyles and their pocketbooks won't feel the pinch. But is Schwarzenegger gambling with his state's economy? With help from eco-celebrities like Ed Begley, Jr. and Bill Nye "The Science Guy," NOVA examines California's aggressive pursuit of a sustainable energy future. From San Francisco's Luscious Garage, where mechanics create custom plug-in hybrids for customers like Google, to the Tehachapi Valley, where thousands of wind turbines are spinning out electricity, NOVA visits the places where green energy is already becoming a reality. Yet some critics fear that, as the nation struggles through an economic meltdown, the state's new policies are inviting dire consequences. Will California be a role model for the rest of the country or a cautionary tale?

In the aftermath of the worst financial crisis since the Great Depression, "Mind Over Money" explores why mainstream economists failed to predict the crash of 2008 and why we so often make irrational financial decisions. It reveals surprising, hidden money drives in us all and explores controversial new arguments about the world of finance. Before the current crash, most Wall Street analysts believed that markets are "efficient" -- that investors are reasonable and always operate in their own self-interest. Most of the time, these assumptions of classical economics work well enough. But in extreme situations, people panic and conventional theories collapse. In the face of the recent crash, can a new science that aims to incorporate human psychology into finance--behavioral economics--do better? We'll see how the brains and bodies of Wall Street traders respond as they buy and sell stocks. We'll watch as an ingenious experiment reveals how too many spending choices and the way they're framed can overwhelm consumers' ability to make rational decisions. Through these real-life experiments, NOVA showed how mood, decision-making, and economic activity are all tightly interwoven. By delivering unexpected insights from leading analysts and powerful experiments, "Mind Over Money" exposes the mysterious and surprising nature of the two most powerful forces on our planet: the human mind and money.

Fixing Wall Street, why it's not like fixing health care, plus auto bailouts and climate controversy, tonight on Washington Week. Down to the wire or yet another big reform bill. President Barack Obama said, "What's not legitimate is to suggest that somehow the legislation being proposed is going to encourage future taxpayer bailouts, as some have claimed. That makes for a good sound bite, but it's not factually accurate. It is not true." Sen. Mitch McConnell (R-KY) said, "The administration has said it wants to end bailouts. I say to them, prove it." But this time, both sides say there is hope for bipartisanship. As election year fire is focused instead at financial institutions once deemed too big to fail. At the same time, General Motors, which also receives government rescue help, begins to bounce back. Mr. Edward Whitacre, "I am very pleased to announce that, as of today, General Motors has repaid in full and with interest. Worth clapping about." But there is always another big debate just around the corner, next stop, energy reform. Covering the week, John Harwood of CNBC and the New York Times, Janet Hook of the Los Angeles Times, David Shepardson of the Detroit News, and Jeanne Cummings of Politico.

What drove a company of American soldiers -- ordinary young men deployed to liberate a small foreign nation from an oppressive neighbor -- to murder more than 300 unarmed Vietnamese civilians? Were they "just following orders," as some later declared? Or, as others argued, did they break under the pressure of a misguided military strategy that measured victory by body count? Today, as the United States once again finds itself questioning the morality of actions taken in the name of war, Academy Award-nominated filmmaker Barak Goodman ("The Lobotomist," "Scottsboro: An American Tragedy") focuses his lens on the 1968 My Lai massacre, its subsequent cover-up and the heroic efforts of the soldiers who broke rank to halt the atrocities. "My Lai" draws upon eyewitness accounts of Vietnamese survivors and men of the Charlie Company 11th Infantry Brigade and recently discovered audio recordings from the Peers Inquiry to recount one of the darkest chapters of the Vietnam War.

Public health scientists and clinicians tout vaccines as one of the greatest achievements of modern medicine. But for many ordinary Americans vaccines have become controversial. Young parents are concerned at the sheer number of shots-some 26 inoculations for 14 different diseases by age 6-and follow alternative vaccination schedules advocated by gurus like Dr. Robert Sears. Other parents go further. In communities like Ashland, Oregon, up to one-third of parents are choosing not to vaccinate their kids at all. And some advocacy groups, like Generation Rescue, argue that vaccines are no longer a public health miracle but a scourge; they view vaccines as responsible for alarming rises in certain disorders, including ADHD and autism. This is the vaccine war: On one side sits scientific medicine and the public health establishment; on the other a populist coalition of parents, celebrities (like Jenny McCarthy), politicians and activists. It's a war that increasingly takes place on the Internet with both sides using the latest social media tools, including Facebook and Twitter, to win the hearts and minds of the public.

For two centuries, American whale oil lit the world - powering the start of the industrial revolution and laying the groundwork for a truly global economy. From its stunning rise as an economic force in the 18th century to its precipitous decline in the decades following the Civil War, the whaling industry mapped millions of miles of uncharted ocean, opened new seaways and markets, employed the world's most multi-cultural workforce and shrunk the globe by bringing once remote reaches of the Earth into contact as never before -- all the while capturing the American imagination. As Americans now see fortunes rise and fall on the global energy and consumer markets, the rapid commoditization of whales and the sharp decline of the whaling industry serve as a stark reminder of the volatility of the global marketplace.

The creative chemistry of four brilliant artists--drummer John Densmore, guitarist Robby Krieger, keyboardist Ray Manzarek and singer Jim Morrison--made The Doors one of America's most iconic and influential, theatrical and mysterious, thrilling and sometime frightening rock bands. Narrated by Johnny Depp, American Masters: When You're Strange is the first feature documentary about The Doors. The film tells their story using only original footage--much of it previously unseen -- shot between their formation in 1965 and Morrison's death in 1971. From the outset I decided to use only original footage of this astonishing band, says Tom DiCillo, director and writer of When You're Strange. To me, there is nothing more powerful and riveting than seeing Robby Krieger, Ray Manzarek, John Densmore and Jim Morrison leap into life on the screen.

The first hour of this series about the deep and surprising history of Appalachia explores the region's unique mosaic of plant, animal and early human life. As Pulitzer Prize-winning scientist E.O. Wilson notes, "A history of a region includes not just the people, but the creatures and the living environment." Geology is destiny. The Appalachian Mountains hold their treasure of mineral and timber wealth because they were born of a primeval ocean. Early North Americans settled here because giant mammals gave them vast food supplies. Over thousands of years, they formed highly sophisticated cultures, until 1540 when Hernando de Soto ruined them in his violent, single-minded hunt for gold. The tribes that remained after de Soto's brutal swath adopted the gun as their chief technology. England, Spain and France would court these skilled hunters and warriors as allies in the early struggle to dominate America. Academy Award-winning actress Sissy Spacek narrates.

The second part of this series about the natural and human history of Appalachia traces the story of the region from the rumblings of Revolutionary War through Andrew Jackson's forced relocation of the Cherokee people in 1831. Appalachia's early settlers hand-cut trails through steep terrain covered with enormous trees and teeming with wild animals. They weren't about to take orders from Redcoats. When a few hundred angry mountain men handily beat the regiment of a pompous British major, they changed the course of history. Contrary to current stereotypes, the colonists saw Appalachia as a source of great wealth. Her riches seduced early Americans, from the legendary adventurer Daniel Boone to naturalist William Bartram to a young land surveyor named George Washington. Academy Award-winning actress Sissy Spacek narrates.

NOVA joins an exclusive dive beneath the waters of Pearl Harbor to trace new clues to the historic sinking of the USS Arizona. 1,177 crewmembers perished in the dramatic 1941 sinking of the storied battleship--the greatest loss of life in United States naval history. For decades, it has been thought that the Arizona was brought down by fire from Japanese aircraft. But the discovery of a Japanese "midget sub" far from the scene of the battle raises new questions about the Arizona's final hours. Severed into three pieces and dropped in 1,200-foot-deep water outside of the harbor, the sub matches four other vessels discovered in shallower water closer to the harbor entrance. Each of the four vessels were equipped with a pair of torpedoes--but only the torpedoes of the fifth sub are still missing, apparently fired at an unknown target. What was that submarine's mission? Why was it laid to rest so far from the harbor? What was the fate of its two-man crew? With unprecedented access to the Arizona wreckage, NOVA teams up with the Hawaii Undersea Research Lab to use manned deep submersibles in an attempt to resurrect the fifth midget submarine. Using eyewitness testimony and reports from after the attack, this program examines the possibility that this mysterious midget submarine may have been a key Japanese weapon in what became known as the day of infamy.

"Roosevelt's America" is a cinema verite profile of the struggles of a Lieberman refugee to build a new life in America. After being tortured and narrowly escaping execution during Liberia's civil war, Roosevelt Henderson makes his way to America with three of his children, but is forced to leave his pregnant wife behind. He works as a janitor, airport van driver and assembly line worker in order to support his family and help his wife flee their war-torn country. After two year of juggling low wage jobs, Roosevelt's perseverance pays off and he is reunited with his wife, Frances, and his baby daughter. By witnessing Roosevelt's day-to-day struggles, frustrations and achievements, viewers come to appreciate the distance he has traveled during his harrowing journey from torture and desperation in his native Liberia to security and stability in his newly adopted Hamlin. Ultimately "Roosevelt's America" becomes an inspiring story of quiet determination and dignity under duress.

Spring 1946: Ten months after the end of World War II, an explosion rocks the Pacific off the coast of Hawaii. America has just destroyed one of Japan's most advanced weapons systems -- the I-401 aircraft carrier submarine. But this was no belated attack against the defeated Japanese. Bound by an agreement to share any discoveries with the Soviets, but feeling the pressure of the looming Cold War, it was a calculated decision to keep the technology out of Soviet hands. The Japanese had built their sub to take the war to U.S. shores. Merging the stealth and tactical advantages of sea and sky, the revolutionary submarine carried three specially designed Seiran attack bombers, which could be launched from the deck of the sub within seven minutes of its reaching the surface. With missions to attack U.S. cities and blow up the Panama Canal, the aircraft carrier submarine had the potential to change the course of the war in the Pacific. But fortunately for America, its secret weapon -- the atom bomb -- was put into action first. "Japanese SuperSub's" investigates Japan's efforts to take submarine technology where it had never gone before, and reveals how close the Japanese came to using the sub for an attack on the U.S.

The creative chemistry of four brilliant artists--drummer John Densmore, guitarist Robby Krieger, keyboardist Ray Manzarek and singer Jim Morrison--made The Doors one of America's most iconic and influential, theatrical and mysterious, thrilling and sometime frightening rock bands. Narrated by Johnny Depp, American Masters: When You're Strange is the first feature documentary about The Doors. The film tells their story using only original footage--much of it previously unseen -- shot between their formation in 1965 and Morrison's death in 1971. From the outset I decided to use only original footage of this astonishing band, says Tom DiCillo, director and writer of When You're Strange. To me, there is nothing more powerful and riveting than seeing Robby Krieger, Ray Manzarek, John Densmore and Jim Morrison leap into life on the screen.

For two centuries, American whale oil lit the world - powering the start of the industrial revolution and laying the groundwork for a truly global economy. From its stunning rise as an economic force in the 18th century to its precipitous decline in the decades following the Civil War, the whaling industry mapped millions of miles of uncharted ocean, opened new seaways and markets, employed the world's most multi-cultural workforce and shrunk the globe by bringing once remote reaches of the Earth into contact as never before -- all the while capturing the American imagination. As Americans now see fortunes rise and fall on the global energy and consumer markets, the rapid commoditization of whales and the sharp decline of the whaling industry serve as a stark reminder of the volatility of the global marketplace.

In the aftermath of the worst financial crisis since the Great Depression, "Mind Over Money" explores why mainstream economists failed to predict the crash of 2008 and why we so often make irrational financial decisions. It reveals surprising, hidden money drives in us all and explores controversial new arguments about the world of finance. Before the current crash, most Wall Street analysts believed that markets are "efficient" -- that investors are reasonable and always operate in their own self-interest. Most of the time, these assumptions of classical economics work well enough. But in extreme situations, people panic and conventional theories collapse. In the face of the recent crash, can a new science that aims to incorporate human psychology into finance--behavioral economics--do better? We'll see how the brains and bodies of Wall Street traders respond as they buy and sell stocks. We'll watch as an ingenious experiment reveals how too many spending choices and the way they're framed can overwhelm consumers' ability to make rational decisions. Through these real-life experiments, NOVA showed how mood, decision-making, and economic activity are all tightly interwoven. By delivering unexpected insights from leading analysts and powerful experiments, "Mind Over Money" exposes the mysterious and surprising nature of the two most powerful forces on our planet: the human mind and money.

This was the week when the best laid plans went awry--on energy and immigration policy, on the Wall Street crackdown and Florida politics. We'll explain the hows and the whys tonight on Washington Week. Janet Napolitano, Secretary of Homeland Security said, "This is a spill of national significance." Hundreds of thousands of gallons of crude oil, threatening a huge natural disaster in the Gulf. President Barack Obama said, "Local economies and livelihoods of the people of the Gulf Coast, as well as the ecology of the region is at stake." Wind power, nuclear, clean coal, off shore oil drilling--do the risks outweigh the benefits? And thanks to a tough new Arizona law, will energy reform also be knocked off-course by a renewed debate over immigration? Gov. Jan Brewer (R-AZ) said, "Decades of federal inaction and misguided policy have created a dangerous and unacceptable situation." In Florida, one rising Republican star gets knocked off course and out of his party by another. Gov. Charlie Crist (Independent-FL) said, "My decision to run for the United States Senate as a candidate without party affiliation in many ways says more about our nation and our state than it does about me." Marco Rubio, Republican candidate for U.S. Senate - Florida said, "I know this campaign is not about me, it's about what I'm running for and what I'm running on." And a proposed Wall Street crackdown gets knocked back on course after a dramatic Capitol Hill showdown. Covering the week, Margaret Kriz Hobson of National Journal; Naftali Bendavid of the Wall Street Journal; Karen Tumulty of the Washington Post; and Eamon Javers of Politico.

Three tangled tales: the latest New York terror plot, the growing oil spill disaster in the Gulf, and the political impasse in Great Britain, tonight on Washington Week. Mayor Michael Bloomberg said, "This was an act that was designed to kill innocent civilians and strike fear into the hearts of Americans. And I'm happy to say that it failed on both counts." Rep. John Boehner (R-OH) said, "Yes, we've been lucky, but luck is not an effective strategy for fighting the terrorist threat." Alert New Yorkers and law enforcement officers foiled yet another attempted terror plot. But was it chance or competence that stopped Faisal Shahzad from carrying out his deadly plans. In the Gulf of Mexico, oil continues to gush into the sea, while the hunt continues for a cause and a solution. Doug Suttles said, "We stress that this has never been done before. We'll likely encounter numerous challenges and but we'll remain committed to make it work." Sec. Janet Napolitano said, "The possibility remains that the BP oil spill could turn into an unprecedented environmental disaster." President Barack Obama said, "I want to emphasize from day one we have prepared and planned for the worst, even as we hoped for the best." While in Great Britain, an unpredictable election yields an unexpected outcome. Prime Minister Gordon Brown said, "People do not like the uncertainty or want it to be prolonged. We live, however, in a parliamentary democracy." Covering the week: Pierre Thomas of ABC News, Peter Baker of the New York Times, Elizabeth Shogren of National Public Radio, and in London, Dan Balz of the Washington Post.

The selling of Elena Kagan, the oil spill blame game, kissing and making up with Hamid Karzai, and the perilous politics of incumbency, tonight on Washington Week. President Barack Obama said, "Our solicitor general and my friend Elena Kagan." Sen. Jeff Sessions (R-AL) said, "It is a confirmation. It's not a coronation." True, but President Obama's Supreme Court nominee is for now on a glide path. Elena Kagan said, "Thank you so much." But who is Elena Kagan and what would she bring to the nation's highest court? On Capitol Hill, another scandal, another oath, as lawmakers wrestle with the consequences of the disastrous oil spill. Sen. Lisa Murkowski (R-AK) said, "It doesn't benefit anyone of them for BP to be pointing the finger at Transocean, to be pointing the finger at Halliburton, to be pointing the finger back at BP." President Obama said, "The American people could not have been impressed with that display and I certainly wasn't." So who is at fault? At the White House Afghan President Karzai gets the royal treatment but what's happening on the battlefield? Gen. Stanley McChrystal said, "I think I'd be prepared to say nobody is winning at this point." And incumbents brace for what could be a rocky political season. For Democrats--President Obama said, "We've gone through a stormy time and I know sometimes has made you guys a little seasick." And Republicans. Sen. Robert Bennett (R-UT) said, "The political atmosphere obviously has been toxic." Covering the week: Pete Williams of NBC News, Juliet Eilperin of the Washington Post, Martha Raddatz of ABC news, and Charles Babington of the Associated Press.

In the aftermath of the worst financial crisis since the Great Depression, "Mind Over Money" explores why mainstream economists failed to predict the crash of 2008 and why we so often make irrational financial decisions. It reveals surprising, hidden money drives in us all and explores controversial new arguments about the world of finance. Before the current crash, most Wall Street analysts believed that markets are "efficient" -- that investors are reasonable and always operate in their own self-interest. Most of the time, these assumptions of classical economics work well enough. But in extreme situations, people panic and conventional theories collapse. In the face of the recent crash, can a new science that aims to incorporate human psychology into finance--behavioral economics--do better? We'll see how the brains and bodies of Wall Street traders respond as they buy and sell stocks. We'll watch as an ingenious experiment reveals how too many spending choices and the way they're framed can overwhelm consumers' ability to make rational decisions. Through these real-life experiments, NOVA showed how mood, decision-making, and economic activity are all tightly interwoven. By delivering unexpected insights from leading analysts and powerful experiments, "Mind Over Money" exposes the mysterious and surprising nature of the two most powerful forces on our planet: the human mind and money.

"We were never concerned with who killed Martin Luther King, but what killed Martin Luther King," says former King aide Andrew Young in this film, which tells the wildly disparate yet fatefully entwined stories of an assassin, James Earl Ray, and his target, Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., against the backdrop of the seething and turbulent forces in American society that led these two men to their violent and tragic collision in Memphis, Tennessee, on April 4, 1968. Based on a forthcoming book by Hampton Sides (Ghost Soldiers), the program relies on eyewitness testimony from King's inner circle and the officials involved in Ray's capture and prosecution following an intense two-month international manhunt.

This was the week when the best laid plans went awry--on energy and immigration policy, on the Wall Street crackdown and Florida politics. We'll explain the hows and the whys tonight on Washington Week. Janet Napolitano, Secretary of Homeland Security said, "This is a spill of national significance." Hundreds of thousands of gallons of crude oil, threatening a huge natural disaster in the Gulf. President Barack Obama said, "Local economies and livelihoods of the people of the Gulf Coast, as well as the ecology of the region is at stake." Wind power, nuclear, clean coal, off shore oil drilling--do the risks outweigh the benefits? And thanks to a tough new Arizona law, will energy reform also be knocked off-course by a renewed debate over immigration? Gov. Jan Brewer (R-AZ) said, "Decades of federal inaction and misguided policy have created a dangerous and unacceptable situation." In Florida, one rising Republican star gets knocked off course and out of his party by another. Gov. Charlie Crist (Independent-FL) said, "My decision to run for the United States Senate as a candidate without party affiliation in many ways says more about our nation and our state than it does about me." Marco Rubio, Republican candidate for U.S. Senate - Florida said, "I know this campaign is not about me, it's about what I'm running for and what I'm running on." And a proposed Wall Street crackdown gets knocked back on course after a dramatic Capitol Hill showdown. Covering the week, Margaret Kriz Hobson of National Journal; Naftali Bendavid of the Wall Street Journal; Karen Tumulty of the Washington Post; and Eamon Javers of Politico.

Three tangled tales: the latest New York terror plot, the growing oil spill disaster in the Gulf, and the political impasse in Great Britain, tonight on Washington Week. Mayor Michael Bloomberg said, "This was an act that was designed to kill innocent civilians and strike fear into the hearts of Americans. And I'm happy to say that it failed on both counts." Rep. John Boehner (R-OH) said, "Yes, we've been lucky, but luck is not an effective strategy for fighting the terrorist threat." Alert New Yorkers and law enforcement officers foiled yet another attempted terror plot. But was it chance or competence that stopped Faisal Shahzad from carrying out his deadly plans. In the Gulf of Mexico, oil continues to gush into the sea, while the hunt continues for a cause and a solution. Doug Suttles said, "We stress that this has never been done before. We'll likely encounter numerous challenges and but we'll remain committed to make it work." Sec. Janet Napolitano said, "The possibility remains that the BP oil spill could turn into an unprecedented environmental disaster." President Barack Obama said, "I want to emphasize from day one we have prepared and planned for the worst, even as we hoped for the best." While in Great Britain, an unpredictable election yields an unexpected outcome. Prime Minister Gordon Brown said,

"People do not like the uncertainty or want it to be prolonged. We live, however, in a parliamentary democracy." Covering the week: Pierre Thomas of ABC News, Peter Baker of the New York Times, Elizabeth Shogren of National Public Radio, and in London, Dan Balz of the Washington Post.

The selling of Elena Kagan, the oil spill blame game, kissing and making up with Hamid Karzai, and the perilous politics of incumbency, tonight on Washington Week. President Barack Obama said, "Our solicitor general and my friend Elena Kagan." Sen. Jeff Sessions (R-AL) said, "It is a confirmation. It's not a coronation." True, but President Obama's Supreme Court nominee is for now on a glide path. Elena Kagan said, "Thank you so much." But who is Elena Kagan and what would she bring to the nation's highest court? On Capitol Hill, another scandal, another oath, as lawmakers wrestle with the consequences of the disastrous oil spill. Sen. Lisa Murkowski (R-AK) said, "It doesn't benefit anyone of them for BP to be pointing the finger at Transocean, to be pointing the finger at Halliburton, to be pointing the finger back at BP." President Obama said, "The American people could not have been impressed with that display and I certainly wasn't." So who is at fault? At the White House Afghan President Karzai gets the royal treatment but what's happening on the battlefield? Gen. Stanley McChrystal said, "I think I'd be prepared to say nobody is winning at this point." And incumbents brace for what could be a rocky political season. For Democrats--President Obama said, "We've gone through a stormy time and I know sometimes has made you guys a little seasick." And Republicans. Sen. Robert Bennett (R-UT) said, "The political atmosphere obviously has been toxic." Covering the week: Pete Williams of NBC News, Juliet Eilperin of the Washington Post, Martha Raddatz of ABC news, and Charles Babington of the Associated Press.

In the aftermath of the worst financial crisis since the Great Depression, "Mind Over Money" explores why mainstream economists failed to predict the crash of 2008 and why we so often make irrational financial decisions. It reveals surprising, hidden money drives in us all and explores controversial new arguments about the world of finance. Before the current crash, most Wall Street analysts believed that markets are "efficient" -- that investors are reasonable and always operate in their own self-interest. Most of the time, these assumptions of classical economics work well enough. But in extreme situations, people panic and conventional theories collapse. In the face of the recent crash, can a new science that aims to incorporate human psychology into finance--behavioral economics--do better? We'll see how the brains and bodies of Wall Street traders respond as they buy and sell stocks. We'll watch as an ingenious experiment reveals how too many spending choices and the way they're framed can overwhelm consumers' ability to make rational decisions. Through these real-life experiments, NOVA showed how mood, decision-making, and economic activity are all tightly interwoven. By delivering unexpected insights from leading analysts and powerful experiments, "Mind Over Money" exposes the mysterious and surprising nature of the two most powerful forces on our planet: the human mind and money.

This was the week when the best laid plans went awry--on energy and immigration policy, on the Wall Street crackdown and Florida politics. We'll explain the hows and the whys tonight on Washington Week. Janet Napolitano, Secretary of Homeland Security said, "This is a spill of national significance." Hundreds of thousands of gallons of crude oil, threatening a huge natural disaster in the Gulf. President Barack Obama said, "Local economies and livelihoods of the people of the Gulf Coast, as well as the ecology of the region is at stake." Wind power, nuclear, clean coal, off shore oil drilling--do the risks outweigh the benefits? And thanks to a tough new Arizona law, will energy reform also be knocked off-course by a renewed debate over immigration? Gov. Jan Brewer (R-AZ) said, "Decades of federal inaction and misguided policy have created a dangerous and unacceptable situation." In Florida, one rising Republican star gets knocked off course and out of his party by another. Gov. Charlie Crist (Independent-FL) said, "My decision to run for the United States Senate as a candidate without party affiliation in many ways says more about our nation and our state than it does about me." Marco Rubio, Republican candidate for U.S. Senate - Florida said, "I know this campaign is not about me, it's about what I'm running for and what I'm running on." And a proposed Wall Street crackdown gets knocked back on course after a dramatic Capitol Hill showdown. Covering the week, Margaret Kriz Hobson of National Journal; Naftali Bendavid of the Wall Street Journal; Karen Tumulty of the Washington Post; and Eamon Javers of Politico.

The first hour of this series about the deep and surprising history of Appalachia explores the region's unique mosaic of plant, animal and early human life. As Pulitzer Prize-winning scientist E.O. Wilson notes, "A history of a region includes not just the people, but the creatures and the living environment." Geology is destiny. The Appalachian Mountains hold their treasure of mineral and timber wealth because they were born of a primeval ocean. Early North Americans settled here because giant mammals gave them vast food supplies. Over thousands of years, they formed highly sophisticated cultures, until 1540 when Hernando de Soto ruined them in his violent, single-minded hunt for gold. The tribes that remained after de Soto's brutal swath adopted the gun as their chief technology. England, Spain and France would court these skilled hunters and warriors as allies in the early struggle to dominate America. Academy Award-winning actress Sissy Spacek narrates.

The second part of this series about the natural and human history of Appalachia traces the story of the region from the rumblings of Revolutionary War through Andrew Jackson's forced relocation of the Cherokee people in 1831. Appalachia's early settlers hand-cut trails through steep terrain covered with enormous trees and teeming with wild animals. They weren't about to take orders from Redcoats. When a few hundred angry mountain men handily beat the regiment of a pompous British major, they changed the course of history. Contrary to current stereotypes, the colonists saw Appalachia as a source of great wealth. Her riches seduced early Americans, from the legendary adventurer Daniel Boone to naturalist William Bartram to a young land surveyor named George Washington. Academy Award-winning actress Sissy Spacek narrates.

Episode three of this series about the natural and human history of Appalachia relates how land grabbers poisoned a region that was once renowned mainly for its restful spas and noble character. When the chaos of the Civil War tore apart the agrarian way of life, Appalachian society was left ripe for plunder. Speculators spread through every timber-rich and mineral-infused hollow, making deals. Mysterious courthouse fires destroyed property records, and consolidators evicted people who couldn't prove ownership of their land. As ancient trees were felled and coal was dug to fuel the nation's booming economy, Appalachia's land, people, wildlife and culture were changed forever.

FRONTLINE/WORLD journeys to the Amazon and the remote rainforests of Brazil, where several major American companies are on the hunt for ways to capture an increasingly valuable commodity -- carbon -- as Congress considers new legislation that would force them to pay for their pollution. In a joint project with the Center for Investigative Reporting, reporter Mark Schapiro visits a number of demonstration projects that help explore the promise and potential pitfalls of this new trade in trees. Also in this hour: on the two-year anniversary of the immigration raid at a kosher meatpacking plant in Postville, Iowa -- one of the largest workplace raids in history -- a look at the human impact of the crackdown on both sides of the border. And, in Uganda, a new approach to the threat of diseases that cross the species barrier.

Kilauea, on Hawaii's Big Island, is the world's most active volcano. Its latest eruption began in 1983 and it hasn't stopped since. Since that time, it has created 544 acres of new land and consumed 200 homes. But as we watch nature's own fireworks display and witness the devastation wrought by flowing lava, we've also been able to observe a process that's central to life on these islands. The most spectacular moment of creation is when lava pours into the ocean creating new land; it is here that filmmaker Paul Atkins finds himself getting a shot few have ever filmed -- the cataclysmic meeting of 2,000-degree lava and 75-degree ocean water -- a sight to behold.

A powerful tornado is a terrifying phenomenon that continues to defy decades of scientific efforts to predict it. During one of the worst tornado seasons on record, a NOVA camera team chased across the Midwest, capturing hair-raising footage of highly destructive twisters in action. But HUNT FOR THE SUPERTWISTER is much more than just another "extreme weather" show. Our story focuses on the efforts of two scientists at the University of Oklahoma to develop radically different approaches to forecasting twisters: one relies on "virtual tornados" created inside supercomputers, while the other involves hunting down real-life storms to collect data firsthand (the method that inspired the movie Twister). With jaw-dropping 3-D graphics generated by the National Center for Supercomputing Applications, NOVA's show features spectacular footage of these terrifying twisters. HUNT FOR THE SUPERTWISTER gives viewers a front-row seat to the risky and thrilling art of storm chasing, complete with the latest research findings and state-of-the-art visual effects.

When Mount St. Helens erupted in 1980, every living thing in the blast zone was buried beneath 300 feet of avalanche debris, covered with steaming mud, and finally, topped with a superheated layer of frothy rock from deep within the earth. It seemed as though Mount St. Helens might remain a wasteland forever. When biologist Charlie Crisafulli first flew over the disaster zone, finding no sign of life, little did he realize that his own life would be forever changed. Crisafulli has remained at the site for 27 years, documenting the dramatic return of plant and animal life to the barren landscape and pioneering a new understanding of the interaction between geologic forces and the life surrounding the mountain. NOVA brings viewers on an inspiring journey of a landscape brought back from the dead.

Three tangled tales: the latest New York terror plot, the growing oil spill disaster in the Gulf, and the political impasse in Great Britain, tonight on Washington Week. Mayor Michael Bloomberg said, "This was an act that was designed to kill innocent civilians and strike fear into the hearts of Americans. And I'm happy to say that it failed on both counts." Rep. John Boehner (R-OH) said, "Yes, we've been lucky, but luck is not an effective strategy for fighting the terrorist threat." Alert New Yorkers and law enforcement officers foiled yet another attempted terror plot. But was it chance or competence that stopped Faisal Shahzad from carrying out his deadly plans. In the Gulf of Mexico, oil continues to gush into the sea, while the hunt continues for a cause and a solution. Doug Suttles said, "We stress that this has never been done before. We'll likely encounter numerous challenges and but we'll remain committed to make it work." Sec. Janet Napolitano said, "The possibility remains that the BP oil spill could turn into an unprecedented environmental disaster." President Barack Obama said, "I want to emphasize from day one we have prepared and planned for the worst, even as we hoped for the best." While in Great Britain, an unpredictable election yields an unexpected outcome. Prime Minister Gordon Brown said, "People do not like the uncertainty or want it to be prolonged. We live, however, in a parliamentary democracy." Covering the week: Pierre Thomas of ABC News, Peter Baker of the New York Times, Elizabeth Shogren of National Public Radio, and in London, Dan Balz of the Washington Post.

The selling of Elena Kagan, the oil spill blame game, kissing and making up with Hamid Karzai, and the perilous politics of incumbency, tonight on Washington Week. President Barack Obama said, "Our solicitor general and my friend Elena Kagan." Sen. Jeff Sessions (R-AL) said, "It is a confirmation. It's not a coronation." True, but President Obama's Supreme Court nominee is for now on a glide path. Elena Kagan said, "Thank you so much." But who is Elena Kagan and what would she bring to the nation's highest court? On Capitol Hill, another scandal, another oath, as lawmakers wrestle with the consequences of the disastrous oil spill. Sen. Lisa Murkowski (R-AK) said, "It doesn't benefit anyone of them for BP to be pointing the finger at Transocean, to be pointing the finger at Halliburton, to be pointing the finger back at BP." President Obama said, "The American people could not have been impressed with that display and I certainly wasn't." So who is at fault? At the White House Afghan President Karzai gets the royal treatment but what's happening on the battlefield? Gen. Stanley McChrystal said, "I think I'd be prepared to say nobody is winning at this point." And incumbents brace for what could be a rocky political season. For Democrats--President Obama said, "We've gone through a stormy time and I know sometimes has made you guys a little seasick." And Republicans. Sen. Robert Bennett (R-UT) said, "The political atmosphere obviously has been toxic." When filmmaker Karen Skloss got pregnant at the age of 23, she decided to have and keep the baby--even when it became clear that her relationship with the baby's father wouldn't work out. She had no idea that it would be so easy to alter her life in one stroke. In SUNSHINE, Skloss explores the meaning of family through a personal journey to understand both the legacy of her own birth and the non-traditional family she created by co-parenting with her ex-boyfriend. Young, pregnant, single, and unprepared, Skloss struggles with the fact that sometimes, the most strenuous efforts to protect the idea of family can actually do the most to pull families apart. Woven together from more than 10 years' worth of home movies, intimate family interviews, shimmering dance sequences, and stylized reenactments, SUNSHINE is a refreshing and compelling self-portrait of an adopted woman driven to search for her pride and identity while reconnecting with her biological mother.

"Roosevelt's America" is a cinema verite profile of the struggles of a Lieberman refugee to build a new life in America. After being tortured and narrowly escaping execution during Liberia's civil war, Roosevelt Henderson makes his way to America with three of his children, but is forced to leave his pregnant wife behind. He works as a janitor, airport van driver and assembly line worker in order to support his family and help his wife flee their war-torn country. After two year of juggling low wage jobs, Roosevelt's perseverance pays off and he is reunited with his wife, Frances, and his baby daughter. By witnessing Roosevelt's day-to-day struggles, frustrations and achievements, viewers come to appreciate the distance he has traveled during his harrowing journey from torture and desperation in his native Liberia to security and stability in his newly adopted Hamlin. Ultimately "Roosevelt's America" becomes an inspiring story of quiet determination and dignity under duress.

Public health scientists and clinicians tout vaccines as one of the greatest achievements of modern medicine. But for many ordinary Americans vaccines have become controversial. Young parents are concerned at the sheer number of shots--some 26 inoculations for 14 different diseases by age 6--and follow alternative vaccination schedules advocated by gurus like Dr. Robert Sears. Other parents go further. In communities like Ashland, Oregon, up to one-third of parents are choosing not to vaccinate their kids at all. And some advocacy groups, like Generation Rescue, argue that vaccines are no longer a public health miracle but a scourge; they view vaccines as responsible for alarming rises in certain disorders, including ADHD and autism. This is the vaccine war: On one side sits scientific medicine and the public health establishment; on the other a populist coalition of parents, celebrities (like Jenny McCarthy), politicians and activists. It's a war that increasingly takes place on the Internet with both sides using the latest social media tools, including Facebook and Twitter, to win the hearts and minds of the public.

This was the week when the best laid plans went awry--on energy and immigration policy, on the Wall Street crackdown and Florida politics. We'll explain the hows and the whys tonight on Washington Week. Janet Napolitano, Secretary of Homeland Security said, "This is a spill of national significance." Hundreds of thousands of gallons of crude oil, threatening a huge natural disaster in the Gulf. President Barack Obama said, "Local economies and livelihoods of the people of the Gulf Coast, as well as the ecology of the region is at stake." Wind power, nuclear, clean coal, off shore oil drilling--do the risks outweigh the benefits? And thanks to a tough new Arizona law, will energy reform also be knocked off-course by a renewed debate over immigration? Gov. Jan Brewer (R-AZ) said, "Decades of federal inaction and misguided policy have created a dangerous and unacceptable situation." In Florida, one rising Republican star gets knocked off course and out of his party by another. Gov. Charlie Crist (Independent-FL) said, "My decision to run for the United States Senate as a candidate without party affiliation in many ways says more about our nation and our state than it does about me." Marco Rubio, Republican candidate for U.S. Senate - Florida said, "I know this campaign is not about me, it's about what I'm running for and what I'm running on." And a proposed Wall Street crackdown gets knocked back on course after a dramatic Capitol Hill showdown. Covering the week, Margaret Kriz Hobson of National Journal; Naftali Bendavid of the Wall Street Journal; Karen Tumulty of the Washington Post; and Eamon Javers of Politico.

"We were never concerned with who killed Martin Luther King, but what killed Martin Luther King," says former King aide Andrew Young in this film, which tells the wildly disparate yet fatefully entwined stories of an assassin, James Earl Ray, and his target, Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., against the backdrop of the seething and turbulent forces in American society that led these two men to their violent and tragic collision in Memphis, Tennessee, on April 4, 1968. Based on a forthcoming book by Hampton Sides (Ghost Soldiers), the program relies on eyewitness testimony from King's inner circle and the officials involved in Ray's capture and prosecution following an intense two-month international manhunt.

This was the week when the best laid plans went awry--on energy and immigration policy, on the Wall Street crackdown and Florida politics. We'll explain the hows and the whys tonight on Washington Week. Janet Napolitano, Secretary of Homeland Security said, "This is a spill of national significance." Hundreds of thousands of gallons of crude oil, threatening a huge natural disaster in the Gulf. President Barack Obama said, "Local economies and livelihoods of the people of the Gulf Coast, as well as the ecology of the region is at stake." Wind power, nuclear, clean coal, off shore oil drilling--do the risks outweigh the benefits? And thanks to a tough new Arizona law, will energy reform also be knocked off-course by a renewed debate over immigration? Gov. Jan Brewer (R-AZ) said, "Decades of federal inaction and misguided policy have created a dangerous and unacceptable situation." In Florida, one rising Republican star gets knocked off course and out of his party by another. Gov. Charlie Crist (Independent-FL) said, "My decision to run for the United States Senate as a candidate without party affiliation in many ways says more about our nation and our state than it does about me." Marco Rubio, Republican candidate for U.S. Senate - Florida said, "I know this campaign is not about me, it's about what I'm running for and what I'm running on." And a proposed Wall Street crackdown gets knocked back on course after a dramatic Capitol Hill showdown. Covering the week, Margaret Kriz Hobson of National Journal; Naftali Bendavid of the Wall Street Journal; Karen Tumulty of the Washington Post; and Eamon Javers of Politico.

Three tangled tales: the latest New York terror plot, the growing oil spill disaster in the Gulf, and the political impasse in Great Britain, tonight on Washington Week. Mayor Michael Bloomberg said, "This was an act that was designed to kill innocent civilians and strike fear into the hearts of Americans. And I'm happy to say that it failed on both counts." Rep. John Boehner (R-OH) said, "Yes, we've been lucky, but luck is not an effective strategy for fighting the terrorist threat." Alert New Yorkers and law enforcement officers foiled yet another attempted terror plot. But was it chance or competence that stopped Faisal Shahzad from carrying out his deadly plans. In the Gulf of Mexico, oil continues to gush into the sea, while the hunt continues for a cause and a solution. Doug Suttles said, "We stress that this has never been done before. We'll likely encounter numerous challenges and but we'll remain committed to make it work." Sec. Janet Napolitano said, "The possibility remains that the BP oil spill could turn into an unprecedented environmental disaster." President Barack Obama said, "I want to emphasize from day one we have prepared and planned for the worst, even as we hoped for the best." While in Great Britain, an unpredictable election yields an unexpected outcome. Prime Minister Gordon Brown said, "People do not like the uncertainty or want it to be prolonged. We live, however, in a parliamentary democracy." Covering the week: Pierre Thomas of ABC News, Peter Baker of the New York Times, Elizabeth Shogren of National Public Radio, and in London, Dan Balz of the Washington Post.

The selling of Elena Kagan, the oil spill blame game, kissing and making up with Hamid Karzai, and the perilous politics of incumbency, tonight on Washington Week. President Barack Obama said, "Our solicitor general and my friend Elena Kagan." Sen. Jeff Sessions (R-AL) said, "It is a confirmation. It's not a coronation." True, but President Obama's Supreme Court nominee is for now on a glide path. Elena Kagan said, "Thank you so much." But who is Elena Kagan and what would she bring to the nation's highest court? On Capitol Hill, another scandal, another oath, as lawmakers wrestle with the consequences of the disastrous oil spill. Sen. Lisa Murkowski (R-AK) said, "It doesn't benefit anyone of them for BP to be pointing the finger at Transocean, to be pointing the finger at Halliburton, to be pointing the finger back at BP." President Obama said, "The American people could not have been impressed with that display and I certainly wasn't." So who is at fault? At the White House Afghan President Karzai gets the royal treatment but what's happening on the battlefield? Gen. Stanley McChrystal said, "I think I'd be prepared to say nobody is winning at this point." And incumbents brace for what could be a rocky political season. For Democrats--President Obama said, "We've gone through a stormy time and I know sometimes has made you guys a little seasick." And Republicans. Sen. Robert Bennett (R-UT) said, "The political atmosphere obviously has been toxic." Covering the week: Pete Williams of NBC News, Juliet Eilperin of the Washington Post, Martha Raddatz of ABC news, and Charles Babington of the Associated Press.

Public health scientists and clinicians tout vaccines as one of the greatest achievements of modern medicine. But for many ordinary Americans vaccines have become controversial. Young parents are concerned at the sheer number of shots--some 26 inoculations for 14 different diseases by age 6--and follow alternative vaccination schedules advocated by gurus like Dr. Robert Sears. Other parents go further. In communities like Ashland, Oregon, up to one-third of parents are choosing not to vaccinate their kids at all. And some advocacy groups, like Generation Rescue, argue that vaccines are no longer a public health miracle but a scourge; they view vaccines as responsible for alarming rises in certain disorders, including ADHD and autism. This is the vaccine war: On one side sits scientific medicine and the public health establishment; on the other a populist coalition of parents, celebrities (like Jenny McCarthy), politicians and activists. It's a war that increasingly takes place on the Internet with both sides using the latest social media tools, including Facebook and Twitter, to win the hearts and minds of the public.

During one of the worst tornado seasons on record, a NOVA camera team chased across the Midwest, capturing hair-raising footage of highly destructive twisters in action. But HUNT FOR THE SUPERTWISTER is much more than just another "extreme weather" show. Our story focuses on the efforts of two scientists at the University of Oklahoma to develop radically different approaches to forecasting twisters: one relies on "virtual tornados" created inside supercomputers, while the other involves hunting down real-life storms to collect data firsthand (the method that inspired the movie Twister). With jaw-dropping 3-D graphics generated by the National Center for Supercomputing Applications, NOVA's show features spectacular footage of these terrifying twisters. HUNT FOR THE SUPERTWISTER gives viewers a front-row seat to the risky and thrilling art of storm chasing, complete with the latest research findings and state-of-the-art visual effects.

NOVA joins an exclusive dive beneath the waters of Pearl Harbor to trace new clues to the historic sinking of the USS Arizona. 1,177 crewmembers perished in the dramatic 1941 sinking of the storied battleship--the greatest loss of life in United States naval history. For decades, it has been thought that the Arizona was brought down by fire from Japanese aircraft. But the discovery of a Japanese "midget sub" far from the scene of the battle raises new questions about the Arizona's final hours. Severed into three pieces and dropped in 1,200-foot-deep water outside of the harbor, the sub matches four other vessels discovered in shallower water closer to the harbor entrance. Each of the four vessels were equipped with a pair of torpedoes--but only the torpedoes of the fifth sub are still missing, apparently fired at an unknown target. What was that submarine's mission? Why was it laid to rest so far from the harbor? What was the fate of its two-man crew? With unprecedented access to the Arizona wreckage, NOVA teams up with the Hawaii Undersea Research Lab to use manned deep submersibles in an attempt to resurrect the fifth midget submarine. Using eyewitness testimony and reports from after the attack, this program examines the possibility that this mysterious midget submarine may have been a key Japanese weapon in what became known as the day of infamy.

In the aftermath of the worst financial crisis since the Great Depression, "Mind Over Money" explores why mainstream economists failed to predict the crash of 2008 and why we so often make irrational financial decisions. It reveals surprising, hidden money drives in us all and explores controversial new arguments about the world of finance. Before the current crash, most Wall Street analysts believed that markets are "efficient" -- that investors are reasonable and always operate in their own self-interest. Most of the time, these assumptions of classical economics work well enough. But in extreme situations, people panic and conventional theories collapse. In the face of the recent crash, can a new science that aims to incorporate human psychology into finance--behavioral economics--do better? We'll see how the brains and bodies of Wall Street traders respond as they buy and sell stocks. We'll watch as an ingenious experiment reveals how too many spending choices and the way they're framed can overwhelm consumers' ability to make rational decisions. Through these real-life experiments, NOVA showed how mood, decision-making, and economic activity are all tightly interwoven. By delivering unexpected insights from leading analysts and powerful experiments, "Mind Over Money" exposes the mysterious and surprising nature of the two most powerful forces on our planet: the human mind and money.

When Mount St. Helens erupted in 1980, every living thing in the blast zone was buried beneath 300 feet of avalanche debris, covered with steaming mud, and finally, topped with a superheated layer of frothy rock from deep within the earth. It seemed as though Mount St. Helens might remain a wasteland forever. When biologist Charlie Crisafulli first flew over the disaster zone, finding no sign of life, little did he realize that his own life would be forever changed. Crisafulli has remained at the site for 27 years, documenting the dramatic return of plant and animal life to the barren landscape and pioneering a new understanding of the interaction between geologic forces and the life surrounding the mountain. NOVA brings viewers on an inspiring journey of a landscape brought back from the dead.

What drove a company of American soldiers -- ordinary young men deployed to liberate a small foreign nation from an oppressive neighbor -- to murder more than 300 unarmed Vietnamese civilians? Were they "just following orders," as some later declared? Or, as others argued, did they break under the pressure of a misguided military strategy that measured victory by body count? Today, as the United States once again finds itself questioning the morality of actions taken in the name of war, Academy Award-nominated filmmaker Barak Goodman ("The Lobotomist," "Scottsboro: An American Tragedy") focuses his lens on the 1968 My Lai massacre, its subsequent cover-up and the heroic efforts of the soldiers who broke rank to halt the atrocities. "My Lai" draws upon eyewitness accounts of Vietnamese survivors and men of the Charlie Company 11th Infantry Brigade and recently discovered audio recordings from the Peers Inquiry to recount one of the darkest chapters of the Vietnam War.

The second part of this series about the natural and human history of Appalachia traces the story of the region from the rumblings of Revolutionary War through Andrew Jackson's forced relocation of the Cherokee people in 1831. Appalachia's early settlers hand-cut trails through steep terrain covered with enormous trees and teeming with wild animals. They weren't about to take orders from Redcoats. When a few hundred angry mountain men handily beat the regiment of a pompous British major, they changed the course of history. Contrary to current stereotypes, the colonists saw Appalachia as a source of great wealth. Her riches seduced early Americans, from the legendary adventurer Daniel Boone to naturalist William Bartram to a young land surveyor named George Washington. Academy Award-winning actress Sissy Spacek narrates.

Spring 1946: Ten months after the end of World War II, an explosion rocks the Pacific off the coast of Hawaii. America has just destroyed one of Japan's most advanced weapons systems -- the I-401 aircraft carrier submarine. But this was no belated attack against the defeated Japanese. Bound by an agreement to share any discoveries with the Soviets, but feeling the pressure of the looming Cold War, it was a calculated decision to keep the technology out of Soviet hands. The Japanese had built their sub to take the war to U.S. shores. Merging the stealth and tactical advantages of sea and sky, the revolutionary submarine carried three specially designed Seiran attack bombers, which could be launched from the deck of the sub within seven minutes of its reaching the surface. With missions to attack U.S. cities and blow up the Panama Canal, the aircraft carrier submarine had the potential to change the course of the war in the Pacific. But fortunately for America, its secret weapon -- the atom bomb -- was put into action first. "Japanese SuperSub's" investigates Japan's efforts to take submarine technology where it had never gone before, and reveals how close the Japanese came to using the sub for an attack on the U.S.

Three tangled tales: the latest New York terror plot, the growing oil spill disaster in the Gulf, and the political impasse in Great Britain, tonight on Washington Week. Mayor Michael Bloomberg said, "This was an act that was designed to kill innocent civilians and strike fear into the hearts of Americans. And I'm happy to say that it failed on both counts." Rep. John Boehner (R-OH) said, "Yes, we've been lucky, but luck is not an effective strategy for fighting the terrorist threat." Alert New Yorkers and law enforcement officers foiled yet another attempted terror plot. But was it chance or competence that stopped Faisal Shahzad from carrying out his deadly plans. In the Gulf of Mexico, oil continues to gush into the sea, while the hunt continues for a cause and a solution. Doug Suttles said, "We stress that this has never been done before. We'll likely encounter numerous challenges and but we'll remain committed to make it work." Sec. Janet Napolitano said, "The possibility remains that the BP oil spill could turn into an unprecedented environmental disaster." President Barack Obama said, "I want to emphasize from day one we have prepared and planned for the worst, even as we hoped for the best." While in Great Britain, an unpredictable election yields an unexpected outcome. Prime Minister Gordon Brown said, "People do not like the uncertainty or want it to be prolonged. We live, however, in a parliamentary democracy." Covering the week: Pierre Thomas of ABC News, Peter Baker of the New York Times, Elizabeth Shogren of National Public Radio, and in London, Dan Balz of the Washington Post.

When filmmaker Karen Skloss got pregnant at the age of 23, she decided to have and keep the baby--even when it became clear that her relationship with the baby's father wouldn't work out. She had no idea that it would be so easy to alter her life in one stroke. In SUNSHINE, Skloss explores the meaning of family through a personal journey to understand both the legacy of her own birth and the non-traditional family she created by co-parenting with her ex-boyfriend. Young, pregnant, single, and unprepared, Skloss struggles with the fact that sometimes, the most strenuous efforts to protect the idea of family can actually do the most to pull families apart. Woven together from more than 10 years' worth of home movies, intimate family interviews, shimmering dance sequences, and stylized reenactments, SUNSHINE is a refreshing and compelling self-portrait of an adopted woman driven to search for her pride and identity while reconnecting with her biological mother.

Public health scientists and clinicians tout vaccines as one of the greatest achievements of modern medicine. But for many ordinary Americans vaccines have become controversial. Young parents are concerned at the sheer number of shots--some 26 inoculations for 14 different diseases by age 6--and follow alternative vaccination schedules advocated by gurus like Dr. Robert Sears. Other parents go further. In communities like Ashland, Oregon, up to one-third of parents are choosing not to vaccinate their kids at all. And some advocacy groups, like Generation Rescue, argue that vaccines are no longer a public health miracle but a scourge; they view vaccines as responsible for alarming rises in certain disorders, including ADHD and autism. This is the vaccine war: On one side sits scientific medicine and the public health establishment; on the other a populist coalition of parents, celebrities (like Jenny McCarthy), politicians and activists. It's a war that increasingly takes place on the Internet with both sides using the latest social media tools, including Facebook and Twitter, to win the hearts and minds of the public.

The final episode of this series about the natural and human history of Appalachia sparks both heartbreak and hope for the region's ransacked mountain ecosystem. Early 20th-century mineral barons ruled Appalachia with an iron fist. Company spies tracked miners' every move. If they found a man's union card, he would be fired, even killed. Inspired by a brave little old lady who talked like a preacher and cursed like a sailor, mineworkers organized and demanded better treatment. The dams of the Tennessee Valley Authority drowned ancestral homesteads, but the project eliminated abject poverty for thousands. An invasive fungus has wiped out the majestic American chestnut tree, but its roots refuse to die. Strip mining has torn the tops off mountains, but a new wave of activists, writers, musicians, scientists and nature-lovers is expanding the miners' ideas of health and fairness to include the forests, the rivers and the mountains themselves. Academy Award-winning actress Sissy Spacek narrates.

The final episode of this series about the natural and human history of Appalachia sparks both heartbreak and hope for the region's ransacked mountain ecosystem. Early 20th-century mineral barons ruled Appalachia with an iron fist. Company spies tracked miners' every move. If they found a man's union card, he would be fired, even killed. Inspired by a brave little old lady who talked like a preacher and cursed like a sailor, mineworkers organized and demanded better treatment. The dams of the Tennessee Valley Authority drowned ancestral homesteads, but the project eliminated abject poverty for thousands. An invasive fungus has wiped out the majestic American chestnut tree, but its roots refuse to die. Strip mining has torn the tops off mountains, but a new wave of activists, writers, musicians, scientists and nature-lovers is expanding the miners' ideas of health and fairness to include the forests, the rivers and the mountains themselves. Academy Award-winning actress Sissy Spacek narrates.

One year after the deadliest domestic airline accident in seven years, FRONTLINE investigates the crash of Continental 3407 in Buffalo, NY, and discovers a dramatically changed airline industry, where regional carriers now account for half of the nation's daily departures. The rise of the regionals and arrival of low-cost carriers have been a huge boon to consumers, and the industry insists that the skies remain safe. But many insiders are worried that now, thirty years after airline deregulation, the aviation system is being stretched beyond its capacity to deliver service that is both cheap and safe.

The selling of Elena Kagan, the oil spill blame game, kissing and making up with Hamid Karzai, and the perilous politics of incumbency, tonight on Washington Week. President Barack Obama said, "Our solicitor general and my friend Elena Kagan." Sen. Jeff Sessions (R-AL) said, "It is a confirmation. It's not a coronation." True, but President Obama's Supreme Court nominee is for now on a glide path. Elena Kagan said, "Thank you so much." But who is Elena Kagan and what would she bring to the nation's highest court? On Capitol Hill, another scandal, another oath, as lawmakers wrestle with the consequences of the disastrous oil spill. Sen. Lisa Murkowski (R-AK) said, "It doesn't benefit anyone of them for BP to be pointing the finger at Transocean, to be pointing the finger at Halliburton, to be pointing the finger back at BP." President Obama said, "The American people could not have been impressed with that display and I certainly wasn't." So who is at fault? At the White House Afghan President Karzai gets the royal treatment but what's happening on the battlefield? Gen. Stanley McChrystal said, "I think I'd be prepared to say nobody is winning at this point." And incumbents brace for what could be a rocky political season. For Democrats--President Obama said, "We've gone through a stormy time and I know sometimes has made you guys a little seasick." And Republicans: Sen. Robert Bennett (R-UT) said, "The political atmosphere obviously has been toxic." Covering the week: Pete Williams of NBC News, Juliet Eilperin of the Washington Post, Martha Raddatz of ABC news, and Charles Babington of the Associated Press.

Confusion, finger-pointing, defensiveness, stand offs, and blame, from the Gulf Coast to the Korean Peninsula, everybody's on edge. We explore why tonight on Washington Week. President Barack Obama said, "I ultimately take responsibility for solving this crisis. I'm the president and the buck stops with me." Rare admissions of fault from our president who likes to be right. President Obama stated, "Where I was wrong, was in my belief that the oil companies had their act together when it came to worst-case scenarios." Surveying the damage today. President Obama continued, "We've got about seven miles of beach here where two types of boom have already been laid." He viewed efforts to stem the tide of oil polluting the Gulf Coast, as the tide of blame kept rising in Washington. Rep. John Boehner (R-OH) said, "And it's also clear the president has failed in his obligations to the American people to uphold the law and act." Tony Hayward said, "What we're seeing here is a whole series of failures." Rep. Charlie Melancon (D-LA) said, "Our culture is threatened, our coastal economy is threatened, and everything that I know and love is at risk." Six weeks later the BP oil disaster continues. Also, Congress moves to make it easier for gays to serve in the military. And tensions build on the Korean Peninsula again. Secretary of State Hillary Clinton said, "This was an unacceptable provocation by North Korea." Covering the week: Karen Tumulty, of the Washington Post, Elizabeth Shogren of National Public Radio, Martha Raddatz of ABC News, and David Sanger of the New York Times.

One year after the deadliest domestic airline accident in seven years, FRONTLINE investigates the crash of Continental 3407 in Buffalo, NY, and discovers a dramatically changed airline industry, where regional carriers now account for half of the nation's daily departures. The rise of the regionals and arrival of low-cost carriers have been a huge boon to consumers, and the industry insists that the skies remain safe. But many insiders are worried that now, thirty years after airline deregulation, the aviation system is being stretched beyond its capacity to deliver service that is both cheap and safe.

The selling of Elena Kagan, the oil spill blame game, kissing and making up with Hamid Karzai, and the perilous politics of incumbency, tonight on Washington Week. President Barack Obama said, "Our solicitor general and my friend Elena Kagan." Sen. Jeff Sessions (R-AL) said, "It is a confirmation. It's not a coronation." True, but President Obama's Supreme Court nominee is for now on a glide path. Elena Kagan said, "Thank you so much." But who is Elena Kagan and what would she bring to the nation's highest court? On Capitol Hill, another scandal, another oath, as lawmakers wrestle with the consequences of the disastrous oil spill. Sen. Lisa Murkowski (R-AK) said, "It doesn't benefit anyone of them for BP to be pointing the finger at Transocean, to be pointing the finger at Halliburton, to be pointing the finger back at BP." President Obama said, "The American people could not have been impressed with that display and I certainly wasn't." So who is at fault? At the White House Afghan President Karzai gets the royal treatment but what's happening on the battlefield? Gen. Stanley McChrystal said, "I think I'd be prepared to say nobody is winning at this point." And incumbents brace for what could be a rocky political season. For Democrats--President Obama said, "We've gone through a stormy time and I know sometimes has made you guys a little seasick." And Republicans: Sen. Robert Bennett (R-UT) said, "The political atmosphere obviously has been toxic." Covering the week: Pete Williams of NBC News, Juliet Eilperin of the Washington Post, Martha Raddatz of ABC news, and Charles Babington of the Associated Press.

The final episode of this series about the natural and human history of Appalachia sparks both heartbreak and hope for the region's ransacked mountain ecosystem. Early 20th-century mineral barons ruled Appalachia with an iron fist. Company spies tracked miners' every move. If they found a man's union card, he would be fired, even killed. Inspired by a brave little old lady who talked like a preacher and cursed like a sailor, mineworkers organized and demanded better treatment. The dams of the Tennessee Valley Authority drowned ancestral homesteads, but the project eliminated abject poverty for thousands. An invasive fungus has wiped out the majestic American chestnut tree, but its roots refuse to die. Strip mining has torn the tops off mountains, but a new wave of activists, writers, musicians, scientists and nature-lovers is expanding the miners' ideas of health and fairness to include the forests, the rivers and the mountains themselves. Academy Award-winning actress Sissy Spacek narrates.

Each year, a small shorebird that winters on the southern tip of South America must make a 10,000-mile journey to its nesting grounds in the Arctic -- one of the longest migrations on earth. The pocket-sized long distance traveler times its migration precisely to coincide with the annual spawning of one of earth's most ancient creatures. Horseshoe crab eggs in the Delaware Bay fuel the little bird's epic journey to the Arctic...but recently, bird numbers have started to crash. The story of the red knot and the horseshoe crab is a living example of how every species is interconnected -- each one important, no matter how big or small.

A powerful tornado is a terrifying phenomenon that continues to defy decades of scientific efforts to predict it. During one of the worst tornado seasons on record, a NOVA camera team chased across the Midwest, capturing hair-raising footage of highly destructive twisters in action. But HUNT FOR THE SUPERTWISTER is much more than just another "extreme weather" show. Our story focuses on the efforts of two scientists at the University of Oklahoma to develop radically different approaches to forecasting twisters: one relies on "virtual tornados" created inside supercomputers, while the other involves hunting down real-life storms to collect data firsthand (the method that inspired the movie Twister). With jaw-dropping 3-D graphics generated by the National Center for Supercomputing Applications, NOVA's show features spectacular footage of these terrifying twisters. HUNT FOR THE SUPERTWISTER gives viewers a front-row seat to the risky and thrilling art of storm chasing, complete with the latest research findings and state-of-the-art visual effects.

A remote lake in Southeast Asia conceals evidence of Earth's greatest volcanic cataclysm of the last 100,000 years. Miles beneath its placid surface lies a magma chamber that exploded so violently during the Ice Age that gases and ash may have encircled the globe and blotted out the sun for years on end. The Toba eruption may have helped kick the climate into an unprecedented freeze and perhaps even pushed ancestral human populations to the brink of extinction. In a classic science detective story, NOVA pieces together the clues about this great catastrophe and probes questions raised about human evolution and Earth's fragile ecosystems.

The Outer Banks of North Carolina are a slim and moving line of sand in the open Atlantic. Many travelers think they know these islands, but south of Ocracoke Inlet there rises a luminous bar of sand 60 miles in extent, with no roads, no bridges and no hotels. These are the wild beaches of Cape Lookout -- one of the few remaining natural barrier islands in the world. At once an exaltation and elegy, "Ribbon of Sand" profiles this seascape and the transitory islands that are doomed to disappear. Meryl Streep reads excerpts from Rachel Carson's writings.

The selling of Elena Kagan, the oil spill blame game, kissing and making up with Hamid Karzai, and the perilous politics of incumbency, tonight on Washington Week. President

Barack Obama said, "Our solicitor general and my friend Elena Kagan." Sen. Jeff Sessions (R-AL) said, "It is a confirmation. It's not a coronation." True, but President Obama's Supreme Court nominee is for now on a glide path. Elena Kagan said, "Thank you so much." But who is Elena Kagan and what would she bring to the nation's highest court? On Capitol Hill, another scandal, another oath, as lawmakers wrestle with the consequences of the disastrous oil spill. Sen. Lisa Murkowski (R-AK) said, "It doesn't benefit anyone of them for BP to be pointing the finger at Transocean, to be pointing the finger at Halliburton, to be pointing the finger back at BP." President Obama said, "The American people could not have been impressed with that display and I certainly wasn't." So who is at fault? At the White House Afghan President Karzai gets the royal treatment but what's happening on the battlefield? Gen. Stanley McChrystal said, "I think I'd be prepared to say nobody is winning at this point." And incumbents brace for what could be a rocky political season. For Democrats--President Obama said, "We've gone through a stormy time and I know sometimes has made you guys a little seasick." And Republicans: Sen. Robert Bennett (R-UT) said, "The political atmosphere obviously has been toxic." Confusion, finger-pointing, defensiveness, stand offs, and blame, from the Gulf Coast to the Korean Peninsula, everybody's on edge. We explore why tonight on Washington Week. President Barack Obama said, "I ultimately take responsibility for solving this crisis. I'm the president and the buck stops with me." Rare admissions of fault from our president who likes to be right. President Obama stated, "Where I was wrong, was in my belief that the oil companies had their act together when it came to worst-case scenarios." Surveying the damage today. President Obama continued, "We've got about seven miles of beach here where two types of boom have already been laid." He viewed efforts to stem the tide of oil polluting the Gulf Coast, as the tide of blame kept rising in Washington. Rep. John Boehner (R-OH) said, "And it's also clear the president has failed in his obligations to the American people to uphold the law and act." Tony Hayward said, "What we're seeing here is a whole series of failures." Rep. Charlie Melancon (D-LA) said, "Our culture is threatened, our coastal economy is threatened, and everything that I know and love is at risk." Six weeks later the BP oil disaster continues. Also, Congress moves to make it easier for gays to serve in the military. And tensions build on the Korean Peninsula again. Secretary of State Hillary Clinton said, "This was an unacceptable provocation by North Korea." Covering the week:

Renowned violinist Gil Shaham appears on "From the Top at Carnegie Hall," joined by 10-year-old violinist and Red Sox fan Alice Ivy-Pemberton from New York City, for a performance of the third movement Allegro from Bach's "Concerto for Two Violins in D Minor, BWV 1043." Alice, who frequents Lincoln Center's violin shop and spends a great deal of time at Columbia University, where her parents are professors, also performs the first movement Prima Parte (Lassu) from Bartók's "Rhapsody No. 1 (Folk Dances) for Violin and Piano," accompanied by host Christopher O'Riley. Also featured on the episode is 17-year old pianist Ji-Yong Kim from Midland Park, New Jersey, who performs Robert Schumann's "Widmung" (arr. Liszt) and explains what it's like to be both a normal high school student and a classical pianist with professional management.

One year after the deadliest domestic airline accident in seven years, FRONTLINE investigates the crash of Continental 3407 in Buffalo, NY, and discovers a dramatically changed airline industry, where regional carriers now account for half of the nation's daily departures. The rise of the regionals and arrival of low-cost carriers have been a huge boon to consumers, and the industry insists that the skies remain safe. But many insiders are worried that now, thirty years after airline deregulation, the aviation system is being stretched beyond its capacity to deliver service that is both cheap and safe.

This was the week the voters turned conventional wisdom upside down in Pennsylvania, Arkansas, and Kentucky. Now, what comes next, tonight on Washington Week. Rand Paul said, "We've come to take our government back." Rep. Joe Sestak (D-PA) said, "A win for the people over the establishment, over the status quo, even over Washington D.C." LT. Gov. Bill Halter said, "Three more weeks, two more candidates, one choice for change." This is what it looks like when American voters get in a bad mood. Incumbents endangered and the longer they've been in Washington the harder they're falling. Sen. Arlen Specter (D-PA) said, "It's been a great privilege to serve the people of Pennsylvania." Both parties are scrambling to assess what comes next as surprises seem to lurk around every corner. Richard Blumenthal said, "On a few occasions I have misspoken about my service." Covering the week, Dan Balz of the Washington Post, John Dickerson of Slate magazine and CBS News, Susan Milligan of the Boston Globe, and Jeff Zeleny of the New York Times.

Confusion, finger-pointing, defensiveness, stand offs, and blame, from the Gulf Coast to the Korean Peninsula, everybody's on edge. We explore why tonight on Washington Week. President Barack Obama said, "I ultimately take responsibility for solving this crisis. I'm the president and the buck stops with me." Rare admissions of fault from our president who likes to be right. President Obama stated, "Where I was wrong, was in my belief that the oil companies had their act together when it came to worst-case scenarios." Surveying the damage today. President Obama continued, "We've got about seven miles of beach here where two types of boom have already been laid." He viewed efforts to stem the tide of oil polluting the Gulf Coast, as the tide of blame kept rising in Washington. Rep. John Boehner (R-OH) said, "And it's also clear the president has failed in his obligations to the American people to uphold the law and act." Tony Hayward said, "What we're seeing here is a whole series of failures." Rep. Charlie Melancon (D-LA) said, "Our culture is threatened, our coastal economy is threatened, and everything that I know and love is at risk." Six weeks later the BP oil disaster continues. Also, Congress moves to make it easier for gays to serve in the military. And tensions build on the Korean Peninsula again. Secretary of State Hillary Clinton said, "This was an unacceptable provocation by North Korea." Covering the week: Karen Tumulty, of the Washington Post, Elizabeth Shogren of National Public Radio, Martha Raddatz of ABC News, and David Sanger of the New York Times.

A powerful tornado is a terrifying phenomenon that continues to defy decades of scientific efforts to predict it. During one of the worst tornado seasons on record, a NOVA camera team chased across the Midwest, capturing hair-raising footage of highly destructive twisters in action. But HUNT FOR THE SUPERTWISTER is much more than just another "extreme weather" show. Our story focuses on the efforts of two scientists at the University of Oklahoma to develop radically different approaches to forecasting twisters: one relies on "virtual tornados" created inside supercomputers, while the other involves hunting down real-life storms to collect data firsthand (the method that inspired the movie Twister). With jaw-dropping 3-D graphics generated by the National Center for Supercomputing Applications, NOVA's show features spectacular footage of these terrifying twisters. HUNT FOR THE SUPERTWISTER gives viewers a front-row seat to the risky and thrilling art of storm chasing, complete with the latest research findings and state-of-the-art visual effects.

NOVA presents a minute-by-minute eyewitness account of the Hurricane Katrina disaster, exploring why the flood defenses and disaster relief planning failed to match Katrina's fury. What made this storm so deadly? How accurately did scientists predict its impact? And why are powerful hurricanes like Katrina likely to strike more often? The program will investigate the immense challenges posed by rebuilding New Orleans, and why - despite all the knowledge of the peril faced by its citizens - the city was so tragically unprepared when the long-feared disaster finally struck.

A remote lake in Southeast Asia conceals evidence of Earth's greatest volcanic cataclysm of the last 100,000 years. Miles beneath its placid surface lies a magma chamber that exploded so violently during the Ice Age that gases and ash may have encircled the globe and blotted out the sun for years on end. The Toba eruption may have helped kick the climate into an unprecedented freeze and perhaps even pushed ancestral human populations to the brink of extinction. In a classic science detective story, NOVA pieces together the clues about this great catastrophe and probes questions raised about human evolution and Earth's fragile ecosystems.

One year after the deadliest domestic airline accident in seven years, FRONTLINE investigates the crash of Continental 3407 in Buffalo, NY, and discovers a dramatically changed airline industry, where regional carriers now account for half of the nation's daily departures. The rise of the regionals and arrival of low-cost carriers have been a huge boon to consumers, and the industry insists that the skies remain safe. But many insiders are worried that now, thirty years after airline deregulation, the aviation system is being stretched beyond its capacity to deliver service that is both cheap and safe.

Germany's invasion of the Soviet Union in 1941 was the largest troop offensive in military history. And the Battle of Stalingrad is arguably the deadliest single battle the world has ever seen. The eventual Russian victory has long been lauded as a shining example of Stalin's military genius. He is said to have baited the much more powerful and technologically advanced German army with a carefully executed withdrawal, then caught the Nazis unprepared in vicious city-block-by-city-block fighting that decimated the German forces. By the time the battle was over, more than one million lives had been lost and the course of the war permanently altered. But 70 years after the battle was fought, newly uncovered documents, survivor accounts and stunning archival footage are revealing a different picture. "Deadliest Battle" uncovers evidence that describes a forced retreat by the Russians, not a tactical one, in addition to much fiercer fighting in the countryside than previously thought. The battle not only changed the course of World War II, but established the Soviet Union as a superpower to be reckoned with in the long Cold War that lay ahead. More than a half-century later, the full impact of this horrific battle is revealed.

Renowned violinist Gil Shaham appears on "From the Top at Carnegie Hall," joined by 10-year-old violinist and Red Sox fan Alice Ivy-Pemberton from New York City, for a performance of the third movement Allegro from Bach's "Concerto for Two Violins in D Minor, BWV 1043." Alice, who frequents Lincoln Center's violin shop and spends a great deal of time at Columbia University, where her parents are professors, also performs the first movement Prima Parte (Lassu) from Bartók's "Rhapsody No. 1 (Folk Dances) for Violin and Piano," accompanied by host Christopher O'Riley. Also featured on the episode is 17-year old pianist Ji-Yong Kim from Midland Park, New Jersey, who performs Robert Schumann's "Widmung" (arr. Liszt) and explains what it's like to be both a normal high school student and a classical pianist with professional management.

In this special edition of "From the Top at Carnegie Hall," we learn that no matter how far from home we are, we always have a home in the things we love. Seventeen-year-old pianist Ronald Joseph grew up outside of New Orleans but temporarily relocated to New York in the wake of Hurricane Katrina to study at Juilliard. Thirteen-year-old Nikki Yanofsky from Hampstead, Quebec sings "Old McDonald Had a Farm," scat-style. And host Christopher O'Riley accompanies 17-year-old violinist Allyson Tomsy as she performs a Gershwin piece.

A biography of America's seventh president, ANDREW JACKSON: GOOD, EVIL AND THE PRESIDENCY explores whether Americans should celebrate Jackson or apologize for him. Viewers discover that Jackson fought in the Revolutionary War when he was 13 years old and that he used the skills learned in battle to kill a man over a gambling debt; that Jackson led the American army to the most surprising victory in its history in the Battle of New Orleans, but that he also launched an unauthorized invasion of Florida; that Jackson was the first great champion of the common white man and owned more than a hundred black Americans; that Jackson dramatically expanded the United States and did so by brutally wresting vast regions of the south from Native Americans; that Jackson, in one of the boldest political strokes in history, founded the Democratic Party, yet was viewed by his enemies as an American Napoleon. The film concludes with the words of Jackson's first biographer, James Parton: "Andrew Jackson was a patriot, and a traitor. He was the greatest of generals, and wholly ignorant of the art of war. He was the most candid of men, and capable of the profoundest dissimulation. He was a democratic autocrat, an urbane savage, an atrocious saint." Martin Sheen narrates.

Tony Kushner, whose epochal "Angels in America" won a Pulitzer Prize and Tony Award, has emerged as one of the country's leading playwrights -- and one of its fiercest moral critics. In this film, Oscar-winning director Freida Lee Mock (P.O.V. "Maya Lin: A Strong Clear Vision") followed Kushner for three tumultuous years, from September 11, 2001, to the 2004 presidential election, to delve into the passions that keep him reaching for the great American play. Actresses Marcia Gay Harden, Meryl Streep, Tonya Pinkins and Emma Thompson, directors Mike Nichols and George C. Wolfe and writer/artist Maurice Sendak are seen collaborating with Kushner on such landmark works as Angels in America; Caroline, or Change; and Homebody/Kabul. By Freida Lee Mock.

In March 1933, within weeks of his inauguration, President Franklin Roosevelt sent legislation to Congress aimed at providing relief for the one out of every four American workers who were unemployed. He proposed the Civilian Conservation Corps (CCC) to provide jobs in natural resource conservation. Over the next decade, the CCC put more than three million young men to work in the nation's forests and parks, planting trees, building flood barriers, fighting fires and maintaining roads and trails. Corps workers lived in camps under quasi-military discipline, and received a wage of 30 dollars per month, 25 of which they were required to send home to their families. This film tells the story of one of the boldest and most popular New Deal experiments, positioning it as a pivotal moment in the emergence of modern environmentalism and federal unemployment relief.

In this special presentation from the United Kingdom's groundbreaking archaeology series, Time Team takes viewers on an expedition to Jamestown, where a British company's commercial enterprise planted the seeds of the United States. There have been nearly a million finds from the site's trenches, but this anniversary special is far more than just an excavation. The team retrieves piles of perfectly preserved 17th-century pieces, traces the names and life stories of the early American pioneers, and learns why a third of them died within months of arrival. The colonists at Jamestown went looking for gold and silver. Instead, they found fertile soil, tough conditions, and the beginnings of the world's most powerful nation. Then, in part two of this two hour special, we travel back to England, where Britain's most famous archaeologists discover what secrets lie buried beneath several of the world's most famous residences. Time Team tears into The Queen's gardens in an unprecedented opportunity to unearth the secrets of Windsor Castle and Buckingham Palace, where the royal finds include the foundation of a fourteenth century building where Edward III honored the legendary Arthurian knights.

Commando raids, an uncontrollable oil spill, an economy that can't rebound fast enough, and political missteps here, there, and everywhere, tonight on Washington Week. Is anything going right? Oil continues to gush from the ocean floor. President Barack Obama said, "Right now, stopping this oil spill and containing its damage is necessarily the top priority not just of my administration, but I think of the entire country." Gov. Bobby Jindal (R-LA) said, "Every day they wait, every day they make us wait. We're losing our battle to protect our coast." Tony Hayward, CEO, BP OIL said, "I'd like my life back. So there's no one who wants this thing done more than I do." A high sea standoff forces the U.S. to mediate newly inflamed tensions between Israel and the Palestinians. Israeli Prime Min. Benjamin Netanyahu said, "Israel should not be held to a double standard. The Jewish state has a right to defend itself, just like any other state." Dr. Ghassan Al-Khateeb, Palestinian Government Spokesperson said, "We think that Israel should be held accountable for this crime and should be punished." Secretary of State Hillary Clinton said, "The situation in Gaza is unsustainable and unacceptable." The economy adds new jobs, but not enough of them. President Obama said, "While we recognize that our recovery is still in its early stages and that there're going to be ups and downs in the months ahead, things never go completely in a smooth line." And the White House political shop stumbles, again. What's a president to do? We assess the challenges and the distractions with the reporters covering the week: Peter Baker of the New York Times, Michael Duffy of Time Magazine and Doyle McManus of the Los Angeles Times.

In September 2002, three skinheads were roaming a park in Rheims, France, looking to "do an Arab," when they settled for a gay man instead. Twenty-nine-year-old François Chenu fought back fiercely, but he was beaten unconscious and thrown into a river, where he drowned. The acclaimed French verite film Beyond Hatred is the story of the crime's aftermath; above all, of the Chenu family's brave and heartrending struggle to seek justice while trying to make sense of such pointless violence and unbearable loss. With remarkable dignity, they fight to transcend hatred and the inevitable desire for revenge.

In this special presentation from the United Kingdom's groundbreaking archaeology series, Time Team takes viewers on an expedition to Jamestown, where a British company's commercial enterprise planted the seeds of the United States. There have been nearly a million finds from the site's trenches, but this anniversary special is far more than just an excavation. The team retrieves piles of perfectly preserved 17th-century pieces, traces the names and life stories of the early American pioneers, and learns why a third of them died within months of arrival. The colonists at Jamestown went looking for gold and silver. Instead, they found fertile soil, tough conditions, and the beginnings of the world's most powerful nation. Then, in part two of this two hour special, we travel back to England, where Britain's most famous archaeologists discover what secrets lie buried beneath several of the world's most famous residences. Time Team tears into The Queen's gardens in an unprecedented opportunity to unearth the secrets of Windsor Castle and Buckingham Palace, where the royal finds include the foundation of a fourteenth century building where Edward III honored the legendary Arthurian knights.

Can the power of music make the brain come alive? Throughout his career Dr. Oliver Sacks, neurologist and acclaimed author, whose book, "Awakenings" was made into an Oscar-nominated feature film starring Robin Williams and Robert De Niro, has encountered myriad patients who are struggling to cope with debilitating medical conditions. While their ailments vary, many have one thing in common: an appreciation for the therapeutic effects of music. NOVA follows four individuals--two of whom are Sacks's case studies--and even peers into Sacks's own brain, to investigate music's strange, surprising, and still unexplained power over the human mind.

In March 1933, within weeks of his inauguration, President Franklin Roosevelt sent legislation to Congress aimed at providing relief for the one out of every four American workers who were unemployed. He proposed the Civilian Conservation Corps (CCC) to provide jobs in natural resource conservation. Over the next decade, the CCC put more than three million young men to work in the nation's forests and parks, planting trees, building flood barriers, fighting fires and maintaining roads and trails. Corps workers lived in camps under quasi-military discipline, and received a wage of 30 dollars per month, 25 of which they were required to send home to their families. This film tells the story of one of the boldest and most popular New Deal experiments, positioning it as a pivotal moment in the emergence of modern environmentalism and federal unemployment relief.

Commando raids, an uncontrollable oil spill, an economy that can't rebound fast enough, and political missteps here, there, and everywhere, tonight on Washington Week. Is anything going right? Oil continues to gush from the ocean floor. President Barack Obama said, "Right now, stopping this oil spill and containing its damage is necessarily the top priority not just of my administration, but I think of the entire country." Gov. Bobby Jindal (R-LA) said, "Every day they wait, every day they make us wait. We're losing our battle to protect our coast." Tony Hayward, CEO, BP OIL said, "I'd like my life back. So there's no one who wants this thing done more than I do." A high sea standoff forces the U.S. to mediate newly inflamed tensions between Israel and the Palestinians. Israeli Prime Min. Benjamin Netanyahu said, "Israel should not be held to a double standard. The Jewish state has a right to defend itself, just like any other state." Dr. Ghassan Al-Khateeb, Palestinian Government Spokesperson said, "We think that Israel should be held accountable for this crime and should be punished." Secretary of State Hillary Clinton said, "The situation in Gaza is unsustainable and unacceptable." The economy adds new jobs, but not enough of them. President Obama said, "While we recognize that our recovery is still in its early stages and that there're going to be ups and downs in the months ahead, things never go completely in a smooth line." And the White House political shop stumbles, again. What's a president to do? We assess the challenges and the distractions with the reporters covering the week: Peter Baker of the New York Times, Michael Duffy of Time Magazine and Doyle McManus of the Los Angeles Times.

In March 1933, within weeks of his inauguration, President Franklin Roosevelt sent legislation to Congress aimed at providing relief for the one out of every four American workers who were unemployed. He proposed the Civilian Conservation Corps (CCC) to provide jobs in natural resource conservation. Over the next decade, the CCC put more than three million young men to work in the nation's forests and parks, planting trees, building flood barriers, fighting fires and maintaining roads and trails. Corps workers lived in camps under quasi-military discipline, and received a wage of 30 dollars per month, 25 of which they were required to send home to their families. This film tells the story of one of the boldest and most popular New Deal experiments, positioning it as a pivotal moment in the emergence of modern environmentalism and federal unemployment relief.

"Ferrets: The Pursuit of Excellence" offers an endearing and amusing glimpse at America's most playful, mischievous pets -- not to mention their distinctive owners. At the annual Ferret Buckeye Bash in Columbus, Ohio, the largest and most popular ferret show in the country, hundreds of top breeders, seasoned experts and ferret enthusiasts pamper and parade their pets in a quest for prizes and prestige. FERRETS offers a quirky contrast to the common animal show -- these curious creatures lack the regal air of show cats or the respectable nature of pedigreed dogs -- yet these ferrets are trained, pampered and primed by their doting owners in the hope of taking the top prize in the biggest ferret show in the country.

Commando raids, an uncontrollable oil spill, an economy that can't rebound fast enough, and political missteps here, there, and everywhere, tonight on Washington Week. Is anything going right? Oil continues to gush from the ocean floor. President Barack Obama said, "Right now, stopping this oil spill and containing its damage is necessarily the top priority not just of my administration, but I think of the entire country." Gov. Bobby Jindal (R-LA) said, "Every day they wait, every day they make us wait. We're losing our battle to protect our coast." Tony Hayward, CEO, BP OIL said, "I'd like my life back. So there's no one who wants this thing done more than I do." A high sea standoff forces the U.S. to mediate newly inflamed tensions between Israel and the Palestinians. Israeli Prime Min. Benjamin Netanyahu said, "Israel should not be held to a double standard. The Jewish state has a right to defend itself, just like any other state." Dr. Ghassan Al-Khateeb, Palestinian Government Spokesperson said, "We think that Israel should be held accountable for this crime and should be punished." Secretary of State Hillary Clinton said, "The situation in Gaza is unsustainable and unacceptable." The economy adds new jobs, but not enough of them. President Obama said, "While we recognize that our recovery is still in its early stages and that there're going to be ups and downs in the months ahead, things never go completely in a smooth line." And the White House political shop stumbles, again. What's a president to do? We assess the challenges and the distractions with the reporters covering the week: Peter Baker of the New York Times, Michael Duffy of Time Magazine and Doyle McManus of the Los Angeles Times.

Hundreds of millions of dollars being spent on the Gulf Coast disaster and on elections coast to coast, the winners, the losers, and the stalemates, tonight on Washington Week. Two California Republicans triumph. Meg Whitman, CA GOP Gubernatorial Candidate said, "Two businesswomen who know how to create jobs, balance budgets and get things done." While some incumbents fall and some survive. Nevada Gov. Jim Gibbons said, "I stand here humbled and grateful for the four years that the people of Nevada gave me." Sen. Blanche Lincoln (D-AK) said, "The vote of this senator is not for sale and neither is the vote of the people of Arkansas." But outsiders rule. Sharron Angle, GOP Senate Candidate in Nevada said, "We have completed the first step to taking back our U.S. Senate seat." Expensive elections, breakthroughs, and comebacks. What this week's primaries mean for Washington. And the Gulf oil spill turns into a deadly serious numbers game. Rep. Edward Markey (D-MS) said, "It's quite clear that BP has known that this is much more catastrophic right from the beginning." Louisiana Gov. Bobby Jindal said, "It is very frustrating that over 50 days into this they still don't have a reliable estimate of how many oil they've released, how much oil is still out there." Coast Guard ADM. Thad Allen said, "I'm not going to declare victory on anything till I have absolute numbers." What changed and what stayed the same with the reporters covering the stories: John Dickerson of Slate Magazine and CBS News, Alexis Simendinger of National Journal, and Karen Tumulty of the Washington Post.

Throughout his career Dr. Oliver Sacks, neurologist and acclaimed author, whose book, "Awakenings" was made into an Oscar-nominated feature film starring Robin Williams and Robert De Niro, has encountered myriad patients who are struggling to cope with debilitating medical conditions. While their ailments vary, many have one thing in common: an appreciation for the therapeutic effects of music. NOVA follows four individuals--two of whom are Sacks's case studies--and even peers into Sacks's own brain, to investigate music's strange, surprising, and still unexplained power over the human mind.

Tony Kushner, whose epochal "Angels in America" won a Pulitzer Prize and Tony Award, has emerged as one of the country's leading playwrights -- and one of its fiercest moral critics. In this film, Oscar-winning director Freida Lee Mock (P.O.V. "Maya Lin: A Strong Clear Vision") followed Kushner for three tumultuous years, from September 11, 2001, to the 2004 presidential election, to delve into the passions that keep him reaching for the great American play. Actresses Marcia Gay Harden, Meryl Streep, Tonya Pinkins and Emma Thompson, directors Mike Nichols and George C. Wolfe and writer/artist Maurice Sendak are seen collaborating with Kushner on such landmark works as Angels in America; Caroline, or Change; and Homebody/Kabul. By Freida Lee Mock.

A biography of America's seventh president, ANDREW JACKSON: GOOD, EVIL AND THE PRESIDENCY explores whether Americans should celebrate Jackson or apologize for him. Viewers discover that Jackson fought in the Revolutionary War when he was 13 years old and that he used the skills learned in battle to kill a man over a gambling debt; that Jackson led the American army to the most surprising victory in its history in the Battle of New Orleans, but that he also launched an unauthorized invasion of Florida; that Jackson was the first great champion of the common white man and owned more than a hundred black Americans; that Jackson dramatically expanded the United States and did so by brutally wresting vast regions of the south from Native Americans; that Jackson, in one of the boldest political strokes in history, founded the Democratic Party, yet was viewed by his enemies as an American Napoleon. The film concludes with the words of Jackson's first biographer, James Parton: "Andrew Jackson was a patriot, and a traitor. He was the greatest of generals, and wholly ignorant of the art of war. He was the most candid of men, and capable of the profoundest dissimulation. He was a democratic autocrat, an urbane savage, an atrocious saint." Martin Sheen narrates.

In March 1933, within weeks of his inauguration, President Franklin Roosevelt sent legislation to Congress aimed at providing relief for the one out of every four American workers who were unemployed. He proposed the Civilian Conservation Corps (CCC) to provide jobs in natural resource conservation. Over the next decade, the CCC put more than three million young men to work in the nation's forests and parks, planting trees, building flood barriers, fighting fires and maintaining roads and trails. Corps workers lived in camps under quasi-military discipline, and received a wage of 30 dollars per month, 25 of which they were required to send home to their families. This film tells the story of one of the boldest and most popular New Deal experiments, positioning it as a pivotal moment in the emergence of modern environmentalism and federal unemployment relief.

Commando raids, an uncontrollable oil spill, an economy that can't rebound fast enough, and political missteps here, there, and everywhere, tonight on Washington Week. Is anything going right? Oil continues to gush from the ocean floor. President Barack Obama said, "Right now, stopping this oil spill and containing its damage is necessarily the top priority not just of my administration, but I think of the entire country." Gov. Bobby Jindal (R-LA) said, "Every day they wait, every day they make us wait. We're losing our battle to protect our coast." Tony Hayward, CEO, BP OIL said, "I'd like my life back. So there's no one who wants this thing done more than I do." A high sea standoff forces the U.S. to mediate newly inflamed tensions between Israel and the Palestinians. Israeli Prime Min. Benjamin Netanyahu said, "Israel should not be held to a double standard. The Jewish state has a right to defend itself, just like any other state." Dr. Ghassan Al-Khateeb, Palestinian Government Spokesperson said, "We think that Israel should be held accountable for this crime and should be punished." Secretary of State Hillary Clinton said, "The situation in Gaza is unsustainable and unacceptable." The economy adds new jobs, but not enough of them. President Obama said, "While we recognize that our recovery is still in its early stages and that there're going to be ups and downs in the months ahead, things never go completely in a smooth line." And the White House political shop stumbles, again. What's a president to do? We assess the challenges and the distractions with the reporters covering the week: Peter Baker of the New York Times, Michael Duffy of Time Magazine and Doyle McManus of the Los Angeles Times.

Hundreds of millions of dollars being spent on the Gulf Coast disaster and on elections coast to coast, the winners, the losers, and the stalemates, tonight on Washington Week. Two California Republicans triumph. Meg Whitman, CA GOP Gubernatorial Candidate said, "Two businesswomen who know how to create jobs, balance budgets and get things done." While some incumbents fall and some survive. Nevada Gov. Jim Gibbons said, "I stand here humbled and grateful for the four years that the people of Nevada gave me." Sen. Blanche Lincoln (D-AK) said, "The vote of this senator is not for sale and neither is the vote of the people of Arkansas." But outsiders rule. Sharron Angle, GOP Senate Candidate in Nevada said, "We have completed the first step to taking back our U.S. Senate seat." Expensive elections, breakthroughs, and comebacks. What this week's primaries mean for Washington. And the Gulf oil spill turns into a deadly serious numbers game. Rep. Edward Markey (D-MS) said, "It's quite clear that BP has known that this is much more catastrophic right from the beginning." Louisiana Gov. Bobby Jindal said, "It is very frustrating that over 50 days into this they still don't have a reliable estimate of how many oil they've released, how much oil is still out there." Coast Guard ADM. Thad Allen said, "I'm not going to declare victory on anything till I have absolute numbers." What changed and what stayed the same with the reporters covering the stories: John Dickerson of Slate Magazine and CBS News, Alexis Simendinger of National Journal, and Karen Tumulty of the Washington Post.

In March 1933, within weeks of his inauguration, President Franklin Roosevelt sent legislation to Congress aimed at providing relief for the one out of every four American workers who were unemployed. He proposed the Civilian Conservation Corps (CCC) to provide jobs in natural resource conservation. Over the next decade, the CCC put more than three million young men to work in the nation's forests and parks, planting trees, building flood barriers, fighting fires and maintaining roads and trails. Corps workers lived in camps under quasi-military discipline, and received a wage of 30 dollars per month, 25 of which they were required to send home to their families. This film tells the story of one of the boldest and most popular New Deal experiments, positioning it as a pivotal moment in the emergence of modern environmentalism and federal unemployment relief.

"Ferrets: The Pursuit of Excellence" offers an endearing and amusing glimpse at America's most playful, mischievous pets -- not to mention their distinctive owners. At the annual Ferret Buckeye Bash in Columbus, Ohio, the largest and most popular ferret show in the country, hundreds of top breeders, seasoned experts and ferret enthusiasts pamper and parade their pets in a quest for prizes and prestige. FERRETS offers a quirky contrast to the common animal show -- these curious creatures lack the regal air of show cats or the respectable nature of pedigreed dogs -- yet these ferrets are trained, pampered and primed by their doting owners in the hope of taking the top prize in the biggest ferret show in the country.

In September 2002, three skinheads were roaming a park in Rheims, France, looking to "do an Arab," when they settled for a gay man instead. Twenty-nine-year-old François Chenu fought back fiercely, but he was beaten unconscious and thrown into a river, where he drowned. The acclaimed French verite film Beyond Hatred is the story of the crime's aftermath; above all, of the Chenu family's brave and heartrending struggle to seek justice while trying to make sense of such pointless violence and unbearable loss. With remarkable dignity, they fight to transcend hatred and the inevitable desire for revenge.

A HAM radio operator who now lives in Beverly Hills, Florida made contact with another radio hobbyist in Baltimore, Maryland. The second man said he was a NASA engineer and pioneered some early space projects. Before signing off, he promised to send a memento of their conversation. Some time later our Florida contributor received a three inch-square of metallic fabric, one half covered in a mysterious pink powder, along with a hand-drawn diagram. Piecing together information from the radio exchange and notes on the diagram, our contributor believes this could be a piece of an early space satellite. History Detectives host Tukufu Zuberi consults with experts at the NASA Goddard Space Flight Center in Maryland, and visits the Navy Lakehurst Historical Society in New Jersey to see whether this swatch of reflective material ever orbited the earth. Our contributor inherited a peculiar object from his father: a jerry-rigged ski boot with a magnetic metal brick bolted to the bottom. In the 1960s, his father worked as an engineer for Westinghouse, which played a role in the space program. Could this be the prototype for a NASA space boot? The magnet seems to have several layers and wires weaving throughout. The heel of the boot contains a plug. A Florida art curator purchased a mysterious work of art at an online auction: a tiny ceramic chip with six images. The seller told him the tiny images were the works of several prominent artists, including Andy Warhol and Claes Oldenburg. He went on to say that they made this chip as a miniature art museum to attach to the Apollo 12 lunar module launched in November 1969. Did NASA actually deliver the artwork of Andy Warhol to the moon? History Detectives tracks down three eyewitnesses to this historic moment. Gwen Wright talks to the artist behind the miniature museum to learn the incredible story behind this idea and how they shrank the artwork to a minute chip. She meets with an Apollo 12 astronaut; and finally, she talks to the launch pad foreman for Apollo 12 to find out whether Andy Warhol's art went to the moon, and whether it might still be there.

The continuing oil disaster. Apologies everywhere, but not a solution to be found. Plus, the latest on debates on Afghanistan and from the Supreme Court, tonight on Washington Week. Rep. Bart Stupak (D-MI) said, "Truth, the whole truth, nothing but the truth the matter pending before this committee?" Tony Hayward, CEO of BP (British Petroleum) answered, "I do." The oil disaster debate moves to Washington with dramatic hearings." Mr. Hayward said, "If this investigation determines that anytime anyone put cost before safety, then we will take action." Rep. Phil Gingrey (R-GA) said, "Well, with all due respect, Mr. Hayward, I think you're copping out." Mr. Tony Hayward responded, "With respect, sir, we drill hundreds of wells a year all around the world." Sen. Michael Burgess (R - TX) said, "Yes, I know. That's what's scaring me right now." Partial payback. President Barack Obama said, "I'm pleased to announce that BP has agreed to set aside $20 billion to pay claims for damages resulting from this spill." And wild pitches. Carl-Henric Svanberg, Chairman of BP said, "We care about the small people." Rep. Joe Barton (R-TX) said, "It is a tragedy of the first proportion that a private corporation can be subjected to what I would characterize as a shakedown, in this case a $20-billion shakedown. I want to apologize for that misconstrued -- misconception." Yet the oil continues to flow. John Young, Chairman Jefferson Parish Council, Louisiana said, "We're in a war, and at this point in time unfortunately we're losing the battle." While a separate debate rages about a real war. Sen. Lindsey Graham (R-SC) said, "This is June, 2010. Are we winning?" Gen. David Petraeus said, "Winning to a counterinsurgent center means making progress. And in that regard I think that we are winning." And the Supreme Court weighs in on text messaging. Covering the week Charles Babington of the Associated Press, Juliet Eilperin of the Washington Post, Doyle McManus of the Los Angeles Times, and Joan Biskupic of USA Today.

Health care reform was the first big policy deal taken on by the Obama administration. Many say the young president has bet the mid-term elections, possibly his presidency, on the outcome. In a new investigation FRONTLINE goes behind closed doors at the White House, in Congress and the boardrooms of the giant health-care lobby to examine the political battles and costly compromises that defined Barack Obama's endeavor. From early positive efforts, through the bitter battles with the Tea Party, the elation of apparent success at Christmas, to the crushing failure in the Massachusetts Senatorial election, FRONTLINE follows the story and reveals the first in-depth look at how the Obama administration operates. In Obama's Deal, FRONTLINE veteran producer Michael Kirk (Bush's War, Dreams of Obama, Inside the Meltdown, The Warning) provides a sobering expose of the realities of American politics, the power of special interest groups, and the role of money in policy making.

"William Kunstler: Disturbing the Universe" examines the life of this radical attorney from a surprising angle. Kunstler's two daughters from his second marriage grew up lionizing a man already famous for his historic civil rights and anti-war cases. Then, in their teens, they began to be disillusioned by a stubborn man who continued representing some of the most reviled defendants in America -- this time accused rapists and terrorists. In this intimate biography, the Emily and Sarah Kunstler seek to recover the real story of what made their late father one of the most beloved, and hated, lawyers in America.

Do we have the right to end our lives if life itself becomes unbearable, or when we enter the late-stages of painful, terminal illness? The questions, debated for centuries, have only grown more pressing in recent years as medical technology has allowed us to live longer lives, and several U.S. states have legalized physician-assisted suicide. With unique access to Dignitas, the Swiss non-profit that has helped over one thousand people die since 1998, Academy award-winning filmmaker John Zaritsky offers a revealing look a couple facing the most difficult decision of their lives--and lets us see for ourselves as one Chicago native makes the trip to Switzerland for what will become the last day of his life.

The continuing oil disaster. Apologies everywhere, but not a solution to be found. Plus, the latest on debates on Afghanistan and from the Supreme Court, tonight on Washington Week. Rep. Bart Stupak (D-MI) said, "Truth, the whole truth, nothing but the truth the matter pending before this committee?" Tony Hayward, CEO of BP (British Petroleum) answered, "I do." The oil disaster debate moves to Washington with dramatic hearings." Mr. Hayward said, "If this investigation determines that anytime anyone put cost before safety, then we will take action." Rep. Phil Gingrey (R-GA) said, "Well, with all due respect, Mr. Hayward, I think you're copping out." Mr. Tony Hayward responded, "With respect, sir, we drill hundreds of wells a year all around the world." Sen. Michael Burgess (R - TX) said, "Yes, I know. That's what's scaring me right now." Partial payback. President Barack Obama said, "I'm pleased to announce that BP has agreed to set aside $20 billion to pay claims for damages resulting from this spill." And wild pitches. Carl-Henric Svanberg, Chairman of BP said, "We care about the small people." Rep. Joe Barton (R-TX) said, "It is a tragedy of the first proportion that a private corporation can be subjected to what I would characterize as a shakedown, in this case a $20-billion shakedown. I want to apologize for that misconstrued -- misconstruction." Yet the oil continues to flow. John Young, Chairman Jefferson Parish Council, Louisiana said, "We're in a war, and at this point in time unfortunately we're losing the battle." While a separate debate rages about a real war. Sen. Lindsey Graham (R-SC) said, "This is June, 2010. Are we winning?" Gen. David Petraeus said, "Winning to a counterinsurgent center means making progress. And in that regard I think that we are winning." And the Supreme Court weighs in on text messaging. Covering the week Charles Babington of the Associated Press, Juliet Eilperin of the Washington Post, Doyle McManus of the Los Angeles Times, and Joan Biskupic of USA Today.

Cuttlefish are some of the strangest animals on the planet. These shape-shifting creatures can hypnotize their prey, impersonate the opposite sex and even kill with lightning fast speed. More accomplished masters of disguise than any chameleon, they have a remarkable ability to change their skin color - even their shape - to blend into most any background. They have the largest brain-to-body ratio of all the invertebrates. But are they capable of learning and remembering complex tasks? With beautiful underwater footage and in-depth expert interviews, NOVA gets up close and personal with these bizarre and amazing animals.

The continuing oil disaster. Apologies everywhere, but not a solution to be found. Plus, the latest on debates on Afghanistan and from the Supreme Court, tonight on Washington Week. Rep. Bart Stupak (D-MI) said, "Truth, the whole truth, nothing but the truth the matter pending before this committee?" Tony Hayward, CEO of BP (British Petroleum) answered, "I do." The oil disaster debate moves to Washington with dramatic hearings." Mr. Hayward said, "If this investigation determines that anytime anyone put cost before safety, then we will take action." Rep. Phil Gingrey (R-GA) said, "Well, with all due respect, Mr. Hayward, I think you're copping out." Mr. Tony Hayward responded, "With respect, sir, we drill hundreds of wells a year all around the world." Sen. Michael Burgess (R - TX) said, "Yes, I know. That's what's scaring me right now." Partial payback. President Barack Obama said, "I'm pleased to announce that BP has agreed to set aside $20 billion to pay claims for damages resulting from this spill." And wild pitches. Carl-Henric Svanberg, Chairman of BP said, "We care about the small people." Rep. Joe Barton (R-TX) said, "It is a tragedy of the first proportion that a private corporation can be subjected to what I would characterize as a shakedown, in this case a $20-billion shakedown. I want to apologize for that misconstrued -- misconstruction." Yet the oil continues to flow. John Young, Chairman Jefferson Parish Council, Louisiana said, "We're in a war, and at this point in time unfortunately we're losing the battle." While a separate debate rages about a real war. Sen. Lindsey Graham (R-SC) said, "This is June, 2010. Are we winning?" Gen. David Petraeus said, "Winning to a counterinsurgent center means making progress. And in that regard I think that we are winning." And the Supreme Court weighs in on text messaging. Covering the week Charles Babington of the Associated Press, Juliet Eilperin of the Washington Post, Doyle McManus of the Los Angeles Times, and Joan Biskupic of USA Today.

Do we have the right to end our lives if life itself becomes unbearable, or when we enter the late-stages of painful, terminal illness? The questions, debated for centuries, have only grown more pressing in recent years as medical technology has allowed us to live longer lives, and several U.S. states have legalized physician-assisted suicide. With unique access to Dignitas, the Swiss non-profit that has helped over one thousand people die since 1998, Academy award-winning filmmaker John Zaritsky offers a revealing look a couple facing the most difficult decision of their lives--and lets us see for ourselves as one Chicago native makes the trip to Switzerland for what will become the last day of his life.

Health care reform was the first big policy deal taken on by the Obama administration. Many say the young president has bet the mid-term elections, possibly his presidency, on the outcome. In a new investigation FRONTLINE goes behind closed doors at the White House, in Congress and the boardrooms of the giant health-care lobby to examine the political battles and costly compromises that defined Barack Obama's endeavor. From early positive efforts, through the bitter battles with the Tea Party, the elation of apparent success at Christmas, to the crushing failure in the Massachusetts Senatorial election, FRONTLINE follows the story and reveals the first in-depth look at how the Obama administration operates. In Obama's Deal, FRONTLINE veteran producer Michael Kirk (Bush's War, Dreams of Obama, Inside the Meltdown, The Warning) provides a sobering expose of the realities of American politics, the power of special interest groups, and the role of money in policy making.

The continuing oil disaster. Apologies everywhere, but not a solution to be found. Plus, the latest on debates on Afghanistan and from the Supreme Court, tonight on Washington Week. Rep. Bart Stupak (D-MI) said, "Truth, the whole truth, nothing but the truth the matter pending before this committee?" Tony Hayward, CEO of BP (British Petroleum) answered, "I do." The oil disaster debate moves to Washington with dramatic hearings." Mr. Hayward said, "If this investigation determines that anytime anyone put cost before safety, then we will take action." Rep. Phil Gingrey (R-GA) said, "Well, with all due respect, Mr. Hayward, I think you're copping out." Mr. Tony Hayward responded, "With respect, sir, we drill hundreds of wells a year all around the world." Sen. Michael Burgess (R - TX) said, "Yes, I know. That's what's scaring me right now." Partial payback. President Barack Obama said, "I'm pleased to announce that BP has agreed to set aside $20 billion to pay claims for damages resulting from this spill." And wild pitches. Carl-Henric Svanberg, Chairman of BP said, "We care about the small people." Rep. Joe Barton (R-TX) said, "It is a tragedy of the first proportion that a private corporation can be subjected to what I would characterize as a shakedown, in this case a $20-billion shakedown. I want to apologize for that misconstrued -- misconstruction." Yet the oil continues to flow. John Young, Chairman Jefferson Parish Council, Louisiana said, "We're in a war, and at this point in time unfortunately we're losing the battle." While a separate debate rages about a real war. Sen. Lindsey Graham (R-SC) said, "This is June, 2010. Are we winning?" Gen. David Petraeus said, "Winning to a counterinsurgent center means making progress. And in that regard I think that we are winning." And the Supreme Court weighs in on text messaging. Covering the week Charles Babington of the Associated Press, Juliet Eilperin of the Washington Post, Doyle McManus of the Los Angeles Times, and Joan Biskupic of USA Today.

Do we have the right to end our lives if life itself becomes unbearable, or when we enter the late-stages of painful, terminal illness? The questions, debated for centuries, have only grown more pressing in recent years as medical technology has allowed us to live longer lives, and several U.S. states have legalized physician-assisted suicide. With unique access to Dignitas, the Swiss non-profit that has helped over one thousand people die since 1998, Academy award-winning filmmaker John Zaritsky offers a revealing look a couple facing the most difficult decision of their lives--and lets us see for ourselves as one Chicago native makes the trip to Switzerland for what will become the last day of his life.

NOVA investigates the furious scientific debate currently raging over what "Hobbit" bones represent. Are they fossils of a previously unknown primitive branch of the human family? Or are they remains of a dwarf race of modern humans suffering from a strange pathological condition?

In collaboration with National Geographic, NOVA follows the exploits of acclaimed photojournalist James Balog and a scientific team as they deploy time-lapse cameras in risky, remote locations in the Arctic, Alaska, and the Alps. Grappling with blizzards, fickle technology, and climbs up craggy precipices, the team must anchor cameras capable of withstanding sub-zero temperatures and winds up to 170 mph. The goal of Balog's team's perilous expedition: to create a unique photo archive of melting glaciers that could provide a key to understanding their runaway behavior and their potential to drive rising sea levels. Some models now project a one-meter sea level rise over the next century, which could displace millions of people everywhere from Florida to Bangladesh and require trillions of dollars in new coastal infrastructure investments. But, alarmingly, these models don't reflect recent findings that glaciers in Greenland and Antarctica are melting at an ever-faster rate. What explains this alarming acceleration, and just how do you figure out what's happening inside a gigantic wall of ice? In this high-action scientific adventure, NOVA investigates the mystery of the mighty ice sheets that will affect the fate of coastlines around the world.

So, when the American Museum of Natural History's Hayden Planetarium stopped calling Pluto a planet, director Neil deGrasse Tyson found himself at the center of a firestorm--a firestorm led by angry, Pluto-loving elementary school students. But what is it about this cold, distant rock that captures so many hearts? NOVA joins Tyson as he follows the amazing story of its discovery and the captivating science that surrounds this former planet, including the possibility of finding more Pluto-like planets in the mysterious Kuiper belt-an area of icy rocks at the edge of the solar system. From the scientists trying to classify Pluto to die-hard "Pluto-philes," Tyson meets a fascinating cast of characters with just one thing in common: strong opinions about Pluto. Based on Tyson's book of the same name, Pluto Files is an exciting and entertaining look at the solar system's best-loved non-planet.

The continuing oil disaster. Apologies everywhere, but not a solution to be found. Plus, the latest on debates on Afghanistan and from the Supreme Court, tonight on Washington Week. Rep. Bart Stupak (D-MI) said, "Truth, the whole truth, nothing but the truth the matter pending before this committee?" Tony Hayward, CEO of BP (British Petroleum) answered, "I do." The oil disaster debate moves to Washington with dramatic hearings." Mr. Hayward said, "If this investigation determines that anytime anyone put cost before safety, then we will take action." Rep. Phil Gingrey (R-GA) said, "Well, with all due respect, Mr. Hayward, I think you're copping out." Mr. Tony Hayward responded, "With respect, sir, we drill hundreds of wells a year all around the world." Sen. Michael Burgess (R - TX) said, "Yes, I know. That's what's scaring me right now." Partial payback. President Barack Obama said, "I'm pleased to announce that BP has agreed to set aside $20 billion to pay claims for damages resulting from this spill." And wild pitches. Carl-Henric Svanberg, Chairman of BP said, "We care about the small people." Rep. Joe Barton (R-TX) said, "It is a tragedy of the first proportion that a private corporation can be subjected to what I would characterize as a shakedown, in this case a $20-billion shakedown. I want to apologize for that misconstrued -- misconstruction." Yet the oil continues to flow. John Young, Chairman Jefferson Parish Council, Louisiana said, "We're in a war, and at this point in time unfortunately we're losing the battle." While a separate debate rages about a real war. Sen. Lindsey Graham (R-SC) said, "This is June, 2010. Are we winning?" Gen. David Petraeus said, "Winning to a counterinsurgent center means making progress. And in that regard I think that we are winning." And the Supreme Court weighs in on text messaging. Covering the week Charles Babington of the Associated Press, Juliet Eilperin of the Washington Post, Doyle McManus of the Los Angeles Times, and Joan Biskupic of USA Today.

What made America? What makes us? These two questions are at the heart of this series. Harvard scholar Henry Louis Gates, Jr., turns to the latest tools of genealogy and genetics to explore the family histories of 11 renowned Americans. Looking beyond the black experience to the wider immigrant experience, Professor Gates unravels the American tapestry, following the threads of his guests' lives back to their earliest origins around the globe. Along the way, the many stories he uncovers -- of displacement and homecoming, of material success and dispossession, of assimilation and discrimination -- illuminate the American experience. Professor Gates' guests include poet Elizabeth Alexander, who composed and read the poem at President Barack Obama's inauguration, chef Mario Batali, comedian Stephen Colbert, novelist Louise Erdrich, writer Malcolm Gladwell, cellist Yo-Yo Ma, director Mike Nichols, Her Royal Highness Queen Noor, actress Eva Longoria Parker, actress Meryl Streep, figure skater Kristi Yamaguchi, and Martha's Vineyard fisherman William "Buddy" Vanderhoop, who will have his family history researched alongside the series' well-known guests.

The most memorable symbol of the revolution that swept across Europe two decades ago is the November 1989 opening of the Berlin Wall after 28 years. The Wall--A World Divided tells those dramatic events from the perspective of ordinary East Germans whose lives were caught up in the wheels of Cold War politics. And it presents the lesser-known story of how the autumn of 1989 set the stage for three world leaders--George Bush, Mikhail Gorbachev, and Helmut Kohl--to come together and guide the completely unanticipated spiraling series of events that ended the Cold War.

TUBA U: BASSO PROFUNDO follows an unusual 22-piece musical ensemble into the recording studio, across the U.S. and onto the stage of renowned Carnegie Hall. Featuring the career of tuba maestro Winston Morris, the compositions of Pulitzer Prize-winning composer Gunther Schuller, a visit to German tuba makers and the 100-member Tubas of Mass Destruction, this is the anatomy of one instrument that speaks to the dedication and discipline shared by players of all instruments. The program examines the value of the individual within the context of the ensemble and assures viewers that some unexpected and unusual things are indeed worthy of a lifetime of commitment. TUBA U dispels assumptions of size, value and ability, addressing prejudice - even if a very quirky one. Filled with "who knew?" moments, the documentary takes a look at the history, physicality and personalities of the tuba.

Stanley McChrystal is out. David Petraeus is in. What was the ousted general thinking? And what happens now? We tackle those questions tonight on Washington Week. President Barack Obama said, "I welcome debate among my team, but I won't tolerate division." Adm. Mike Mullen said, "We do not have the right nor should we ever assume the prerogative to cast doubt upon the ability or mock the motives of our civilian leaders, elected or appointed." Sen. Lindsey Graham (R-SC) said, "I've been a military officer most of my adult life and there's lines you can't cross. Those lines were crossed." There he goes. Sen. Bill Nelson (D-FL) said, "I think Petraeus is a brilliant choice. I think he is the guy who clearly is schooled in counterinsurgency." Here he comes. As the war in Afghanistan rages, the President gets a commander-in-chief moment. And just as he leaves for an international economic meeting in Canada today, Congress reaches agreement on Wall Street reform. Rep. Barney Frank (D-MA) said, "With the votes of the House and Senate I declare the bill passed and the conference committee is now adjourned." And not a moment too soon, as polls show the president's approval slipping and Republicans get good news in South Carolina. Nikki Haley, GOP Candidate for South Carolina Governor: This is the movement about the idea of government being open and accountable to the people. Setting the stage for critical midterm elections. Covering the week: Martha Raddatz of ABC News, Michael Duffy of Time Magazine, Eamon Javers of CNBC, and James Barnes of National Journal.

"William Kunstler: Disturbing the Universe" examines the life of this radical attorney from a surprising angle. Kunstler's two daughters from his second marriage grew up lionizing a man already famous for his historic civil rights and anti-war cases. Then, in their teens, they began to be disillusioned by a stubborn man who continued representing some of the most reviled defendants in America -- this time accused rapists and terrorists. In this intimate biography, the Emily and Sarah Kunstler seek to recover the real story of what made their late father one of the most beloved, and hated, lawyers in America.

Do we have the right to end our lives if life itself becomes unbearable, or when we enter the late-stages of painful, terminal illness? The questions, debated for centuries, have only grown more pressing in recent years as medical technology has allowed us to live longer lives, and several U.S. states have legalized physician-assisted suicide. With unique access to Dignitas, the Swiss non-profit that has helped over one thousand people die since 1998, Academy award-winning filmmaker John Zaritsky offers a revealing look a couple facing the most difficult decision of their lives--and lets us see for ourselves as one Chicago native makes the trip to Switzerland for what will become the last day of his life.

What made America? What makes us? These two questions are at the heart of this series. Harvard scholar Henry Louis Gates, Jr., turns to the latest tools of genealogy and genetics to explore the family histories of 11 renowned Americans. Looking beyond the black experience to the wider immigrant experience, Professor Gates unravels the American tapestry, following the threads of his guests' lives back to their earliest origins around the globe. Along the way, the many stories he uncovers -- of displacement and homecoming, of material success and dispossession, of assimilation and discrimination -- illuminate the American experience. Professor Gates' guests include poet Elizabeth Alexander, who composed and read the poem at President Barack Obama's inauguration, chef Mario Batali, comedian Stephen Colbert, novelist Louise Erdrich, writer Malcolm Gladwell, cellist Yo-Yo Ma, director Mike Nichols, Her Royal Highness Queen Noor, actress Eva Longoria Parker, actress Meryl Streep, figure skater Kristi Yamaguchi, and Martha's Vineyard fisherman William "Buddy" Vanderhoop, who will have his family history researched alongside the series' well-known guests.

Long before the days of giant theme parks, the United States had many, many amusement parks where families gathered for a cool escape on a hot summer day. This program celebrates these pre-Disney parks, visiting places like Playland in Rye, New York; Holiday World in Santa Claus, Indiana; and California's Santa Cruz Beach Boardwalk, where vacationers can still reach for the brass ring on the merry-go-round. The special also checks out some old wooden roller coasters and other classic rides.

Stanley McChrystal is out. David Petraeus is in. What was the ousted general thinking? And what happens now? We tackle those questions tonight on Washington Week. President Barack Obama said, "I welcome debate among my team, but I won't tolerate division." Adm. Mike Mullen said, "We do not have the right nor should we ever assume the prerogative to cast doubt upon the ability or mock the motives of our civilian leaders, elected or appointed." Sen. Lindsey Graham (R-SC) said, "I've been a military officer most of my adult life and there's lines you can't cross. Those lines were crossed." There he goes. Sen. Bill Nelson (D-FL) said, "I think Petraeus is a brilliant choice. I think he is the guy who clearly is schooled in counterinsurgency." Here he comes. As the war in Afghanistan rages, the President gets a commander-in-chief moment. And just as he leaves for an international economic meeting in Canada today, Congress reaches agreement on Wall Street reform. Rep. Barney Frank (D-MA) said, "With the votes of the House and Senate I declare the bill passed and the conference committee is now adjourned." And not a moment too soon, as polls show the president's approval slipping and Republicans get good news in South Carolina. Nikki Haley, GOP Candidate for South Carolina Governor: This is the movement about the idea of government being open and accountable to the people. Setting the stage for critical midterm elections. Covering the week: Martha Raddatz of ABC News, Michael Duffy of Time Magazine, Eamon Javers of CNBC, and James Barnes of National Journal.

FRONTLINE/WORLD investigates one of its own stories, "The Play Pump," which promised to use a merry-go-round and the power of children to help meet the dire need for fresh water in southern Africa. After FRONTLINE/WORLD first aired the story in 2005, major donors in the United States -- and the U.S. government itself -- launched a multimillion-dollar campaign to install the device in thousands of African schools and villages. Now, correspondent Amy Costello investigates what happened to those communities, as the promise of the PlayPump fell short and the device's biggest American boosters began to back away from a technology they had once championed. Also in this episode: Adam Davidson of NPR's "Planet Money" team looks at a new idea in post-disaster relief being tried out in Haiti and a profile of a painter who travels to the remote jungles of West Papua in search of the "clever bird."

What made America? What makes us? These two questions are at the heart of this series. Harvard scholar Henry Louis Gates, Jr., turns to the latest tools of genealogy and genetics to explore the family histories of 11 renowned Americans. Looking beyond the black experience to the wider immigrant experience, Professor Gates unravels the American tapestry, following the threads of his guests' lives back to their earliest origins around the globe. Along the way, the many stories he uncovers -- of displacement and homecoming, of material success and dispossession, of assimilation and discrimination -- illuminate the American experience. Professor Gates' guests include poet Elizabeth Alexander, who composed and read the poem at President Barack Obama's inauguration, chef Mario Batali, comedian Stephen Colbert, novelist Louise Erdrich, writer Malcolm Gladwell, cellist Yo-Yo Ma, director Mike Nichols, Her Royal Highness Queen Noor, actress Eva Longoria Parker, actress Meryl Streep, figure skater Kristi Yamaguchi, and Martha's Vineyard fisherman William "Buddy" Vanderhoop, who will have his family history researched alongside the series' well-known guests.

Do we have the right to end our lives if life itself becomes unbearable, or when we enter the late-stages of painful, terminal illness? The questions, debated for centuries, have only grown more pressing in recent years as medical technology has allowed us to live longer lives, and several U.S. states have legalized physician-assisted suicide. With unique access to Dignitas, the Swiss non-profit that has helped over one thousand people die since 1998, Academy award-winning filmmaker John Zaritsky offers a revealing look a couple facing the most difficult decision of their lives--and lets us see for ourselves as one Chicago native makes the trip to Switzerland for what will become the last day of his life.

The fifth inning looks at baseball's desperate attempts to survive the Great Depression and Babe Ruth's fading career, while a new generation of stars, including Joe DiMaggio and Ted Williams, is on the rise. It also presents the parallel world of the Negro Leagues, which thrived in the shadow of the Major Leagues. The inning culminates with the greatest showdown in the history of the Negro Leagues: Satchel Paige, arguably the best pitcher ever, against Josh Gibson, "the black Babe Ruth," in the Negro League World Series.

Stanley McChrystal is out. David Petraeus is in. What was the ousted general thinking? And what happens now? We tackle those questions tonight on Washington Week. President Barack Obama said, "I welcome debate among my team, but I won't tolerate division." Adm. Mike Mullen said, "We do not have the right nor should we ever assume the prerogative to cast doubt upon the ability or mock the motives of our civilian leaders, elected or appointed." Sen. Lindsey Graham (R-SC) said, "I've been a military officer most of my adult life and there's lines you can't cross. Those lines were crossed." There he goes. Sen. Bill Nelson (D-FL) said, "I think Petraeus is a brilliant choice. I think he is the guy who clearly is schooled in counterinsurgency." Here he comes. As the war in Afghanistan rages, the President gets a commander-in-chief moment. And just as he leaves for an international economic meeting in Canada today, Congress reaches agreement on Wall Street reform. Rep. Barney Frank (D-MA) said, "With the votes of the House and Senate I declare the bill passed and the conference committee is now adjourned." And not a moment too soon, as polls show the president's approval slipping and Republicans get good news in South Carolina. Nikki Haley, GOP Candidate for South Carolina Governor: This is the movement about the idea of government being open and accountable to the people. Setting the stage for critical midterm elections. Covering the week: Martha Raddatz of ABC News, Michael Duffy of Time Magazine, Eamon Javers of CNBC, and James Barnes of National Journal.

The fifth inning looks at baseball's desperate attempts to survive the Great Depression and Babe Ruth's fading career, while a new generation of stars, including Joe DiMaggio and Ted Williams, is on the rise. It also presents the parallel world of the Negro Leagues, which thrived in the shadow of the Major Leagues. The inning culminates with the greatest showdown in the history of the Negro Leagues: Satchel Paige, arguably the best pitcher ever, against Josh Gibson, "the black Babe Ruth," in the Negro League World Series.

Do we have the right to end our lives if life itself becomes unbearable, or when we enter the late-stages of painful, terminal illness? The questions, debated for centuries, have only grown more pressing in recent years as medical technology has allowed us to live longer lives, and several U.S. states have legalized physician-assisted suicide. With unique access to Dignitas, the Swiss non-profit that has helped over one thousand people die since 1998, Academy award-winning filmmaker John Zaritsky offers a revealing look a couple facing the most difficult decision of their lives--and lets us see for ourselves as one Chicago native makes the trip to Switzerland for what will become the last day of his life.

The most memorable symbol of the revolution that swept across Europe two decades ago is the November 1989 opening of the Berlin Wall after 28 years. The Wall--A World Divided tells those dramatic events from the perspective of ordinary East Germans whose lives were caught up in the wheels of Cold War politics. And it presents the lesser-known story of how the autumn of 1989 set the stage for three world leaders--George Bush, Mikhail Gorbachev, and Helmut Kohl--to come together and guide the completely unanticipated spiraling series of events that ended the Cold War.
