PBS Utah's service to our community goes far beyond what you see on your TV screen. In 2021 we piloted a program with the Utah State Library's Bookmobiles in rural Utah to provide high-end cooking tools and cookbooks to families who want to be creative with their cooking but aren't ready to purchase certain items like manual pasta makers and high-end garlic presses and graters. This year, thanks to a grant from the Create Channel, we are expanding to the Salt Lake County Library System beginning this month. And to celebrate this, Bridget Lancaster from America's Test Kitchen and Cook's Country is visiting Utah! To learn more about her visit and other ways we're celebrating the expansion of this program, visit pbsutah.org/events. You can enjoy the best cooking, travel, how-to, and lifestyle programs on the Create Channel 24/7 on channel 7.4, or Comcast 393.

Our very popular Book Club In a Box program has also been active for a few years now. We have three new book club boxes that will release this month for all you readers out there. Each book club box contains all the tools you need to host a successful book club — and each book is paired with PBS Utah video content to deepen your dialogue. You can learn more about the new boxes and register today at pbsutah.org/bookclub.

On Thursday, August 3, at 7 p.m., PBS Utah is proud to present our latest collaboration with KUER, NPR Utah. RadioWest Films on PBS Utah: Portraits features three beautiful and surprising short films, introduced by Doug Fabrizio. If you missed the first installment of RadioWest Films on PBS Utah earlier this year, you'll get a chance to catch an encore immediately following the new film. You can check out even more short films at pbsutah.org/radiowestfilms or by searching RadioWest Films on the PBS App.

And when it comes to great filmmaking, we want to invite you to send your short masterpieces to us as part of our Iconic Utah Film Festival. Tell us what you think is iconic about Utah in three minutes or less in your own creative way to be part of our film festival on August 30. The deadline to submit your video is August 7. Learn more at pbsutah.org/iconicutah.

We provide the following four channels

 Channel 7.1 • SD Comcast 7 • HD Comcast 658

SPONSOR PROFILE

Red Butte Garden is one of the largest botanical gardens in the Intermountain West and, together with the University of Utah, is the State Arboretum. Located on 100 acres in the foothills on the eastern edge of campus, Red Butte Garden offers year-round colorful displays, hiking trails, and panoramic views.

With more than 21 acres of developed gardens and five miles of trails winding through an extensive Natural Area, Red Butte Garden is the perfect place to connect with nature in the city. The Garden, which is community-funded, is renowned for its numerous plant collections, display gardens, 560,000 springtime blooming bulbs, including a vast collection of daffodils; gorgeous private event spaces; award-winning, horticulture-based educational programs; and a world-class outdoor concert series.

Enjoy time with family and friends, get ideas for your own garden, and experience the physical and mental health benefits of time spent in nature. Grow your mind with botanically inspired workshops and classes on gardening, cooking, and outdoor health and wellness.

Red Butte Garden is open year-round to the public. Entrance fees are $7 for children age 3-17, $12 for seniors and military personnel with ID, and $14 for adults. The garden is located at 300 Wakara Way in Salt Lake City. It is open from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. (with the exception of concert days, when the garden closes at 5 p.m.) through the end of August. Members get discounts on classes, gift shop items, and concerts. Details at redbuttegarden.org.
