Infrastructure Funding

Anthony Hennen, a journalist for The Center Square, joins host Samuel Chen to discuss infrastructure funding in the state of Pennsylvania. Pennsylvania ranks 15th worst in the nation for roads; 57% of interstates are past the age of needing reconstruction work, which has an estimated cost of $40 billion over the next 15 years. There are over 30,000 bridges in the state, between state owned routes and locally owned routes, with 14% classified as “structurally deficient”. With all that work to be done and high costs to do it, From gas taxes, bridge tolls and user fee and a packaged tax, Anthony and Sam lay out what some of the past and newly proposed ways to fund these efforts across the state look like and how they will effect commuters.

SNAP's Fiscal Cliff?

Anthony Hennen, a journalist for The Center Square, joins host Samuel Chen to discuss SNAP benefits, expanded benefits, the fiscal “cliff” beneficiaries may face, and how these impact the work force. SNAP (Supplemental Nutrition Assistance Program) monthly benefits have risen from $218 million to $456 million; $233 per individual to $456 per individual from 2019 to 2022, with a large increase occurring during the pandemic. A two-person household making $3,502 monthly can receive $516 per month, but making $3,503 monthly makes them ineligible for everything; many are wondering if this is keeping people from finding employment. Some people expect this to improve after the emergency declarations are over, others do not and say this is just one stop in a systematic move toward benefits over work. Sam and Anthony break down who what some people are putting forward as solutions, including a minimum wage increase or a work requirement to receive benefits.

Collegiate Recruiting in the NIL Era

Gordon Voit, a former sports journalist, joins host Samuel Chen to discuss the changes that have come to college sports and their collegiate recruiting since student athletes have been able to monetize their name, image and likeness. Gordon puts forward the view that college football became so lucrative that it could no longer frame itself as an amateur endeavor that is immune to antitrust laws. It was living with that uncomfortable marriage of amateur and professional for decades. With earning possibilities given to the players in recent years, he explains how this will impact the ways colleges recruit student athletes and where it may head like in the future.

Fostering Homes with Kindness

This week on Face the Issue, Sam Chen speaks with Jenae Holtzhafer, the founder and exec. dir. of The Kindness Project, and Takyra Batz, a board member of The Kindness Project. Discussions include foster care, the challenges the children and families face in foster care as well as what The Kindness Project is doing to aid them by providing free, essential items to those families.

Children in foster care can often struggle with feelings of not belonging, being pulled out of what they know and enter a new world of new people. One of the main goals for The Kindness Project is to make a child feel safe and build a relationship with them when they come in. There are approximately 14,000 PA children currently in foster care. Just from the vantage point of The Kindness Project, they have seen the number of children served locally double, they say points to an increase in the amount of children in foster care in need for support.

This interview points foster families to a local resource in aiding them obtain clothes, shoes, school supplies, hygiene items and more, as well as a place where viewers can volunteer to help these families.
