The Team

Advisory Board

Melissa Boteach

Vice President for Income Security and Child Care/Early Learning, National Women's Law Center

Melissa Boteach, Vice President for Income Security and Child Care/Early Learning, oversees NWLC's advocacy, policy, and public education strategies to ensure that all women and families have the income and supports they need to thrive. Prior to joining NWLC, Melissa spent nearly a decade at Center for American Progress (CAP), where she founded and led the Poverty to Prosperity Program, growing it from a team of 1 to 17, establishing projects to center the voices of low-income families; leading the team's message and narrative change work, overseeing intersectional advocacy campaigns, and developing bold ideas to cut poverty & expand opportunity that resulted in new legislation, executive actions, and other progress. Melissa also served as policy editor on The Shriver Report, a book and multimedia platform by Maria Shriver and Center for American Progress on the 1 in 3 U.S. women on the financial brink, and solutions to help them push back. Previously, she worked at The Jewish Council for Public Affairs (JCPA), where she led interfaith antipoverty campaigns. She has testified before Congress and frequently serves as a media spokesperson on issues relating to economic opportunity. A Harry Truman and George J. Mitchell Scholar, Melissa has a Master's of Public Policy from The George Washington University, a master's of Equality Studies from University College Dublin where she studied women in social movements, and bachelor's degrees from University of Maryland in government and Spanish.

Scarlette Bustos

Community Organizer and Activist

Scarlette began her career working with local foster kids from 2004 – 2011 with a second job as a youth theater instructor. She transitioned to business management with a second job doing campaign work for CA Congressional District 7, historically one of the closest races in the country.

She is most proud of her activism, and volunteer work as a community organizer. Scarlette happily spends her free time supporting and empowering like-minded voters in other states through her executive board membership with Organize Win Legislate Sacramento 501(c)(4). She puts her stage directing experience to good use by organizing local protests, and marches, and coordinating with national progressive organizations. Scarlette is the founder of Peace Project Coalition, which acts as a local online hub for community organizers.
