Guest: Co-Founder Matt Soeth

#ICANHELP started when a student made a fake social media page about a teacher. The page gained over 1000 followers and was the center of school drama for two weeks. Finally, at the end of that two weeks, a student turned in the person who made the page and it was taken down. As educators, we experienced the rapid increase in social media use and the stress and anxiety that negative online behavior puts on school cultures. To date, #ICANHELP has worked with students to take down over 800 pages dealing with harassment, impersonation, bullying, and more. We work closely with schools in training students on how to respond to cyber issues.
