O.B. Date:
Service: PBS-PLUS
Format: News

This week Think Tank with Ben Wattenberg takes a look at "Irving Berlin's America," Part Two of a two-part show. From Ragtime to Swing and from Broadway to Hollywood, Irving Berlin's music defined American songwriting for more than half a century. Songs like "God Bless America," "There's No Business Like Show Business," "Cheek to Cheek," and "White Christmas." Fully half of his eight hundred and ninety-nine published tunes went on to become hits. Two hundred and eighty-two reached the topten on the popular charts; thirty-five went to number one. Berlin's music reflects an almost instinctive understanding of the culture and the early events of what has been called the American century. His songs capture the heart of small town America and the brass of Broadway. Who was Irving Berlin? What is there about his music that still stirs and unites Americans? To find out, Think Tank is joined by Linda Emmet, the second of Irving Berlin's three daughters, and music historian Robert Kimball, co-editors of the just-published book, "The Complete Lyrics of Irving Berlin," and Philip Furia, professor at the University of North Carolina at Wilmington and author of "Irving Berlin, a Life in Song."

The Great Train Robbery, considered by many historians to be the first Western film, premiered a century ago in 1903. In the years that followed, generations of filmmakers turned again and again to the stories from the frontier--the conquest of Indian land, the California Gold Rush, the expansion of the transcontinental railroad and all of the other tales of rugged individualists settling a wild land. Did Hollywood's silver dreams reflect fact or legend? What do Westerns tell us about America?

"New Orleans was the birthplace of jazz," George Buck asserts. "Other places in the South they didn't allow the slaves to play drums because they were afraid that they might send messages, you see, for a revolt. In New Orleans, just like it is today, everything goes. You have dances, you have Congo Square where everything started." George H. Buck, Jr. runs a non-profit association that maintains a collection of early jazz recordings. Listen to five tunes from the early days of jazz and read one New Orleanian's thoughts on the origins of jazz. His love of music and his love of his hometown shine through.

Harmonica virtuoso DeFord Bailey was one of the first stars of the Grand Ole Opry. Yet history knows almost nothing of this lost legend. In the 1930s, at the height of Jim Crow, rising country stars like Bill Monroe and Roy Acuff would take DeFord on the road because they knew that his name and talent would draw crowds. Because his medium was radio, listeners never knew that DeFord was black until they saw him live. He would often sacrifice comfort, dignity and safety to travel and perform. Considered one of the most unexplained events in Grand Ole Opry history, DeFord left the stage in the early 1940s and refused to perform professionally. This half-hour documentary tells the story of DeFord's career and early departure from the stage, and reveals how black musicians have influenced many legends of country music.

What does art mean to you? Wynton Marsalis, the highly acclaimed jazz musician and composer highlighted in this program says, "The arts are created to give us an objective way to look at ourselves." This In the Mix special features diverse teens who describe how arts education has had a positive impact on their attitudes, emotions, behavior, academic and even athletic performance as well as their relationships with peers and parents. It also highlights creative ways in which schools are making arts education available in the face of budget cuts. Segments include: Wynton Marsalis and teens who participate in the national Lincoln Center High School Jazz Competition; a Los Angeles mentoring program that teaches poetry, songwriting and more; a dance program available to high school students in Rochester, New York; and Urban Academy, which integrates many forms of the arts into their curriculum.

Filmmaker Byron Hurt, a life-long hip-hop fan, was watching rap music videos on BET when he realized that each video was nearly identical. Guys in fancy cars threw money at the camera while scantily clad women danced in the background. As he discovered how stereotypical rap videos had become, Hurt, a former college quarterback turned activist, decided to make a film about the gender politics of hip-hop, the music and the culture that he grew up with. "The more I grew and the more I learned about sexism and violence and homophobia, the more those lyrics became unacceptable to me," he says. "And I began to become more conflicted about the music that I loved." The result is HIP-HOP: Beyond Beats and Rhymes, a riveting documentary that tackles issues of masculinity, sexism, violence and homophobia in today's hip-hop culture.

This film profiles the lives of A.P., Sara and Maybelle Carter, the "first family of country music," beginning with their childhood and following their story through 1943, when they stopped playing and recording together. Their music solaced a nation during the darkest days of the depression. The words to their songs captured the painful and moving stories of poor America's history and proved that simple songs about ordinary people are as timeless, moving and relevant as the most studied classics in history. The Carter Family's songs and style remain the most copied in American folk and country music, influencing artists across all genres, including Bob Dylan, Willie Nelson, Johnny Cash, Emmylou Harris, Ray Charles, Linda Ronstadt and Sheryl Crow.

A FISH STORY is the tale of two women who lead their communities in a battle for control of the ocean. Angela Sanfilippo of Gloucester, Massachusetts, and Shareen Davis of Chatham, Massachusetts were born into fishing families and married men who continue to make a living from the sea. Fishing defines who they are and has sustained their communities for generations. But their way of life is threatened when a powerful coalition of national environmental groups file a lawsuit that could put hundreds of fishermen out of business. Three hundred years of fishing tradition and the health of the ocean hangs in the balance.

A new cancer-fighting vaccine holds life-saving promise for young women, but debate over its use is raising tough questions at the crossroads of medicine and morality. NOW investigates the controversy over Gardasil, a new vaccine developed by the pharmaceutical giant Merck that blocks certain high-risk strains of the sexually-transmitted human papillomavirus (HPV) which cause 70% of cervical cancers. Just weeks ago, Texas Governor Rick Perry issued a controversial executive order requiring all girls entering sixth grade to be vaccinated with Gardasil, with opt-out exceptions. Some 20 other states are considering similar action. But many critics feel that mandating these vaccinations infringes on parental rights and may encourage risky sexual behavior among young people. Others argue that the rush to inoculation is too hasty and that more medical review is required. Some also wonder if Merck's powerful political influence inappropriately prejudiced state government decisions. Under criticism, Merck suspended its lobbying efforts for the vaccination mandate this past Tuesday. NOW travels to Michigan, a flashpoint of the debate, to uncover more about the issue and discuss its human consequences with doctors, local politicians, and private citizens, including a young mother living with cervical cancer brought on by HPV. The moral dilemma of requiring a life-saving vaccine.

The financial scandals of the last five years have given many American corporations a bad name. From Enron to Global Crossing, from Arthur Andersen to Merrill Lynch, big firms have been accused and sometimes convicted of financial skullduggery in all its forms. This has hurt many Americans - most of us own securities. Federal and state governments have passed new legislation aimed at curbing accounting fraud, but some say the regulations go too far --- others say, not far enough. But in the meantime, the stock market continues doing fairly well - despite chaotic global conditions. And abroad, America is still seen as a safe haven for investment. Has Wall Street become over-regulated? Or has recent legislation been the strong medicine big business needs to keep from self-destructing?

Bill Gates and Warren Buffett, the two richest men in America, are close friends. Though a generation apart in age and founders of two very different businesses, the two have deep admiration and affection for each other. They also share a common sense of responsibility to aggressively use their wealth to improve the world. Gates favors health, while Buffett focuses on nuclear disarmament. Occasionally, they get together with members of the next generation of business leaders to answer their questions. On September 30, the two men spent the day at the University of Nebraska at Lincoln, where they filled the Lied Center with students and faculty from the College of Business Administration. This high-definition program captures the energy, intelligence and humor of the event.

Can capitalism be saved from its own excesses? NOW's David Brancaccio talks with a former Fortune 500 CEO who prescribes a cure for self-serving corporate leaders prone to abandoning rules of right and wrong -- at great peril to their companies, their communities, and the environment. Bill George's new book, "True North," provides insight and inspiration from 125 top U.S. business leaders across a wide spectrum of industries. "I think we've been choosing boards of directors and many wrong leaders for the wrong reason," George says. "We choose people for their image, their charisma, their style and we should be choosing them for their integrity, for their character, and their substance." What's wrong with American capitalism and how to fix it.

A new cancer-fighting vaccine holds life-saving promise for young women, but debate over its use is raising tough questions at the crossroads of medicine and morality. NOW investigates the controversy over Gardasil, a new vaccine developed by the pharmaceutical giant Merck that blocks certain high-risk strains of the sexually-transmitted human papillomavirus (HPV) which cause 70% of cervical cancers. Just weeks ago, Texas Governor Rick Perry issued a controversial executive order requiring all girls entering sixth grade to be vaccinated with Gardasil, with opt-out exceptions. Some 20 other states are considering similar action. But many critics feel that mandating these vaccinations infringes on parental rights and may encourage risky sexual behavior among young people. Others argue that the rush to inoculation is too hasty and that more medical review is required. Some also wonder if Merck's powerful political influence inappropriately prejudiced state government decisions. Under criticism, Merck suspended its lobbying efforts for the vaccination mandate this past Tuesday. NOW travels to Michigan, a flashpoint of the debate, to uncover more about the issue and discuss its human consequences with doctors, local politicians, and private citizens, including a young mother living with cervical cancer brought on by HPV. The moral dilemma of requiring a life-saving vaccine.

The amazing life story of Nobel Prize winning economist Milton Friedman can be complete and effectively told only when integrated with stories of the impact of his ideas here in the United States and throughout the world. No one person in the 20th century had such an impact on economic thinking worldwide, as has Milton Friedman. Yet his is a most unlikely story that he credits, in large measure, to "luck."

The financial scandals of the last five years have given many American corporations a bad name. From Enron to Global Crossing, from Arthur Andersen to Merrill Lynch, big firms have been accused and sometimes convicted of financial skulduggery in all its forms. This has hurt many Americans - most of us own securities. Federal and state governments have passed new legislation aimed at curbing accounting fraud, but some say the regulations go too far --- others say, not far enough. But in the meantime, the stock market continues doing fairly well - despite chaotic global conditions. And abroad, America is still seen as a safe haven for investment. Has Wall Street become over-regulated? Or has recent legislation been the strong medicine big business needs to keep from self-destructing?

Lucky Severson reports on the debate over organized efforts by a growing number of religious families across America to push for home schooling over public education; Kim Lawton talks with renowned pastor Dr. Gardner Taylor about his lifelong ministry and the "art" of preaching. Cover Story: "Home Schooling Movement" -- The number of children who are being home-schooled in the U.S. has grown dramatically over the past 10 years. Today, more than two million are being taught at home. A majority of parents opting for home schooling believe that the current public education system is fatally flawed and that a new system of Christian public education is needed -- without government involvement. But critics claim that home schooling may well prevent students from becoming well-rounded citizens by not allowing for proper socialization and exposure to the world of democracy that is offered in a public school setting. Lucky Severson explores the debate over organized efforts by a growing number of religious families to advocate for home schooling over public education.

There's no question teens are overweight and don't get enough exercise. In this program, teen reporters point out the current and future dangers of an unhealthy lifestyle, such as heart disease, cancer and type 2 diabetes. To help viewers make smart choices, they give easy to use information about reading labels to check the fat and sugar in food; ways to exercise at home; how to change family habits; and much more. They also visit a school that makes nutrition and fitness part of the curriculum; and a Boys & Girls Club where middle school teens learn nutrition basics and fun activities. Through humor, surprising facts and compelling personal stories, teens and parents see how they can also gain more energy and self-esteem through a healthy lifestyle.

unhealthy lifestyle, such as heart disease, cancer and type 2 diabetes. To help viewers make smart choices, they give easy to use information about reading labels to check the fat and sugar in food; ways to exercise at home; how to change family habits; and much more. They also visit a school that makes nutrition and fitness part of the curriculum; and a Boys & Girls Club where middle school teens learn nutrition basics and fun activities. Through humor, surprising facts and compelling personal stories, teens and parents see how they can also gain more energy and self-esteem through a healthy lifestyle.

What makes a school worth going to? Four youth media teams set out to answer this important question. Working in collaboration with producers from Learning Matters, a documentary production company that focuses on youth and learning, the youth production teams created short personal documentaries that present authentic youth perspectives about their schools. Thomas, in Espanola, NM, does poorly in academic subjects until, in a school arts program, he discovers previously unrecognized skills and gains the confidence to tackle more academic subjects. In Evanston, IL, students discover that excellent teaching requires a mixture of inspiring pedagogy, emotional coaching and a strong dose of personalized attention. Students in San Antonio highlight a magnet school with only 450 students, teachers and administrators. Finally, Perpich Center for Arts Education emerges as a beacon of progress, peace and purpose as it provides academic and personal security for students in Minnesota. These pieces depict an academic and creative road trip throughout the American public school system showing signs of hope and success. Students ultimately turn the camera on themselves and provide a blueprint for improving educational experiences for their peers.

Are high-priced universities short-changing their workers? This week, NOW examines the fight for a "living wage" -- the pay needed to cover an actual week's worth of living -- on the Nashville, Tennessee campus of Vanderbilt University. The chancellor there earns $1.2 million a year, the endowment is $3 billion, but some of the school's lowest-paid workers -- groundskeepers, custodians, and dining service workers -- earn less than $8.00 an hour. Is the university really sensitive to their basic needs? NOW Senior Correspondent Maria Hinojosa reports that with the help of student activists and public figures like actor Danny Glover, the workers recently won a wage increase. "We have our home here. And I'm fighting -- we're both fighting to hold on to it," says Vanderbilt custodian Dewayne Arbogast. "And the only way we can do that is to make sure Vanderbilt continues to pay us adequately."

2007 beckons in Congress, at the White House, on foreign policy, on the campaign trail, and at the Supreme Court. Our panelists tell you what to watch for this year, tonight on "Washington Week." Rep. Nancy Pelosi (D-Ca) said, "We are pledging to uphold the highest ethical standards, the most honest, most open Congress in history." Mr. John Harwood said, "There's a lot of sentiment for a new kind of politics." Mr. Charles Babington said, "Well, it's a huge change. I mean, the Democrats have been on the outs for 12 years." Ms. Karen Tumulty said, "The Republicans are now freed of being in charge of anything, at least on Capitol Hill." Mr. Jeffrey Birnbaum claims, "There are going to be investigations weekly." President George W. Bush said, "We enter this New Year clear-eyed about the challenges." Ms. Martha Raddatz said, "They're recalibrating everything." Mr. Michael Duffy said, "In a war now that is entering its fourth year." Mr. Peter Baker said, "Lock, President Bush's numbers tumbled to as low as any president of the modern era." Mr. Doyle Mcmanus said, "This White House has been politically enormously acute in the past. This is still the White House of Karl Rove." Ms. Alexis Simendinger claims, "The President's prescription for 2007 is to just keep on doing, just keep on working; try, try, try." Secretary Condoleezza Rice said, "We want to achieve this and achieve it as soon as possible." Ms. Andrea Mitchell said, "In 2007, there's going to be a big push by Condoleezza Rice to try to accomplish something in Middle East diplomacy." Ms. Helene Cooper said, "America's standing has definitely gone down, particularly in the Mideast." Mr. Mcmanus said, "I think there's a one-word answer: Iraq." Mr. David Broder, " - which is going to, I'm afraid, consume a lot of our attention and energy and be the source of much grief in 2007." Senator Hillary Clinton claims, "I am practically speechless." Senator John McCain says, "How are you, sir?" Senator Barack Obama declaims, "I am fired up." Mr. James Barnes said, "My guess is you'll see at least half dozen to eight in both parties will be out stomping around." Mr. Dan Balz said, "The price tag on this election is the biggest we've ever seen." Justice John G. Roberts said (From tape.), "The purpose of the Equal Protection Clause is to ensure that people are treated as individuals." Mr. Pete Williams said, "This is a court that is both more open and more cautious." Ms. Linda Greenhouse said, "Between now and June, we'll get some answers."

The big pushback. Support crumbles for the war in Iraq. What happens next, tonight on "Washington Week." President George Bush said, "The situation in Iraq is unacceptable to the American people and it is unacceptable to me." And across party lines it is apparently also unacceptable to many members of Congress. Sen. Joseph Biden (D-DE) said, "The president's strategy it's not a solution. Secretary Rice, I believe it's a tragic mistake." Sen. Chuck Hagel (R-NE) said, "This speech given last night by this president represents the most dangerous form policy blunder in this country since Vietnam." Sen. Bill Nelson (D-FL) said, "I have not been told the truth. I have not been told the truth over and over again." Sen. Lisa Murkowski (R-AK) said, "There's a great leap of faith that I think is being made here." Sen. Barack Obama (D-IL) said, "It seems as if a solution to the problem is always six months away." The president's plan to beef up troop presence on the ground and hand over power to the Iraqis found few takers in Washington this week. We take a look behind the scenes. While on Capitol Hill new leaders force action on their issues, stem cell research. Ms. Pelosi said, "On this vote, to promote stem cell research the yeas are 253, the nays -" Minimum wage, prescription drug coverage. Which will become law? We tackle all of this tonight with the reporters covering it all: Michael Duffy of Time Magazine, Martha Raddatz of ABC News, Gloria Borger of CBS News and US News and Andrea Seabrook of National Public Radio.

And it's on: the Iraq debate heats up, but so does action on ethics reform and secret wiretaps, tonight on "Washington Week." President George Bush said, "No question, 2006 was a lousy year for Iraq, and so the question I'm now faced with is, do I react to that or do we just begin to leave?" Sen.
Hillary Clinton (D-NY) said, "The president's proposal to add 21,500 troops in escalation of the combat situation is not going to work." Who's right: the president and his shrinking band of supporters, or the increasingly loud and raucous critics, many of whom happen to be running for president? Sen. Sam Brownback (R-KS) said, "The United States seems to care more about the peaceful Iraq than the Iraqis do." Sen. Barack Obama (D-IL) said, "When it comes to the war in Iraq, the time for promises and assurances, for waiting and patience is over." Sen. John Edwards (D-NC) said, "It is a betrayal not to speak out against an escalation of the war in Iraq." On Capitol Hill, the Senate joins the House in passing landmark ethics reform. Is it the end of the free lunch? And the White House relents on the practice of spying without a warrant, but it isn't the end of the argument. The reporters covering the stories: Doyle McManus of the Los Angeles Times, Dan Balz of the Washington Post, Jeanne Cummings of the Wall Street Journal, and Pete Williams of NBC News.

Tonight, on "Washington Week:" Announcer: Madam Speaker. There was a usual pomp. Announcer: The president of the United States. And the usual circumstance. But there was also a plea. President George Bush: Our country is pursuing a new strategy in Iraq and I ask you to give it a chance to work. This year's State of the Union address only opened the floodgates - the floodgates of anger. Sen. Chuck Hagel (R-NE) said, "I think all 100 senators ought to be on the line on this. What do you believe? What are you willing to support? Why were you elected? If you wanted a safe job, go sell shoes." The floodgates of defensiveness. Vice Pres. Cheney said, "There's been a lot of success. We still, we still have more work to do to get a handle on the security situation, but the president has put a plan in place to do that." Pres. Bush: (From tape.) I'm the decision-maker. I had to come up with a way forward that precluded disaster. And the floodgates of the 2008 presidential campaign. Sen. Christopher Dodd (D-CT) said, "It is a failure. This is not working." Sen. John McCain (R-AZ) said, "It is not certain that this new approach will succeed. The only guarantee is that if we do not try, we will fail for certain." As if that weren't enough, a federal trial provides a revealing and damaging look inside the Bush White House. We'll talk about it all with the reporters covering the stories: John Harwood of CNBC and the Wall Street Journal, Jeff Zeleny of the New York Times, John Harris of Politico.com, and Pierre Thomas of ABC News.

Reality checks on Iraq, on Iran, on the 2008 campaign, and on the Scooter Libby trial, tonight on Washington Week. Sen. John McCain (R-AZ) said, "This is a degree of micromanagement which is absolutely Orwellian. That alone should cause us to reject this kind of foolishness." Sen. Chris Dodd (D-CT) said, "We're being asked to send 21,000 young Americans into a cauldron." Sen. Arlen Specter (R-PA) said, "I would suggest respectfully to the president that he is not the sole decider." With the debate over Iraq now in full cry, what is real and what is rhetoric? Are 20,000 troops enough? Are they too much? Can the Senate change anything? And what does a new intelligence report tell us about another potential threat, Iran? Well, out on the campaign trail, Democrats are jockeying for position. John Edwards said, "It's time to be patriotic about something other than war." Sen. Barack Obama (D-IL) said, "We don't have time to be cynical. We don't have time." Sen. Hillary Clinton (D-NY) said, "If we in Congress don't end this war before January, 2009, as president I will." And in a D.C. federal court, witnesses punch holes in Scooter Libby's defense. Who will the jury trust? Covering these stories this week: Linda Robinson of U.S. News and World Report, David Sanger of the New York Times, Karen Tumulty of Time Magazine, and John Dickerson of Slate Magazine.

Tonight on "Washington Week," senators from both sides of the aisle challenge the Department of Justice. Sen. Charles Schumer (D-NY) said, "Since our last hearing, my concerns have only grown, public confidence has only diminished, and the plot has only thickened." Sen. Arlen Specter (R-PA) said, "The FBI has simply not followed its own rules." Were U.S. attorneys fired for political reasons? Did overeager investigators abuse the Patriot Act? Stand by for a hearing, denunciations, and mea culpa. Robert Muller-- "I am the person responsible, I am the person accountable, and I am committed to ensuring that we correct these deficiencies and live up to these responsibilities." Blocks away from the Justice Department, a federal court convicts the vice president's former chief of staff. Patrick Fitzgerald -- said that we had a situation where a high-level official, a person who worked in the office of the vice president, obstructed justice and lied under oath. We wish that had not happened, but it did. And Capitol Hill Democrats struggle to reach agreement on a new plan for Iraq. Rep. Steve Kagan (D-WI) said, "What we do agree about is that this is President Bush's war and there's been a failure of leadership, not just at home at Katrina or Walter Reed, but overseas in Iraq." Will the American public or the White House buy it? Covering these stories this week: Pete Williams of NBC News, John Dickerson of Slate Magazine, and John Harwood of CNBC and the Wall Street Journal.

Part two continues with the legal jeopardy faced by a number of reporters across the country, and the additional complications generated by the war on terror. Correspondent Lowell Bergman interviews reporters facing jail for refusing to reveal their sources in the context of leak investigations and asks questions on tough issues that now confront the editors of the nation's leading newspapers, including: how much can the press reveal about secret government programs in the war on terror without jeopardizing national security? FRONTLINE looks past the heated, partisan rhetoric to determine how much of this battle is politics and whether such reporting actually harms national security.

Is the government reading your e-mail? NOW reports on new evidence suggesting the existence of a secret government program that intercepts millions of private e-mails each day in the name of terrorist surveillance. News about the alleged program came to light when a former AT&T employee, Mark Klein, blew the whistle on what he believes to be a large-scale installation of secret Internet monitoring equipment deep inside AT&T's San Francisco office. The equipment, he contends, was created at the request of the U.S. government to spy on e-mail traffic across the entire Internet. Though the government and AT&T refuse to address the issue directly, Klein backs up his charges with internal company documents and personal photos. Who might be eyeing the hundreds of millions of e-mails Americans send out each day, and to what end?

The House votes to condemn the president's Iraq plan. The issue echoes in the 2008 campaign and in standoffs with Iran and North Korea. What's next? We tell you tonight on "Washington Week." Sen. Fossella (R-NY) said, "I ask, if we surrender this battlefield, which battlefield will our enemy choose next? Will it be New York? Will it be Los Angeles? Will it be Washington, D.C.? Appeasement does not work." Sen. Wu (D-OR.) said, "My colleagues, this president has never had the authorization from Congress to enter a civil war in Iraq. Our mission is done, bring the troops home." And this weekend the debate moves to the floor of the Senate. Sen. Charles Schumer (D-NY) said, "Right now we're calling their bluff. We're staying here: now vote yes or no." Both houses of Congress struggling to make known their displeasure with the president's approach to the war, sending presidential contenders scrambling for footing. Sen. Hillary Clinton (D-NY) said, "I have taken responsibility for my vote. The mistakes were made by this president, who misled this country and this Congress into a war that should not have been waged." At the same time, the Pentagon and the White House go for the big picture by establishing a weapons link between Iraq and Iran. But does it really exist? President George Bush said, "The idea that somehow we're manufacturing the idea that that the Iranians are providing IEDs is preposterous." Secretary Of Defense Robert Gates said, "Whether or not more senior political leaders in Iran know about it, we don't know. Either way it's a worry." Plus, have negotiators finally convinced North Korea to step away from the nuclear brink? We take a look with the reporters covering the stories: Andrea Seabrook of National Public Radio, Jackie Calmes of the Wall Street Journal, Martha Raddatz of ABC News, and Barbara Slavin of USA Today.

The coalition of the willing shrinks, a scandal at Walter Reed, Scooter Libby's fate, and tit-for-tat politics this week on "Washington Week." Tony Blair [British Prime Minister] said, "The actual reduction of forces will be from the present 7,100 itself down from over 9,000 two years ago, and 40,000 at the time of the conflict to roughly 5,500." As U.S. forces surge in Iraq, the British step away. What does that mean for President Bush's plan? Vice President Richard Cheney said, "We are determined to prevail in Iraq because we understand the consequences of failure." Rep. Nancy Pelosi (D-CA) said, "I don't think the people of Great Britain are bringing their troops home because everything is so rosy there." At home, a Washington Post report reveals severe shortcomings in the treatment of injured veterans. Secretary Of Defense Robert Gates said, "They battled our foreign enemies; they should not have to battle an American bureaucracy." At Federal Court the imminent end of a trial that said as much about Vice President Cheney as about his former chief of staff. And on the campaign trail, bickering over loyalty, money, and Hollywood. Senator Hillary Clinton (D-NY) said, "I sure don't want Democrats or the supporters of Democrats to be engaging in the politics of personal destruction." Senator Barack Obama (D-IL) said, "You know, it's not clear to me - why would I be apologizing for someone else's remarks?" Is this a sign of things to come? Covering those stories tonight Doyle McManus of the Los Angeles Times, Dana Priest of the Washington Post, Pierre Thomas of ABC News, and Karen Tumulty of Time magazine.

Congress prepares to pounce: the fallout from the war, tonight on "Washington Week." Sen. Jon Kyl (R-AZ) said, "It would be wrong for Congress to try to micromanage the war from here in Washington." Sen. Russell Feingold (D-WI) said, "We don't want to talk about actually authorizing a new mission in Iraq. We want to figure out how can get out of Iraq." It's a standoff. Democrats can't agree on how to change direction on Iraq, and Republicans won't. But while the stare-down continues on Capitol Hill, the Bush administration is showing flexibility on other fronts, agreeing to meet with the hostile governments of Iran and Syria. Secretary Of State Condoleezza Rice said, "I'm pleased that the government of Iraq is launching this new diplomatic initiative and that we will be able to support it and participate in it." If Condoleezza Rice was this week's good cop, Vice President Cheney was the bad one, talking tough around the world and to friendly audiences at home. Vice President Dick Cheney said, "Like it or not, the enemy we face in the war on terror has made Iraq the primary front in that war. To use a popular phrase, that - this is an inconvenient truth." What's really going on? Plus what you had to say about using the word ambitious to describe Hillary Clinton. The reporters covering the stories tonight: Michael Duffy of Time Magazine, Helene Cooper of the New York Times, and Peter Baker of the Washington Post.

It's a Washington face-off: Congress glares at the president and the president glares right back, tonight on "Washington Week." So the worm continues to turn as the top advisor to Alberto Gonzales contradicts the attorney general in the prosecutor firings. Kyle Sampson [Former Gonzales

Chief of Staff] said, "I don't think the attorney general's statement that he was not involved in any discussions about U.S. attorney removals is accurate." Sen. Patrick Leahy (D-VT) [Judiciary Committee Chairman] said, "Our goal is to get to the bottom of what happened, but also why it happened." But how, and when? On the Iraq war, Congress defies the president. Sen. Harry Reid (D-NV) [Senate Majority Leader] said, "It is up to the president - an oft-used term that I've already used here once today - the ball is in his court." But the president doesn't like deadlines and he doesn't like timetables or how the House and Senate have attempted to tie his hands. President George W. Bush said, "I have made it clear for weeks: if either version comes to my desk, I'm going to veto it." We examine the political war underway here, and the reality on the ground in Iraq. And tomorrow's the deadline for presidential candidates to match dollars to their ambitions. Who will come out ahead? The reporters covering the week: Pete Williams of NBC News, Andrea Seabrook of National Public Radio, Martha Raddatz of ABC News, and Karen Tumulty of "Time" magazine.
