Topic: Christian Ads Mistakenly Blocked

Sellers of religious products on Amazon may have taken a hit when Amazon employees incorrectly took down their ads. CNBC reported that according to an Amazon representative, the company had formulated a new policy "which bans any ad that contains 'religious content'." In an email, the rep continued, "The other sellers who are currently advertising religious related products are doing incorrect practice, which may lead to their account suspension." But Amazon is retracting its rep's statements. A spokesperson for the e-commerce giant told CNBC, "The email that CNBC viewed contains inaccurate information and our long-standing policies have not changed. Corrective training is being provided."

Topic: Simplify Your Life with Kids

If the schedules and screens are making you feel like you're losing track of, or losing touch with your child, it's time to simplify. Children flourish when they have the time and space to explore their world without the constraints of "too much". Having and doing too much can overwhelm a kid and lead to unnecessary stress at home and in the classroom. Simplifying a child's routine and cutting down on their information, activity overload, excessive toy and clutter plies, could help over stimulated kids become less argumentative and disruptive. When you simplify a child's world, you make space for positive growth, creativity and relaxation.
