Ohio - Outside Stark, Summit, Cuyahoga	4/11/2014	Ohio issued tighter rules for drilling near quake fault lines	The Ohio Department of Natural Resources has issued stricter rules for horizontal drilling near known fault lines and other places where earthquakes have occurred. It's the first time the state has formally linked fracking to earthquakes. The new permits were developed in response to a series of quakes – the largest measuring a 3.0 magnitude -- last month southeast of Youngstown. The state will require companies to install monitors when they're fracking within 3 miles of known faults or of seismic activity greater than 2.0 recorded since 1999. If the monitors pick up activity of at least 1.0 magnitude, the drilling would temporarily cease while that's investigated. ODNR spokesman Mark Bruce says the state is being rightfully cautious.	M.L. Cuyahoga County	4/28/2014	UCC challenges North Carolina law criminalizing gay marriage services	The United Church of Christ, headquartered in Cleveland, is suing North Carolina over a law that makes it a crime for ministers to perform same-sex marriage ceremonies. The 5,000-church denomination sued in federal court in Charlotte, saying the law violates a constitutional guarantee of free exercise of religion. North Carolina law forbids gay couples from getting marriage licenses and makes it a misdemeanor if a minister officiates at a same-sex ceremony. The crime could be punished by as much as 120 days in jail, and allows anyone to sue a minister performing such a ceremony. The United Church of Christ says the ceremonies are viewed by its ministers as religious duties, not legal marriages in states that forbid it. About a third of its churches have policies that welcome people who are gay, lesbian, bisexual and transgender, and the church has openly gay clergy.	M.L. Schultze	(0:55)

Sports	5/1/2014	"Competitive balance" for school sports up for vote again	About 17 percent of the Ohio High School Athletic Association's 800-plus members are private schools, and they have won more than 40 percent of the state titles in recent years. A so-called 'competitive balance' plan that's been voted down three years in a row would account for the ability of private schools to draw athletes and other students from a broader area than most public high schools can. If schools draw too many students from outside their area, they would be forced to compete against bigger schools. School principals have until May 15 to return their ballots to the OHSA. The last three referendums failed by narrow margins. Last year's failed by 19 votes, and nearly 200 ballots were either not cast or arrived late. So this year, the athletic association has added a referendum that would fine any school that fails to return a ballot by the deadline, whether it votes or not. If passed, the changes would begin next year.	Amanda Rabinowitz	(0:55)

Spokesman Frank Scafidi says Ohio tops the list with more than 4,000 claims in the last three years, compared to No. 2 Texas with about 3,000. But he says these numbers only account for thefts that are reported to insurance companies. Because of this, the high number may actually say something positive about Ohio.	Lyndsey Schley	(0:25)
Cuyahoga County	5/12/2014	Cleveland Catholic Diocese expands morality clauses for teachers	The Catholic Diocese of Cleveland is requiring its elementary school teachers to sign contracts with expanded morality clauses. Spokesman Robert Tayek says the new contracts are simply more specific on what the church considers to be moral behavior. The clause's ban includes publicly stating views contrary to church positions on issues such as same-sex marriage, abortion and in-vitro fertilization. The teachers are also referred to as "teacher-ministers." Tayek says that reflects their role as educators in both secular and religious subjects. He says clarification of existing morality clauses will help protect the diocese in legal cases.	Lyndsey Schley	(0:15)

Cuyahoga County	5/20/2014	Broadview Heights plans to fight new drilling plans	The city of Broadview Heights plans to challenge a company's attempt to drill a new gas well here. Gonzoil, which is based in Stark County, already has a couple dozen wells Broadview Heights. But they predate a charter amendment voters strongly supported in 2012. The "community bill of rights" bans new drilling. Gonzoil's Frank Gonzalez confirmed his company has accumulated leases for more than the 20 acres and is applying to the Ohio Department of Natural Resources to bore a new directional well at the end of this summer. The well would be in Councilman Brian Wolf's ward, and he says the city takes the charter amendment seriously.	M.L. Schultze	(0:17)
	5/20/2014	Ohio schools agree to level the playing field, but is it a good fix?	In two years, the high school sports landscape will be changing. On the fourth try, high school principals participating in the Ohio High School Athletic Association voted to approve a so-called competitive balance plan. Right now, public and private high schools compete in the same playoffs in divisions based solely on enrollment numbers. And private schools often win because they can recruit from a much larger area, unencumbered by district borders. Now, a multiplier formula will be applied that makes athletes count as more than one student toward enrollment based on where their parents live, how long they've attended their school system and what sport they play. WKSU commentator Terry Pluto says it's a complicated fix, but one that will help even out the competition.	Amanda Rabinowitz	(3:32)

Ohio - Outside Stark, Summit, Cuyahoga	6/4/2014	Ohio Sect. of State Husted says lawmakers must change political map-making process	Ohio Secretary of State Jon Husted says voters are growing increasingly frustrated with the state's congressional and legislative maps. And Husted says they – and he – may try to force a change if state lawmakers won't act. Right now, the political boundaries are drawn every 10 years by the political party that dominates state offices. This decade, it's the Republicans. Husted is a Republican. But he's also backing a plan for a seven-member bipartisan commission to draw the maps – with requirements for supermajority votes and attempts to keep most counties in one political piece. The Ohio Senate has passed a resolution backing such a commission, and a little known group called the Constitutional Modernization Commission is considering it. Crime	6/25/2014	Ohio Supreme Court considers whether talk was a threat or speculation	The state has a law to punish people who make threats in the workplace, schools and public places. Statehouse correspondent Karen Kasler reports on a challenge to that law before the Ohio Supreme Court, and says the arguments weren't about free speech, but about evidence in a trial.	Karen Kasler	(0:52)
Cuyahoga County	6/25/2014	And then there were two: What's next for Cleveland and the GOP convention?	Cleveland and Dallas are the finalists to host the 2016 Republican National Convention. The RNC announced the decision this afternoon. Denver and Kansas City were eliminated. The eventual winner is expected to see about 50,000 visitors and reap millions of dollars. Cleveland Host Committee Chairman Terry Egger credits the public-private partnerships and bi-partisan efforts for Cleveland getting to this point. The RNC has made two exploratory visits Cleveland, and Egger says the inspections are not over yet.	Kevin Niedermier	(0:17)
Ohio - Outside Stark, Summit, Cuyahoga	6/25/2014	Ohio unemployment claimants hit a snag: What's an 'L' and what's a '1'?	Computer complications are forcing Ohio to delay implementing some of its new rules for people to collect unemployment. Angela Terez of the Ohio Department of Job and Family Services says the rules require claimants to go online and register with a job-search engine set up by the state. But she says they are having problems doing that right now.	Jo Ingles	(0:23)
Cuyahoga County	6/25/2014	Indians' facing potential $9 billion lawsuit	The Cleveland Indians could be facing a nine billion dollar lawsuit next month over its team name and logo. Robert Roche, leader of "People Not Mascots" and director of the American Indian Education Center, says other attempts to resolve the issue have been ignored by the team and met by well-publicized hostility by some fans.	TERRELL JOHNSON	(0:25)
Cuyahoga County	6/25/2014	Cleveland is now one of two cities in the running for 2016's GOP convention	The Republican National Committee has picked Cleveland and Dallas as the finalists for hosting its 2016 presidential convention.
