MAKING IT GROW

April

"Making It Grow" on SCETV is back with an all-new episode, airing on April 4 at 7 pm. Host Amanda McNulty may be taking a break this week, but co-host Terasa Lott is taking the reins with a talented team of experts, including Clemson Extension Horticulture Agent Zack Snipes, Clemson Extension Agronomy Agent Hannah Mikell, and Dr. John Nelson, retired curator of the AC Moore Herbarium. This episode is jam-packed with exciting and informative segments, including a discussion of local farm produce, tips on distinguishing between the palmetto tree and the dwarf palmetto tree, a deep dive into food plots for wildlife, a spotlight on Autumn ferns, and a discussion on why fruit trees may not be producing.

In our first featured segment, Amanda will chat with scientific illustrator Dr. Madeline Dowling who, during her post-doctorate at Clemson University, created apps, videos, and other educational materials to promote Clemson University research and services. She also gives tips on taking better photographs of nature and plants in your garden! Additionally, viewers will be taken on a tour of the MUSC Urban Farm in Charleston, SC, and learn how it benefits patients, staff, and the community. And don't forget to submit photos of your garden for the "Gardens of the Week" segment, which will highlight a new batch of gardens each week.

Don't miss out on all this and more on the upcoming episode of "Making It Grow".

Don't miss the upcoming episode of "Making It Grow" on April 11 at 7pm, airing on South Carolina ETV. The show, hosted by Clemson Extension Agent Amanda McNulty and co-host Terasa Lott, promises to pique your interest in gardening with its insightful tips and ideas to enhance your gardening skills.

In addition, Clemson Extension Agents Rob Last and Mary Vargo will be part of the discussion, answering your gardening-related queries. This episode covers topics such as soil nitrogen, camellia pruning, and selecting plants for year-round appeal.

The show will also include a visit to Livingston Bulls Bay Seafood in McClellanville, SC to witness the clam and oyster harvest. Livingston Bulls Bay Seafood specializes in the sustainable farming and harvesting of oysters and clams from the Bulls Bay estuary. We will also travel to a local farm to get information on Guava Root Knot Nematodes, which are parasitic roundworms that infect plant roots and cause significant damage to crops previously resistant. The research being done is aimed at developing sustainable and effective control strategies to minimize the damage caused by these pests and improve the productivity and profitability of crop production. Lastly, the "Gardens of the Week" segment will showcase pictures of viewers' gardens.

Overall, this episode is a captivating journey through the world of horticulture and agriculture, making it a must-watch.
