3/21/22	7:00 am	:29	Morning Edition	The town of Croydon is holding a meeting tonight [MONDAY] to come up with solutions for addressing a last-minute and unexpected cut to the local school budget. At a thinly-attended town meeting last week, voters cut the school budget by more than half - from $1.7 million dollars to $800-thousand dollars. Just 34 people voted on the measure, in a town with roughly 500 registered voters. Croydon's school district now has until April 1 to present a spending plan to accommodate the slashed budget.
3/21/22	5:44 pm	5:13	All Things Considered	Most people in New Hampshire know that climate change is happening, mainly caused by humans. But many are fuzzy on the basic science of it. As part of NHPR's reporting project 'By Degrees,' Sarah Gibson visited a few schools that are connecting climate science to kids' daily lives.

3/16/22	6:00 am	:44	Morning Edition	New Hampshire lawmakers killed several high profile education bills today [on tuesday]. NHPR's Sarah Gibson has more.

3/17/22	5:00 pm	:31	All Things Considered	A Dover man accused of hitting and killing a woman riding her bicycle last year has been indicted on two charges: negligent homicide and conduct after an accident. Investigators allege Craig Sprowl struck Donna Briggs with his vehicle while driving on Route 125 in the town of Kingston. WMUR reports police said Sprowl admitted to falling asleep at the wheel. Sprowl is being held until his arraignment... which is scheduled for next week. Briggs was a retired police sergeant.
3/11/22	4:30 pm	:27	All Things Considered	The attorney general's office says a Claremont funeral home director is accused of operating without a license, and four counts of transporting bodies without burial permits. Sixty-five-year-old James Roy, the owner of Roy Funeral Home, is also accused of two counts of making funeral arrangements without a license; one count of failing to transmit a death record; and three counts of unsworn falsification. Roy is scheduled to be arraigned on May 16.
