Description: Teen umpire involved in baseball brawl gets a special day at Coors Field

Thirteen year old Josh Cordova and his family got star treatment at Coors Field Sunday.

Josh is the young umpire seen on video officiating the youth baseball game in Lakewood that ended in a brawl earlier this month. "It was just scary, not only for me, but for the 7-year-olds there," Cordova said.

People around the world have now seen the video. Chris Guccione is one of them. He's a Major League Baseball umpire who grew up right here in Colorado.

"I was shocked, and I was saddened, and I wanted to reach out," Guccione said.

Guccione and UMPS CARE charities invited Josh and his family to be special guests at the Rockies game Sunday. The family met with the umpire crew and got to see how the professionals officiate a game. The new friendship seemed to make a real impact on Cordova.

"I think I'm going to continue umpiring for a while and hopefully make it professional like he is," the teen said with a smile.

A veteran in Aurora and his wife received a special gift at the Freedom 4 Miler Walk/Run in Lone Tree this morning - a car to help them get to and from doctor's appointments.

"I am just so grateful to them for doing it," Veteran Matthew Kenyon said.

Kenyon was diagnosed with gangrene about a year ago and lost his job.

"We've been homeless for awhile now," Kenyon said. "To get to a lot of our appointments, we've been having to take mass transit.

The gift was made possible by the Colorado Veterans Project, Geico and Caliber Collision.

"[He's] the perfect person to give it to," Todd Youngblood of the Colorado Veterans Project said. "They didn't feel like they deserved it, they didn't ask for it.. But they have reliable transportation now."

Description: How much should you pay a babysitter? Cost is more than $13 an hour in Denver

A new study revealed the average cost parents should pay babysitters in Denver is more than $13 an hour.

According to the 2019 study by UrbanSitter, the average hourly babysitting rate in Denver is $13.41 for one child and $15.92 for two children.

That's below the national average of $16.75 for one and $19.26 for two kids, according to the study.

The study also revealed that San Francisco babysitters make the most money at $18.75 an hour for one kid and $21.30 an hour for two kids. On the opposite spectrum, Las Vegas has the cheapest rates at $11.63 an hour.

UrbanSitter also said 42% of parents surveyed spend between $10,000 and $30,000 per child per year on childcare.

Description: Colorado marijuana sales hit new record

As more and more states begin legalizing marijuana, Colorado's cannabis industry continues to hit new highs.

Sales reports released by the Colorado Department of Revenue show dispensaries sold more than $114.3 million in recreational marijuana in March, a record number.

The previous record was set last August, when sales topped $112 million.

"People are realizing that this is here to stay, it's not a joke," says Peter Marcus, with Terrapin Care Station. "These are safe, regulated places to purchase cannabis, so people who might have been unwilling or hesitant to get involved in the first place, are now seeing that it's totally acceptable."

Since Colorado legalized recreational marijuana in 2012, nine additional states have followed.

The record numbers show a drop in marijuana tourism, isn't hurting sales.

"I think that there were assumptions in the beginning, as to what this industry would look like in terms of its customer base," he says. "We're seeing a whole variety of customers. One of our fastest growing demographics is older people."

So far this year, Coloradoans have purchased $386 million in marijuana.

The state is once again on pace to set an annual record, which has happened every year since 2014.

"That $115 in monthly sales, that translates obviously to tax dollars for the state of Colorado, but beyond that, those are people that are spending their money in stores, which means we can hire more employees, which means greater workforce development," says Marcus.

"As long as the growth is based on responsible rules and regulations that govern this industry, then of course let it grow."

Description: Glenwood Springs switching over to 100% renewable energy

Glenwood Springs is about to become the seventh city in America to be powered completely by renewable energy.

Back in April, the Glenwood Springs City Council approved a measure to purchase 100% of the city's electricity from clean wind power through the Municipal Energy Agency of Nebraska.

The only other city in Colorado to accomplish this goal is nearby Aspen.

According to city leaders, switching to 100% clean energy will save the environment more than 77,000 tons of CO2 emission that would've been created by Glenwood Springs.

The switchover goes into effect on Saturday, June 1.

Description: Access restricted on fast-flowing Clear Creek in Jefferson County

Access to fast-flowing Clear Creek will be restricted starting Monday, the Golden Police Department and Jefferson County Sheriff's Office said.

The temporary restrictions apply to the creek in unincorporated Jefferson County and within the Golden city limits.

Restrictions include all single-chambered air-inflated devices such as belly boats, inner tubes and single chambered rafts, as well as body-surfers and swimming.

Kayaks, whitewater canoes and professionally guided rafts, river boards and Stand Up Paddle Boards are exempt.

However, authorized users and occupants must have the use of a Type I, Type III or Type V Coast Guard-approved paddling life jacket and a water use-designed helmet.

Rapid snowmelt has elevated Clear Creek to a Type IV water area with water flows of more than 1,200 cubic feet per second that has increased public risk.

Water height is also continuing to increase as the snowpack from the heavy winter continues to melt.

Violators could be issued a summons that is punishable by a fine of $100.

The restrictions will remain in effect until water levels decrease.

Description: Families return to Rocky Mountain Hospital for NICU reunion

After spending time in the neonatal intensive care unit, more than 1,000 people returned to the Rocky Mountain Hospital for a reunion this weekend.

Families from a variety of hometowns all had the same grateful spirit as they returned to the hospital. They all spent time in the NICU.

"We come back every year and get all of our babies together and see how big everybody has gotten and grown," one mom said.

This year makes marks it five years in a row the hospital has hosted the reunion.

"To be able to see the beginning of how tiny they were and what fighters they were to now is like most rewarding and amazing experience," one mom said.

Another mom said, "We owe so many thanks to all the staff here."

The day includes games, food, and tons of fun. While the hospital invites families back as a treat, the hospital gets a little out of it too.

"To know that it can be okay and can work out, sometimes it takes a while beyond our efforts, it's very uplifting," Dr. Richard Porreco said.

Maureen Tarrant, the hospital's president and CEO, agreed.

"I think sometimes in ways it's like a school teacher who sees children who they educated many years ago and now see how wonderfully productive they are in society," Tarrant said

Description: COLUMBINE SURVIVOR STARTS FOUNDATION TO HELP TROUBLED KIDS, PREVENT FUTURE SHOOTINGS

A Columbine massacre survivor has started a foundation to help troubled children and try to prevent school shootings.

Craig Scott said the foundation, dubbed Value Up, focuses on issues like anxiety and suicide prevention in hopes of preventing future tragedies.

One of the main goals of the organization is to make sure students know they have great value -- something that can be a challenge in the age of social media.

Scott survived the 1999 shooting by hiding under a table in the school library. His sister Rachel was killed.

"I've seen across the country after going to thousands of schools... students not really believing in their intrinsic value. And I've seen a lack of respect for human life," Scott said.

Those feelings, he says, can lead to tragic circumstances.

Scott is trying to help teens understand social media can make them insecure.

He also says isolation can make them lonelier.

Scott emphasizes a key point: not being perfect is OK.

"If they see themselves as having incredible value, it changes what they choose in their life," said Scott.

He feels Value Up is making a difference by turning pain into purpose.

Scott is also producing videos which he leaves with schools. They encourage kids to keep the conversation going.

His program has reached all of the schools in El Paso County.

He's hoping to do the same for the schools in Douglas County as well.

Description: Measure requiring vote for Denver Olympics funding projected to pass

Denver residents overwhelmingly approved a measure that will require voters' approval for the allocation of city funds toward a possible Olympics.

In Tuesday's runoff election, Ordinance 302 had earned roughly 79 percent of votes as of 1:50 a.m. Wednesday.

With the measure's passing, the municipal code will be amended to prohibit the city and county from using public funds in connection with future Olympic Games unless voters approve of it.

Denver will not be hosting the Olympics any time soon. In December, the United States Olympic Committee announced that Salt Lake City would represent the U.S. in a potential bid for the 2030 event.

The possibility of hosting an Olympic Games has long been a contentious topic in the Mile High City. Denver voters famously decided against hosting the 1976 games after winning the bid. Innsbruck, Austria hosted the Winter Games that year.

Description: Denver increases bike speed enforcement after cyclist critically injured

Park rangers in Denver are increasing enforcement for bicyclists who speed on the city's bike paths and parks.

The move comes after a head-on crash between two riders left one in critical condition.

That accident happened Tuesday night on the Cherry Creek Trail. One bicyclist crossed the middle line and ran into the other.

It's not clear if speed was a factor in the crash, but rangers say it's a good reminder to slow down.

Extra rangers are now working the bike paths all over the city, armed with radar guns and the power to hand out citations. It's a move that's not sitting well with some bikers.

The fine if you get caught speeding on a bike path is $100. Only two tickets have been issued so far in 2019, according to records obtained by FOX31.

Denver parks officials say its not about the making money, its about safety and education.

Description: Englewood to consider camping ban along South Platte River

The Englewood City Council tabled a bill Monday night that would make it easier for the city to stop camping along the South Platte River. It will be discussed at the next regularly scheduled meeting.

FOX31 will continue to follow this story.

Original story below

The Englewood City Council on Monday could move forward on a bill that would make it easier for the city to stop camping along the South Platte River.

Last week, the Englewood Police Department told people who had been camping along the river they had to leave, citing it as a public nuisance.

On Monday night, there will be a second reading of the proposal that some council members are calling a backward camping ban.

If passed, the bill rewords an ordinance already in place, clarifying what the parks department can control.

The bill's language changes the definition of what the parks department operates from a "park or rec facility" to specific wording including, "beaches, shorelines and open areas used for recreation."

In recent weeks, Englewood made headlines with an estimated 48 camps along the river.

If passed, those spaces could only be used during designated park hours, the city says. The first reading of the bill happened at the end of May, passing 5-2.

During the May meeting, some city officials said there has been confusion over how to stop camping along the river because jurisdiction lines were unclear.

The parks department said that has been solved.

Those who voted against the amendment believe it gives the parks department too much control.

Description: Golden PD investigating assaults targeting homeless population

The Golden Police Department is investigating attacks targeting people who are homeless.

GPD said that early Wednesday morning, officers responded to a reported assault near 14th and Jackson streets. Two homeless men were attacked.

"They tell police that a white male approached them, then assaulted them with a blunt object as he yelled comments such as 'get out of my city/town'," GPD said in a press release.

Both men suffered injuries that are not life-threatening.

The attack occurred near the Colorado School of Mines. Campus police sent out alerts to nearby residents to inform them of the alleged attack.

GPD said the general public was not at risk, as the attack was targeted at homeless people.

Police said the suspect is described as a white male with blue eyes who is between 25 and 40 years old. He is between 5 feet 8 inches and 5 feet 10 inches tall. He is estimated to weigh between 140 and 160 pounds.

The suspect was wearing dark clothing, a dark mask and used a blunt object in the attack.

GPD said investigators quickly linked the alleged assault to an unsolved case from January 2019 that occurred in the 1500 block of Ford Street, not far from Wednesday's incident.

In the January incident, two homeless people were also assaulted. Police say one victim was hit in the back of the neck with a blunt object and the suspect tried to tase victims with a stun gun.

Police say in both cases, the alleged attacker told the victims to "get out of my city/town."

"There is also reason to believe there may be other victims who have not yet reported the attacks to police," GPD said.

"This person has some sort of vendetta against that segment of our community," says GPD Deputy Chief Joe Harvey. "We want to do everything we can to protect them and make sure this person knows that kind of behavior won't be tolerated in this community."

Police believe the suspect is likely either a Golden resident or a frequent visitor to the town.

They're also planning on distributing flyers to the homeless community, telling them to keep a look out.

"Based on the person's statements of 'get out of my town, get out of my city,' we believe there's some kind of personal link to the city of Golden," Harvey said.

Darin Barton, who has been homeless in Golden for the past 6 years, says it's heartbreaking to see this happening.

"There's several of us that are homeless that are residents of this town, but we don't get treated like residents," he says. "We get treated like criminals. I hope Golden police find him and put him away for good."

Description: 6 mumps cases connected to Arapahoe Basin identified by health officials

Health officials are investigating six cases of mumps connected to Arapahoe Basin Ski Area in Summit County.

Summit County Public Health said Friday that it is working with the Colorado Department of Public Health and Environment to investigate the small cluster of mumps.

All of those with the contagious disease are associated with or employed by Arapahoe Basin Ski Area.

"Public health officials believe there is minimal risk to members of the public who have had interaction with the ski area, and there is currently no known spread into the larger community," SCPH said in a press release.

SCPH said transmission of the disease is most common in places where people are close to one another for long periods of time, such as work places or homes.

Mumps can be prevented by the measles, mumps and rubella (MMR) vaccine.

"Population-wide vaccination for mumps is likely high enough to protect against widespread transmission of the virus. Individuals may want to check their vaccine status to ensure they are protected against mumps," SCPH said.

SCPH's nursing manager Sara Lopez said Arapahoe Basin is fully cooperating with the agency "to support affected employees and protect all staff and the public."

Mumps is a viral illness that causes painful swelling in the glands of the cheek and jaw.

"Other symptoms may include low-grade fever, tiredness, loss of appetite and headache. About one-third of people who have the virus don't have symptoms. Rare symptoms can include swollen testicles, meningitis (infection in the spinal fluid), encephalitis (infection in the brain) and loss of hearing," SCPH said.

Most people with mumps recover within two weeks by resting, drinking lots of fluids and taking medication to reduce pain.

Those with mumps symptoms should consult their health care provider or call SCPH at: 970-668-9161.

Arapahoe Basin published the following statement Friday:

"This is less than great news, but I want to be open and honest. Six cases of mumps have been identified among people associated with or employed by Arapahoe Basin Ski Area.

State and county public health officials think there is minimal risk to people who had interaction with the ski area and there is currently no known spread into the larger community.

The health and safety of our guests and employees is of the highest importance. We communicated with our staff and Summit County Public Health as soon as we found out about it. We have followed all of their recommendations on appropriate actions to take.

We are extremely grateful to state and county public health officials for their help and guidance and will continue to fully coordinate and cooperate with them."

Description: Denver Health to offer almost any surgery relating to sex reassignment

More medical services for trans and non-binary people will soon be available in the Mile High City. By the end of the summer, full female-to-male gender confirmation surgery will be offered at Denver Health Medical Center. The expansion is making the hospital even more of a destination spot for the LGBTQ community.

Denver Health has been offering various kinds of gender confirmation surgeries for about a year. The hospital has completed more than 100 surgeries so far, according to LGBTQ Center of Excellence administrative director Kari Kuka.

Denver Health is currently one of the only places in Colorado where trans and non-binary people can receive lower-body gender confirmation surgery.

"We've got a quite robust waitlist for multiple surgeries," she said.

Kuka spearheaded the creation of the LGBTQ Center of Excellence in 2017 -- offering a network of more than 90 providers who are open and affirming to the LGBTQ community.

“Denver Health is here to care for the whole person, and there’s so much that we offer besides surgery,” Kuka explained.

The center also focuses on psychological, emotional and overall health and well-being.

On the surgery front, doctors will soon be trained for something new at Denver Health: female-to-male lower reassignment surgery. Starting in August, Denver Health will be able to offer almost any surgery relating to sex reassignment. Just about anything from breast augmentation and tracheal shaves to the lower procedures will be offered.

“Right now, we have over 300 patients waiting for our vaginoplasty procedure, and we have over 100 patients waiting for chest reconstruction,” Kuka said.

The LGBTQ Center of Excellence goes beyond the surgeries. Currently, the center is training more than 7,000 people to make Denver Health and its clinics even more open and affirming.

Description: Denver using data to approach public safety in unique way

Every neighborhood in Denver is a unique confluence of character and change, but none are without their own issues. In West Colfax, people like Stephen Cobb are struggling to make ends meet.

“I found myself homeless,” Cobbs said. “The veterans got me into Beacon House. When you don’t have an address, it’s hard to find work.”

Denver Public Safety officials believe they’ve found a new blueprint to address the problems that lead to crime that no other major city in the country is doing.

“We can ultimately connect them to services that will help resolve challenges they may be facing,” said Denver Public Safety Director of Financial Planning and Analysis Shawn Smith.

It’s called the Denver Opportunity Index, which pools data from places like the police department, the Colorado Department of Health and the Census Bureau.

“We’re trying to focus more on how do we resolve or help resolve things that are leading to things like crime,” Smith said.

The platform breaks down the statistics into three pillars: financial security, behavioral health and people left behind.

“When all three of those conditions exist, that’s an area of town that needs attention,” said Director of Public Safety Troy Riggs, who gave a Ted Talk about the platform.

“Data is telling us things that we haven’t seen in the past,” Riggs said. “It’s shown us the ill effects of this kind of policing, arresting and prosecuting to the fullest extent of the law.”

But while the data helps with the big picture, they’re still looking for the fine details.

“Data doesn’t show us everything,” Riggs said. “It doesn’t demonstrate what people are dealing with day in and day out. That’s why we’ve had over 50 community meetings.”

Riggs hopes to hold more community meetings about improving the platform and public safety across the city. You can schedule a meeting in your community by sending an email to publicsafety@denvergov.org or call 720-913-6020.

Description: Arapahoe County Sheriff’s Office says need for new jail is urgent, cites safety and overcrowding

The Arapahoe County Sheriff's Office says there's an urgent need for a new jail. The sheriff's office cites outdated facilities, inadequate space for inmates and staff safety concerns.

"We just don't have the spaces in a facility that was built for 386 people and now houses close to 1,200 regularly," Chief Vince Line with the Arapahoe County Sheriff's Office said.

The Arapahoe County Detention Center was built more than 30 years ago. Due to limited space, the staff is now forced to put three people in a cell in certain situations. A kitchen built to feed just under 400 people now feeds more than a 1,000 every day. There are also only 20 medical beds.

The chief says there are several plumbing and flood concerns as well. He also says the booking and releasing area is too small.

"It's a lot tasks occurring in a very confined space. The space was built to house 29 inmates and it regularly houses 70 to 80 inmates," Line said.

With all that going on, Line says officer safety is at risk too. In the last three years, inmate assaults on officers have jumped 120 percent.

"You put a lot of folks into a space that wasn't built to house that many people and tensions are up, stress is up. And quite frankly, the inmates see that those areas are stressed," Line said. "And occasionally, can take advantage of that and potentially assault staff."

In addition, there's no extra space for inmate resources like GED programs, mental health needs and substance abuse recovery. They're so packed, Line has turned down grants because there's no space to put a classroom or resource lab.

County commissioners are aware of the situation at the jail and are working toward a solution. A group of 25 community members is now charged with advising the board on the county's greatest needs. That could be transportation, the courthouse or the jail, among other things.

"What we're hoping to do -- to get from the long-range planning committee -- is to get their ideas and their suggestions," Chairman and Commissioner Jeff Baker said.

If improvements were to move forward at the jail, the estimated cost is around $462 million.

Description: Use of e-scooters increasing in Denver as city weighs whether to continue allowing them

E-scooters and dockless bikes continue to soar in popularity in Denver. According to the city, there have been more than 2 million rides since August and more than 2.7 million miles traveled.

Denver began permitting e-scooters through its Dockless Mobility Vehicle Pilot Program, which ends in July; the city will then decide whether to continue the program and is gathering feedback from scooter users, pedestrians and drivers.

Officials say there are a total of six e-scooter and e-bike companies with fleets in Denver:

Bird: 550 scooters

Lime: 550 scooters

Lyft: 550 scooters

Razor: 350 scooters

Spin: 350 scooters

Jump: 500 dockless bikes

The city says it is focusing on safety and how e-scooters and dockless bikes could help potentially increase public transportation use and decrease single vehicle use.

“People are using scooters to replace walking trips, but also to replace those vehicle trips as well,” Heather Burke of Denver Public Works said. “That’s something we’re going to continue to look at. We’re also going to look at how electric scooters are helping people connect them to transit.”

The city did not release any specific numbers on safety issues, only noting safety is a top priority.

You can provide your feedback the scooters through an online survey.

The Regional Transportation District (RTD) and commuter rail concessionaire Denver Transit Partners (DTP) will host a series of events over the next few weeks to provide information about quiet zones along the University of Colorado A Line and G Line.

Quiet zones are areas along a railroad segment where train operators don't have to sound their train horns at crossings on a routine basis. However, even with quiet zones in effect, train operators maintain discretion to use horns under circumstances that require additional safety precautions and per federal regulations. This means that train horns will still sound within designated quiet zones for a variety of reasons.

Residents are invited to visit with representatives of RTD and DTP, ask questions and learn when and why they might hear train horns in designated quiet zones along commuter rail routes.

Description: CHSAA to require mental health course for all coaches

After several recent student suicides, high school coaches in Colorado will now be required to take a course in mental health and suicide prevention due to a new mandate from the Colorado High School Activities Association (CHSAA) board of directors.

Research by the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services shows 31% of high school students reported depression symptoms in 2017 and 17% seriously considered suicide.

High school athletes build special bonds with their coaches, who are sometimes the first person a student turns to for help. That is something CHSAA wants to build upon.

"Multiple incidents, as you know in the media, have occurred in our state that made us feel we need to be more intentional as a state association to lead the charge to expanding some awareness," Commissioner Rhonda Blanford-Green said.

She said CHSAA's Sports Advisory Committee came up with the mandate and heavily recommended it to the board, which adopted it.

The National Federation of High School Sports offers the 20-minute course online and it's free. Some school districts also offer courses in mental health, which also meet the new requirement.

"Truly, the course is about making coaches aware [of] seeing some of the warning signs and then kind of how to report those certain things to the next level or to reach out immediately for help for a kid in crisis," Blanford-Green said.

CHSAA's goal is to open up the conversation and give coaches information about resources to help kids without putting too much pressure on the coaches.

“We do not want to place our coaches in a position to be diagnostic in any way. We just need them to be aware because coaches' relationships with students is oftentimes the first person that sees that,” said Blanford-Green.

CHSAA leaders say athletics is second to the mental health and well-being of its athletes.

“Our focus is really making sure the high school experience for our students in Colorado -- they walk away with that caring component,” Blanford-Green said.

The organization has had many coaches already take the course, and so far, it says the feedback is overwhelmingly positive.

Description: Broncos raise money for charity at UCHhealth home run derby

DENVER -- The Rockies play Tuesday night, but it was the Broncos who were challenged to step up to the plate for the UCHhealth Healthy Swings home run derby benefitting the Leukemia and Lymphoma Society Tuesday afternoon.

Broncos like Royce Freeman, Justin Simmons, Bradley Chubb and Emmanuel Sanders all took swings for charity.

Every time a Bronco hit a target in the field, UCHhealth donated money to the Leukemia and Lymphoma Society. In all, they raised $98,700.

“I’m glad to be out here raising money for them,” said Royce Freeman.

The event meant a lot to Stephanie Gillman. The 33-year-old was diagnosed with stage-four lymphoma in December.

“I had a giant mass in my left lung,” she said. Her symptoms were originally misdiagnosed as reflux.

After six rounds of chemo, she hopes her next scan is clean.
