

Issues-Program List, October-December, 2016

Monday, October 3 – Project Unpack. Telling Stories. Creating community. Understanding the legacies of war. It's a one-year program funded by the National Endowment for the Humanities. Today we hear from Dr. Christina Weber is an associate professor of sociology at NDSU. She wrote the grant to fund project unpack, and shares her own personal story of how her father's service in Vietnam had long term, destructive consequences.

3:33 pm

14:10

---

Thursday, October 6 – Verna Kragnes is a local director for the FARRMS: Growing Together project. It's a development program for beginning farmer-ranchers, and they'll be having a special emphasis on new Americans.

3:06 pm

13:00

---

Tuesday, November 1 – We tour the Red River Regional Dispatch Center with director Mary Phillippi to learn about life as a 911 dispatcher; the challenge of recruiting, training and retaining staff; and the new text-to-911 service.

3:06 pm

24:00

---

Thursday, November 3 – Mark Trahan is an independent journalist and the Charles R. Johnson Endowed Professor of Journalism at UND. He's also a member of Idaho's Shoshone-Bannock Tribe, and he reports and comments on events and trends in Indian Country on his blog at TrahanReports.Com. He also does a weekly audio commentary for Native Voice One. He has covered the events from inside the Dakota Access Pipeline protest and joins us with some observations.

3:06 pm

14:20

---

Friday, December 2 – The Environmental Protection Agency has identified 10 household and industrial chemicals it will assess for possible regulation to protect public health. Here to discuss the concerns is Dr. Richard Clapp, professor emeritus of environmental health, Boston University School of Public Health and Adjunct Professor at the University of Massachusetts, Lowell.

3:06 pm

24:30