Topic: USA-OBAMA-JOBS

Time Aired: 2:30 pm

Synopsis:

President Barack Obama urged Republican lawmakers on Saturday, October 1, to spell out exactly what they can and cannot support in his 447 billion U.S. dollar plan to create jobs, saying it was "time for Congress to get its act together." Obama, whose re-election chances in November 2012 are clouded by high unemployment and a sluggish economy, has said his jobs bill should be funded mainly by ending tax breaks for corporations and limiting deductions for the rich. Republicans oppose those ideas, along with some of Obama's fellow Democrats. But Republican leaders, wary of being cast as foes of job creation during tough economic times, have said there are some elements of the plan worth considering. "Some Republicans in Congress have said that they agree with certain parts of this jobs bill. If so, it's time for them to tell me what those proposals are," Obama said in his weekly radio address.

Time Aired: 6:30 pm

Synopsis:

California-based Manning Beef is recalling 80,000 pounds of beef products over possible E. coli contamination, the U.S. Department of Agriculture said. "The establishment is recalling a variety of beef primal and sub primal cuts ... and manufacturing trimmings due, in part, to insanitary conditions as reflected by an unusually high number of confirmed positive E. coli test results, the USDA's Food Safety and Inspection Service said Friday. The beef products were produced on Sept. 23 and shipped from the Pico Rivera, California, operation to retail establishments and food service centers in Arizona and California and to another federally regulated establishment in Nebraska, the USDA statement said.

Topic: USA-TRAVEL/WARNING

Time Aired: 3:36 pm

Synopsis:

The State Department issued a worldwide travel alert on Saturday warning of the possibility of anti-American attacks in response to the killing of two top al Qaeda members. The warning came a day after U.S. officials said Anwar al-Awlaki, identified as "chief of external operations" for al Qaeda's Yemen branch, was killed in an attack by missiles fired from multiple CIA drones in Yemen. "The death of Awlaki, in the near term, could provide motivation for anti-American attacks worldwide from individuals or groups seeking to retaliate against U.S. citizens or interests because of this action," the State Department said. The drone strike also killed Samir Khan, an American who served as editor of a glossy magazine used as a propaganda and recruitment tool by al Qaeda in the Arabian Peninsula.

Topic: STUDY: CHEAP DRUG HELPS SMOKERS QUIT

Time Aired: 3:36 pm

Synopsis:

For people trying to quit smoking, the drug cytisine works better than a placebo, and its comparatively low cost makes it an appealing alternative to newer stop-smoking medications, researchers say. Over the course of a year, researchers found cytisine, a nicotine substitute, more effective than a placebo in helping smokers stop the habit, and the researchers said its affordability could be an advantage in poorer countries.

Topic: NEW YORK DEPORTATIONS

Time Aired: 6:30 pm

Synopsis:

"My wife, my son - I have to get back to them," Daniel kept telling himself, from the moment he was arrested in Seattle for driving with an expired license, all the way through the deportation proceeding that delivered him to Mexico in June. Nothing would deter him from crossing the border again. He had left his hometown at 24, he said. Twelve years later, he had an American son, a wife, near-fluency in English and three brothers in the United States. "I'll keep trying," he said, "until I'll get there." This is increasingly the profile of illegal immigration today. Migrant shelters along the Mexican border are filled not with newcomers looking for a better life but with seasoned crossers: older men and women, often deportees, braving ever-greater risks to get back to their families in the United States - the country they consider home. They present a challenge to American policymakers because they continue to head north despite obstacles more severe than at any time in recent history. It is not just that the American economy has little to offer; the border itself is far more threatening. On one side, fences have grown and American agents have multiplied.

Topic: PRISON OVERCROWDING IN CALIFORNIA

Time Aired: 2:30pm

Synopsis:

California's prisons are too full. Indeed, federal courts have found them to be illegally, unconstitutionally overcrowded and have repeatedly ordered the state to address the problem. But even if the courts had not done so, hard economic times and empty state coffers all but demand it. As the largest single consumer of state prison services, Los Angeles County has at least a moral obligation to help come up with solutions. According to the California Department of Corrections and Rehabilitation, about 54,000 offenders, or a third of all state prison inmates, are from Los Angeles County. Last year, about 19,000 offenders from the county were newly admitted to state prison

Topic: DELAYS IN TAG RENEWAL BECAUSE OF AN IMMIGRATION LAW

Time Aired: 3:30pm

Synopsis:

Among the key parts of Alabama's immigration law that went into effect Thursday morning is a mandate that anyone trying to register a motor vehicle must prove U.S. citizenship. The department now uses a program called AL Verify, a system that uses driver's license numbers and expiration dates to verify the legal status of people renewing or purchasing vehicle tags. One effect of the new system and its requirements could be longer lines and delays. Some people have had to go back home to get documentation before they could purchase a tag.

The president, speaking at his first press conference since proposing the American Jobs Act last month, said he's "comfortable" with the tax change made by Senate Democratic Leader Harry Reid this week. Time Aired: 2:23 pm

Synopsis:

Federal authorities in California are cracking down on the state's medical marijuana industry, four U.S. attorneys in the state announced. Prosecutors have stepped up campaigns to break up businesses that take shelter under a state law allowing patients to possess marijuana for medical use, sending warning letters, filing civil forfeiture lawsuits, and prosecuting criminal cases, the attorneys said. "It's the new California gold rush," Andre Birotte Jr., the U.S. attorney for the state's central district, said during a press briefing. "There's an epidemic of these marijuana stores." Authorities said a large for-profit marijuana industry has developed since the state passed Proposition 215 in 1996, which enabled patients with medical needs for marijuana -- dictated by illnesses such as cancer or AIDS -- to possess the drug for therapeutic relief. They emphasized, however, that they will focus their efforts on curbing illegal activity, and patients in need of the drug will still be able to get it.

Social worker Jazmin Rivera says she helps dozens of Spanish-speaking immigrants fill out paperwork each week. Many immigrants sign power of attorney forms that allow someone else to care for their children if needed. Rivera says people are scared and want to make sure their children are cared for. State Sen. Topic: JERRY BROWN SIGNS BILL PLACING LIMITS ON DUI CHECKPOINTS

Time Aired: 2:30 pm

Synopsis:

Police agencies in California will no longer be able to freely impound cars from sober but unlicensed drivers who are stopped at drunk-driving checkpoints under legislation signed Sunday by Gov. Jerry Brown. Under the new law written by Assemblyman Gil Cedillo (D-Los Angeles), if a sober driver is caught at a DUI checkpoint without a valid license, law enforcement officers must release the car to a qualified driver representing the registered owner. In cases where a legal driver is not readily available, AB 353 says, the vehicle is to be released to one later at the impound yard. Some Latino lawmakers have alleged that sobriety checkpoints have been misused by some cities to unfairly target illegal immigrants who do not have a driver's license. Because cities can hold cars taken from unlicensed drivers for 30 days, the accumulated impound fees can turn out to be more than the car is worth, resulting in some drivers losing their cars.

The county hopes to register as many as 550,000 patients and is assigning them to medical clinics for services at no cost to them. Terrified by Alabama's strict new immigration crackdown, parents living in the state illegally say they are doing something that was unthinkable just days ago - asking friends, relatives, co-workers and acquaintances to take their children if they're arrested or deported. Many illegal immigrants signed documents in the past week allowing others to care for their children if needed, assistance groups say, and a couple living illegally in nearby Shelby County extracted a promise from the man's boss to send their three young children - all U.S. citizens - to Mexico should they be jailed under the law. A key sponsor of the measure, Republican state Sen. Scott Beason, said such concerns weren't raised when legislators were considering the bill, and he wonders if the stories now are designed to "pull on heart strings" and build sympathy for illegal immigrants.

Alabama asked a federal appeals court Tuesday to allow the state to enforce much of its strict law targeting illegal immigration, and state officials tried to clear up confusion over the crackdown among court officials and police. The state said in arguments that the Justice Department and a coalition of advocacy groups failed to demonstrate that enforcing the law will cause irreparable harm. The state argued the U.S. District Court in Birmingham considered hundreds of pages of briefs, almost nine hours of oral arguments and more than six weeks of consideration before it upheld parts of the law. The Justice Department and the advocacy groups have until Wednesday morning to file a response. After that, the court could decide whether to intervene by issuing a preliminary injunction.

Time Aired: 9:30 pm

Synopsis:

Good news on the tuberculosis front: The World Health Organization reports that TB rates are dropping for the first time. The WHO 2011 Global Tuberculosis Control Report was released today at a Washington news conference, and it details the strides that have been made globally in eradicating TB. Among the 258-page report's findings: The number of people who contracted TB fell from a high of 9 million in 2005 to 8.8 million in 2010. Deaths dropped from 1.8 million in 2003 to 1.4 million in 2010, and the death rate plummeted 40% from 1990 to 2010. Cure rates are high -- in 2009, 87% of people who had TB were cured, but the report also found that a third of likely TB cases are never alerted, so it's not known if those people were diagnosed and treated. Some countries have shown that the extra effort and money put into fighting the disease have paid off. Kenya, Tanzania and Brazil have all seen TB rates decline in the last 10 to 20 years. China's progress has been substantial, with death rates dropping by almost 80% from 1990 to 2010. The frequency of TB was also cut in half in that time.

Synopsis:

Yesterday, an Atlanta appeals court blocked a portion of the law that required schools to track the immigration status of students. Proponents say it's opens up jobs for legal residents, but the law has been creating unintended consequences. Almost a hundred people lined up, waiting for the Jefferson County Courthouse in Birmingham to open. Once it does, a security officer barks instructions. The lines are long in Birmingham partly because of budget cuts, but lines at courthouses across the state have lengthened since Alabama's immigration law went into effect. The law requires anyone doing business with the state, such as car tags and licenses, to prove he or she is allowed to be in Alabama. Mobile County is spending $150,000 for equipment to comply with the law.

Synopsis:

When U.S. restrictions on work permits barred Intel from moving nearly 50 Finnish engineers to the United States this year, the microchip maker reluctantly parked them in a new research center in Finland. U.S. and multinational firms are chafing at delays and difficulties securing visas that effectively require them to keep high-skilled workers abroad instead of expanding operations in the United States. "Tech companies like ours follow where the action is and where the talent pools are," said Young Sohn, chief executive of the semiconductor maker Inphi. That trend puts pressure on President Barack Obama to set aside his plan for a "comprehensive" overhaul of U.S. immigration policies -- at the risk of angering key Hispanic voters -- and fix the system of work permits and green cards for the likes of engineers and programmers.

The number of people who applied for unemployment benefits last week fell to the lowest level since April, which suggests employers could be stepping up hiring. The Labor Department says applications for unemployment benefits dropped to a seasonally adjusted 390,000, the third decline in four weeks. The four-week average, a less volatile measure, fell to 400,000, also the lowest point since April. In fact, the Census tables how that geographic mobility has been declining steadily since the end of World War II, when one-fifth of all Americans regularly moved. Why is this? As Catherine Rampell observes, much of the current drop has been driven by a decline in people switching homes within counties. For that, blame the housing bust. Foreclosures and falling prices have caused home sales to plummet. Sales increased 1.3 percent to a 307,000 annual pace, data from the Commerce Department showed today in Washington. The median estimate of 70 economists surveyed by Bloomberg News projected a 315,000 rate. Demand is on pace to reach 301,000 this year, less than the 323,000 homes sold in 2010 that were the fewest since data-keeping began in 1963. A supply of distressed properties in the foreclosure pipeline that is weighing on prices of existing houses may keep luring buyers away from new construction. A jobless rate that has been hovering around 9 percent or higher for more than two years signals demand will take time to pick-up, a sign homebuilding will contribute little to economic growth in 2012. "The housing market remains out of balance, with much more supply than demand," said Michelle Meyer, a senior U.S. economist at Bank of America Corp. Lawyers say the U.S. government has dropped its New York deportation case against an Argentine lesbian who married a U.S. citizen, marking an improvement in the treatment of cases of same-sex couples involving a legal alien and a U.S. citizen. Lawyers for the Argentinean, Monica Alcota, and her American spouse, Cristina Ojeda, say the couple was supposed to be in Immigration Court Tuesday but notification arrived Monday that the case was dismissed. The couple's lawyer, Lavi Soloway, said the dismissal granted at the request of both sides marked the first time a case involving a lesbian married couple had been dismissed since the federal government relaxed its pursuit of the cases earlier this year. Gay couples in Newark, N.J., and San Francisco had also won dismissals.

Federal Judge Edward Korman heard from the Food and Drug Administration and the Center for Reproductive Rights one week after the US government blocked access without a prescription to younger teens. A ruling was not immediately expected, a spokeswoman for the Center for Reproductive Rights told AFP. Women's health groups have been urging the FDA to make emergency contraception more widely available to girls for the past 10 years by filing a citizen's petition with the FDA asking the regulator to remove prescription requirements. Women's advocates argue that US regulators have placed politics above science by restricting access to the morning-after pill which can prevent pregnancy if taken within 72 hours of unprotected sex. Korman in 2009 sided with the Center for Reproductive Rights and ordered the FDA to address its petition seeking wider access.

Childhood Asthma

Campaign Sponsor: The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency
Volunteer Advertising Agency: Campbell-Ewald

BACKGROUND:

Since 1980, the number of people with asthma has more than doubled. Seven million children in the United States have asthma and nearly two-thirds of them will experience an asthma attack this year. The CDC estimates that children miss 13 million school days each year due to asthma. Although there is no known cure for the disease, experts agree that there are a variety of ways to reduce the number of attacks. One way is to reduce exposure to the environmental factors – asthma triggers – that make asthma worse. These PSAs provide parents and caregivers with new and simple tips on how to eliminate specific asthma triggers in order to reduce symptoms and help prevent asthma attacks.

CAMPAIGN OBJECTIVE:

To motivate parents of children with asthma to learn about specific asthma triggers and how they can help eliminate them.

TARGET AUDIENCE:

- Parents and caregivers of children with asthma (infant to 16 years of age).
- Disproportionately impacted populations including African Americans and Hispanics.

DID YOU KNOW:

- Asthma is a serious lung disease affecting the quality of life for 23 million people in the U.S., including 7 million children.
- Minority children suffer the most; emergency department visits, hospitalizations and deaths are much higher among African-American children.
- Hispanic children, especially Puerto Ricans, have higher asthma rates and poorer outcomes compared to non-Hispanic children.

High School Dropout Prevention/BOOST

Campaign Sponsor: The United States Army

CAMPAIGN OBJECTIVE:

To encourage teens to stay in school and obtain a high school diploma.

BACKGROUND:

Approximately 7,000 high school students drop out every school day, which translates to one in three students in our country.¹ Research shows that the decision to drop out doesn't happen overnight. A study by Civic Enterprises, The Silent Epidemic, Perspectives of High School Dropouts, found that two-thirds of students who drop out frequently missed class during the year after developing a pattern of sleeping late in the mornings and taking long lunches.

The Boost campaign, is intended to help create an identity, support and encouragement for those who may be at risk of dropping out. It encourages teens and parents to give these struggling kids a Boost, to help them stay in school and graduate.

CAMPAIGN DESCRIPTION:

The campaign feature stories of real teens across the country who are struggling to make it through high school - and what is motivating them to make it through each day.

At www.boostup.org, visitors can follow the video story submissions of our profiled at-risk students. Teens and adults will then be able to send boosts (encouragement) to either our profiled students or students in their own communities. There will also be a section for parents and teens with resources and guidance on issues relating to school, crisis and the community.

TARGET AUDIENCE:

Friends and parents of at-risk students, ages 9-17.

DID YOU KNOW:

- 27% of Hispanic youths are dropouts*
- 11% of African American youths are dropouts*
- 7% of Caucasian youths are dropouts*

*Based on 16-24 year olds, from the Department of Education 2001-2002 data.
