IMMIGRATION	Perspectiva Nacional	8/24/14	6:00 AM	5:59	A representative from the Puerto Rico Federal Affairs Administration in Washington will explain the reason behind the mass exodus of Puerto Ricans to the United States and how the government of Puerto Rico could play a leading role in the children of the border crisis.
IMMIGRATION	Perspectiva Nacional	8/31/14	6:00 AM	9:00	With the unaccompanied children crossing the border situation, one of the proposals to define their future is for them to present their cases before an immigration judge. This proposal is seen as an alternative of justice for the children. Discussion with the President of the National Association of Immigration Judges points out the challenges judges face with the high volume of unaccompanied children.
IMMIGRATION	UniMás News Briefs	8/20/14	Various	:30	Operation Coyote was created by the Department of Homeland Security to discourage the surge of immigrants crossing the border aided by smuggling networks. Though there was a surge in recent months of children and families crossing the U.S. border from Central America, the numbers have decreased as the Administration has expedited the return of many of these families back to their home countries.
IMMIGRATION	UniMás News Briefs	8/22/14	Various	:30	The American Civil Liberties Union filed a lawsuit against U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement to get them to change their policies that quickly deport immigrants without attorneys. In addition, other legal groups say a lack of due process for the women and children detained there isn't allowing them to present their cases for asylum.
IMMIGRATION	UniMás News Briefs	8/28/14	Various	:30	The Immigration Appeals Committee decided that married Guatemalan women who have been victims of domestic abuse could be considered for asylum in the United States. This is the first time this is being considered by the office that decides on appeals of cases initially handled by immigration courts.
IMMIGRATION	UniMás News Briefs	9/2/14	Various	:30	A group of civil and human rights organizations denounced a new report by the Department of Homeland Security Office of Inspector General, saying the office's failure to adequately investigate allegations of verbal and physical abuse of unaccompanied immigrant children by Customs and Border Protection officers is an indictment of the agency's commitment to child welfare. The abuse allegations were part of a mass civil rights complaint on behalf of 116 children who entered the country in the past year.
IMMIGRATION	UniMás News Briefs	9/3/14	Various	:30	As President Obama considers executive action to delay the deportation of millions of undocumented immigrants, the public's priorities for U.S. immigration policy have shifted. According to a new national survey by the Pew Research Center, more people are favoring a focus on better border security and tougher enforcement of immigration laws.
IMMIGRATION	UniMás News Briefs	9/5/14	Various	:30	Leaving his timing uncertain, President Obama laid out ambitious objectives for immigration steps he intends to take on his own. He had already received some recommendations from the Homeland Security and Justice Departments for executive action he could implement without Congress. Facing competing pressures from immigration advocacy groups and from Democrats nervous about November's midterm election, President Obama made no commitment about whether he would act in the coming weeks as he had earlier pledged.
