WLOR-AM Public Service - Fourth Quarter 2015

October 1

Brandon from Pi Kappa Alpha's UAH chapter was a guest. He promoted the fraternity's annual Firefighter Challenge on the campus of UAH. The event is a fund-raiser for the local Firefighters fund. The fund financially contributes to families of injured and fallen firefighters.

October 15

Mike Bellamy and Shannon Drake were in to discuss local veterans affairs. Still Serving Veterans is a charitable group providing transition services for veterans. Mike Bellamy puts on an annual car show. All funds raised from the show go to Still Serving Veterans.

October 22

Brent Patterson from the Madison County Sheriff's Office was a guest. He discussed the ongoing affairs of the Special Olympics and how they affect local people with special needs. The Department held a Tip-A-Cop fund raiser at local restaurants. All monies raised would go to continuing efforts towards aid for local Special Olympics activities.

October 24

Marsha (mIDDays) interviewed Kevin Sims from The American Cancer Society. He talked about the local efforts of ACS in providing aid to people with cancer and their families. Because cancer is now the #1 killer of Americans, he said the local chapter would be doubling their efforts to help. They held a Halloween event called Barks and Boos, which included costume contests for dogs and their owners, bobbing for treats and scariest looking dog.

November 12

Tracy Cieniewicz was in to tell listeners about the Krispy Kreme Challenge, a fund-raiser for the local United Cerebral Palsy chapter. She also discussed the local needs of the UCP chapter and pleaded for funds, goods and services.

November 15

Bridget Browning came to promote Buffalo Rock's peanut butter drive. She asked listeners to drop by jars of peanut butter for the local Christmas Charities drive. CC collects cash, goods and services to provide a Christmas for those who otherwise wouldn't have anything for their kids on Christmas Day.

December 12

Bob Ibach was on to tell Bama fans about a collectible football fans could collect. Proceeds from ball sales were given to Extra Yard for Teachers (EYFT). EYFT is the CFP Foundation's primary initiative. The College Football Playoff goes the extra yard by honoring, celebrating, inspiring and empowering teachers.
