There's a saying many Wisconsinites have heard before that we really only have two seasons, winter and construction. But in Green Bay, Pirlot said filling potholes is a year-round season for his crews. From January 1 to February 14 of 2020, Pirlot said his crews have patched 2,533 potholes. That relatively high number for the beginning of the year is not that unusual from years past. During that same time in 2019, the city filled 2,245 potholes and in 2018, crews already filed 3,643 potholes by Valentine's Day.
