Listener comments are solicited on the air through public service announcements. The comments received are transcribed and distributed to all managers and staff throughout the company for review and response. These listener comment announcements air, on average, 507 times each quarter on this station.

The Bott Radio Network News Update is a daily feature that covers topics of interest to our listeners and their communities that are usually missed by the general news coverage of the day. The Update covers a variety of important issues including politics, education, health care, religious freedom and many others. The Update airs at least twice each day, seven days a week on this station.

Please note that programs listed on this cover page that show multiple times contain the same program content. For example, Focus on the Family's program airs at several times throughout the broadcast day, but the program is always a repeat.

Encounter – Special Edition

Air Date: 10/04/2023

Program: Encounter – Special Edition

Issue: Special Encounter // Missouri Secretary of State Jay Ashcroft

Synopsis: Missouri's trigger law that outlaws abortion in the state except in cases where the life of the mother is in danger, went into effect as soon as Roe versus Wade was overturned via the Dobbs United States Supreme Court decision. In its wake, 18 initiative petitions have been filed with the Secretary of State's office which, if any of them was successful in amending the state constitution, could allow limitless abortion without restrictions in Missouri. Eben Fowler and Andrew Yates talk with Missouri Secretary of State Jay Ashcroft about the role his office has in the petition and amendment process, and a recent court case that greatly diluted the potential ballot language that would end up on the Missouri ballot if the petition process is completed. Synopsis: Do you know the real story behind Juneteenth or the true essence of the 13th amendment's role in ending slavery? Join us as we debunk popular misconceptions and highlight the unfortunate reality of information control. We dive into how the spread of factually correct information has been met with opposition, masking the truths of our history.

But that's not all. We delve into an incredible story that's unfolding in Addison, Texas. A church, established by former slaves, is now at the center of a property rights and religious liberties dispute. The Wessons, a resilient family dedicated to their faith, have been tirelessly negotiating to acquire a special use permit for their church. Yet, their efforts have been repeatedly rejected by the Addison City Council. We dissect the implications of their struggle, reflecting on the Texas Religious Freedom Restoration Act and the United States Religious Land Use and Institutionalized Persons Act.

Joining us for this compelling discussion is Jeremy Dys from First Liberty, who sheds light on the ongoing case and the importance of understanding the Constitution and its principles. We take a deep dive into the Religious Freedom Restoration Act of 1993 and the Religious Land Use and Institutionalized Persons Act of 2000, exploring their sponsors and significance. Issue: Quoting Scripture and the School Board: Heather Rooks' Fight for Religious Freedom

Synopsis: Can you imagine being silenced for quoting a Bible verse during a public meeting? That's the shocking circumstance that Heather Rooks, a school board member, found herself in. Joined by Andy Gould from First Liberty, we pull back the curtain on the hostility Heather faced for exercising her religious freedom. With the legal perspective from Andy, we explore how this event has sparked a larger debate on the application of the First Amendment's free exercise clause.

You might ask yourself, how does a school board member face objections for quoting a Bible verse, especially after receiving a staggering number of votes in her district? The answer lies in a surprising shift from the original intent of public education in America. A juxtaposition that takes us from historical instances of presidents and public officials freely quoting scripture to today's hostile reactions. As we navigate through Heather's story, we invite you to reflect on the importance of understanding these shifts and their implications for our nation.

As we wrap up this episode, we turn our eyes to the road ahead. Heather's journey is far from over. Yet, her story sends a clear call to action for listeners like you to get involved in school board races and stand firm in the face of adversity. After all, as George Washington stated, our political prosperity is built on religion and morality. Synopsis: Today is Foundations of Freedom Thursday, which means we'll take the time to answer listener questions on the air- If the Code of Hammurabi was not discovered until the 1900's why is there an image of him in the congressional chamber? Why do cities and coastal regions typically vote liberal and country areas vote conservative?

Prepare for an intriguing journey back in time to 1750 BC, as we explore Hammurabi's code and answer the question, "Did it have any influence on early American law? " We'll shine a spotlight on the 23 lawgivers honored in the Capitol, especially the revered position of Moses. Amidst this exploration, we'll delve into the charged discussion surrounding the 1980s court decisions to remove religious elements from public spaces, including the Ten Commandments.

Imagine if the sentiments of the Founding Fathers about city-dwellers versus rural-dwellers could help decode current voting patterns. Through a close examination of intriguing quotes from our nation's forefathers, we'll attempt to decode this exact mystery. Our journey will take us through intense perspectives about city life from Benjamin Rush, Thomas Jefferson, and James Madison. Adding an extra layer to the discourse, we'll also discuss the biblical story of the Tower of Babel and how it is relevant to the idea that attitudes found in the city are detrimental to society as a whole.

Issue: Global Governance vs Biblical Law with Michele Bachmann

Synopsis: Could you imagine a world where a foreign entity has the power to make decisions on our behalf? In our latest episode, former Congresswoman, Michele Bachmann, sheds light on the dangerous potential of handing our sovereignty over to the World Health Organization. With her vast political experience and current role as the Dean of the Robertson School of Government at Regent University, Bachmann offers a unique perspective that intertwines faith, culture, and government. From discussing the WallBuilders Pro-Family Legislators Conference to understanding how the Biden administration's plans could affect our nation, we uncover a world where God worked through imperfect people to create greatness.

We explore the critical role of training the next generation of leaders with a biblical worldview - a mission that is core to Bachmann's work at Regent University. We also confront the threat of the Marxist 1619 project and reveal the importance of understanding the biblical basis of law amidst increasing government lawlessness.

However, our discussion doesn't stop at the crossroads of faith, culture, and government. We also question the real implications of global governance, especially in the wake of COVID lockdowns. Bachmann probes the increasing authority that the World Health Organization is assuming over global pandemic responses, and how it threatens our sovereignty. With countless proposed amendments to the international health rules and a looming global pandemic treaty, we highlight the urgency of voicing our concerns to federal officers and governors. Issue: Exploring the Roots: The Impact of Faith on Early American Education and Problem-Solving Skills

Synopsis: Have you ever wondered how much our founding fathers leaned on their faith to guide their educational philosophies? We've taken an exploration on this unique topic in our latest episode of the WallBuilders Show with hosts David Barton, Tim Barton, and Rick Green. Our journey back in time shows us how deeply the Bible shaped education, and consequently, our young nation. You'll hear from Tim Barton who shares his insights from the Pro Family Legislators Conference, referencing the teachings of Dr. Benjamin Rush among other notable founding fathers, who argued for a strong Christian foundation for a successful republic.

Education back then was not just ABCs and 123s. It was not unusual for first graders to learn from textbooks filled with religious lessons and catechisms. The alphabet was taught in a way that strongly emphasized biblical knowledge and values. It's an enlightening peek into how our early education system was driven by faith and spiritual awareness.

One might think that such a strong religious influence could stifle critical thinking. Quite the contrary! We learned how the students of yore were encouraged to navigate morally ambiguous issues and engage in creative debates. Such rigorous mind training led to the development of strong problem-solving skills - abilities that would later prove invaluable during trying times. Join us in this intriguing conversation as we draw parallels between the education of the past and the problem-solving abilities of one of the most challenging periods in our history. It's a compelling exploration of how faith played a significant role in molding early American society and education. Support the show

Issue: Investigating America's Past: A Close Examination of Misrepresented History

Synopsis: Prepare for a truth-seeking journey on this episode of The WallBuilders Show. Imagine what could happen if we allowed our past to be manipulated, painting a distorted picture of our nation's history? That's exactly what we're delving into on this intriguing episode. We uncover the trend of rewriting America's history, depicting it as intrinsically evil, and the dire consequences it has on our society. Looking at shocking parallels with George Orwell's "1984," we discuss how controlling the past can shape the future and why it's so essential to preserve the truth about America's history.

Teachers, parents, and students, you may be shocked by what we reveal next! We shine light on how the demonization of America's founding fathers and the portrayal of America as fundamentally racist are infiltrating the teaching of American history. Tim Barton exposes the use of detrimental texts in AP history courses and the disturbing effects it has on our children's understanding of their country's past. We also examine the shocking ignorance about American history among the general public and underscore the critical need for accurate historical education.

Finally, we look at the Declaration of Independence. How well do you know this pivotal document and the men who penned it? We reveal astonishing data showing that many Americans lack basic knowledge about the founding fathers and the Declaration of Independence. We dissect the accusation that the Declaration is racist due to the founding fathers owning slaves. We emphasize the powerful truth that all men are created equal and possess inalienable rights given by God. Join us as we challenge the mainstream narrative and strive to bring truth to light. Issue: Upholding Foundational Rights in the Face of Contemporary Controversy

Synopsis: When President Calvin Coolidge reflected on the Constitution's impact on American prosperity, he likely didn't envision the debates we're entangled in today. We traverse the complex intersections of our nation's biblical roots, historical narratives, and constitutional mandates, especially in the realm of leadership and governance. Advertisements celebrating figures like George Washington have met unexpected resistance, prompting us to question the subjective term 'controversial' and its effects on our cherished freedoms of speech and religion. We dissect this tension with a keen eye on upholding the freedoms upon which our country was founded.

The prospect of government overreach into personal property rights chills the spine of any staunch defender of the Constitution. This episode treads the uneasy ground of President Biden's patent seizure proposal, as we examine the constitutional implications of such actions. We underscore the importance of an educated populace, staying true to Thomas Jefferson's vision, and the foundational intent behind the Patent Clause. Join us for a compelling discussion on the protection of individual rights and the potential hazards of governmental power extending its reach too far into the lives and labors of its citizens.

Corruption and oligarchic tendencies aren't just plot points in dystopian novels; they're real threats that undermine the inalienable rights our founding fathers fought for. We don't just explore these issues; we confront them head-on, highlighting how safeguarding our rights to innovate and create without fear of unwarranted governmental seizure is crucial for progress. Listen as we echo the convictions of our Patriot Academy graduates, who are impassioned in their stance against socialism and affirm the constitutional belief that the power, indeed, lies with the people. "Socialism is bad, very, very bad." Join us for an earnest discussion on the vital importance of protecting our rights and maintaining the essence of a true Constitutional Republic. Support the show

Issue: Building On The American Heritage Series - Foundations of American Government

Synopsis: Embark on a revelatory expedition through America's founding principles as we demystify the Declaration of Independence and its enduring impact on our nation. Uncover the profound truths within this historic document that assert our Creator-endowed inalienable rights, and judge the government's sacred duty to protect them. We scrutinize the historical debates surrounding contentious issues like abortion and homosexuality, proving these moral quandaries are deeply entrenched in our nation's fabric, not just contemporary conundrums.

Venture further into the relationship between the Ten Commandments and American law, where we illustrate the biblical bedrock of our legal system. David Barton imparts wisdom on the scriptural imperatives that have shaped governance since Genesis, exemplifying the divine expectation for governments to uphold justice and righteousness. In the narrative of America's history, we confront the nation's flaws head-on while celebrating its triumphs, reinforcing the indispensable role of government in preserving order and safeguarding liberties.

Finally, we review the Constitution's resolute success and challenge the widespread mischaracterization of it as a secular artifact. We juxtapose the U. S. Constitution's remarkable stability against the fleeting lifespans of other nations' charters and advocate for a return to its original, spiritually-informed intents. Join us as we champion the biblical infusion in our foundational documents and the imperative to acknowledge their divine heritage for the future prosperity of our nation. Support the show

Issue: Building on the American Heritage Series: Remarkable Young Americans

Synopsis: Step into a time machine with us as we reveal the untold stories of youth education in America's past, with the wisdom of historian David Barton illuminating our path. Prepare to be astounded by tales of children mapping the stars and translating ancient texts—feats that would leave many an adult bewildered today. Our journey unravels a narrative of rigorous academia, where complex language and government policies were the playgrounds of young scholars, and surprisingly, elementary spelling bees sounded more like legal lexicons.

We then cast a critical eye on the transformation of education, from a bastion of knowledge and enlightenment to a system that has lost its way. This episode lays bare how today's literacy challenges pale in comparison to the intellectual rigor expected in the founding era, with Barton providing a thought-provoking contrast. We delve into the fundamental shift in educational intent and the role spiritual values played in early schooling, unearthing stories that question whether our current academic standards truly harness the potential of our youth.

Finally, we celebrate the young prodigies who forged our nation, heroes of erudition who graduated from top universities in their early teens, and whose legacies beg us to reconsider the boundaries we place on young minds. Be inspired by the homeschooling movement that carries the torch of tailored education, nurturing a new generation. This is not just a conversation; it's a call to action for anyone who believes in the extraordinary capabilities of our youth and yearns for a return to excellence in American education.
