For young people, in the 'school of hard knocks,' these things might be learned over the years, but with significant stress. Now there's a more practical way. It's called a Financial Reality Fair, offered by many credit unions nationwide. Tena Lozano, executive director of the RMJ Foundation, says the events, "put the students in the role of an adult and we make them make adult decisions just to give them a real-life simulation of what it will be like to be an adult. So, we really focus on the importance of budgeting, wants vs. needs, the perils of credit card debt, and just generally speaking what it's like to live the month of an adult, having to make purchasing decisions."

The New Year glasses "2020" seeing an increase in sales this year, because they look better and the eye holes actually work. If you're not a late night person (or a kid) there is a trend growing in popularity. Noon Year's Eve parties happen in the middle of the day, exactly as it sounds, so that your family can go to bed at a normal time.

Self-Improvement	News	12/31/19	4:30am, 7:30am	20sec	Are you planning on a resolution for 2020? The most popular are to lose weight (experts say 75% of weight loss is your diet), get organized (a simple way is to get write things down), learn new skills or have a hobby (YouTube is the most common place to learn something new), live life to the fullest (decide what matters to you and put it first). Year-long resolutions typically don't stick (less than 10% that make them keep them a month later). Mini resolutions broken into smaller goals, such as monthly, lead to a big goal. It has been found that volunteering and doing "good deeds" reduces your physical pain.
