Time Aired: 6:00 – 6:15 a.m.

Airdate: 01/01/17

Description:

As a culture that seems to have plenty of educational opportunities for those that can pay or take on debt, it feels a bit like we're deviating away from a time of vocational training into a "you must have a degree to succeed" era. The problem many students emerging from school around Washington now, or in recent years, are finding a world without adequate employment opportunities. Couple that with student loan debt, and it's back to mom and dad's basement - around WA it may be a flooded basement this time of year! How do those new to the workforce find work in tricky economy?

The world is becoming more aware of our limited resources. We've heard the idea of sustainability in the mainstream now for a decade in the northwest - Seattle is a city leading the nation in recycling, composting, and awareness of our impact on the earth. But that's not enough, we have to continue building towards a future where our planet can support an exploding human population. Jono and his team are charging at the front of the environmental pack!

On Super Bowl Sunday, 1.3 billion chicken wings will be consumed and 4.4 million pizzas will be ordered across the country. If you plan to host or attend a viewing party this year, most likely that means foods will be left out for long periods of time-scenarios that can be recipes for disaster, not to mention all the opportunities for cross contamination that exists when you're cooking.

An estimated 1 in 6 (48 million) Americans get sick from foodborne illness, such as Salmonella, each year, resulting in roughly 128,000 hospitalizations and 3,000 deaths, according to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC). The USDA's Food Safe Families campaign is offering tips to help consumers learn how to protect themselves from food poisoning as they snack on chicken wings, nachos and dips during the big game.

USDA Food Safety Expert, Archie Magoulas shares the top tips for families on how to safely prepare for Super Bowl parties and prevent dangerous foodborne illness.

Since snake oil has been sold to those “desperately needing snake oil”, the idea of an elixir potion or fountain of long life has been one humans can’t get enough of. According to the national institute of health, the life expectancy has gone up in the last century by something around two decades! What does that spell for earth? Do we have the ability to live longer than that in the next hundred years? Is there a cap? We’ll ask Robert, he’s been a National Science Foundation Fellow in paleontology, a lawyer, author, and army intelligence officer.

The 33-mile bike route around Bainbridge Island starts with a scenic early morning ferry ride across Puget Sound from Seattle, or you can join the crowd directly on Bainbridge Island. The registration fee helps Cascade provide bicycle education programs for children, families, school groups and everyone else who wants to ride a bike. It also helps us advocate for safer, more connected bicycle infrastructure throughout the state and region. And thanks to the money raised, they are able to offer fun and challenging riding events and free group rides every day of the year!

Emily Mosera is the Senior Campaign manager for the Scott Firefighter Stairclimb. The event is happening at Columbia Center on March 12th. The Scott Firefighter Stairclimb supports the mission of The Leukemia & Lymphoma Society, raising money through sponsorships, individual and department fundraising, and entry fees. The Scott Firefighter Stairclimb is the Leukemia & Lymphoma Society's annual fundraiser open solely to firefighters and completed in full structural firefighting gear and on air. In 2016, the event featured over 1,900 firefighters from over 330 different departments and 5 different countries and brought in a record $2.3 million dollars for blood-cancer research and patient services. While completing the climb is a physical triumph in itself, it is also symbolic of, but pales in comparison to, the strenuous journey that all cancer patients endure. As firefighters race to the top of Seattle's tallest building, they keep in mind that every step forward is symbolic of moving towards finding a cure for all those battling a blood cancer.

To date, LLS has invested over $1 billion to develop cancer therapies and advance the production and application of many drug treatments. Now in its 26th year, this event has raised over $12 million for LLS. We are continually astounded by the passion this particular community brings to this campaign, and are excited to aim for our 2017 fundraising goal of $2.5 million!

Those that can afford insurance, will pay higher out of pocket costs for coverage that is less comprehensive. Another key cancer will be the loss of coverage for 21 million Americans by 2020.
