Discussion Regarding the Wall at the Southern Border	Política Ya	1/20/19	6:00PM	11:49	The idea of building a wall at the southern border echoed throughout the country long before Donald Trump became president. Although many rejected the proposal immediately, others considered the arguments that were promoted in his electoral campaign. President Trump said it is crucial to have a wall to protect the border. A survey conducted by ABC News and the Washington Post reveals that in the last three years, the support for the construction of the wall has increased from 37% to 42%. To discuss this issue are Andrew Selee, Executive Director of the Institute of Migratory Politics and Genaro Pedro, Republican analyst. According to Vice President Pence, the problem of drugs entering the border would be fixed by the construction of the wall. The reality is true that 90 percent of the heroin that enters the country is seized along the border. The vast majority of cocaine, methamphetamine and fentanyl consumed in the U.S. has been seized at the border. Most of the drugs are smuggled in on fishing boats, trains, trucks with trailers and common cars that enter through the legal ports of entry.
Mandate of President Trump	Política Ya	1/20/19	6:00PM	8:21	The Trump administration began two years ago and yet an agreement on the construction of the wall has not been reached, causing strong confrontations with Congress, to the point of generating a partial shutdown of the federal government for several weeks. The shutdown is used as a pressure method for Democrats to give in to his proposal of a budget of almost six billion dollars to build a wall. The question is whether closing the government to fulfill his promise is worth it as it is affecting many people. Our guests are Diego Rivera, economic analyst and Sulma Arias. Aprende Ya: "Bedwetter" is a term used to describe people with a political tendency. The term bedwetting is used to denote a frightened, worrying, thinking attitude, fearful of its own shadows. State of the Union Speech	Política Ya	2/10/19	6:00PM	12:32	We discuss the state of the union speech in which President Trump not only gave an account of the first half of his government, but he also called for unity. With us today is Mary Ann Gómez, President of the Congressional Hispanic Leadership Institute and Stan Veuger, Economist and Academic of the American Enterprise Institute to discuss this further. During his speech, President Trump again resorted back to border security saying that members of the MS13 gang cross the border. but is it true that they are invading the country. In La Realidad de Verdad we find out if it's true that they are invading the county. The 2020 presidential campaign is nearing and President Trump is not willing to allow an opponent within his own party to rise. In recent weeks, those in charge of his campaign have launched an unprecedented strategy to gain ground and thus make Donald Trump the only candidate of the Republican Party next year. On the Democratic side, there are several candidates, such as former State of Texas Housing Secretary Julian Castro, Senator Cory Booker, Senator Kamala Harris, and Senator Elizabeth Warren. In addition, there are rumors that the former Vice President Joe Biden could also run. In Aprénde Ya segment, we talk about the term subpoena. A subpoena is a request for documents, or

We analyzed what would be the political scenarios for both parties. Guests: Millie Herrera, Democratic analyst Ninoska Pérez-Castellón,
President's National Emergency Battle	Política Ya	2/24/19	6:00PM	14:05	A new battle arose for President Trump this week with his national emergency declaration, a resource that has been used in the past. National emergencies have been declared 52 times since the administration of Jimmy Carter in 1979, however, none of these declarations had been for the purpose of seeking resources and denied by the legislative branch. The president's national emergency declaration will have an approximate budget of $8,000,000 to ensure the southern border which consists of $1.375 million corresponding to the funds from Congress for the construction of 90 kilometers of border barrier. Our guests are Carlos Salvado, a lawyer and Carlos Manuel Indacochea, political analyst. Edwin Pitti reports on how the military will be affected when the funds that were approved by Congress to be used for the military hospitals and housing, instead will now be funding the construction of the border wall. Democrats assure that President Trump is violating the constitution by declaring a national emergency, and this will lead them to undertake a long battle with Congress and

Russian Interference in 2016	Política Ya	3/31/19	6:00PM	8:18	We discuss the topic of the end of the investigation of the Special Counsel Robert Mueller in which President Trump and members of his campaign were investigated because of the alleged Russian interference in the 2016 elections and for obstruction of justice. Today, we will discuss this issue with Federico de Jesus, Democratic analyst and Luis Quiñones, a Republican analyst. We start with the key points of the summary made by Attorney General William Barr. First: we see that the possibilities of a political impeachment against President Trump are now minor. Second: the report did not exonerate President Trump from obstruction. Third: this is not the end of the investigations. Fourth: this could
