Colorado's attorney general vows to protect abortion access, gun laws	Politics, health, safety	"Colorado Attorney General Phil Weiser calls the most recent term of the US Supreme Court "adventuresome," "aggressive," and "destabilizing." Weiser, a Democrat who is seeking reelection in November, points principally to three rulings: on abortion, gun laws, and the role of the EPA in combating climate change."	7/11/2022
Steamboat is asking voters to tax Airbnbs to pay for affordable housing. Will it work?	Housing	"The plan is to build 2,300 housing units over the next 20 years in an effort to alleviate the chronic lack of affordable homes that plagues Steamboat — and all of Colorado's mountain towns — these days."	7/25/2022
July 27, 2022: Election deniers go door-to-door; Denver Mayor Hancock on mental health outreach	Colorado Matters , politics, mental health	"Election deniers are going door-to-door to look for potential voter fraud. Then, a check-in on what could influence people's votes this fall. Plus, Denver Mayor Michael Hancock hopes to destigmatize mental health issues, especially among Black men. And "Rattlesnake Kate" nabs top honors from the Colorado Theatre Guild."	7/27/2022
Stressed out, busy moms say microdosing mushrooms makes life easier and brighter. Researchers caution that they are 'experimenting on themselves'	Mental health, parenting	"Jackson is one of hundreds of mothers in Colorado who has begun a regimen of microdosing psychedelics to ease the mounting stress and anxiety of what it is to be a 2022 mother on the go. Some have joined support groups to help them with microdosing, some have gone to churches and religious ceremonies. Yet others microdose and do yoga or journal or take a walk with their kids or watch a Disney movie."	8/16/2022
Homelessness is growing in Douglas County — and there's little agreement on how to respond	Homelessness	"There are fewer than 100 people living without shelter in the sprawling county, compared to thousands in Denver, according to the latest estimates. But tents and camps have started to appear for the first time over the last few years, according to county leaders. And Bozarth's job is part of a fledgling — and controversial — effort to respond."	8/22/2022
'Everybody has a place here': Englewood's Brewability makes space for work — and play — for people with disabilities	Equity, accessibility	"Brewability is a brewery and pizzeria in a busy location that fits in easily among the other spots in the busy downtown Englewood area. But, one distinguishing aspect is that Brewability is designed to be inclusive for patrons and the staff of adults with disabilities."	9/5/2022
There are lots of vacant storefronts in Downtown Denver. The city — and its boosters — are offering free rent to some businesses who take a chance there	Economy	"O'Dorisio is part of the Downtown Denver Partnership's Pop-Up Denver program, which seeks to coax small businesses and entrepreneurs to set up shop in empty storefronts in areas of the city that are struggling to recover from the pandemic. Participating businesses still need to pay operating expenses, but there's no rent for at least three months. Businesses also get a stipend for things like marketing and design."	9/16/2022
We asked Coloradans what candidates should talk about this election. Now their answers will drive our coverage	Politics, economy, healthcare, climate, public safety	"The politicians campaigning to win your vote have a lot of issues they want to talk about — but are those really the things Coloradans want to hear?"	9/29/2022
