Duration: 30 secs.

Topic: LEGALIZING OF MARIJUANA IN COLORADO

Time: 2:24 pm

Synopsis:

2014 is ringing in the legal sale of marijuana for recreational use in the state of Colorado. In 2012, voters passed a referendum making non-medicinal use of pot legal. Eight Colorado towns are allowing recreational pot sales, though the sale of marijuana is still illegal under federal law. Colorado set up a system to try and regulate and keep track of black market sales, with regulators setting up packaging, labeling and testing requirements. They also set an age limit of 21, to keep teens from smoking joints. Voters in Washington State also passed a similar law, which will take effect in the middle of 2014.

Topic: UTAH GAY MARRIAGE

Time: 3:18 pm

Synopsis:

Utah on Tuesday took its fight against same-sex marriage to the U.S. Supreme Court, asking Justice Sonia Sotomayor to suspend a lower court ruling that allowed same-sex weddings to go ahead in the heavily Mormon state. Sotomayor, who handles emergency legal applications from Utah and surrounding states, asked the plaintiffs in the case, three gay and lesbian couples, to respond to the application by 12 p.m. EST on Friday. Utah is seeking to block a judge's decision to strike down the state's 2004 ban on same-sex marriage on grounds it violates the rights of same-sex couples to equal treatment under the law. Hundreds of gay couples in Utah have received marriage licenses since the December 20 ruling by U.S. District Judge Robert Shelby.

Topic: OBAMACARE PRIVATE COVERAGE STARTS TODAY

Time: 3:18 pm

Synopsis:

Enrollment in the new Obamacare marketplaces has been rocky, to put it mildly, making January 1 a day of reckoning: Consumers will begin finding out if they're actually enrolled in the plans they signed up for. When open enrollment on the marketplaces began on Oct. 1, there were major setbacks. Fourteen states and the District of Columbia are running their own online marketplaces with varying degrees of success, but 36 states have been relying on HealthCare.gov -- the federally-run Obamacare portal that launched with significant technical flaws. Due to one glitch, insurers were sometimes receiving the incorrect information -- or no information at all - from HealthCare.gov users who thought they had successfully enrolled in private plans.

Topic: BOY SCOUTS ALLOWING GAY MEMBERS

Time: 4:24 pm

Synopsis:

The Boy Scouts of America are breaking from a century-old rule on Wednesday. Over the summer, the organization voted to allow openly gay scouts. That rule change takes effect with the New Year. While the Irving-based Boy Scouts will be accepting gay members in 2014, they will not allow gay leaders. This has been a controversial decision every step of the way, and has led some former members to create their own organization called Life Trail USA. It is nearly identical to Boy Scouts except for its stance on gay members. So far, around 750 boys in the DFW area have signed up for Life Trail USA.

Topic: TARGET FACES PROBLEMS WITH GIFT CARDS SOLD OVER HOLIDAYS

Time: 4:24 pm

Synopsis:

Target Corp, which is dealing with one of the largest ever payment-data breaches in U.S. retail history, said on Tuesday that some of the gift cards it sold over the holiday season were not activated properly. The third-largest U.S. retailer promised to honor the gift cards and said less than 0.1 percent of the cards sold during the busy season were affected. Shoppers can bring the cards to the guest service desk at their local Target stores or call 1-800-544-2943 for assistance.

Topic: NEW LAWS IN CALIFORNIA

Time: 9:24 pm

Synopsis:

New laws taking effect this year will change the way Californians drive, work and go to school. Starting today, teens can no longer text friends using Siri while on the road, and this summer, the minimum wage will increase to one of the highest rates in the nation. Those are just a couple of the changes Californians will see in the New Year, and here are key laws among the more than 800 Gov. Jerry Brown signed in 2013. Drivers: California in September will join two dozen other states in requiring motorists to keep at least three feet from cyclists when passing. Another law continues until 2019 to permit low-emission or zero-emission vehicle drivers to use carpool lanes even when driving alone.

Topic: REFORMS AT MCSO OVER RACIAL PROFILING WILL COST $21.9 MILLION

Time: 3:25PM

Synopsis:

Reforms imposed by a federal judge who found widespread racial profiling by the Maricopa County Sheriff's Office will cost taxpayers at least $21.9 million over the next 18 months, documents submitted by Sheriff Joe Arpaio and his top administrators show. U.S. District Judge Murray Snow's ruling last May determined the Sheriff's Office engaged in systemic racial profiling of Latinos through its immigration-enforcement policies. The law-enforcement agency must now undertake a variety of measures - everything from beefing up staffing and technology to improving training and public outreach - to assure the practice is permanently stopped. But that will come at a cost, Arpaio and his top staff recently warned the Maricopa County Board of Supervisors during hearings on their budget requests for fiscal 2015, which begins July 1.

Duration: 30 secs

TOPIC: THE $21.9 MILLION ESTIMATE INCLUDES SEVERAL BIG-TICKET ITEMS:

Time: 4:23PM

Synopsis:

Salaries and employee benefits to launch a seven-member unit to implement changes recommended by the court order, plus five vehicles, six computers, supplies and fuel for the unit. An electronic data-entry system, cameras for all patrol vehicles, and training for deputies to use the system to input data detailing the reasons for and lengths of their traffic stops. Salaries and benefits for enough new supervisors to assure "effective supervision" for patrol deputies. No more than 12 deputies will be assigned to each supervisor, per the court order. The county will pay for seven additional sergeants, three additional deputies, and all their equipment, stun guns and radios. After fiscal 2015, additional changes ordered by the court will cost an estimated $10 million annually, mainly in salaries, benefits and overtime hours for additional staff.

TOPIC: OBAMACARE SOTOMAYOR

Time: 6:27

Synopsis:

Under the President's health law, most employers who offer health insurance to their workers must include coverage for contraception. Religious organizations such as churches are exempt, but certain other religious-affiliated organizations can also get an exemption by certifying that offering the coverage violates their beliefs. In those cases, there is generally an indirect way that the health plan, acting as a third party administrator, must offer the contraceptives to the employees.

Topic: SCHOOL LUNCH

Time: 3:25 pm

Synopsis

After the school lunch program was overhauled in 2012 to curb childhood obesity, lots of kids began complaining that lunches were too skimpy. Because in some cases, schools had to limit healthy foods - such as sandwiches served on whole-grain bread or salads topped with grilled chicken - due to restrictions the U.S. Department of Agriculture set on the amount of grains and protein that could be served at meal-time. In some districts, program participation dropped as more kids decided to brown-bag it and bring their own food to school. That led food service directors to lobby the USDA to reverse the limits on the amount of grains, such as bread and pasta, and proteins, such as lean meat and cheese. The USDA temporarily lifted the restrictions following many complaints. And, now, according to a new rule announced this week, the change will be made permanent.

TOPIC: COLORADO MARIJUANA

Time: 4:23pm

Synopsis:

The nation's first recreational pot industry has opened in Colorado, kicking off a marijuana experiment that will be watched closely around the world. Activists hope it will prove that legalization is a better alternative than the costly American-led drug war. Business owners who threw their doors open for shoppers at 8 a.m. Wednesday, meanwhile, are hoping the fledgling industry will prove to generate as much revenue as state officials hope it will. At least 24 pot shops in eight towns scrambled to get ready for the opening, increasing staff and inventory and hiring extra security. Washington State also legalized recreational pot, and its industry opens in mid-2014. Legalization critics warn that increased access will lead to an increase in drug abuse, including among teenagers, and crime.

Topic: POT SHOPS IN DENVER OPEN DOOR TO $578 MILLION IN SALES

Time: 5:01 PM

Synopsis:

Colorado projects $578.1 million a year in combined wholesale and retail marijuana sales to yield $67 million in tax revenue, according to the Legislative Council of the Colorado General Assembly. Wholesale transactions taxed at 15 percent will finance school construction, while the retail levy of 10 percent will fund regulation of the industry. Licenses for 136 marijuana stores, a majority in Denver, were mailed Dec. 23, the Colorado Revenue Department said in a statement. Recreational marijuana businesses can open only after receiving both a state and local license, said Julie Postlethwait, a spokeswoman for the Marijuana Enforcement Division. Only existing medical-marijuana retailers can apply for the licenses until July 1, she said. In Denver, home to the state's largest number of such dispensaries, that deadline extends through Jan. 1, 2016. The city's newly licensed shops feature names such as The Green Solution, The Healing House Denver and The Denver Kush Club, according to a map on the Denver city government's website. Colorado residents with a photo identification showing they are at least 21 may buy as much as one ounce of pot in a single transaction, while those from out of state can get a quarter ounce, Postlethwait said. Customers can't consume the product in public.

Topic: FLU OUTBREAK

Time: 2:25 pm

Synopsis:

This year's flu season just keeps going and going -- with the number of states reporting widespread flu activity skyrocketing. In just one week, the number of states reporting widespread flu has more than doubled from 10 states to 25. We're seeing a lot of illness in young adults who may lack immunity. Young people die from the flu every year, but this year it could turn out to be particularly bad because the main flu strain out there, is h1n1 - what used to be called swine flu - and it disproportionately affects people under 65. But there is good news. So far the main strain we're seeing is h1n1, fortunately that strain is well covered by every one of the flu vaccines out there. The centers for disease control and prevention recommends the flu vaccine for nearly everyone. It does take two weeks for the shot to build up immunity so in the meantime, it's especially important to remember to wash your hands.

Time: 3:25 pm

Synopsis:

New York is about to be the latest state to significantly loosen marijuana laws. That's according to the New York Times. State officials told the paper governor Andrew Cuomo plans to announce an executive order to permit limited uses of medical marijuana. The order will let 20 hospitals in the state prescribe pot for some diseases like cancer and glaucoma. It's a shift by Cuomo, who in the past has opposed legalizing medical marijuana. State officials will work to put the new policy in place this year, but it's unclear when medical marijuana will actually be available to patients.

Topic: CONGRESS DEBATING AN EXTENSION FOR UNEMPLOYMENT BENEFITS

Time: 7:23 pm

Synopsis:

The chances of the Senate moving forward with legislation that would restore expired unemployment benefits dimmed ahead of a vote Monday evening. Senate Democrats believe their entire 55-member caucus will support the legislation, which President Barack Obama is strongly pushing. But finding GOP votes remains a heavy lift. But other key Republicans came out against the legislation in the hours before the vote. GOP Sen. Mark Kirk of Illinois - where unemployment is 8.7 percent - signaled he will not back the bill as written, tweeting that the price tag "should be offset with spending reductions." Sen. Bob Corker (R-Tenn.) also said he wouldn't support the legislation. The largest obstacle to accruing sufficient Republican support for the bill is that it does not raise revenue or cut spending to pay for the estimated $6.5 billion cost of extending jobless benefits for three months. Democrats don't believe there is time to find a pay-for bill given the dire situation for the 1.3 million Americans knocked off benefit rolls on Dec. 28.

Time: 7:23 pm

Synopsis:

The U.S Supreme Court on Monday halted gay marriage in Utah by granting a request from state officials appealing a lower-court ruling that allowed same-sex weddings to go ahead in the heavily-Mormon state. The decision by the court means that gay weddings in the state are now on hold while the case is appealed to the Denver-based 10th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals. Hundreds of gay couples in Utah have received marriage licenses since the Dec. 20 ruling by U.S. District Judge Robert Shelby.

Topic: IN STATE TUITION FOR DREAMERS IN NEW HAMPSHIRE

Time: 9:26 pm

Synopsis:

College students who entered the U.S. illegally would get in-state tuition if they met certain requirements under a bill being voted on by the House this month. The students would have to be a graduate of a high school in the state or have gotten a New Hampshire high school equivalency certificate. They would have had to attend a state high school for three years before graduating or receiving an equivalency certificate and have met all the other criteria for in-state rates. The students also would be required to apply for legal residency if they have not already done so and file a copy with the university system. Opponents argue it isn't fair for out-of-state students to pay higher tuition than students in the country illegally. In-state tuition at the University of New Hampshire is $13,670 this year compared with $26,390 for a non-resident. At Keene State College and Plymouth State University, the in-state rate is $10,410 compared with more than $17,000 for out-of-state students.

Time: 2:24 pm

Synopsis:

You might have to wait until your flight crew rests up if your travel includes Boston's Logan International Airport or the three New York City-area airports. Blaming a weekend of bad winter weather and new Federal Aviation Administration rules on pilot duty times, JetBlue canceled nearly all operations from Monday afternoon into Tuesday morning at Logan, New York's John F. Kennedy International and LaGuardia airports, and Newark Liberty International Airport in New Jersey. JetBlue, the only airline to say publicly that the new pilot rest rules contributed to its cancellation of flights during this week's winter blast, had asked regulators for a delay in implementing the changes.

Time: 4:13 pm

Synopsis:

NY governor Andrew Cuomo declared a state of emergency ahead of a major winter storm triggered by the "polar vortex," now sweeping into the eastern US. The state could see as much as 36 inches of snow and wind chills as low as 40 degrees below zero. Road closures and a health advisory were issued by the state of New York in preparation for what are being described as "life threatening" weather conditions. The state was mobilizing 300 members of the NY Army and Air National Guard to assist as the storm moved through the region, along with 3,800 field workers available to respond in the event of power failures caused by the icy conditions.

Topic: OBAMACARE PATIENTS IN LIMBO

Time: 4:13 pm

Synopsis:

The volunteers are considered employees for tax purposes, a classification that grew out of an ongoing effort to attract firefighters by offering them such incentives as stipends, retirement benefits and free gym memberships. That leaves open the question of whether the volunteer firefighters fall under the health care law's requirement that employers with 50 or more employees working at least 30 hours a week must provide health insurance for them. Fire departments say they can't afford to pay such a cost. Faced with the cost of insurance, or being fined if they fail to provide it, departments would likely be forced to reduce the number of hours firefighters can volunteer or eliminate the benefit programs, officials said. That has both fire chiefs and lawmakers raising concerns. Darrel Fournier, fire chief in Freeport, a town of about 8,000 people near the coast in southern Maine that's home to L.L. Bean, said his department is bracing for what could be significant costs under the health care law. He expects he'll have to provide coverage for the five firefighters he employs part time. That would cost the city - and ultimately taxpayers - about $75,000, or a penalty of $150,000.

Topic: NECESSARY HELP FOR UNEMPLOYMENT

Time: 4:13 pm

Synopsis:

Backers of the Senate bill to extend long-term unemployment benefits were one vote short of the 60 they need to clear a procedural hurdle, in a vote set to happen Tuesday morning. Four Republicans said Monday they will join the 55 members of the Democratic caucus to vote to begin debate on the bill. But Democrats still need to find another Republican vote to overcome a GOP filibuster. GOP aides and senators differed on whether any other Republicans would vote for the measure. The vote is scheduled for Tuesday at 10:30 a.m. With more than a dozen lawmakers absent due to travel delays caused by bad weather, the Senate postponed the key procedural vote from Monday on a politically charged proposal to extend long-term unemployment insurance affecting some 1.3 million Americans. Big moments on Capitol Hill from here on out should be viewed through the lens of November's midterm elections, especially in the Senate, where Republicans are aiming to retake control.

Topic: LUNG CANCER LATEST STATISTICS

Time: 8:42 pm

Synopsis:

Lung cancer remains a scary diagnosis, but rates have declined in the past 20 years, thanks to less smoking and better detection. Overall, cancer death rates have dropped 20 percent. Cancer death rates in the U.S. have dropped 20 percent in the past two decades, thanks largely to less smoking, increased prevention and better detection, a new report finds. The rates have fallen dramatically in some areas - plunging 50 percent for middle-aged black men, for instance - while barely budging for elderly white women. And disease experts say there's still plenty of room for improvement. An estimated 1.7 million new cancer cases are projected for 2014, including some 586,000 deaths, according to the new report from the American Cancer Society. And cancer remains the second-most common cause of death in the U.S., behind heart disease. The good news in those grim figures is that the rate of death from cancer has fallen from about 25 per every 10,000 people in 1991 to about 17 per 10,000 in 2010. That translates into about 1.3 million cancer deaths avoided, including nearly 953,000 men and nearly 388,000 women. Lung cancer remains the top killer for both sexes, followed by prostate cancer for men and breast cancer for women. But largely because of declines in smoking, the lung cancer death rate dropped by 34 percent in 20 years.

Judge orders release of SB 1070 emails to check for racial overtones. Opponents of SB 1070 gathered in front of the White House to protest the sweeping immigration law while President Barack Obama met with Gov. Jan Brewer on June 3, 2010. Challengers of Arizona's controversial immigration law - better known as SB 1070 - will now have access to emails, letters and memos exchanged between legislators and supporters of the law to see whether the messages include any racially discriminatory comments. Attorneys for the Federation for American Immigration Reform and the Immigration Reform Law Institute - two groups that favor SB 1070 argued that the documents were confidential. But U.S. District Court Judge Susan Bolton disagreed. She ruled last week that the documents couldn't be protected and should be made public.

Time: 10:42 pm

Synopsis:

The president of the US Chamber of Commerce says the nation's biggest business lobby intends to "pull out all the stops" to pass an overhaul of immigration laws. That would place the chamber on the side of President Barack Obama on one of the White House's top legislative priorities of the year. Donohue cast his organization as both an ally and an adversary of the administration on Wednesday. He indicated support for Obama's stance on immigration and also the President's push for global trade agreements. He distanced himself from some Republicans by saying he doesn't envision a repeal of Obama's health care law. But he said the chamber would seek to eliminate health care taxes and delay or do away with a mandate on businesses to provide health care to employees. Donohue predicted the economy would continue to grow modestly, expanding by as much as 3 percent this year. But he said such growth could improve with less government intervention in business, particularly in the energy industry.

Topic: IMMIGRATION COURTS

Time: 3:22PM

Synopsis:

In a letter to President Obama, a group of House Republicans is rejecting the President's push for comprehensive immigration reform, accusing him of shutting out the concerns of everyday workers and adhering to big business lobbyists who argue that reform will help drive the economy. The letter which was led by Republican Rep. Mo Brooks and signed by 16 mostly conservative House members, argues that immigration will hurt American wages and increase unemployment. It also bashed the Senate's bipartisan reform bill passed last year, calling it an "awful deal. The letter states that the Senate bill would double the influx of foreign workers and add over 30 million immigrants in the next decade, the majority of which would be lower skilled. While immigrants make up 13 percent of the U.S. population, they account for nearly 20 percent of small businesses owners and are responsible for more than 25 percent of all new business creation and related job growth.

Topic: OBAMA FEDERAL GOVERNMENT HELP

Time:

Synopsis:

President Barack Obama is announcing ways the Federal Government can help economically challenged communities through five new "Promise Zones." Obama was to discuss the zones Thursday during a White House event. It's part of his effort to focus on income inequality in the lead-up to his State of the Union address this month. The White House says tax incentives and grants can help communities tackle poverty, giving children better chances at success. By applying federal funding in targeted areas, Promise Zones aim to bolster education, access to housing and crime-reduction programs. Obama first announced the initiative during last year's State of the Union but is just now revealing the first zones to be selected. They're in San Antonio, Philadelphia, Los Angeles, southeastern Kentucky and the Choctaw Nation of Oklahoma. There was also a fair bit of churn. In the first two months of 2009, there were 37.9 million people in poverty. About one third of them, 12.6 million, managed to escape poverty by 2011 - although many were still hovering close to the poverty line. And that improvement was counterbalanced by the fact that 13.5 million people who weren't poor in 2009 became poor by 2011. By the way, the Census study above is looking at the "official" poverty rate, a metric that comes in for plenty of criticism. But the Census has developed other "experimental" measures, too.

Time: 9:24

Synopsis:

Nine U.S. auto dealerships will settle deceptive advertising charges as part of a nationwide investigation by the Federal Trade Commission dubbed "Operation Steer Clear", Automotive News reports today. The dealers in this case made several "misrepresentations" in print, internet and video advertisements that violated the FTC Act, falsely leading consumers to believe they could buy cars for low prices, get low monthly payments through financing and/or make no upfront payment to lease vehicles. One dealer misled consumers to believe they won prizes they could collect at the dealership. The settlements -- which are not yet final -- involve proposed consent agreements which prohibit the dealerships from misrepresenting in any advertisement for the purchase, financing, or leasing of motor vehicles the cost of leasing a vehicle, the cost of purchasing a vehicle with financing, or any other material fact about the price, sale, financing, or leasing of a vehicle. In some cases, the proposed consent orders also require the dealerships to clearly and conspicuously disclose terms required by these credit and lease laws. Fowlerville Ford also is prohibited under the proposed order from misrepresenting material terms of any prize, sweepstakes, giveaway, or other incentive.

Topic: DRIVER LICENSES

Time: 4:26

Synopsis:

The proposed state budget addresses a very big task that the California DMV is taking on this year: preparing to issue special driver's licenses that unauthorized immigrants may begin applying for next January 1. Last fall, California became the latest among a growing list of states to allow people to apply for a driver's license even if they're in the country illegally. It's also the biggest of these states, with an estimated unauthorized immigrant population of roughly 2.6 million. Not surprisingly, state officials anticipate a crush of about 1.4 million applicants for the new driver's licenses just within the first three years. The new state budget lays out $64.7 million dollars for the DMV to implement the license program. There are also plans to open five temporary field offices to handle the load, including Los Angeles and Orange counties. Democratic Assembly member Luis Alejo of Salinas, who sponsored the license bill, says it's critical that the project is well-funded. The license program could begin before January if the DMV finishes preparations early.

Time: 8:48

Synopsis:

When Gil García García began to feel a sharp pain in his left foot, he didn't think it was important. In October he was rushed to a hospital emergency room at the University of California. The diagnosis was devastating: skin cancer, or melanoma, which had invaded his head, lungs, stomach and left leg. Like many undocumented immigrants who have worked a lifetime in this country, García faced a dilemma when he was diagnosed with an incurable disease. They often do not know whether to stay in the U.S. to receive the limited emergency medical treatment allowed given their immigration status, or return to their home country to spend the last stage of their life with family members who they often have not seen for decades. But as a patient with a terminal illness, he was not offered palliative care for those at the end of life. She had not heard of this emerging kind of care, which improves dying patients' quality of life by treating their pain and symptoms, such as nausea, while also providing medical treatment as needed. Palliative care should start well before hospice care, which offers only comfort in the final six months of life.

Topic: US INFLUENZA

Time: 8:39

Synopsis:

Flu season continues to tighten its grip on the United States, with 35 states now experiencing widespread influenza activity, federal officials reported Friday. The flu seems to be hitting young and middle-aged adults the hardest this year, rather than seniors or children, said Dr. Michael Jhung, a medical officer in the U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention's Influenza Division. About 61 percent of the 2,622 flu-related hospitalizations this season have been for people between 18 and 64 years old, Jhung said. Typically, seniors 65 and older account for more than half of flu hospitalizations during a season. This could be because the H1N1 strain of flu is the most prevalent this season, and most younger adults don't get a flu shot. Across all age ranges, about 40 percent to 45 percent of people get an annual flu shot, Jhung said. But only 31 percent of people 18 to 49 years old usually receive a flu vaccination. Young and middle-aged adults also were disproportionately affected during the 2009 H1N1 flu pandemic, Jhung added. Another reason for that trend: Until the 2009 pandemic, the H1N1 flu strain had been dormant for several decades, leaving younger adults with little immunity to the virus. Still, the number of deaths related to either the flu or pneumonia this season remains slightly below epidemic levels, the CDC. An estimated 6.9 percent of all deaths in the United States this season have been caused by flu or pneumonia -- just under the epidemic threshold of 7.1 percent. The H1N1 strain accounts for more than half of the influenza virus specimens that have been tested this season, the CDC said. The U.S. Southwest -- Arkansas, Louisiana, New Mexico, Oklahoma and Texas -- is the region hardest hit by the flu this season. This week, nearly 9 percent of all doctor's office visits in that region were due to flu-like symptoms, outstripping the illness rates of all other parts of the country.

Topic: WEST VIRGINIA - 4TH DAY WITHOUT WATER

Time: 8:40PM

Synopsis:

Frustration is mounting for many of the 300,000 West Virginia residents who've gone three days without clean tap water. The emergency began Thursday following complaints to West Virginia American Water about an odor in the tap water. The chemical had leaked out of a 40,000-gallon tank at a Freedom Industries facility along the Elk River. State officials says they believe about 7,500 gallons leaked. It's not clear exactly how much entered the water supply, and authorities say it could take days for clean tap water to flow again. Officials are pleading for patience from residents in nine affected counties. The Federal Emergency Management Agency is among those sending bottled water and other supplies to the region. Meanwhile, business owners around the capital are wondering how much of an economic hit they'll take. Most visitors have cleared out of Charleston while locals are either staying home or driving out of the area to find somewhere they can get a hot meal or a shower. Virtually every restaurant is closed, unable to use water to prepare food, wash dishes or clean employees' hands.

Time: 5:21PM

Synopsis:

About 15 million Latinas living in poverty in the U.S. and one incident would be enough for anchoring them in financial ruin, so the majority supports more benefits such as sick days and flexible times, according to a report released Sunday. "The Shriver Report: A Woman's Nations Pushes Back from the Brink" portrays the alarming fact that, despite progress, one in three women in the U.S. live in poverty or on the brink of it. In total, there are 42 million women in this condition, among them about 15 million Latino, and 28 million children who depend on them. Although their problems do not reach the level of marginalization of women in other countries, women make up two-thirds of the poor and illiterate people in the world-they are damaging their financial stability. The report coincides with the debate on social inequality in a country where it is sold the idea that women, who make up half the workforce, "they can have it all" but the reality is that "work hard ... do everything and still fail, and that's a drag on the economy," said author and journalist Maria Shriver, a member of the Kennedy dynasty.

Time: 2:23 pm

The Archdiocese of Chicago will on Wednesday hand thousands of pages documenting clergy sex abuse allegations to victims' attorneys who have for years fought to hold the Catholic Church accountable for its handling of such claims. The attorneys plan to make public next week the documents detailing allegations of crimes concealed and priests assigned to positions that allowed them to continue molesting children. The nation's third-largest archdiocese agreed to release the files as part of settlements with abuse victims, and will include complaints, personnel documents and other files for about 30 priests with substantiated abuse allegations. The documents are similar to recent disclosures by other dioceses in the U.S. that showed how the church shielded priests and failed to report child sex abuse to authorities. Chicago officials said most of the abuse occurred before 1988 and none after 1996.

The National Security Agency has employed technology that allows it to enter computers and alter data without connecting to the internet. According to the New York Times, the NSA has been using the secret technology since at least 2008. The technology relies on a covert channel of radio waves that can be transmitted from tiny circuit boards and USB plugs inserted into target computers. The transceivers within the USB plugs communicate with a briefcase-size NSA relay station up to 13 km away. The relay station transmits the data back to the NSA's Remote Operations Center. The technology allows NSA to alter data or transmit malware to target computers. The NSA reportedly has not implanted its software or used its radio frequency technology inside the United States.

Time: 3:23 pm

Synopsis

Combating childhood obesity is a topic a lot of us are invested in. Even first lady Michelle Obama has made it one of her priorities. A recent study shows -- for some kids -- it may be more about their parents' education than anything else. A recent study published in the journal PNAS shows that children from better-educated and wealthier parents also have lower rates of childhood obesity. Researchers from Harvard University found that, nationally -- childhood obesity rates did not rise between 2009 and 2010, but during that same period, the obesity rates for kids whose parents have only a high school education rose about five percent -- from 20 to 25 percent. At the very same time -- kids whose parents are college educated had obesity rates cut in half -- half! From 14 to 7 percent. Why? Well, one thing the study found was that kids in more affluent families were more likely to increase the amount of days they exercised for at least 20 minutes. The poorer kids did not. something to note: less advantaged kids ate fewer calories overall -- But in both groups, calorie consumption was down. And interestingly, all of the kids reported getting the message that they should exercise more and eat better.

Time: 4:17 pm

Synopsis

It becomes illegal starting Wednesday in New York to buy ammunition unless a licensed dealer actually sees you. The requirement for face-to-face bullet sales is part of the law pushed through a year ago by Gov. Andrew Cuomo one month after the massacre of 20 children and six educators in Newtown, Conn. The law has taken effect incrementally since, banning sales of some popular semi-automatic rifles and large-capacity magazines, requiring federal background checks on private gun sales and imposing felony penalties for illegal gun possession. It has also drawn crowds of protesters to the Capitol and lawsuits saying it infringes on Second Amendment rights. For ammunition, transactions are required to take place in person. That includes Internet sales, requiring the face-to-face involvement of the buyer and a New York-licensed seller. A federal judge upheld that provision in a ruling two weeks ago that's being appealed.

U.S. aviation regulators plan to order safety checks of more than 400 Boeing Co 767 jets because of movable tail sections that may jam and possibly cause some pilots to lose control of the aircraft, according to a report in The Wall Street Journal on Sunday. An order by the Federal Aviation Administration (FAA), set for publication in Monday's Federal register, calls for beefed up inspections of a flight control mechanism, known as an "elevator," which helps planes climb and descend, the business daily reported. Spokespeople for Boeing and the FAA could not be immediately reached for comment outside regular U.S. business hours. Elevators that do not work properly have not been identified as causing a 767 accident, the Journal reported. The FAA first became aware of the problem in 2000, when it ordered enhanced checks to find problems. The inspections at that time were viewed as a temporary response. Boeing eventually designed a permanent fix, which the FAA order will direct airlines to make, according to the Journal.

Synopsis:

Challenging lawmakers, President Barack Obama will announce Tuesday night in his State of the Union address that he's raising the minimum wage for new federal contract workers to $10.10 an hour, underscoring a go-it-alone strategy in an election year critical to both parties and the balance of power in Congress. Obama's speech to a joint session of Congress and millions more watching at home will be wrapped in a unifying theme: The federal government can play a key role in increasing opportunities for Americans who have been left behind, unable to benefit from a recovering economy. Yet the President will deliver a split message, pressing issues that will distinguish him and other Democrats from Republicans in the 2014 midterm elections. Illustrating his willingness to act on his own, the White House says Obama will announce that he will sign an executive order increasing the minimum wage from $7.25 to $10.10 for new federal contracts. The measure would not affect private companies' existing contracts, except it would apply to renewals if other terms of an agreement changed. As a result, the order would benefit far fewer workers than the number foreseen by advocates of federal contract employees. Still, the issue dovetails with what will be Obama's broader call for an increase in the broader national minimum wage to $10.10 and for future increases to be tied to inflation. Obama last year had called for an increase in the national minimum wage to $9.

Immigration legislation is one of the top priorities for Obama's second term. But several of the conservatives were adamant that the House should do nothing on the issue this year, a midterm election year when the GOP is angling to gain six seats in the Senate and seize majority control. Democrats currently have a 55-45 advantage but are defending more seats, including ones in Republican-leaning states.

Time: 4:22PM

Synopsis:

One of the best arguments for health-insurance reform is that our traditional employer-based system often locked people into jobs they wanted to leave but couldn't because they feared they wouldn't be able to get affordable coverage elsewhere. This worry was pronounced for people with preexisting conditions, but it was not limited to them. Consider families with young children in which one parent would like to get out of the formal labor market for a while to take care of the kids. In the old system, the choices of such couples were constrained if only one of the two received employer-provided family coverage.

In the short-term, CVS's decision to stop selling tobacco will cost the nation's second-largest pharmacy chain more than it will cigarette manufacturers. In the longer term, it may increase the number of people who quit smoking and provide an opportunity to e-cigarette makers. Walgreen spokesperson Emily Hartwig said in an email, Drugstores account for only 4 percent of cigarettes sold in the U.S., whereas nearly half come from gas stations. Dollar discount stores may make up for whatever sales are lost because of the CVS move. Last year Dollar General said it was doing an "aggressive rollout" of tobacco products and now sells them in about 10,000 stores.

When the President signs the Farm Bill on Friday, he'll be enacting a huge set of policies including an $8.6 billion cut to food stamps over the next decade. But the cuts are concentrated: they will only affect individuals in about a third of states and Washington, D.C. The reason is that it closes what many consider a loophole utilized in some states - one which hunger advocates argue is necessary in light of underfunding. CBO projects it affects about 850,000 households, or 4 percent of beneficiaries of food stamps, formally known as the Supplemental Nutrition Assistance Program. Total SNAP spending had been projected to be $764 billion over the next decade, according to the nonpartisan Congressional Budget Office's baseline estimate. The $8.6 billion is just a fraction of that, but its impact is limited to 15 states.

Facing intense pressure from political and business interests and a growing public outcry, Arizona Gov. Brewer said the Arizona bill was unnecessary legislation that threatened the state's recovering economy by driving away high-profile events such as next year's Super Bowl and corporations looking to relocate to Arizona. Brewer also said she hasn't heard of a single instance in which an Arizona business owner's religious liberty was violated. Her veto - coming two days after state lawmakers sent SB 1062 to her desk - capped a week of escalating furor over the bill. The state's Republican U.S. senators, John McCain and Jeff Flake, the Arizona Chamber of Commerce and Industry, hundreds of protesters and the Arizona Super Bowl Host Committee, which is preparing for the 2015 game, all urged the governor to veto the bill. Women and girls of all ages will finally be able to buy a generic version of the "morning-after pill" without a prescription or an I.D.-just by taking it off the drug store's shelf. The reason is a new Food and Drug Administration policy, which the agency announced last week. The result will be cheaper access to the drug, which can prevent pregnancy within 72 hours of unprotected sex. Generic versions typically cost up to 20 percent less than the name-brand drug, Plan B One-Step from Teva Pharmaceuticals, which sells for about $50 a regimen. It's a victory for women's health advocates, who have emphasized the importance of generics-and, of course, it's a victory for women trying to avoid unwanted pregnancies. But this big step forward comes with a smaller step back. Under the new FDA ruling, makers of the generic drugs must indicate, on the label, that the drug is intended for "women 17 years of age or older." Teva's label will bear no such caveat. The requirement is bound to create confusion, potentially discouraging some people who want the drug from getting it.

Rage often precedes an attack and may be the trigger, say the U.S. researchers who trawled medical literature. They identified a dangerous period of about two hours following an outburst when people were at heightened risk. But they say more work is needed to understand the link and find out if stress-busting strategies could avoid such complications. People who have existing risk factors, such as a history of heart disease, are particularly susceptible, they told the European Heart Journal. In the two hours immediately after an angry outburst, risk of a heart attack increased nearly five-fold and risk of stroke increased more than three-fold, the data from nine studies and involving thousands of people suggests.

Facebook is in talks to buy a drone company called Titan Aerospace for $60 million, according to TechCrunch. The New Mexico-based start-up is developing autonomous solar-powered aircraft that can stay aloft for up to five years at near-orbital heights, which could make them ideal for beaming internet access to remote areas. This holds an obvious appeal for Facebook CEO Mark Zuckerberg, who is focused on reaching the two-thirds of humankind who are not yet online. Google is testing a similar internet access program called Project Loon that uses a network of weather balloons, which are currently aloft over the South Pacific.

Synopsis:

The Obama administration announced Wednesday that it will let people keep health insurance plans that would otherwise be out of compliance with ObamaCare for another two years, in a delay Republicans portrayed as an election-year ploy. The administration had already given people a one-year reprieve after millions had their health plans canceled last year, despite President Obama's promises that people could keep their plans if they wanted. The so-called "fix" was meant to ease the transition as well as the political headache for Democrats -- but the "fix," and the latest extension, will have limited impact, since it is up to individual insurance companies and state commissioners whether to re-offer canceled policies.

Immigrants in the U.S. illegally, including those who moved as children, cannot work as lawyers in Florida, the state Supreme Court ruled unanimously on Thursday even as its sole Hispanic member decried the decision as unjust. The unsigned ruling on a question from the Florida Board of Bar Examiners read like a plea for the state legislature to change the law on professional licensing. It stemmed from an application for bar admission by a Tampa-area resident who is a Mexican immigrant and Florida State University law school graduate. Jose Manuel Godinez-Samperio received a waiver exempting him from showing proof of residency or citizenship to take the state bar exam and passed the test in 2011.

"You want sushi? I got sushi," he says, before eventually pulling raw fish out of his coat. This isn't a Ginsu knife commercial. It's a commercial promoting access to medical marijuana. For the first time, a cable network is broadcasting a television spot related to pot. Comcast, the nation's largest cable operator and parent company of CNBC, began airing the ads this month on channels in New Jersey and Chicago. Massachusetts will be added next week. This historic move is being praised by legalization advocates, but it is not sitting well with the Drug Free America Foundation.

In a meeting with reporters afterward, they detailed their likely strategy for trying to force a House vote on immigration. It involves what's called a discharge petition, a procedural maneuver that would require 218 votes to succeed. If successful, it would force a vote on a pending Democratic-backed House immigration bill similar to the comprehensive bill approved last summer in the Senate, with a path to legal status for unauthorized immigrants, and eventually to U.S. citizenship.

Colorado made roughly $2 million in marijuana taxes in January, state revenue officials reported Monday in the world's first accounting of the recreational pot business. The tax total reported by the state Department of Revenue indicates $14.02 million worth of recreational pot was sold. The state collected roughly $2.01 million in taxes. Colorado legalized pot in 2012, but the commercial sale of marijuana didn't begin until January. Washington state sales begin in coming months. The pot taxes come from 12.9 percent sales taxes and 15 percent excise taxes. Voters approved the pot taxes last year. They declared that the first $40 million of the excise tax must go to school construction; the rest will be spent by state lawmakers. Colorado has about 160 state-licensed recreational marijuana stores, though local licensing kept some from opening in January. Local governments also have the ability to levy additional pot sales taxes if they wish.

With the vocal blessing of House Speaker Will Weatherford, R-Wesley Chapel, the bill has received two unanimous votes in its committee stops and will now be voted on by the entire House. That the bill was assigned just two committee stops was early indication it's a top House priority. Most bills must go through three committees. You might have heard it before: being married may be good for your health. In a new study, researchers screened 3.5 million adults for cardiovascular problems and found that those who were married had less heart disease and healthier blood vessels throughout the body than people who were single, divorced or widowed. Dr. Jeffrey Kuvin, spokesperson for the American College of Cardiology, says the findings may be linked in part to the effects of stress and the strength of a marriage. In a healthy marriage, there may be less conflict and less stress. Extreme stress, on the other hand, such as the loss of a spouse, has been linked to broken heart syndrome, a condition in which people can die from a broken heart, also known as stress-induced cardiomyopathy. The health effects of marriage may also be linked to the psychosocial aspects of the partnership. A spouse may be more likely to remind you to go see the doctor, to take your medicines, to socialize and to get some exercise.

There were no reports of major damage or injuries. In the Orange County city of Fullerton, 20 apartment units and half a dozen homes were red-tagged, displacing 83 people, police Lt. Mike Chlebowsky said Southern California Edison reported power outages to about 2,000 customers following the quake. More than 100 aftershocks followed, including a magnitude-3.4 that hit Saturday morning. The main shock was preceded by two foreshocks registering magnitudes 3.6 and 2.1, scientists said. Broken glass, gas leaks, water main breaks and a rockslide were reported near the epicenter, according to Twitter updates from local authorities. There were no immediate reports of damage in the Coachella Valley.

Topic: LAST DAY OBAMACARE

Time: 5:37 pm

Synopsis:

The federal website for U.S. consumers to enroll in private health insurance under Obamacare ran into problems twice on Monday because of a surge of people trying to access the site hours before a midnight deadline to sign up for coverage. More than 6 million people had signed up for private health coverage through the new Obamacare insurance markets by last week, surpassing a target set after a disastrous October rollout called the enrollment process into question. With daily volumes continuing to surge, analysts believe the final tally could approach or even exceed an original goal of 7 million.

Topic: MANDATORY CAR CAMERA

Time: 5:40 pm

Synopsis:

Rear-view cameras watch behind your car and send a video feed to a screen in your dashboard, often with helpful data like distance to obstacles and vehicles trajectory overlaid on top. They've been optional up to now, but the Department of Transportation has for years been considering more specific rules governing their inclusion in vehicles. The NHTSA says around 210 deaths and 15,000 injuries result from back-up accidents every year, and 31% percent of those deaths reportedly are children under five years old.

Topic: AUTISM IS AFFECTING HISPANICS IN THE U.S

Time: 5:45 pm

Synopsis:

The government's estimate of autism has moved up again to 1 in 68 U.S. children, a 30 percent increase in two years. But health officials say the new number may not mean autism is more common. Much of the increase is believed to be from a cultural and medical shift, with doctors diagnosing autism more frequently, especially in children with milder problems. Autism and related disorders continue to be diagnosed far more often in boys than girls, and in whites than blacks or Hispanics. The racial and ethnic differences probably reflects white communities' greater focus on looking for autism and white parents' access to doctors, because there's no biological reason to believe whites get autism more than other people, CDC officials said at a press briefing Thursday.

Title: GRADUATE STUDENTS WORK FOR MINIMUM WAGE

Time: 5:47 pm

Synopsis:

About 260,000 people who had a college or professional degree made at or below the federal minimum wage of $7.25 per hour last year, according to the Bureau of Labor Statistics. Things may be looking up a little, though -- it's the smallest number since 2008. The worst year was 2010, when the number skyrocketed to 327,000. Despite the recent improvement, the number of workers with college degrees is still more than double what it was in 2005, prior to the Great Recession.

As the new legislative session this year begins, finding funds to restore this federal aid is a priority of the Senate. On this issue, Senator Tim Kaine, a Democrat from Virginia, visits us on the show to give an overview of what happens behind the scenes between both political parties . He also comments on what it means that the state of Virginia is once again a Democratic territory and what will happen if the Immigration Reform reaches a Legislative Conference right after spring. And with the arrival of 2014, Obamacare coverage begun. Annette Raveneau of Enroll America and Get Covered America, joins us to offer some new information related to the enrollment process and coverage, especially now that registration period has been extended until March 31st. Mayra Alvarez, one of the highest officials of the federal Department of Health on the Obamacare program, will join us in the show. In this show we will discuss the findings of two major studies on the topic of circular migration. On the one hand, the increasing return of Mexicans to their native land, after having migrated to the United States. The reason? Aracely Garcia- Granados, Executive Director of Mexicans and Americans Thinking Together (MATT) and Miguel Salazar, from the Woodrow Wilson Mexican Institute, come to our show with evidence that family ties and nostalgia are the main causes behind more Mexicans returning to their country. They also tell us why this is the other side of the immigration system that the Congress of the United States should take into consideration for the Immigration Reform. On the other hand, the alarming figure reached by unaccompanied children migrating to meet their relatives the U.S. They come from different cities in Central America, defying many dangers of such route, especially when crossing the border. Last year alone, an estimated 25,000 children tried to migrate to the United States, according to a study published by the U.S. Committee for Refugees and Immigrants. Because of the multiple dangers it represents, and in clear violation of human rights, Ricardo Gambetta and Roberto Ponce, accompany us on the show to offer more of the results of this study, which was made possible in collaboration with the Universidad Tecnológica de El Salvador .	TRT is 23:51 and segment times as follows:  Segment #1: 10:13  Segment #2: 06:27  Segment #3: 06:23  Segment #4: 00:48

January 25-26, 2014 Washington, DC –  Show #4 2014  (WFDC)	Host: Armando Guzmán	Just days before President Barack Obama offers his State of the Union address to the nation, we get to talk about one of the most relevant economic issues in Congress: the possible increase to the minimum wage. Currently, the federal minimum hourly wage is $ 7.25 and aims to gradually increase to $10.10, in a three years period. Is it possible? Will there be consensus in Congress ? Texas Democratic Representative, Pete Gallego, joins us in the show to tell us more about the legislative discussions on the topic. In addition, the winter meeting of the Republican National Party took place in nation's capital this week, and we took advantage to invite two delegates to the show. First, former attorney general of Puerto Rico, Jose Fuentes Agostini, with whom Armando Guzman discusses relevant political issues: the possible candidacy of the governor of New Jersey, Chris Christie; the Republican strategy to attract the Latino vote; and also where Republicans stand towards making the Immigration Reform a reality . With attorney Vanessa Viera, Armando will talk about abortion, as another March of Life rolled into Washington, DC. The March of Life comes to the capital city every year claiming for women's rights and pro-abortion . In our show, we'll analyze the Colorado's experience and challenges on this topic. Congressman Jared Polis, (D) Colorado, visits us to discuss the lessons learned and what remains to be done with the controlled sale of this drug. Colorado's experience with marijuana is being closely watched by other states trying to follow its footsteps, whether for medicinal or recreational use. This is the case of the state of Maryland and the District of Columbia. Joining us in the show will be Maryland's Democratic Delegate, Ana Sol Gutierrez, and the Director of the Department of Health of the District of Columbia, Dr. Joxel Garcia. They make an analysis of Colorado's case and how it paves the way for their respective states laws and assertive public health policies about marijuana. Joining us from Denver, Colorado will be Rafael Henríquez, with a special report on the topic.	TRT is 23:50 and segment times as follows: Segment #1: 09:02 Segment #2: 08:48 Segment #3: 05:22 Segment #4: 00:38

February 8-9, 2014 Washington, DC –  Show #6 2014  (WFDC)	Host: Armando Guzmán	Republicans unveiled last week a document that outlined their position on passing an Immigration Reform this year. Immediately, activists and pro Reform groups reacted, some welcoming the step and others with suspicion, since the proposal did not include a path to legalization. Days later, one of the top Republican leaders, the influential Paul Ryan of Wisconsin, said there would be no Reform yet in the House of Representatives. We get reactions to the move with two major Latino Democrats in Congress: Tony Cardenas from California; and Raul Grijalva, from Arizona. We also discussed the issue with activist and evangelical leader, Revd . Samuel Rodriguez, who joins us on the show from Boston, Massachusetts, via Skype. Also in the show will be former Secretary of Commerce under the George W. Bush administration, Carlos Gutierrez. He reacts to the Immigration topic and the Republican position, but we also talks about how Latinos and flexible immigration laws will be of great use to address a demographic problem in the United States, which is becoming more and more pressing.	TRT is 23:51 and segment times as follows: Segment #1: 10:42  Segment #2: 06:43  Segment #3: 05:44  Segment #4: 00:42

The Democratic Representative from Illinois summarizes to the community the process and related actions, especially to stop deportations, and offers recommendations to public inquiries. From Casa de Maryland, we also present two interviews of interest. First, the conversation with Gabriela Pacheco, a DREAMer and national leader of the movement, who now is the director of a fellowship program for this population in the country. We also spoke with Alejandra Castillo, Acting Director of the Minority Business Development Administration of the Dept. of Commerce. She will tell us why President Obama and Secretary of Commerce Penny Pritzker again set their economic efforts on Mexico, just as NAFTA (North America Free Trade Agreement) celebrates its 25th anniversary.	TRT is 23:50 and segment times are:  Segment #1: 09:48  Segment #2: 06:44  Segment #3: 06:30  Segment #4: 00:48

For this conversation, Armando Guzman will be joined by Pedro Correa, an activist in Washington, DC against the Venezuelan government; Alexander Main , an analyst at Center for Economic and Policy Research; Juan Carlos Hidalgo, analyst from the CATO Institute. We also spoke with Deputy Chief of Mission at Embassy of Mexico, Mabel Gomez, on the North American Leaders Summit, in which the Presidents of the United States, Mexico and Canada participated . It coincides with the 20th anniversary of the North American Free Trade Agreement (NAFTA) between the three countries, which became a new opportunity to revisit new horizons of economic and commercial development between the three countries. Finally, we discuss the environment and how Latinos are increasingly involved on taking steps to protect it. And not just on the government website, but also in "friendly states" of the Health Care Reform. Sinsi Hernández-Cancio, from Families USA, and Ilya Shapiro, an analyst from the CATO Institute, are with us in the show, they have a heated and frank discussion on the subject, and respond to questions from Armando Guzman as to where is the Act Affordable Care standing and why is it still facing so many pitfalls. We also talk politics, on the eve of one of the most important conservative conventions in the country: CPAC (Conservative Political Action Conference). Its organizer, Al Cárdenas, and conservative analyst Alfonso Aguilar, analyze the present and future of the Republican Party and the conservative values. They also speak of the potential 2016 presidential candidates, including Democrat Hillary Clinton. In our show too, we put Latin America on the national scope. Arturo Estopiñán and Professor Emilio Viano, both Foreign Relations analysts, tell us why leftist governments are backed by the popular sector and how government dependence has an impact in countries like Venezuela, Nicaragua and El Salvador.	TRT is 23:50 and segment times as follows:  Segment #1: 10:18  Segment #2: 06:23  Segment #3: 06:38  Segment #4: 00:31

We start with Immigration, since only 16 days are left before the spring recess in Congress. The urgency of activists, religious leaders and businessmen that Republicans and Democrats reach consensus is great, because this is an election year and primaries. If no progress is made with the Immigration Reform, it may be diluted in the political campaigns ahead and the decision to change Immigration laws in the country might be postponed until 2015. This is what we will discuss with Cristina Jimenez, Executive Director of United We Dream, an organization that lobbies against deportations, particularly among Dreamers' families. Also we discussed the issue with Yanira Merino, Director of Immigration Services of the powerful AFL-CIO union. We also talked about drug trafficking in the Americas, this time based on the proposals of JIFE (or INCB, International Narcotics Control Board) as presented to the Organization of American States. Ambassador Milton Romany Gerner, of Uruguay, criticizes and praises the INCB report, based on his country's experience with marijuana. Meanwhile, drug expert, Francisco Thoumi, offers his views on related international public policies. We conclude our show with an analysis of the situation in the Crimea region, on the conflict between Russia and Ukraine. Will it have an effect in the United States? J. D. Gordon, former spokesperson of the Pentagon, offered his views.	TRT is 23:51 and segment times are as follows:  Segment #1: 09:12  Segment #2: 08:51  Segment #3: 05:26  Segment #4: 00:22

Is Obamacare the responsible that Republicans kept the seat of the late Bill Young? The answer to this comes as Pew Research Center published a study on the "Millennials" , young voters between 18 and 33 years old, which appear to have more socially liberal tendencies. This could be a challenge for Republicans, who hope to win their favor in the polls this year and 2016. There will be a clash of opinions between Maricruz Magowan, a Republican analyst, and Gabriela Domenzain, former Hispanic spokesperson during the last campaign of Obama. Joining us as will will be Rep. Beto O'Rourke, (D) Texas, who co-authors a bipartisan proposal along with Rep. Steve Pearce (R) New Mexico. They demand that the border patrol and other authorities in El Paso, Texas, take greater responsibility in the responsible and humane treatment of undocumented immigrants in the area. In addition, we analyze the presidential elections in El Salvador. Dr. Frederick Mills, from the Center for Hemispheric Affairs, and Joseph Humire, from the Center for a Free and Secure Society, have opposed points of view when discussing the results of the recent election in the Central American country, but also about the possible influence of Venezuela through leftist party and organizations. Mills denies that Venezuela has taken such role, while Humire recounts efforts made by Chavez and Maduro on El Salvador, in hopes El Salvador would join the ALBA plan, the Bolivarian Alliance for the Americas.	TRT is 23:51 and segment times are as follows:  Segment #1: 08:04  Segment #2: 06:59  Segment #3: 08:05  Segment #4: 00:43

Will this be enough time to see the Immigration Reform pass before the Spring Break? And if not, what will happen with 11 million immigrants across the nation? Meanwhile, deportations continue. On these topics, we get to talk with several pro Reform leaders and activists: Eddie Carmona, from PICO; Ben Monterroso, from Mi Familia Vota; Rev. Galen Carey, of the National Association of Evangelicals; and Lorella Praelli from "United We Dream ." In addition, we discuss President Obama's proposed tax credits for fiscal year 2015, which will benefit workers with no children, but also those who have children in daycare or college students. The public accountant Alejandro Mendoza joins us in the show, to explain how Latino families will benefit if this proposal is accepted . And we also talk about what's new this week between Russia, Ukraine, Crimea, the United States and the European Union. Vice President Joe Biden attended several meetings this week in Europe, to ensure the support of the United States to Poland and the Baltic states, which are directly affected with the political and commercial moves in the Black Sea. One of them is Texas State Senator Leticia Van de Putte, who today is ranked as one of the most influential of her party. She will talk about her campaign on Voting ID law restrictions, especially in Republican states. She also speaks of how this situation affects women and why she's running for Vice Governor in Texas. Also in our show, we discuss Obamacare. March 31st is the registration deadline this year for those who are uninsured. Teresa Niño, Hispanic spokesperson for the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services tells us what will happen to people who do not register at that time, the fines to be imposed, the exemptions available to poor people and what happens to those who started the process, but have not yet decided which coverage to choose under the Obamacare. Also Puerto Rico 's Resident Commissioner in Washington, Pedro Pierluisi, will join us to discuss his request, and that of several Senators and Representatives, urging the Department of Defense for an explanation of military maneuvers in Vieques and Culebra islands, both municipalities of Puerto Rico. Over 10 years ago, the U.S. Navy left the area, but has done nothing to clean up the military trash left behind, in many cases it includes active bombs, chemicals and materials that not only affect the environment, but also the health of its residents. Our show ends with an interview with Eliseo Medina, labor union leader and spokesman of the movement "Fast for Families". From the bus where he's been traveling across the country in an Immigration Reform lobbying tour, he talks about what will happen if a proposal is not presented in Congress before spring break. He also talks about his arrest outside the offices of Congressman Republican Mario Diaz -Balart in Miami and what can be expected of activists like him in the coming weeks, pushing for a reform of the immigration system in the country.	TRT is 23:54 and segment times as follows:  Segment #1: 07.56  Segment #2: 06.15  Segment #3: 05.48  Segment #4: 03.55
