Topic: HEALTH OVERHAUL-OBAMACARE

Time: 5:25 pm

Synopsis:

On the day consumers start perusing newly launched federal online health exchanges, Republican governors who oppose President Barack Obama's insurance overhaul have been largely silent. But the law is going into effect without them. Thirty-six states, most of them Republican-controlled, have opted to let the federal government run the exchanges where consumers can shop for individual policies from private insurance firms. Consumers are getting their first opportunity on Tuesday to buy policies on the exchanges, even as the law remains at the core of congressional budget gridlock that has caused a partial federal government shutdown. The exchanges' funding isn't affected by the shutdown. A spokesman for Georgia Gov. Nathan Deal dismissed the sweeping law as "a federal issue" and said his boss had no plans to discuss the launch of the exchanges. State workers in several other GOP-run states were ordered to refer all questions from residents to federal officials. In Oklahoma, state employees were instructed to tell residents they are "not trained or certified to answer questions about the Federal Insurance Marketplace."

Topic: OBAMA AND CONGRESS LEADERS MEET AMID SHUTDOWN

Time: 5:35 pm

Synopsis:

President Barack Obama has met with Republican and Democratic leaders in Congress to try to break a deadlock that has shut down the federal government, but a solution seemed unlikely as both sides dug in for what could be a long stalemate. Obama on Wednesday met with Republican Speaker of the House of Representatives John Boehner, House Democratic leader Nancy Pelosi, Senate Majority Leader Harry Reid and Senate Republican leader Mitch McConnell. Without raising the debt ceiling the government could run out of money to pay its bills by the middle of the month, which could trigger a debt default for the first time in US history. Immediately after the talks John Boehner said that President Barack Obama again refused to negotiate with them to end a government shutdown.

Topic: OBAMACARE EXCHANGES STRUGGLE ON DAY 2 -HEAVY VOLUMES

Time: 4:37 pm

Synopsis:

Consumers trying to use the health-care law's new online insurance markets faced long waits and technical breakdowns for a second day, continuing a rocky start for a system at the center of President Obama's Affordable Care Act. While a federal website serving 36 states was working faster today, some users were still unable to create accounts or reach online enrollment counselors. New York State's health insurance exchange, which crashed under the weight of 10 million web visits yesterday, was offline again this morning and encouraged people to try back later in the day. Operators answered phones on the first day, Oct. 1 2013, of Obamacare at an eHealth Insurance Services Inc. call center in Sacramento, California.

Topic: CALIFORNIA GIVES IMMIGRANTS DRIVER'S LICENSE

Time: 5.27 pm

Synopsis:

California on Thursday joined the growing list of states that allow immigrants who are in the U.S. illegally to obtain driver's licenses - a measure supported not only by Latino activists but by police chiefs and insurance authorities. Democratic Gov. Jerry Brown signed the bill in front of a cheering crowd of immigrants and their supporters, predicting other parts of the country will follow the example set by the nation's most populous state. The licenses, which are expected to become available no later than January 2015, will carry a special designation on the front and a notice stating that the document is not official federal identification and cannot be used to prove eligibility for employment or public benefits. Ten other states have enacted measures to give driver's licenses to immigrants in the country illegally, many of them in the past year, according to the National Immigration Law Center.

Topic: EVACUATIONS ORDERED AS TROPICAL STORM KAREN NEARS US COAST

Time: 7:34 PM

Synopsis:

Authorities issued mandatory evacuation orders for low-lying areas south of New Orleans on Friday as a weakened Tropical Storm Karen closed in on the Louisiana coast after disrupting U.S. energy output. Karen's top winds were holding at 50 mph, down from 65 mph a day earlier, and National Hurricane Center forecasters in Miami said the storm was expected to strengthen somewhat but remain a tropical storm. Oil output in the U.S. Gulf of Mexico had been cut in half as oil and gas firms shut platforms and evacuated some workers in preparation for the storm. The Gulf accounts for about 19 percent of U.S. oil production and 6 percent of natural gas output.

Topic: GOVERNMENT SHUTDOWN DAY 4

Time: 4:35 PM

Synopsis:

President Obama and House Republicans, battling over who was at fault for the four-day partial shutdown of the federal government, found one point they could agree on Friday: Federal workers sent home during the shutdown should get back pay when the government reopens. The Republican-controlled House is set to vote on the Federal Employee Retroactive Pay Fairness Act Saturday. The agreement was a rare moment of accord in an otherwise intractable standoff over government spending, the Affordable Care Act and the debt limit. The two sides traded shots Friday over which side was responsible for the shutdown, which began Tuesday after Congress failed to pass a spending bill for the new fiscal year.

Topic: BACK PAY FOR 800,000 FEDERAL WORKERS

Time: 5.17 pm

Synopsis:

The House on Saturday unanimously approved legislation to provide retroactive pay for furloughed federal workers after the government shutdown ends. The vote was 407-0. Approximately 800,000 government employees have been furloughed during the shutdown, although the Pentagon announced Saturday that it will call 300,000 of its furlough civilian employees back to work. Although the White House has said it "strongly supports" the legislation, it's unclear how the Senate will proceed on the measure.

The upper chamber was not expected to vote on it Saturday, and the Senate will not be in session Sunday. Senate Majority Leader Harry Reid said on the Senate floor that it is "cruel" to promise pay in the future but not allow federal workers to go back to work while the shutdown continues.

Topic: SHUTDOWN HEADS INTO SECOND WEEK

Time: 4:35 PM

Synopsis:

The government shutdown is lurching into a second week after a fruitless weekend on Capitol Hill. A rare Saturday session was dominated by now-familiar shutdown messaging from Democrats and Republicans in the House and Senate, with each side trying to blame the other for keeping the government shuttered. Even House-passed legislation that would pay federal workers prompted an angry reaction from Senate Majority Leader Harry Reid. There were no signs of serious negotiations over the weekend, and the longer the standoff drags on the more likely the fight will bump up against the Oct. 17 deadline to raise the debt ceiling - setting the stage for a giant battle over fiscal policy in the coming weeks. More than a dozen lawmakers took to the Sunday shows to keep making their rhetorical case about which side is being unreasonable in the congressional stalemate.

Topic: SHUTDOWN INITIATES SECOND WEEK

Time: 3:27 PM

Synopsis:

A possible national default loomed closer on Monday as the partial government shutdown lingered, rattling markets in the U.S. and overseas. A gridlocked Congress betrayed little or no urgency toward resolving either of the threats. Stocks got a case of the jitters on Wall Street, and halfway around the world China stressed the importance for the international economy of raising the U.S. debt limit. "Safeguarding the debt is of vital importance to the economy of the U.S. and the world," Vice Finance Minister Zhu Guangyao said, according to the official Xinhua News Agency. China holds $1.277 trillion in U.S. Treasury bonds, second only to Japan. At home, the political rhetoric was unchanged -- and generally uncompromising -- while a new poll suggested Republicans are paying a heavier price than Democrats for the deadlock.

Duration: 45 secs

Topic: U.S RAIDS LATEST

Time: 7:41 PM

Synopsis:

U.S. interrogators headed to an American warship in the Mediterranean to question a suspected Libyan al-Qaida operative linked to the bombings of U.S. embassies in Africa, as new details emerged Monday about plots planned by a Kenyan militant who escaped a U.S. raid in Somalia. The two operations, thousands of miles apart in Africa and approved by President Barack Obama, signaled an American readiness to go after militants in nations where authorities are unable to do so, even years later. The suspect captured in Tripoli is under U.S. federal indictment but was being held in military custody aboard the USS San Antonio in international waters -- detained under the laws of war as an enemy combatant. A computer expert known as Abu Anas al-Libi, he is accused of using an early-generation Apple computer to assemble surveillance photographs in Nairobi ahead of the deadly 1998 bombing of the U.S. Embassy, according to a former U.S. law enforcement official. The surveillance information was presented to Osama bin Laden, who approved the bombing, said the official, who spoke on condition of anonymity because he wasn't authorized to speak about the case.

Topic: DIGNITY AND RESPECT PRO-IMMIGRATION REFORM MARCH

Time: 2:25 PM

Synopsis:

An immigration rally on the National Mall ended in several arrests Tuesday afternoon. The "Camino Americano: March for Dignity and Respect" was held as scheduled despite the Mall being closed for the government shutdown. Several popular Latino artists and members of Congress were also in attendance to call on Congress to approve comprehensive immigration reform. During the afternoon, dozens of people broke off from the main group and blocked 1st Street NW, in an attempt to show how much they are willing to put on the line for immigration reform and a path to citizenship. According to Capitol Police, 200 demonstrators refusing to move were arrested around 4 p.m. and charged with crowding, obstructing and incommoding. Included were several Democratic congressmen, including civil rights activist Rep. John Lewis (D-Ga.).

Duration: 45 secs

Topic: OBAMA SHUTDOWN

Time: 4:17 PM

Synopsis:

President Barack Obama and House Speaker John Boehner are increasing the pressure on each other to bend in their deadlock over the federal debt limit and the partial government shutdown. Even as they do, there are hints they might consider a brief truce. With the shutdown in its eight day Tuesday and a potential economy-shaking federal default edging ever closer, neither side was showing signs of capitulating. Republicans were demanding talks on deficit reduction and Obama's 2010 health care law as the price for boosting the government's borrowing authority and returning civil servants to work, while the president wanted Congress to first end the shutdown and extend the debt limit. Amid the tough talk, though, were indications that both sides might be open to a short-term extension of the $16.7 trillion borrowing limit and a temporary end to the shutdown, giving them more time to resolve their disputes.

Duration: 45 secs

Topic: SALMONELLA OUTBREAK

Time: 8:07 PM

Synopsis:

A salmonella outbreak linked to raw chicken from California involves several antibiotic-resistant strains of the disease and has put at least 42% of the victims in the hospital, the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention said Tuesday. There have been no deaths linked to the outbreak. Thirteen percent of those sickened have salmonella septicemia, a serious, life-threatening whole-body inflammation, said Caroline Smith DeWaal, food safety director of the Center for Science in the Public Interest in Washington. DeWaal was briefed by Christopher Braden, director of the division of food-borne illness at the CDC. As of Tuesday, 278 people in 18 states have been sickened in the salmonella Heidelberg outbreak. Interviews with some of the patients have linked it to chicken produced by Foster Farms at three California plants, the U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) said Monday. The CDC has been hampered in tracing the outbreak because the government shutdown meant the agency had to shut down PulseNet, a national network of public health laboratories that looks for trends and matches reports to spot food-borne illness outbreaks. It's one of the agency's most important tools in detecting such problems.

10/09/13

Duration: 45 secs

Topic: VETERANS WITHOUT BENEFITS

Time: 2:26 PM

Synopsis:

If the partial government shutdown continues into late October, America's veterans will feel the impact. That message was delivered to Congress today by Veterans Affairs Secretary Eric Shinseki. He told a House panel that about 3.8 million veterans won't receive disability compensation next month if the shutdown lasts another couple of weeks. In all, more than $6 billion in payments to more than five million beneficiaries would be halted during an extended shutdown. In some areas, like health care delivery, there have been few adverse effects. In others, such as reducing the backlog of disability claims, the impact is clearer.

Duration: 45 secs

Topic: THE EFFECT OF LOANS DUE TO THE GOVERNMENT SHUTDOWN

Time: 4:29 PM

Synopsis:

The recent government shutdown is estimated to cost the United States $1.6 billion for every week that the government is shut down. Calculated by the global economic consulting firm IHS Global Insight, this figure translates into about $300 million per day, or $12.5 million per hour of government closure. While the nation scrambles to find an answer to the chaos atop Capitol Hill, American college students, including those on Mount Oread, remain mostly oblivious to the real-world implications of the recent government shutdown.

Duration: 45 secs

Topic: ACLU FILES COMPLAINT AGAINST BORDER PATROL

Time: 8:25 PM

Synopsis:

The American Civil Liberties Union is seeking a federal government probe into allegations of constitutional rights violations by U.S. Border Patrol agents in Arizona. In a letter sent Thursday to the Department of Homeland Security, the ACLU cites five cases in which the group says U.S. citizens were subject to illegal searches, detentions and excessive force. The group is asking for an investigation into the individual complaints as well as a comprehensive review of Border Patrol policies. The complaint comes two weeks after the federal government settled an ACLU lawsuit filed over similar allegations in Washington State. While admitting no wrongdoing in that case, Border Patrol agreed to retrain agents, among other things. Border Patrol officials were not available for comment due to the partial federal government shutdown.

Topic: SALMONELLA IN EGGS

Time: 5:24 PM

Synopsis:

West coast poultry producer Foster Farms made headlines on Monday evening after the partially operational U.S. Department of Agriculture announced an outbreak of Salmonella linked to chicken grown by the firm. At least 278 individuals have fallen ill in 17 states, mainly in California, after mishandling or undercooking the contaminated raw chicken meat, according to the U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention. In a press release following the announcement, the farm noted that it was not recalling any of its chicken products from the three central California processing facilities tied to the outbreak.

Topic: DENGUE TEXAS OUTBREAK

Time: 4:19 PM

Synopsis:

Dengue fever, a mosquito-borne illness uncommon in the United States, has re-emerged in Houston, a new study says. The study by the Baylor College of Medicine shows the virus has been transmitted in Houston, the first evidence the disease so prevalent in the developing world has spread to a major U.S. city in large numbers. A professor of tropical medicine at Baylor and the study's principal investigator said her team found that 47 of 3,768 individuals tested in Houston for West Nile virus from 2003 to 2005 were positive for antibodies to acute dengue infection. The study found two of the 47 died from the infection. The cases suggest there was a dengue outbreak in 2003.

Topic: NATIONAL PARKS REOPEN

Time: 6:08 PM

Synopsis:

The Obama administration said last week it would allow states to use their own money to pay for park operations. Utah was the first to accept the offer, and all five national parks in the state reopened Saturday. Colorado also reached agreement to reopen Rocky Mountain National Park, and tourists returned Saturday to the Grand Canyon in Arizona. In Washington, monuments along the Mall have remained closed, as have the Smithsonian museums, including the National Zoo. Claude Moore Colonial Farm in McLean reopened last week; the National Park Service owns the land, but private donations and fees pay for the farm. The Statue of Liberty reopened Sunday with New York footing the bill. South Dakota, helped by several donations, started paying the National Park Service to reopen Mount Rushmore on Monday.

Topic: CHICAGO MARATHON SECURITY

Time: 6:08 PM

Synopsis:

The victims of the Boston Marathon bombing were on the minds of runners and spectators at the 36th annual Chicago Marathon on Sunday, though for many, thoughts of Boston served more to motivate than to scare. Dramatically increased security and memorial signs, bracelets and shoelaces were evidence of a changed landscape when the runners lined up at Grant Park's starting line. This year, about 45,000 marathoners registered and organizers said 40,230 crossed the starting line, up 2,000 from last year. Race staff said the 39,115 finished the race Sunday, topping the record of 37,475 last year. Nearly 2 million spectators cheered on the athletes, according to a city spokeswoman. The 26.2-mile marathon started at 7:30 a.m. at Monroe and Columbus, winding through 29 neighborhoods continuing as far north as Addison, as far west as -Damen and as far south as 35th, finishing in Grant Park at Columbus.

Topic: THE SENATE TO THE RESCUE?

Time: 5:25PM

Synopsis:

President Barack Obama says that if Republicans can't resolve the standoff over the debt ceiling and the partial government shutdown, "we stand a good chance of defaulting." Obama was at a Washington D.C. charity that has been highlighting the effects of the partial government shutdown by inviting furloughed workers to volunteer. The agency, Martha's Table, is also offering assistance to federal employees who are not being paid and need emergency aid. The visit comes on the 14th day of the shutdown and just three days before the Treasury says Congress must increase the nation's borrowing limit or risk a government default. Later Monday, Obama was meeting with the bipartisan congressional leadership. Obama says the problem is politicians using brinkmanship to extract partisan concessions.

Topic: STORM SANDY COMPLAINTS TO INSURANCE COMPANIES

Time:

Synopsis:

Many families in the state of New Jersey are still struggling to rebuild after Super storm Sandy struck nearly a year ago, destroying swathes of the East Coast of the U.S. On October 29, 2012, a killer combination of weather systems morphed into monster Super storm Sandy, which killed nearly 200 people, and caused an estimated 65 billion US dollars in damage, making it the second costliest cyclone in the United States behind Hurricane Katrina. In one of the hardest hit seaside towns, Union Beach, many residents and businesses are blaming insurance companies, saying they are dragging their feet when it comes to paying out on insurance policies.

Duration: 45 secs

Topic: CONTROVERSIAL QUOTA DRIVES IMMIGRATION DETENTION BOOM

Time: 7:25

Synopsis:

In the past five years, Homeland Security officials have jailed record numbers of immigrants, driven by a little-known congressional directive known on Capitol Hill as the "bed mandate." The policy requires U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement (ICE) to keep an average of 34,000 detainees per day in its custody, a quota that has steadily risen since it was established in 2006 by conservative lawmakers who insisted that the agency wasn't doing enough to deport unlawful immigrants. But as illegal crossings from Mexico have fallen to near their lowest levels since the early 1970s, ICE has been meeting Congress's immigration detention goals by reaching deeper into the criminal justice system to vacuum up foreign-born, legal U.S. residents convicted of any crimes that could render them eligible for deportation. The agency also has greatly expanded the number of undocumented immigrants it takes into custody after traffic stops by local police. Department of Homeland Security (DHS) officials say that they are not needlessly jailing immigrants to meet a quota and that they find plenty of candidates for detention and deportation by targeting criminals who pose a threat to public safety and border security.

Duration: 45 secs

Topic: RETIREMENT NEEDS TO BE POSTPONED

Time: 7:25

Synopsis:

Stung by a recession that sapped investments and home values, but expressing widespread job satisfaction, older Americans appear to have accepted the reality of a retirement that comes later in life and no longer represents a complete exit from the workforce. Some 82 percent of working Americans over 50 say it is at least somewhat likely they will work for pay in retirement, according to a poll released Monday by the Associated Press-NORC Center for Public Affairs Research. The survey found 47 percent of working survey respondents now expects to retire later than they previously thought and, on average, plan to call it quits at about 66, or nearly three years later than their estimate when they were 40. Men, racial minorities, parents of minor children, those earning less than $50,000 a year and those without health insurance were more likely to put off their plans.

Duration: 45 secs

Topic: GOVERNMENT SHUTDOWN DAY 15

Time: 5:20PM

Synopsis:

President Barack Obama said on Tuesday the frantic stop-and-go effort in Congress to avoid a debt default and end a government shutdown is "a mess" as a gloomy mood descended over the White House with time running out to a Thursday deadline. Obama, who is to meet Treasury Secretary Jack Lew on Wednesday, and his Democratic backers stressed there is still time to avoid a historic default even as efforts to reach a deal in Congress floundered on Capitol Hill. The president seemed hopeful in television interviews he gave in late morning, but those hopes were dashed later in the day when Republicans who control the House of Representatives failed to muster support for alternatives to a Senate plan that had bipartisan support.

Topic: McDonald's SALARIES

Time: 5:21PM

Synopsis:

More than half of low-wage workers employed by the largest U.S. fast-food restaurants earn so little that they must rely on public assistance to get by, according to a study released on Tuesday. This ends up costing U.S. taxpayers billions of dollars a year, the study said. Data from the U.S. Census Bureau and public benefit programs show 52 percent of fast-food cooks, cashiers and other "front-line" staff had relied on at least one form of public assistance, such as Medicaid, food stamps and the Earned Income Tax Credit program, between 2007 and 2011.

Topic: OBAMA IMMIGRATION REFORM

Time: 8:34PM

Synopsis:

President Obama slammed the partisan standoff "spectacle" that he said had damaged the economy and America's international credibility, and called on Congress to pass a comprehensive budget, immigration reform and a farm bill by year's end. He praised "Democrats and responsible Republicans who came together" to pass a last-minute deal to reverse a partial government shutdown and narrowly avert the expiration of the federal borrowing authority. Before the bill to end the budget impasse even hit President Obama's desk Wednesday, he and congressional Democrats had pivoted to what they hope is the next big legislative battle: an overhaul of the nation's immigration laws including citizenship for the nation's 12 million undocumented immigrants.

Topic: FACEBOOK RESTRICTIONS

Time: 5:19

Synopsis:

Facebook Inc removed a restriction for users under 18 that previously limited who could see their online postings from photos to musings on the world-wide social network. The No.1 online social network said that teenagers would now be able to manually alter the setting and share information with the public. Until now, a teenager's postings on Facebook were only viewable to their friends, and to the friends of their friends. The change comes as Facebook faces increasing competition from a new crop of mobile and social services, such as SnapChat and WhatsApp, which have proven popular with younger users.

Topic: OBAMACARE GLITCHES

Time: 5:19PM

Synopsis

The prolonged glitches with the ObamaCare website are frustrating many of the president's most high-valued customers -- the young, tech-savvy generation that helped him win two terms and whose participation is critical to the success of the health care exchanges. "You see this situation especially with college students," Michael Cipriano, a student at American University told FoxNews.com on Friday. "They get frustrated, which creates a disincentive to sign up" . President Obama is depending on young people being the backbone of his signature, 2010 health care law. Typically among the mostly healthy Americans, their premiums were supposed to help finance coverage for the elderly, poor and others with long-term illnesses and more frequent emergency-care visits. However, the glitches and other problems that have plagued the exchanges since they went online Oct. 1 could put the plan in jeopardy. The administration runs healthcare.gov for the 36 states that chose not to have their own sites. The 14 other states and the District of Columbia run their own site but are still part of ObamaCare.

Duration: 30 secs

Topic: DEPORTATION UNDER OBAMA

Time: 8:34PM

Synopsis

The Obama administration is approaching two million deportations, a milestone that immigration advocates decry and enforcement hawks dismiss as a failing of the president's immigration policies. Exactly when the number will be reached is unknown, possibly by year's end or more likely early in 2014. But its close enough for immigration activists to invoke the number as they clamor for Congress to move on immigration reform legislation and press President Barack Obama to suspend deportations. Enforcement hawks see the number as a statistics gimmick spun by the administration to appear it has been tougher on immigration enforcement than it actually has. Immigration activists have been organizing around the coming two millionth deportations, having met in Phoenix last weekend for what they dubbed "the conference" . They've chained themselves to buses loaded with immigrants headed to deportation hearings, to and along the White House perimeter.

Topic: CYBERBULLYING

Time: 4:18 PM

Synopsis:

From 2007 to 2010, the suicide rates for pre-teens and teens steadily inched up. According to the Centers for Disease Control, the suicide rate for those aged 5 to 14 was 0.7 (per 100,000 population) in 2010, up from 0.5 in 2007. For teens, the rate was 10.5, up from 9.7 in 2007, the highest rate it's been in more than a decade. Suicide rates have been rising among almost every demographic group for the last several years. While the economic downturn is routinely blamed by many suicide researchers for the increase, for those under 24, experts often link the rise in rates to bullying especially via social media. For 15- to 24-year-olds, suicide is the third leading cause of death, and a 2008 review of bullying research by the Yale School of Medicine confirmed links between suicide and bullying, with some studies showing that bullying victims were anywhere from two to nine times more likely to report thoughts of suicide.

Time: 5:21PM

Synopsis:

Roughly half a million Americans have applied for health insurance through new federal- and state-run exchanges under President Barack Obama's signature healthcare law, an administration official said on Saturday. That figure comes as problems with the federal marketplace's entry portal serving 36 states, the website Healthcare.gov, have thwarted consumers from shopping for federally subsidized health coverage and drawn derision from Republicans, who oppose the law, popularly known as Obamacare. The acknowledgement of the number of applicants, late on a weekend evening, appeared to be part of a ramped-up damage control effort by the White House.

The Obama administration said Sunday it was bringing in extra help to resolve some of the technical troubles that have hobbled the federally run health-insurance exchange, as it acknowledged the depth of the problems with the rollout of its signature domestic initiative. The site "has not lived up to the expectations of the American people. We are committed to doing better," Health and Human Services officials said in a blog post. The post also said that "our team is bringing in some of the best and brightest from both inside and outside government to scrub in with the team and help improve healthcare.gov." America's Health Insurance Plans, an insurance-industry trade group, had offered HHS additional backup late last week, according to a person familiar with the matter. A spokesman for the group said Sunday that insurance-industry experts have been working with officials to improve the system all along.

Time: 5:21PM

Synopsis:

Gov. Chris Christie dropped his legal challenge to same-sex marriages on Monday, removing the possibility that the vows of couples who began getting married hours earlier could be undone by a court. New Jersey became the 14th state to allow gay marriages Monday, three days after the state Supreme Court unanimously rejected Christie's request to delay the start of the nuptials. He has said residents, not a court or legislators, should decide on the issue. The announcement came from a Republican governor who is a possible 2016 presidential candidate and has for years opposed gay marriage while supporting the state's previous civil union law. Brown said his group could look into whether it could continue the legal fight that Christie dropped but said he doubts the courts would allow anyone to intervene.

A Connecticut jury has found two East Haven police officers guilty of violating the civil rights of Hispanics. The 12-member jury reached the verdict Monday on its third day of deliberations in the case of David Cari and Dennis Spaulding. Prosecutors and Spaulding's attorney confirmed the verdict. Cari and Spaulding were among four East Haven officers arrested by the FBI last year for allegedly harassing and abusing Hispanic immigrants. The other officers, Jason Zullo and John Miller, await sentencing after pleading guilty to reduced charges. Lawyers for Cari and Spaulding said federal prosecutors didn't prove their case.

President Barack Obama turned to a trusted adviser on Tuesday to lead a "tech surge" aimed at repairing the troubled launch of the government website at the heart of his signature healthcare law. The websites, which Obama compared to online shopping sites such as Amazon.com, were meant to be the main vehicle for consumers to check out prices and purchase the health insurance offered under the law. The HHS said at the weekend it was launching a "tech surge" for the website, but neither the White House nor the health department has provided details about the cause of the problems, precisely what is being done to fix them and who exactly is doing the fixing. The announcement that Zients would be involved underlines Obama's determination to put the website controversy behind him. Zients has 20 years of business experience as a CEO, management consultant and entrepreneur.

Topic: CURE FOR BALDNESS

Time: 5:22pm

Synopsis:

Researchers at Columbia University Medical Center (CUMC) have devised a hair restoration method that can generate new human hair growth, rather than simply redistribute hair from one part of the scalp to another. The approach could significantly expand the use of hair transplantation to women with hair loss, who tend to have insufficient donor hair, as well as to men in early stages of baldness. The study was published today in the online edition of the Proceedings of the National Academy of Sciences (PNAS). This method offers the possibility of inducing large numbers of hair follicles or rejuvenating existing hair follicles, starting with cells grown from just a few hundred donor hairs. It could make hair transplantation available to individuals with a limited number of follicles, including those with female-pattern hair loss, scarring alopecia, and hair loss due to burns." According to Dr. Christiano, such patients gain little benefit from existing hair-loss medications, which tend to slow the rate of hair loss but usually do not stimulate robust new hair growth.

Time: 7:28pm

Synopsis:

A Los Angeles City Council panel rejected a proposal Tuesday to legalize some of the city's 50,000 to 100,000 garage dwellings, opting instead to crack down on landlords who rent out the illegally converted living spaces. In response to eight deaths in three months due to fires in converted garages, a joint council committee proposed making it a misdemeanor violation to rent out such garages. The penalty would be a $1,000 fine. As part of a package of recommendations, the panel also suggested forcing landlords to pay to relocate tenants from illegal garages to legal apartments. It also proposed a $217,000 education program to teach tenants about the risks of living in garages. But most significantly, the committee disregarded a controversial proposal by a task force of city officials to legalize converted garages that meet minimum safety regulations. The proposal to legalize converted garages was also blasted by nearly a dozen homeowner groups--mostly from the San Fernando Valley--who argued that legalizing such dwellings would ruin the single-family atmosphere of many city neighborhoods.

The items include 12 ounce to five-pound packs of premade chicken salad, ham salad, potato salad and baked beans. They were sold under brands including Cobble Street, cross valley farms and millers. The products bear the establishment number "e-s-t 13520" or "p-13520" inside the U-S-D-A mark of inspection. All of the products were distributed to stores across dozens of states... from Wyoming to Alabama. A full recall list can be found on the food and drug administration's website at F-D-A dot gov.

Topic: IRS DELIQUENCY

Time: 8:33pm

Synopsis:

Nearly 700 employees of Internal Revenue Service contractors owe $5.4 million in back taxes, said a report Wednesday by the agency's inspector general. More than half of those workers are supposed to be ineligible to do work for the IRS because they are not enrolled in installment plans to pay the taxes they owe. Unlike other federal agencies, the IRS requires employees and those who work on agency contracts to comply with federal tax laws. That means they have to file returns on time and either pay all the taxes they owe or enroll in a payment plan. The IRS does a good job of checking compliance when contract workers first start their jobs, the report said. But the agency should do a better job of monitoring whether workers continue to follow tax laws afterward. The report said the IRS vigorously checks tax compliance among the agency's 90,000 employees. Contract workers should be held to the same standard, the report said.

Time: 4:23pm

Synopsis:

Gone are the days when newspapers and TV were sources of news for the masses. A latest survey by Pew Research Center found that every third person in the U.S. get their daily dose of news via Facebook. This widely used social networking site has become a source of news for almost half of the country's population. This happens while checking updates from friends and other groups, the study found. However, just 4 percent of those surveyed said that Facebook was the prime source of news for them. The researchers found that youngsters between the ages of 18 and 29 accounted for almost one third of Facebook news subscribers. The researchers examined data collected from 5,173 participants between August 21 and September 2, 2013. Around 38 percent of those who followed news religiously said that Facebook served as an important news source for them. Out of 3,268 Facebook users, 1,429 stayed updated with the news through this social media. "If it wasn't for Facebook news," one of them said, "I'd probably never really know what's going on in the world because I don't have time to keep up with the news on a bunch of different locations". Facebook addiction is not new. Most of the people, especially young adults, are hooked on to this networking site just to stay in touch with their friends, know about the interesting things happening in the world, and some simply to update others about their lives.

Topic: OBAMA IMMIGRATION

Time: 5:21pm

Synopsis:

President Obama hosted dozens of immigration advocates at the White House on Thursday, imploring them to keep the pressure on House Republicans even as prospects are dimming for a comprehensive reform bill to pass Congress by the end of the year. Obama addressed a room packed with civil rights, religious, business and labor leaders who have formed a broad coalition to support one of the president's top domestic priorities. After demanding that House leaders back a reform bill approved by the Senate or propose their own ideas, the president paused to thank those gathered for their persistence. The exchange - reminiscent of Obama's campaign rallies - suggested that he recognizes that the political fight over immigration is likely to last well into next year, with no guarantees that the House will ultimately support a comprehensive deal. The window for progress on immigration is closing quickly, as Republicans focus on problems with the implementation of Obama's health-care law and with another budget deadline in January. Some advocates fear that the debate might be pushed beyond Republican primary races in the spring. But the White House is hoping that now is the time to strike, with polls showing that the public has placed most of the blame for the 16-day government shutdown on Republicans. In making his case Thursday, Obama said both parties would benefit in polls if Congress made a deal to address the fate of the nation's 12 million illegal immigrants.

Topic: CONGRESS AND OBAMACARE

Time: 7:25pm

Synopsis:

It was the government's fault, contractors on the problem-plagued website for President Barack Obama's signature health care reforms told a congressional hearing on Thursday. In more than four hours of testimony before the House Energy and Commerce Committee, officials of companies hired to create the HealthCare.gov website cited a lack of testing on the full system and last-minute changes by the federal agency overseeing the online enrollment system. Angry exchanges between Republicans who oppose Obamacare and Democrats defending it erupted repeatedly, while the contractors insisted their work went fine even though the software buckled when the system went online on October 1. Complaints about logging in, lengthy delays, incorrect information relayed to insurance companies and other problems have fueled continued GOP attacks on the 2010 Affordable Care Act that was upheld by the Supreme Court last year. The White House and administration officials say the enrollment problems are being fixed. On Thursday, the Centers for Medicaid and Medicare Services (CMS) that oversees the new programs under the health care reforms said almost 700,000 applications have been submitted online on either the federal or state websites. While the applications don't mean that many people have fully enrolled for health insurance under the new system, the figure represents a significant increase in those who have been able to start the process in recent days. House Oversight Committee Chairman Darrell Issa on Thursday raised the threat of a possible subpoena if Health and Human Services Secretary Kathleen Sebelius doesn't respond to his panel's questions and requests for documents about problems with the Obamacare website.

Time: 10:08pm

Synopsis:

A disproportional number of Latino construction workers in New York City die while on the job compared to their coworkers of other races, according to a new report. From 2003 to 2011, three-fourths of construction workers who died were either U.S.-born Latinos or immigrants, according to a review of all of the fatal falls on the job investigated by the Occupational Safety and Health Administration, an agency of the federal Labor Department. The data we have demonstrates that Latinos and immigrants are more likely to die in these types of accidents. Construction safety advocates and a study by the New York State Trial Lawyers Association cited safety violations on job sites run by smaller, non-union contractors and an unwillingness by some undocumented workers to report violations as main reasons for the high number of deaths among Latino workers. They are not providing the training and the safety equipment that are required by law. While New York may have a surprisingly high number of deaths of Latino construction workers, numbers nationwide for Hispanic deaths on the jobs are also greater than any other group.

Topic: OBAMA IMMIGRATION FOLLOWUP

Time: 5:21

Synopsis:

President Obama renewed his call for an immigration overhaul, telling an audience of activists at the White House that the fate of a bipartisan Senate bill now rests with Republicans in the House. The Senate passed legislation in June by a vote of 68-32, giving a lift to Mr. Obama's plans to improve border security, require employers to verify the immigration status of their workers, and provide a path to citizenship for 11 million undocumented immigrants. White House strategists hoped that the vote would prompt action in the House, where Republicans had resisted similar calls for an overhaul of the system. But the effort stalled this summer, with many House Republicans expressing dissatisfaction with the increases in border security and saying they do not support any plan that would allow people in the country illegally to eventually become citizens. Mr. Obama's remarks on Thursday were aimed at rebooting the discussion after months in which attention shifted to concerns about Iran and Syria and contentious disputes at home with the House Republicans that led to a government shutdown.

The Food and Drug Administration on Thursday recommended tighter controls on how doctors prescribe the most commonly used narcotic painkillers, changes that are expected to take place as early as next year. The move, which represents a major policy shift, follows a decade-long debate over whether the widely abused drugs, which contain the narcotic hydrocodone, should be controlled as tightly as more powerful painkillers like OxyContin. The drugs at issue contain a combination of hydrocodone and an over-the-counter painkiller like acetaminophen or aspirin and are sold either as generics or under brand names like Vicodin or Lortab. Doctors use the medications to treat pain from injuries, arthritis, dental extractions and other problems. The change would reduce the number of refills patients could get before going back to see their doctor.

In a memo released late Friday, the agency reiterated that it does not use information provided during the enrollment process to pursue civil immigration enforcement. People living illegally in the U.S. are barred from benefits under the Affordable Care Act health law, but U.S. citizens and legal residents living with them may be eligible. Prospects for comprehensive immigration legislation this year grew murkier on the eve of an all-out push by a coalition of business, religious and law enforcement to convince the House to overhaul the decades-old system. Proponents seized on two developments as a Senate-passed measure remains stalled in the House -- President Barack Obama's meeting at the White House on Tuesday with a House Republican working on legislation and a California GOP lawmaker's willingness to back a House Democratic plan. But in a blow to their effort, Sen. Marco Rubio signaled support for the piecemeal approach in the House despite his months of work and vote for the comprehensive Senate bill that would provide a path to citizenship for the 11 million immigrants living here illegally and tighten border security. Accusations that the pledge was misleading are potentially a deeper threat to Obama than the website glitches that have plagued Healthcare.gov since its Oct. 1 launch and allowed only a trickle of people to sign up on new federal insurance exchanges. Obama has downplayed the problems with the website, saying it's like a cash register not working, and has stressed that the underlying product of the 2010 Affordable Care Act is "actually really good". But critics of Obamacare have seized on the hundreds of thousands of Americans due to lose their current plans because they fail to include essential benefits required by the law, and are asking whether Obama misrepresented the law.

ACLU lawyer Cecilia Wang says the state also is settling a suit filed by the Justice Department. The deal follows the Supreme Court's decision earlier this year rejecting Alabama's appeal to revive parts of the law. Supporters and opponents billed the law as the nation's toughest against illegal immigration. The state's Republican-controlled Legislature passed the law in 2011 and Gov. Robert Bentley signed it. More than 47 million Americans who receive food stamps will see their benefits go down starting Friday, just as Congress has begun negotiations on further cuts to the program. Beginning in November, a temporary benefit from the 2009 economic stimulus that boosts food stamp dollars will no longer be available. According to the Agriculture Department, that means a family of four receiving food stamps will start receiving $36 less a month. The benefits, which go to 1 in 7 Americans, fluctuate based on factors that include food prices, inflation and income. The rolls have swelled as the economy has struggled in recent years, with the stimulus providing higher benefits and many people signing up for the first time. As a result, the program has more than doubled in cost since 2008, now costing almost $80 billion a year. That large increase in spending has turned the program, now called the Supplemental Nutrition Assistance Program, or SNAP, into a target for House Republicans looking to reduce spending.

Gay rights advocates from both parties are newly upbeat about the prospects for Senate passage of legislation that would bar employers from discriminating against workers on the basis of sexual orientation or gender identity. The outlook for the Employment Non-Discrimination Act reflects the nation's growing tolerance of homosexuality and the GOP's political calculation as it looks for supporters beyond its core base of older voters. The first test vote is Monday. A Pew Research survey in June found that more Americans said homosexuality should be accepted rather than discouraged by society by a margin of 60 percent to 31 percent. Johnson & Johnson has agreed to pay over $2.2 billion to resolve criminal and civil allegations that the company promoted powerful psychiatric drugs for unapproved uses in children, seniors and disabled patients, the Department of Justice announced on Monday. The agreement is the third-largest settlement with a drug maker in U.S. history, and the latest in a string of actions against drug companies allegedly putting profits ahead of patients. Justice Department officials alleged that J&J used illegal marketing tactics and kickbacks to persuade physicians and pharmacists to prescribe Risperdal and Invega, both antipsychotic drugs, and Natrecor, which is used to treat heart failure. The settlement amount includes $1.72 billion in civil payments to federal and state governments as well as $485 million in criminal fines and forfeited profits. Monday's action is the latest example of regulators cracking down on aggressive pharmaceutical marketing tactics, namely trying to increase sales by pushing medicines for unapproved, or "off-label," uses. While doctors are allowed to prescribe medicines for any use, drug makers cannot promote them in any way that is not approved by FDA.

Border Patrol agents may continue using deadly force against rock-throwers, the chief of the agency said, despite the recommendation of a government-commissioned review to end the practice. The Police Executive Research Forum, a nonprofit group that advises law enforcement agencies, recommended that the Border Patrol and its parent agency, Customs and Border Protection, stop the use of deadly force against rock throwers and assailants in vehicles, Border Patrol Chief Mike Fisher said. Both recommendations were part of a broader internal review of CBP's use-of-force policies and practices that began last year. The measures were not included in a revised policy announced on Sept. 25 that calls for more training and better record-keeping. CBP considered the proposed curbs "very restrictive," Fisher told The Associated Press. Under current policy, agents can use deadly force if they have a reasonable belief that their lives or the lives of others are in danger.

Synopsis:

Today the President will host a meeting in the Roosevelt Room with top business leaders to discuss the importance of getting immigration reform done to bolster US economic growth. Immigration reform will reduce the deficit by nearly $850 billion over the first 20 years, and it'll grow the economy by $1.4 trillion over 20 years, which adds 5.4% to the GDP by 2033. It has broad bipartisan support from Democrats and Republicans, business and labor leaders, law enforcement and faith leaders. The President is willing to work with folks on both sides of the aisle to get this done. It's good for business, good for our economy as a whole, and it's the right thing to do. It's time for the House to take action.

Appearing on Capitol Hill before a Senate committee, HHS Secretary Kathleen Sebelius told Senators the government's health care website is becoming more reliable daily despite the bugs still in place. "In the last five weeks, access to HealthCare.gov has been a miserably frustrating experience for far too many of these Americans. It's unacceptable. I am focused on fixing it, and I'm accountable. I recognize that there is an even higher level of accountability, accountability to the sick, the vulnerable, the struggling Americans who deserve better health care. The impact on the lives of everyday people is getting lost. I know this because I hear their stories, as I'm sure many of you do."

The District of Columbia Council approved a bill on Tuesday to create a special type of driver's license for undocumented immigrants, set to go into effect next May. It's a victory for immigrant rights advocates, who have long argued that driver's licenses for undocumented immigrants would allow them to lead more safe and productive lives. But it also came with a setback: The council agreed to make the licenses different from those of legal residents and citizens by adding a prominently-displayed note that they are "not valid for official federal purposes."

Time: 8:45 pm
Synopsis:

CIA arrangements with a telecommunications company-AT&T to be exact. The spy agency has reportedly been paying AT&T over $10 million to spy on phone calls. The CIA simply gives AT&T a list of numbers, and AT&T voluntarily serves up the data. (No subpoena or warrant required!) They're mainly after the phone records of overseas terrorism suspects but sometimes Americans find their way into the mix. In this case, AT&T "masks" several digits of the Americans' phone numbers, though if the CIA wants to find out who those people are, they just have to ask the FBI to issue a subpoena. And let's not forget that when the CIA pays for AT&T's help, the money's coming right out of taxpayers' pockets. AT&T's starting to look like a real pawn in this game, too. This is the same company that let the NSA tap directly into its fiber optic cables during the Bush era. It's also the same company that embedded employees in the FBI as well as drug agencies to help them tap phones better. They didn't just look at phone records in real time, either. AT&T built a massive database of every phone call that's passed through their switches for nearly three decades.

Time: 10:23
Synopsis:

L.A. City Council approved a request for proposals to build a citywide Wi-Fi network in an effort to stimulate economic growth and "bridge the digital divide." The exact cost of the effort and the type of Internet service provided will depend on the proposals. Councilman Bob Blumenfield who spearheaded the idea, said providing basic Wi-Fi services could cost from $60 million to $100 million. A much faster Internet access system, which would involve installing fiber-optic cables in homes and businesses, could cost up to $5 billion, according to the city's Information and Technology Agency. Dozens of cities across the country provide basic Wi-Fi service, but only a few provide fiber-optic Internet. They include Kansas City and Austin, which made deals with Google to connect fiber cables to every residence. Basic Internet usage there is free, but residents can pay extra for faster connections and television service. Cities have used different funding formulas, with Wi-Fi providers providing discounts in some cases in exchange for permission to advertise. Council members say expanding access to the Internet would allow those who can't afford to pay for Internet access to better compete. They say it would also augment a $1-billion plan at Los Angeles Unified School District to provide 650,000 iPads to teachers and students. An estimated 30% of student households are without broadband access. Nationwide, an estimated 85% of Americans use the Internet, and 70% of American adults have a high-speed broadband connection at home. The city last tried to implement citywide wireless access in 2007, but dropped the plan two years later after officials concluded it would be too expensive.

Time: Synopsis:

More than 62 million Americans will benefit from new rules announced Friday, said HHS Secretary Kathleen Sebelius. In a move aimed at boosting mental health treatment, Health and Human Services Secretary Kathleen Sebelius on Friday announced new rules that will put teeth in a 2008 mental health equity law. The Mental Health Parity and Addiction Equity Act, signed by President George W. Bush, requires doctors and insurers to treat mental illness the same as physical illness. Sebelius made the announcement to applause at the Rosalynn Carter Symposium on Mental Health Policy in Atlanta. The move "finally puts mental health and behavioral health on equal footing on paper". The law made mental health more accessible, but there has been virtually no enforcement of it, said Dr. Jeffrey Lieberman, president of the American Psychiatric Association and a Columbia University psychiatrist. Friday's announcement applies to private insurance. The rules do not apply to people on Medicaid because the Obama administration has already given states guidance on how those plans should be meeting requirements set out by the 2008 law.

The fewest number of suspensions, under 3,500, were handed out in Staten Island's 62 elementary, intermediate and high schools. A third of the schools here, including one intermediate school and one high school, reported no suspensions. The discipline code revisions took suspension off the table for the first time for minor offenses the DOE considers "uncooperative" or "disorderly" -- things like talking back to teachers and staff, leaving school without permission, cutting classes, smoking, or even gambling -- across all grades.

President Obama's second-term approval ratings continue to slide, with a majority now disapproving of his job performance, according to a new Pew Research Center survey. Obama's slide parallels that of his predecessor, George W. Bush, whose ratings also dropped steadily during his second term, although Obama's 41% approval at this point - one year after his election - stands slightly higher than Bush's 36%. By contrast, Presidents Clinton and Reagan maintained a relatively high level of popularity in their fifth years in office. The president's job approval numbers hit a high point in December and have slid steadily since then, with 41% now approving of his performance in office and 53% disapproving, the new survey shows. He has lost ground across the board, including among fellow Democrats. Although his approval in his party still stands at a healthy 78%, that represents a drop of 10 percentage points over the past year.

Time: 4:26 pm

Synopsis:

The nation's first new guidelines in a decade for preventing heart attacks and strokes call for twice as many Americans -- one-third of all adults -- to consider taking cholesterol-lowering statin drugs. The guidelines, issued Tuesday by the American Heart Association and American College of Cardiology, are a big change. They offer doctors a new formula for estimating a patient's risk that includes many factors besides a high cholesterol level, the main focus now. The formula includes age, gender, race and factors such as whether someone smokes. The guidelines for the first time take aim at strokes, not just heart attacks. Partly because of that, they set a lower threshold for using medicines to reduce risk. The definition of high cholesterol isn't changing, but the treatment goal is. Instead of aiming for a specific number, using whatever drugs get a patient there, the advice stresses statins such as Lipitor and Zocor and identifies four groups of people they help the most.

Topic: BOEHNER IMMIGRATION BILL

Time: 5:21 pm

Synopsis:

Speaker John Boehner said Wednesday that the House will not hold formal, compromise talks on the Senate-passed comprehensive immigration bill, a fresh signal from the Republican leadership that the issue is dead for the year. The slow, relatively quiet death came more than four months after the Senate, on a bipartisan vote, passed a far-reaching bill that would provide a path to citizenship for the 11 million immigrants living in the country illegally and tighten border security. That fanfare for that bill was quashed by strong opposition among House Republican rank and file who reject a comprehensive approach and question offering citizenship to people who broke U.S. immigration laws to be in this country. House incumbents also are wary of primary challenges from the right. One of the clearest signs that any action was unlikely was word that Sen. Marco Rubio, R-Fla., who had worked for months on the Senate bill, had abandoned the comprehensive approach. Rubio had taken political heat from conservatives after Senate passage of the immigration bill. Boehner, R-Ohio, reiterated that the House is focused on a piecemeal approach to dealing with the issue. But he declined to say whether lawmakers will consider any legislation this year or whether the issue will slip to 2014, when the politics of congressional elections further diminish chances of action. The No. 3 House Republican, Rep. Kevin McCarthy of California, had told immigration advocates last week that the House won't vote this year but possibly early next year.

The bill, which would exempt every current insurance policy from the requirements of the Affordable Care Act, was vocally opposed by the White House. Still, 39 Democrats voted for it. Upton's proposal differed greatly from the administrative fix announced by President Obama on Thursday. Obama's only allows insurance companies to continue offering plans to existing customers who don't meet the Affordable Care Act's requirements through 2014. The department has long had the power to stop deportations for relatives of military members and veterans, but Friday's memo lays out how and when it can be used. The latest order gives U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services officials the power to "parole in place" immigrant spouses, children and parents of current U.S. service members, reservists and veterans. The change means that those immigrants can apply to legally live in the United States. Margaret D. The new guidelines, released by the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention in cooperation with the American Academy of Pediatrics, call on doctors to prescribe an antibiotic only for laboratory-confirmed bacterial Retailers are trying hard to compete for your money this week. Several stores are launching their Black Friday sales early. The mad dash used to start on Black Friday, shoppers crushing for steals and deals. This year bargain hunting is starting a week earlier. Wal-Mart is slashing its prices for a "pre Black Friday sale " that started on Friday! that's seven days before the shopping holiday that keeps creeping up on Thanksgiving Day. On Thursday Wal-Mart will open its doors at 6pm. Toys r Us opens at 5pm. But how do you entice shoppers to come inside? Big box stores are luring shoppers in with promises of 'low prices' and more price-matching with competitors. At this Best Buy in Fort Myers, Florida they're already camping out for Thursday's sales; same thing in Akron, Ohio. The National Retail Federation says millennials are driving the Thanksgiving Day shopping trend, but it isn't for everyone. Black Friday still draws the biggest numbers. 46% of consumers will hit those sales, and 34% of shoppers will be back in stores Thanksgiving weekend.

A large storm already blamed for at least eight deaths in the West slogged through Oklahoma, Texas, New Mexico and other parts of the Southwest on Sunday, leading to hundreds of flight cancellations as it slowly churned east ahead of Thanksgiving. After the storm plows through the Southwest, meteorologists expect the Arctic mass to head south and east, threatening plans for Tuesday and Wednesday as people hit the roads and airports for some of the busiest travel days of the year. More than 300 flights were cancelled at Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport, representing about one-third of the scheduled departures, and a spokeswoman said deicing equipment had been prepared as officials planned for the worst in a flurry of conference calls and meetings.

Synopsis:

President Barack Obama on Monday urged Republicans in Congress to stop standing in the way of immigration reform, an issue he very dearly wants to return to the front burner of domestic policy and the headlines. But the president's speech was dramatically interrupted by hecklers in a reserved seating section who urged him to halt deportations, of which his administration has conducted a record number. One young man shouted about his family being separated for Thanksgiving, and said Obama should use his executive power to stop this. The president stopped Secret Service agents who tried to remove the protesters.

Throughout 2013, there has been consistent bipartisan and cross-religious support for creating a path to citizenship for immigrants living in the United States. Today, 63% of Americans favor providing a way for immigrants who are currently living in the United States illegally to become citizens provided they meet certain requirements, while 14% support allowing them to become permanent legal residents but not citizens, and roughly 1-in-5 (18%) favor a policy that would identify and deport all immigrants living in the United States illegally. This support for a path to citizenship has remained unchanged from earlier this year, when in both March and August 2013 an identical number (63%) supported a path to citizenship for immigrants currently living in the United States illegally.

Lawmakers have until the end of the year to reach a deal. If they don't we could see milk prices hit seven-dollars a gallon! A key sticking point holding up the bill is funding for food stamps. House republicans want to make changes that would drop nearly four-million people from food stamps next year. Senate democrats aren't keen on making these cuts. Republicans say their proposed reforms would close loopholes and stop people who shouldn't be getting food stamps from getting them.

As a teenage grape picker, Elise Medina learned political action at the feet of Cesar Chavez .In 1968, he watched Mr. Chavez hold a 25-day water-only fast that helped transform the farm workers' union into a nationally known force. Since then, Mr. Medina has been at the center of debates over immigrants' rights, arguing successfully that unions should embrace unauthorized foreign workers rather than shun them as job stealers. The tactics he learned from Mr. Chavez have stayed with him. So there Mr. Medina was on Friday, now 67 years old, in a white tent just below the Capitol on the National Mall in the 11th day of a water-only fast he hopes will "touch the heart" of the House speaker, John A. Boehner of Ohio, and make him act on immigration. Saying he will fast until his body gives out, Mr. Medina has lost 16 pounds; his face, sprouting a sparse beard, looks sunken and gray. But he perks up when he talks about the millions of immigrants - including many members of his organization, the Service Employees International Union, and a few of his own relatives - who are living in the country without legal papers.

Add one more delay to the list for the rollout of President Barack Obama's health care law. This time, it's a postponement of the launch of online enrollment tools in Spanish. The Spanish version of HealthCare.gov now provides basic information, but still doesn't allow users to apply for insurance coverage online. U.S. Health and Human Services spokeswoman Joanne Peters told The Associated Press on Tuesday the administration plans a quiet launch of the Spanish enrollment tools in early December without much advertising. That leaves Spanish speakers getting help by phone from bilingual call center operators or in person from bilingual enrollment counselors while they wait for an online option. An estimated 10.2 million uninsured Latinos may be eligible for coverage through the marketplace. Most of them speak English or are bilingual, but 3.7 million rely on Spanish. As recently as last week, the administration had told journalists the Spanish sign-up tools would be ready by the end of November. Hispanic groups had heard the same thing.

A heckler in San Francisco this week yelled to the President that he "has the power to stop deportation." A clearly irritated Obama interrupted his speech and shot back that he doesn't have that authority, saying the United States is "a nation of laws." Federal immigration law provides for the removal of an individual under several circumstances -- including being in the country illegally, overstaying a legal visa, violation of criminal statutes or a number of other after a judicial process. But the administration has latitude in how to enforce those laws, though legal experts say exercising that discretion too broadly is fraught with political and legal land mines. Sen. McCain said: Millions live in the shadows Ju Hong, the 24-year old heckler is a University of California, Berkeley graduate and a member of Asian Students Promoting Immigrant Rights Through Education, ASPIRE. After the event on Monday at a community center, the group insisted the President can use his executive authority to halt deportations. Hong and his group want Obama to stop all deportations, which they say creates a culture of fear among undocumented immigrants and breaks up families.

Time: 9:24 pm

Synopsis:

The Obama administration today announced a one year delay of online enrollment for small businesses looking to purchase health coverage through federal Obamacare exchanges, another high-profile setback for HealthCare.gov. It's the second delay for online small business enrollment, which the administration had said would begin this month. The White House is trying to get the troubled enrollment website on track for individuals and families seeking coverage, which is a higher priority. It set this Saturday, Nov. 30, as a target date for getting HealthCare.gov working for the "vast majority" of users. The delay of the small business exchanges comes as little surprise, as the administration had said earlier this week it would offer alternative ways for small businesses to enroll. Still, it undercuts the White House message that it's beginning to turn around the disastrous rollout of the health care law.

Time: 4:01 pm

Synopsis

President Obama's healthcare rollout re-do is headed for a crucial test Saturday - and there's a lot on the line. If the federal healthcare.gov website doesn't deliver, the president's credibility, political support and fate of his landmark health care law could be in jeopardy. If the site is able to recover from its disastrous Oct. 1 rollout, it will go a long way in restoring confidence in the program. Just hours before the self-imposed Nov. 30 deadline, the Center for Medicare and Medicaid Services announced the website would be down for an extended period overnight Friday for maintenance, until 8am ET Saturday. During that time, the online application and enrollment system will not be available. The financial success of the Affordable Care Act rests in getting young, healthy people to sign up for the program. If they lose interest or bolt, the program will not be profitable. The White House says it's made numerous upgrades in both software and hardware over the last month, which will allow the site to be able to handle 50,000 users at once and more than 800,000 visitors a day.

Synopsis:

Immigration reform has emerged as the next Republican battleground after a high-profile split between party leaders and the Tea Party over budget compromise led to growing expectation of a similar bipartisan deal to legalize America's 11 million undocumented migrants. House speaker John Boehner signaled a major break from right-wing conservatives on Thursday when he accused activist groups of losing "all credibility" by opposing his efforts to reach a deal with Democrats over the $1tn federal budget. Heritage

Action, a group behind many Tea Party Republicans, claimed on Friday that Boehner was trying to clear the way for immigration reform next year by severing his links with opponents on the right of the party. Some conservative commentators, such as Red State blogger Erick Erickson have even speculated this was the prime motivation behind Boehner's surprise attack on the right, describing it as the "first real shots" in the party's forthcoming battle over immigration. Boehner's office was not immediately available for comment on Friday, and there were plenty of other grounds for the falling out, but experts familiar with immigration reform point to a number of recent developments which suggest he is preparing to work with Democrats on the issue in the New Year.

Time: 10:26 pm

Synopsis:

Unless Congress acts very quickly, some 1.3 million workers will lose their extended jobless benefits on December 28. Democrats were scrambling late Wednesday to link an extension of benefits to a budget deal that is expected to get a vote as soon as Thursday. But if the effort fails, they will come back at it in 2014. And House Speaker John Boehner, R-Ohio, did not slam the door shut on the possibility of renewing the jobless benefits eventually. When asked whether he would consider allowing an extension of the funding, he said he told President Obama he would keep such a plan on the table. The White House, along with Democratic leaders, had hoped to extend the benefits before they expired this year. But those plans seemed to diminish on Tuesday, when Sen. Patty Murray, D-Wash., and Rep. Paul Ryan, R-Wis., unveiled their bipartisan budget deal that did not include any last-minute reprieves for the Federal Emergency Unemployment Compensation program. Because the House plans to leave on Friday, the vote on the budget package is expected very soon. The White House had wanted the benefits included in the budget, saying that besides the 1.3 million people who will lose their benefits on Dec. 28, an additional 3.6 million people will fall out of the unemployment insurance program in the first half of the year without an extension. Democrats, along with a few Republicans, want to have a chance to renew the jobless benefits. A group of moderate House Republicans sent a letter to their leaders saying: "We respectfully request that the House consider a temporary extension of emergency unemployment insurance to protect an essential safeguard that has aided Americans who have endured through a weak economy".

The DOT will determine whether allowing calls is "fair to consumers." Many people consider the idea of cell phone conversations annoying in the close confines of a plane, and some are casting it as a consumer 20 rudest things people do on planes. Meanwhile, Senator Dianne Feinstein (D-California) and Senator Lamar Alexander (R-Tennessee) introduced legislation on Thursday to ban cell phone conversations on commercial airline flights. House Rep. Bill Shuster, (R-Pennsylvania) has also introduced a bill that would prohibit in-flight voice communications but allow text messaging. Those actions come as the FCC considers whether it should lift its decades-old ban on cell phones on aircraft. Are the two government entities working at cross purposes? Perhaps. But each cites its individual and independent mandates. The FCC has banned in-flight calls for technical reasons. But new technology has made that ban obsolete, the commission says, and there's no reason to continue it. The DOT, which includes the Federal Aviation Administration, is entrusted with safe air travel, but also with protecting the rights of air travelers. The FCC has been pelted with criticism in the last several weeks after the commission's new chairman made the announcement. The current requirement that cell phones may not be used in-flight would actually be expanded to include all bands, said Wheeler, unless airlines install new on-board equipment that prevents interference with terrestrial networks.

Time: 7:05 pm

Synopsis:

Bells tolled 26 times in Newtown, Conn., on Saturday -- once for each of the victims who died a year ago at Sandy Hook Elementary School in a brutal, senseless massacre carried out by disturbed loner Adam Lanza. The bells began ringing at St. Rose of Lima Church in Newtown beginning at 9:30 a.m. - the moment the gunman shot his way into the school on Dec. 14, 2012, the Associated Press reported. Connecticut's governor had asked for houses of worship across the state to do the same, and flags were lowered to half-staff around Connecticut. At the White House, President Barack Obama and wife, Michelle, paused for a moment of silence in honor of the victims, standing at a wooden table in the Map Room before three tiers of 26 lighted candles.

Topic: POLL ON OBAMACARE

Time: 4:23 pm

Synopsis:

Americans who already have health insurance are blaming President Barack Obama's health care overhaul for their rising premiums and deductibles, and overall 3 in 4 say the rollout of coverage for the uninsured has gone poorly. An Associated Press-GfK poll finds that health care remains politically charged going into next year's congressional elections. Keeping the refurbished HealthCare.gov website running smoothly is just one of Obama's challenges, maybe not the biggest. The poll found a striking level of unease about the law among people who have health insurance and aren't looking for any more government help. Those are the 85 percent of Americans who the White House says don't have to be worried about the President's historic push to expand coverage for the uninsured. In the survey, nearly half of those with job-based or other private coverage say their policies will be changing next year - mostly for the worse. Nearly 4 in 5 (77 percent) blame the changes on the Affordable Care Act, even though the trend toward leaner coverage predates the law's passage.

Time: 5:17 pm

Synopsis:

Just about every year, one organization or another tries to provide an answer, based on factors as varied as how many people could pass their state's written driving test, how many citations are written for distracted driving and how likely people are to die in a motor-vehicle crash. The latest such survey is from CarInsuranceComparison.com, a website for people to compare features of various automobile insurance companies. For its worst drivers rankings, the website compiles data on fatality rates per 100 million miles traveled, citations for failure to obey traffic signals and seat belt laws, DUI infractions, and tickets for speeding and careless driving. It collects data from the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration, the National Motorists Association and MADD. And the winner is -- drum roll, please -- Louisiana. Georgia is No. 14. According to CarInsuranceComparison.com, drivers in the Pelican State were propelled to No. 1 by finishing in the top five for failure to obey, speeding tickets and careless driving. Louisiana drivers also won this dubious distinction in last year's rankings.

Convincing Latinos to enroll could be crucial to the law's success, and supporters of Obama's signature domestic policy are aiming their campaign at the 10.2 million Latinos eligible for the new insurance plans or the expansion of the Medicaid program for the poor. As a group, Latinos are younger than the overall population in the United States and signing them up in large numbers under the Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act could help offset the costs of covering older and sicker people.

More than a third of them admitted to using it within the past 12 months. Nearly 7% say they smoke marijuana daily. That's nearly triple from what it was 20 years ago. Researchers say going forward they'll explore the link between teen's drug use

Time: 2:24 pm

Synopsis:

Many older adults with high blood pressure can be treated less aggressively, which could mean taking fewer pills to get it under control, according to new treatment guidelines from an expert panel. But not all experts are on board with the advice - including the federal agency that appointed the group. Panel members stressed that they are not changing the definition of high blood pressure: 140 over 90. For adults aged 60 and older, they are recommending a higher treatment threshold, prescribing medicine only when blood pressure levels reach 150 over 90 or higher. Too aggressive blood pressure treatment can cause fainting and falls in older patients, or bad interactions with drugs they're already taking for other illnesses, panel members said. The panel does endorse the lower target of 140 over 90 for younger adults - and for all adults who also have diabetes or kidney disease. The guidelines released Wednesday are based on a review of the most rigorous kind of medical research - studies in which patients are randomly prescribed drugs or dummy pills - published since the last update in 2003.

Time: 5:24 pm

Synopsis:

About half of the raw chicken breasts in a nationwide sampling carried antibiotic-resistant superbug bacteria, a U.S. consumer group said on Thursday, calling for stricter limits on use of the medicines on livestock. It could be more difficult to treat people if they became ill after eating chicken with the antibiotic-resistant bacteria, said Consumer Reports, which describes itself as the world's largest independent product-testing organization. The group said it tested for six types of bacteria in 316 raw chicken breasts purchased from retailers nationwide during July. Almost all of the samples contained potentially harmful bacteria; some 49.7% carried a bacterium resistant to three or more antibiotics, according to the group, and 11% had two types of bacteria resistant to multiple drugs. Resistance was most common for the antibiotics used for growth promotion and disease treatment of poultry. Consumer Reports urged passage of a law to restrict eight classes of antibiotics for use only to treat humans and sick animals.

Topic: DEPORTATIONS WILL LIKELY DROP FOR THE FIRST TIME IN A DECADE THIS YEAR

Time: 7:26 pm

Synopsis:

After rising to record levels under the Barack Obama administration, the decreasing figure, which Bloomberg says is on track to fall by more than 10 percent to a six-year low, resulted from shifting deportation policies adopted by Obama in the face of pressure from activists and Latino leaders frustrated with congressional inaction on immigration reform. The figure marks a turnaround for the President that holds the record for deportations, with nearly 2 million people removed from the country since taking office -- more than double the figure for his predecessor, George W. Bush. During the 2012 presidential campaign, Obama directed Immigration and Customs Enforcement to defer deportation for most undocumented immigrants brought here illegally as children for a renewable, two-year period. The change followed a memo issued by ICE Director John Morton encouraging immigration authorities to use prosecutorial discretion to focus on deporting serious criminals and repeat offenders. But deportations remain high by a historical standard. Bloomberg cited a figure of 343,020 from Oct. 1, 2012 to Sept. 7, 2013, with three weeks of the fiscal year yet to be tallied.

Time: 4:22 PM

Synopsis:

All 1,800 students and staff at a southern California high school will be screened for tuberculosis Friday after 45 students tested positive for possible exposure. The Riverside County Department of Public Health and state officials have determined there is a possibility of exposure to other Indio High School students, though "the risk of transmission appears to be moderately low." According to a letter-to-parents on the school's website, officials said there is one active case of tuberculosis and they do not fear an outbreak. "The entire school is being tested out of an abundance of caution," said Riverside County Public Health Officer Dr. Cameron Kaiser. Students will have to return to school in Indio, California, on Monday to have the test results evaluated, the letter says. Without verification of a current TB testing and results, students won't be allowed to return to school after the holiday break on January 6, the school said. County health officials expanded the testing to the entire school "after results of an initial screening were higher than expected," spokesman Jose Arballo Jr. said in a statement. Officials tested 131 students on Monday, and 45 of them tested positive to possible exposure to the illness. "Someone who is exposed does not necessarily have active tuberculosis, a condition that must be confirmed with more tests," Arballo said. On Thursday, follow up X-rays identified five students who require further examination.

On Dec. 28, roughly 1.3 million out-of-work Americans will lose their unemployment insurance. That's because Congress declined to renew an emergency aid program for the jobless that's set to expire that day. This could still change: Senate Democrats have said they'll come back in early January and try to renew the Emergency Unemployment Compensation program for another year, which would cost roughly $25.2 billion. But if that effort fails, the nation's safety net for the unemployed will shrink significantly in 2014.

More than 850,000 people piled on to the federal health insurance website Monday, the last day to log on and sign up for health insurance coverage that begins January 1st. "It's something like lining up for Election Day", the administration says, "If you are standing in line when the polls close, you get to come in and vote." Experience shows many Americans will wait until the last possible minute to buy health insurance. There's nothing like a deadline to focus the mind. And in this case, experience also shows that people who waited may have fared better than people who tried to sign up early, although really last-minute users may have to line up. Signing up for health insurance is a multi-step process. The White House and Health and Human Services Department are also scrambling to make sure that people take the last step and pay their first premium so the insurance actually begins. It's not been easy for people using the federal website and some of the state sites. The Obama administration says the federal site is finally working well, but it's not entirely clear if the so-called back end is working as it's supposed to, transmitting the correct information to insurance companies

Topic: UNEMPLOYMENT ENDS

Time: 5:26PM

Synopsis:

The expiration of benefits for 1.3 million jobless Americans this weekend will exacerbate the worst period of chronic unemployment in post-war history, the chairman of the White House council of economic advisers warns. The expiring programme, which provides emergency help for the long-term unemployed, was introduced after the banking crash in 2008 to cushion the impact of the recession but is due to end on Saturday. Congress had an opportunity to continue it, but failed to agree on an extension before breaking for Christmas. Although recent improvements in the economy have boosted overall job growth, economists are concerned that long-term unemployment rates remain higher than at any time between 1948 and the recent financial crisis. Republican critics claim that ending the programme will force recipients to find work, but new research suggests it will have the opposite effect, and will encourage them to drop out of the labor market entirely, according to Jason Furman, chairman council of economic advisers. Similar studies by the Congressional Budget Office and JP Morgan have suggested that ending the programme will knock between 0.2 and 0.4 percentage points off the US economy's growth rate and that the country will lose out on 240,000 jobs due to lower demand in 2014. Democrats are planning a fresh push this week to highlight the issue. On a media conference call, House minority leader Nancy Pelosi argued for the extension of the benefits. "Unemployment insurance is part of the safety net of our country; not just for individuals but for the economy," said Pelosi in the call on Monday. "It is one of the biggest stimuli for the economy." But Pelosi's fellow Democrat, Senate majority leader Harry Reid, conceded more than a week ago that it was too late for Congress to act on the extension this year after it was left out of a hard-fought budget compromise between the parties.

Nearly 1 million signed up this month through the federal exchange serving 36 states before the December 24 deadline to enroll for coverage to start in January. Compare that to a paltry 27,000 in October, the website's first, problem-plagued month. The Health and Human Services department says in the week leading up to December 24, nearly twice as many enrolled as in the first part of December. Sunday's number is only partial, because the administration didn't provide an update on the 14 states running their own websites. California, New York, Washington, Kentucky and Connecticut have done well, but others are still struggling.

Synopsis:

Office workers in search of snacks will be counting calories along with their change under new labeling regulations for vending machines included in President Barack Obama's health care overhaul law. Requiring calorie information to be displayed on roughly 5 million vending machines nationwide will help consumers make healthier choices, says the Food and Drug Administration, which is expected to release final rules early next year. It estimates the cost to the vending machine industry at $25.8 million initially and $24 million per year after that, but says if just .02% of obese adults ate 100 fewer calories a week, the savings to the health care system would be at least that great. The rules will apply to about 10,800 companies that operate 20 or more machines. Nearly three quarters of those companies have three or fewer employees, and their profit margin is extremely low, according to the National Automatic Merchandising Association.

Illegal immigrants have been driving on Nevada's roads already but the new law will give them driver's licenses to hold them accountable if they get in a crash or get a ticket. The screening would be done with low-dose computed tomography, commonly known as CT scans - and the panel's recommendation could require new insurance plans to cover them under the Affordable Care Act. Roughly 10 million people meet the task force's definition of high risk: adults aged 55 to 80 years who have a 30 pack-year smoking history and currently smoke or have quit within the past 15 years. Someone smoking one pack a day for 30 years or 2 packs a day for 15 years, for example, would have a 30 pack-year smoking history.

October 5-6, 2013 Washington, DC – Show #39 2013 (WFDC)		The federal government's temporary shutdown is one of the topics discussed in our show this week. What led to the impasse in the negotiations between the federal legislature? Why Republicans want to make Obamacare the scapegoat of the government's budget deficit? What happened behind the scenes behind the congressional negotiations? What about the issue of the debt ceiling, which is another economic concern to the Congress ? These are some of the questions discussed, first with Texas Rep. Pete Gallego, and Puerto Rico 's Resident Commissioner in Washington, Pedro Pierluisi. We also analyze the issue with two experts in economics and politics, Javier Bronfman and Patricio Zamorano , of American University and Georgetown University respectively. The immigration issue is a must, especially in the context of mass rallies this weekend and what could it mean for the Immigration Reform the government shutdown this week. Sindy Benavides, from LULAC, joins us in the show on this topic.	TRT is 23:51 and segment times as follows: Segment 1: 08:44 Segment 2: 08:39 Segment 3: 05:53 Segment 4: 00:35

October 12-13, 2013 Washington, DC – Show #40 2013 (WFDC)		In the second week of the government's temporary shutdown, we talk to one of the GOP 's Latino figures. Rep. Mario Diaz-Balart of Florida, answers questions from Armando Guzman about the impasse in the negotiations to reopen the government, public debt and immigration . In addition, after two weeks after the Obamacare enrollment period started, Annette Raveneau , representative of Enroll America, joins us in the show to analyze the response of people to the registration period, why many Latinos still say they don't have enough information on the law, despite educational efforts, and other questions about the Affordable Care Act. Enroll America is one of the main organizations, whose task is to mobilize the community to join the Marketplace. And Dr. Roberto Trujillo visits our show, he's a U.S. based Mexican doctor, who has developed a revolutionary treatment to eradicate cervical cancer. Using technology that imitates the photosynthesis process in plants, he developed a drug and light treatment that has demonstrated to destroy pre- cancerous lesions on the cervix in women. Therefore, Mexico 's government awarded him the Ohtli prize in science, the highest award granted to Mexicans abroad.	TRT is 23:50 and segment times as follows: Segment #1: 08:16  Segment #2: 09:23  Segment #3: 05:29  Segment #4: 00:42

Will we see a final bill in the House of Representatives before the end of 2013? And if we do, how close would it be to the proposal in the Senate? Armando Guzman argues the subject with veteran Rep. Luis Gutierrez of Illinois and Henry Cuellar of Texas, especially his opinion on how the House already passed a proposal, but "in bits and pieces", including new provisions to the US-Mexico border . The immigration issue is also discussed with two young activists: Ricardo Ramirez from a coalition of organizations in favor of the Immigration Reform (FIRM); and Cristina Jimenez, representing on of the most important organization among the DREAMers, United we Dream. Julian Castro, Mayor of San Antonio, Texas, joins us via satellite in the show, and tells us why he's been to Virginia campaigning for the governorship candidate Terry McAuliffe. Sandra Pedroarias a volunteer for a Latino Republican group, says that the best option the state is Ken Cuccinelli, and why the result of the general election of November 5 in Virginia will be vital for the elections of 2014 and 2016 .	TRT is 23:50 and segment times as follows: Segment #1: 08:59  Segment #2: 06:44  Segment #3: 07:43  Segment #4: 00:25

October 26-27, 2013 Washington, DC – Show #42 2013 (WFDC)		This week, we discuss three important topics in Perspectiva Nacional. We begin with immigration, first with the Hispanic spokesperson of the American Jewish Committee, Dina Siegel Vann, who will review the efforts of the influential Jewish community in Congress , to push for an Immigration Reform. Jeffrey D. Gordon, former Pentagon spokesman, will join the conversation too, who offers his analysis on the recent appointment of Jeh Johnson as the new Secretary of Homeland Security. Then we analyze the upcoming election in the state of Virginia and the impact it will have on the national political arena. Daniel Vargas and Andres Tobar , Republican and Democratic strategists, will be with us, as well as Katherine Cullinton, from the Advancement Project organization, who will emphasize on the importance of getting out to vote in these elections . Finally, we discuss a new consumer protection campaign when sending money outside the United States. Starting on October 28 , remittance agencies will have new responsibilities with the law, which also provides more tools and consumer protections. Flavio Cumpiano, from the Consumer Financial Protection Bureau will offer the details.	TRT is 23:53 and segment times are as follows: Segment #1: 09:32 Segment #2: 08:00 Segment #3: 05:59 Segment #4: 00:20

November 2-3, 2013 Washington, DC – Show #43 2013 (WFDC)		According to the House of Representatives' schedule, there are only eight days of session in the month of November and another eight the following month. In 16 days, will we see an Immigration Reform approved? Or will Republican leaders continue passing individual measures on this topic? It is a complex issue, which will be analyzed over the entire show. First, we'll discuss it with Jesus Loya and Manny Rosales. The former is a young activist who came from Utah to demand immediate action from Congress, especially with a path to legalization. Manny Rosales, on the other hand, offers his perspective as a republican strategist and will tell us details of a new group that raises funds to support legislators against the Immigration Reform. Alfonso Aguilar, conservative scholar and former Director of Immigration and Citizenship will be with us as well. He will explain in detail how the process is going in the House of Representatives, and what to expect from the moves of Congressmen Bob Goodlatte and Darrel Issa. Finally, Mexican-American comedian Paul Rodriguez will also be in our show. He was in Washington, DC this week to lobby in favor of the Immigration Reform. In his very own style, he will share with us where we are, what is needed and where are moving to in this vital issue for the Latino community in the United States .	TRT is 23:51 and segment times as follows: Segment #1: 09:37 Segment #2: 06:46 Segment #3: 07:00 Segment #4: 00:28

November 9-10, 2013 Washington, DC – Show #44 2013 (WFDC)		The Insurance Marketplace under the Reform Health just marked its first month of service, a month of heavy criticism for the many problems with the website, how the guidelines between the federal government and the states have collided, and the lack of information in Spanish to enroll in the so-called Obamacare. To discuss these and other issues related to the Act Affordable Health Care, Sinsi Hernandez-Cancio from Families USA organization joins us on the program. Also Hector Barreto, Executive Director of The Latino Coalition, will be with us to question the President's promises on the Health Reform. On this show, we will have special reports on how the Marketplace did in this first month. The first one come from Orlando, Florida, with Ana Carolina Pereira; Then El Paso, Texas, with Ariadna Lopez and Denver, Colorado, with Luisa Collins.	TRT is 23:52 and segment times as follows: Segment #1: 09:24 Segment #2: 07:05 Segment #3: 06:55 Segment #4: 00:28

November 16-17, 2013 Washington, DC – Show #45 2013 (WFDC)		This week began with the celebration of Veterans Day, yet they are battling a rather bigger war on the very American soil: socio-economic problems such as poverty, homelessness, unemployment and mental health. We start our show discussing the situation with Texas Democrat Rep. Pete Gallego. The Congressman has been a leader in advancing laws that address the multiple needs of veterans in his state, but also throughout the United States. Also, we are scarcely three weeks away from the end of the congressional session this year, and a legislation to enable the so-called " Chained CPI " is still alive. This is a budgetary strategy that would reduce Social Security benefits for retirees, which overlooks the impact of inflation in their daily living . Eva Dominguez, Executive Director of Latinos for Secure Retirement joins us on the show to give us an overview of what has not been achieved in Congress and the impact on the benefits to our retirees . Finally, Immigration. As we approach the end of the Congressional session, religious, labor unions and community leaders make one last effort to demand a comprehensive immigration reform. The strategy? An indefinite fast, until they see reform come true... before the end of 2013. SEIU leader, Eliseo Medina, is one those fasting and will underline the individual, community and national impact of those actions.	TRT is 23:50 and segment times are:  Segment #1: 08:46  Segment #2: 07:51  Segment #3: 06:35  Segment #4: 00:38

November 22-23, 2013 Washington, DC – Show #46 2013 (WFDC)		This week, we discuss a health issue relevant to everyone. Many diseases caused by bacteria and viruses have shown resistance to antibiotics, making it harder fight infections and health conditions. This has various implications: not only scientific and medical, but economic and in government, since funding is needed to advance in the search for alternatives to control the situation. On the subject, we have an extensive discussion with Dr. Pilar Ramon-Pardo, advisor on microbial resistance and infection control at the Pan American Health Organization; and Dr. Ligia Peralta, infectious disease specialist. On the other hand, Vice President Joe Biden visited this week the Panama Canal, after meeting with the country's president, Ricardo Martinelli. The visit of the second in command at the White House occurs in the context of a major expansion of the Canal, which will pave the way for increased ship traffic between the Atlantic and the Pacific. Thus, Biden and the Obama administration are seeking closer trade collaboration agreements that allow the economic development of the United States and Central America. The Ambassador of Panama, Mario Jaramillo, will talk to us about it and how his country has taken its multiple job opportunities as a strategy to address immigration innovatively.	TRT is 23:50 and segment times as follows:  Segment #1: 08:26  Segment #2: 06:57  Segment #3: 07:54  Segment #4: 00:33

November 30th – December 1st, 2013 Washington, DC – Show #47 2013 (WFDC)		For this Thanksgiving celebration, which after all is a holiday that celebrates immigrants, answer questions from our audience about their immigration status. Immigration attorneys Julia Toro, Luis Paoli and Luis Salgado joined us in our show this week with important recommendations on immigration issues, and even those more complicated cases which involve domestic violence, same sex marriages, among others.	TRT is 23:50 and segment times as follows:  Segment #1: 09:15  Segment #2: 07:25  Segment #3: 06:30  Segment #4: 00:40
December 7-8, 2013 Washington, DC – Show #48 2013 (WFDC)		Less than a month ago, several leaders from diverse sectors took up fasting for Immigration Reform. They hoped that Congress acted diligently before the end of the last session of the year, in order to have a comprehensive immigration law and higher provisions for undocumented immigrants. But time passed, and although there is no hope of seeing the Reform in 2013, more than a thousand people across the country are joining the fast.. even some federal legislators. Workers rights activist, Dolores Huerta , visited the tent where the fasters have gathered and join us in the show to give us her perspective on what will happen with this issue, which that is undoubtedly one that is keeping the eyes of the whole country to Washington, DC. Also, this week the President of Colombia, Juan Manuel Santos, visited his counterpart in the White House. The visit follows his recent announcement that he'll be seeking reelection. Was he hoping for an endorsement from the United States for another term or was he simply looking for support for his administration's negotiations with the FARC guerrilla? This subject is discussed at length with Juan Carlos Hidalgo, expert on Latin American issues from the CATO Institute, and analyst and American University professor, Emilio Viano.	TRT is 23:52 and segment times as follows:  Segment #1: 09:16  Segment #2: 07:42  Segment #3: 06:16  Segment #4: 00:38

December 14-15, 2013 Washington, DC – Show #49 2013 (WFDC)		The Congressional session for 2013 ended, without the House of Representatives passing a comprehensive immigration reform. Some members of Congress, however, and altogether with several organizations, refuse to just sit back until next year on the subject, making an urgent call to President Obama to stop deportations. On the topic , the Democratic Representative from Arizona, Raul Grijalva, and the executive director of the Hispanic Leadership Agenda, Hector Sanchez, discuss the human tragedy of the deportations. Grijalva also reveals important information of an alleged scheme of deportations by the Homeland Security Agency. In line with the immigration issue, Mary Ellsberg, researcher at George Washington University, led along with We Belong Together organization, a study on gender violence. Among the findings, the study suggests that a path to legalization, plus more comprehensive policies to protect women, is fundamental to reduce the number of victims in the United States. Many of these women are immigrants and refugees, who for fear of being deported, remain silent on the acts of violence against them. And finally, the U.S. Conference of Catholic Bishops approved a major change to its liturgy in Spanish: they've agrees on the use of the Mexican Missal as a guide to some of their rituals, festivities and other celebrations. Pending ratification by the Vatican, the Auxiliary Bishop of the city of Brooklyn, New York, Bishop Octavio Cisneros tells us more about this important news for the Catholic community.	TRT is 23:52 and segment times as follows:  Segment #1: 08:34  Segment #2: 06:35  Segment #3: 07:53  Segment #4: 00:50

December 21-22, 2013 Washington, DC –  Show #50 2013  (WFDC)		The biggest issue this year for the Latino community was the fight for an Immigration Reform. Hundreds of organizations across the United States held events and activities throughout the country, but especially in Washington, DC, where they lobbied federal lawmakers to approve legalization for millions of undocumented immigrants. We will talk with several community and religious leaders on the achievements and what remains to be done in 2014, regarding the immigration reform so it can become a reality. First we talk Rocio Saenz, Executive Director of the labor union SEIU, and Gustavo Torres, Executive Director of CASA de Maryland.
