April 6-7, 2103 Washington, DC – Show #14 2013 (WFDC)	Armando Guzmán	Within days of the National March for Immigration Reform, the immigration issue is the main focus for our show. We begin with Ana Avendaño, responsible for all immigration efforts from AFL-CIO, one of the largest workers union in the country. Representing the union, she was instrumental in a recent agreement with the U.S. Chamber of Commerce that will benefit 200,000 temporary workers. She talks about the significance of this agreement, just as we speak of the imminent establishment of a draft in the Senate for this long-awaited federal law. We also spoke with Gustavo Torres and Clarissa Martinez of Casa de Maryland and the National Council of La Raza, respectively, who is behind the national march of April 10. The event will be held in Washington, to pressure Congress to pass a law as soon as Immigration Reform. It will involve various organizations around the country. And finally, framed in the the recent celebration of the 20th anniversary of the Free Trade Agreement between the United States and Mexico, three experts in economics and social sciences analyze with Armando Guzman the future of both countries, not only commercially, but in its overall economic development : Irma Sandoval, John Ackerman and Hector Diaz-Polanco.	TRT is 23:50 and segment times as follows: Segment #1: 07:40 Segment #2: 08:05 Segment #3: 07:51 Segment #4: 00:14

April 13-14, 2013 Washington, DC – Show #15 2013 (WFDC)	Armando Guzmán	This week, more than 20 cities across the United States conducted massive demonstrations to demand that Congress approves an Immigration Reform. The largest of these was in Washington, DC, organized by Casa de Maryland, the labor union SEIU, among other organizations. With the immediate reactions to the demonstrations and the immigration issue, this week Congressmen Tony Cardenas and Juan Vargas, both Democrats from California, join our show. The perspective they bring comes from the meetings, lobbying, what happens on the Floor of the House of Representatives of the Federal Congress. But we will also have the view of those behind the massive national mobilization. Gustavo Andrade of Casa de Maryland, was responsible for coordinating the demonstration in Washington, DC and analyzes the results in terms of participation. Ben Monterroso, union leader of the SEIU union, was one of those responsible for similar events in different parts of the country, and tells us what needs to be done to achieve an Immigration Reform. We also spoke with two immigrant activists, who offer their reactions to the whole Latino movement to legalize the 11 million undocumented immigrants in this country. Joining our program via satellite will be Raquel Lazar and Gabriela Castañeda, from Center for Equal Rights in Albuquerque, New Mexico and Border Network for Humans Rights in El Paso, Texas, respectively.	TRT is 23:50 and segment times as follows: Segment #1: 07:56 Segment #2: 06:46 Segment #3: 07:49 Segment #4: 01:19

April 20-21, 2013 Washington, DC – Show #16 2013 (WFDC)	Armando Guzmán	This week, a group of federal bipartisan Senators introduced their proposal for a comprehensive Immigration Reform, a document of nearly 900 pages that contains a number of measures to legalize undocumented immigrants in the United States. The Latino community has many questions and inquiries of what is contained in this bill, and so, in collaboration with community organization Casa de Maryland, we conducted a forum on the topic. Gustavo Torres, Executive Director of Casa de Maryland and Immigration attorney and former prosecutor, Claudia Flower, will answer questions and concerns from the community. They are joined by Daniel Garza, Executive Director of The Libre Initiative, who worked closely with the Senators to achieve this proposal, and who represents the conservative viewpoint.	TRT is 23:50 and segment times as follows: Segment #1: 07:28 Segment #2: 07:17 Segment #3: 04:02 Segment #4: 05:04

April 27-28, 2013 Washington, DC – Show #17 2013 (WFDC)	Armando Guzmán	As part of President Obama's Health Care Reform, everyone in the United States should have health insurance by 2014. And it is not an individual plan, but it should cover the whole family. We are talking about millions of people under age 65, whose employers do not provide this benefit or who gave it up, and also those who are unemployed or do not have the financial resources to pay. To provide for those who can not afford health insurance, the Health Care Reform includes the Affordable Care Act, which will offer people with health insurance at a price they can pay. But under this program, each state has its peculiarities. Among other things, that's what we talk about with Teresa Niño, from the federal Health and Human Services Department, the agency in charge to provide public information on this issue. To discuss how to choose health insurance coverage and the costs involved to it, especially for Latinos, Dr. Jane Delgado, President of the National Alliance for Hispanic Health also joins our show. And just days before President Obama's visit to Mexico, and to talk about the immigration issue, former Mexican president, Vicente Fox, visits Perspectiva Nacional.	TRT is 23:51 and segment times as follows: Segment #1: 07:50 Segment #2: 05:33 Segment #3: 05:21 Segment #4: 05:07

May 4-5, 2013 Washington, DC – Show #18 2013 (WFDC)	Armando Guzmán	This week we talk about issues affecting our personal finances. First, we discuss the proposal of Republican Sen. Mike Enzi, of Wyoming, on the creation of the Marketplace Fairness Act. If this bill is approved, it would impose charges on all Internet sales. Why is this important for the Latino community? According to a Pew Hispanic Center research and an eMarketer study, Latinos are the fastest growing group in the use of technology and online transactions. That means that Latinos are increasingly buying via the Internet and cell phones, the best incentive being the chance of finding better deals without paying taxes on their purchases. On the impact it would have for consumers, especially for Latinos with small businesses that use the Internet to get ahead, we will talk with Hector Barreto, Director of The Latino Coalition and former Small Business Administrator, and Maricruz Magowan, economist and political analyst. But this is not the only measure being discussed in Congress that will have an impact in our pockets. The Federal Legislature evaluates proposed changes to the CPI, or consumer price index, which measures changes in the cost of a fixed basket of goods and services for people. According to the CPI, Social Security benefits are adjusted annually, to keep pace with inflation. With this new measure, a new CPI type will eliminate Social Security increases. Eva Domínguez, from Latinos for a Secure Retirement, tells us how this will affect retirees and older people.	TRT is 23:51 and segment times as follows: Segment #1 08:47 Segment #2 06:57 Segment #3 06:54 Segment #4 01:13

May 11-12, 2013 Washington, DC – Show #19 2013 (WFDC)	Armando Guzmán	The Immigration Reform is once again on the public eye. On the one side, there's the inclusion of the LGBT community in this bill. Republican senators already raised a flag against any related provision. The topic is discussed with attorney Luis Salgado, and Immigration activists, Lorella Praeli and Hafid Dumet. Another hot topic regarding the Immigration Reform has to do with a document published this week by The Heritage Foundation, a conservative organization. It argues that the Reform will cost the country 6.3 billion dollars. The CATO Institute has disputed the figure, not only as a mathematical error, but also one with a "clear political purpose." Juan Carlos Hidalgo, expert from the CATO Institute, talks to Armando Guzmán about the subject. In addition, we evaluate the visit of President Barack Obama to Central America, with Costa Rica's Ambassador in Washington, Muni Figueres. She will talk about efforts to strengthen security in that region.	TRT is 23:50 and segment times as follows: Segment #1 10:31 Segment #2 06:04 Segment #3 05:30 Segment #4 01:45

May 18-19, 2013 Washington, DC – Show #20 2013 (WFDC)	Armando Guzmán	According to recent findings of the U.S. Census Bureau, the Latino vote was decisive in the last election. However, we fell 1 million short in terms of ballot participation. With the 2014 elections around the corner, these numbers are concerning. On the one hand, are Latinos only going out to vote in presidential elections? And if so, what will be the impact on the election of governors, state legislators and local representatives? Will the political map see a change in Latino presence? What about Congress? These are some of the questions discussed and issues analyzed in our next show, with political strategists Jaime Areizaga and Maricruz Magowan, from the Democratic and Republican parties, respectively. Ana Carolina Pereira, from Orlando, FL, also presents a report on the topic. We also follow up on the Immigration Reform amendments to the "Gang of 8" bill, discussed this week in Congress with Arizona Representative, Raúl Grijalva. And the political status of Puerto Rico is on the public eye once more, this time with the introduction of a Congressional bill, requesting the admission of the island as the 51st state of the Union. Pedro Pierluisi, Resident Commissioner of Puerto Rico in Washington, DC, is behind this measure and joins us in the show to answer questions on the political future of the island. June 8-9, 2013 Washington, DC – Show #23 2013 (WFDC)	Armando Guzmán	Three major issues that directly affect Latino communities in the country are discussed in our program this week. We start with the proposed changes to Social Security, under the proposal of the "Chained Consumer Price Index", or Chained CPI. This proposed law to combat inflation, backed by President Obama, is a calculation of the cost of living via the Consumer Price Index, that would be applied to Social Security benefits. Because of the impact this would have starting in 2015, the issue is discussed with Arizona Democratic Rep. Raúl Grijalva; with the Public Affairs Deputy Director of the labor union AFL-CIO, Kelly Ross; and Eva Domínguez, from the Latinos for a Secure Retirement organization. Furthermore, while Congress debates some provisions of the Health Care Reform and Medicaid, the U.S. Department of Health works to initiate the recruitment of eligible individuals under the Affordable Care Act, beginning on October 1st, 2013. Meanwhile, Veterans are among those sectors of our population which will be directly affected when a state decides not to be part of the so called Obamacare. That is the case of veterans in Texas, and Democratic Rep. Pete Gallego joins us in the show to precisely discuss his concerns on the issue and tell us about his petition to Texas Governor Rick Perry, to reconsider his decision on the matter. Finally, the issue of the Immigration Reform remains unresolved for Latinos. This week, children and teenagers born in the United States, and whose parents have been deported, arrived to Congress to demand immediate action to prevent further deportations and separation of families. Saul Arellano is known for his plea against deportations, he will be with us in the show to tell his story. He is accompanied by Mexican activist José Jacques Medina.	TRT is 23:50 and segment times as follows: Segment #1: 08:28 Segment #2: 04:24 Segment #3: 04:34 Segment #4: 06:24

So the issue at hand in our show revolves around the Reform. Eliseo Medina, SEIU union leader, joined President Obama this week for a message to the country and the Capitol Hill, demanding action to legalize more than 11 million undocumented immigrants. He will be in our show to speak on the subject. Texas Democratic Rep. Henry Cuellar, offers his perspective as well. The immigration issue will also be discussed with Jesus Loya, a Dreamer single dad with a great future in the workplace.. who depends on the aproval of the Immigration Reform to obtain a brighter future for him and his son. Also with Laura Vazquez, legislative specialist National Council of La Raza. Finally, Ruben Zamora, Ambassador of El Salvador, clarifies why Salvodorians can not wait for the outcome of the Immigration Reform to re-register for TPS, otherwise they would be unprotected and illegal in this country.	TRT is 23:52 and segment times as follows: Segment #1: 08:16 Segment #2: 08:46 Segment #3: 06:18 Segment #4: 00:32

Legislators have been proposing, evaluating and negotiating amendments to this law that seeks the legalization of more than 11 million undocumented immigrants. The U.S. and Mexico border is amid continuing discussion, as also whether it will achieve a bipartisan consensus to approve the bill before July 4. These are the topics we talked about with Democratic Senator from Virginia, Tim Kaine and the Democratic Representative from California, Tony Cárdenas. Both also discussed the lobbying of John Boehner, Speaker of the House of Representatives. And in our show we'll also have Cuban actor and Hollywood figure, Tony Plana. He'll tell us about his involvement in major initiatives promoting education for Latino children in the United States.	TRT is 23:50 and segment times as follows: Segment #1: 08:31 Segment #2: 07:48 Segment #3: 06:51 Segment #4: 00:40

It is a law that has its strengths, some of which Florida Republican Senator Marco Rubio will discuss in our show. The next step of this legislation lays in the House of Representatives, but will it be a different proposal than the one approved in the Senate? How soon we will see the Congress agree on the details of this measure? These are some of the questions we asked to Republican Representative from Idaho, Raul Labrador, and his counterpart from Texas, Democrat Congressman Pete Gallego. Topic: ILLINOIS BUSINESS PUSH IMMIGRATION REFORM

Time: 5:21 pm

Synopsis:

A new group of business leaders wants to recruit 300 CEOs and 1,000 small businesses in Illinois to push for "common sense" bipartisan immigration reform. The Illinois Business Immigration Coalition includes leaders from Peoria-based Caterpillar Inc. as well as Motorola Solutions Inc., the University of Illinois, trade groups and immigration-rights advocates. Chicago Mayor Rahm Emanuel backs the coalition. Caterpillar CEO Douglas Oberhelman spoke at a kickoff event Monday in Chicago. He says the manufacturer has trouble filling both high- and lower-skill jobs and immigration reform could help. The coalition is forming as lawmakers in Washington seek to hammer out details of a potential immigration law overhaul. Business and labor leaders last week agreed on a broad outline. Emanuel says it's "a huge opportunity" that shouldn't be squandered "because of politics".

Topic: NRA CALLS FOR TRAINED, ARMED SCHOOL STAFF

Time 4:25 pm

Synopsis:

As Democrats struggle to shepherd a slew of embattled gun laws through Congress, a group associated with and funded by the National Rifle Association (NRA) is pushing its own proposal for reducing mass shootings in schools, unveiling Tuesday a 225-page "school safety" report that recommends sending a trained, armed officer to every school in America, as well as various "layered security" measures it says will make schools safer. Led by former Rep. Asa Hutchinson, R-Ark., who announced the plan in a press conference Tuesday morning, the so-called "NRA National School Shield Initiative" outlines eight recommendations it says would boost school security nationwide. Hutchinson stressed that the "initiative" is fully independent from the NRA -- which he said budgeted $1 million for the effort -- and that the pro-gun lobby was under no obligation to enforce any of its recommendations.

Time 3:19 pm

Synopsis:

In the shadow of a bipartisan Senate group preparing to roll out broad immigration legislation next week, shortly after Congress returns from its holiday break, a bipartisan group of eight House members is readying its own bill. In contrast to the Senate plan - which would provide one clear, if difficult, path to citizenship for the 11 million illegal immigrants already in the country - the House legislation will most likely offer three distinct paths to legal status. Young immigrants in the country without legal papers, who often call themselves "Dreamers," and low-skilled agricultural workers would qualify for an expedited road to legal status, people familiar with the negotiations said. The Dreamers should not be punished for being brought illegally to the country by their parents, House aides said, and the members agreed that the agricultural workers perform crucial work for the economy.

Time 6:30 pm

Synopsis:

Who to please? The new ABC News/Washington Post poll on immigration reform asks that basic question of Republicans on Capitol Hill. Does the GOP try to broaden its appeal and support what appears to be a very popular issue in immigration reform, with 57 percent of responders behind the so-called "path to citizenship" for undocumented immigrants? That includes 58 percent of crucial independent voters, which both Democrats and Republicans need nationally. Or do individual Republican members of Congress look at the other number in the poll that shows that their base vehemently rejects allowing 11 million undocumented to come out of the shadows and work their way to citizenship. Republicans oppose it by a whopping 60 percent to 35 percent.

Topic: RED MEAT CHEMICAL AND HEART DAMAGES

Time: 5:17 pm

Synopsis:

US scientists claim red meat has dangerous chemicals. A chemical found in red meat helps explain why eating too much steak, mince and bacon is bad for the heart say US scientists. A study in the journal Nature Medicine showed that carnitine in red meat was broken down by bacteria in the gut. This kicked off a chain of events which resulted in higher levels of cholesterol and an increased risk of heart disease. Dieticians warned there may be a risk to people taking carnitine supplements. There has been a wealth of studies suggesting that regularly eating red meat may be damaging to health. In the UK, the government recommends eating no more than 70g of red or processed meat a day - the equivalent of two slices of bacon. Saturated fat and the way processed meat is preserved are thought to contribute to heart problems. However, this was not thought to be the whole story. Experiments on mice and people showed that bacteria in the gut could eat carnitine. Carnitine was broken down into a gas, which was converted in the liver to a chemical called TMAO. In the study, TMAO was strongly linked with the build-up of fatty deposits in blood vessels, which can lead to heart disease and death.

The Senate is poised to begin the most wide-ranging and ambitious battle over gun control on Capitol Hill in 20 years, with a vote scheduled Thursday that would formally start the debate. News of that vote was a boost for the Obama administration, which has lobbied hard for increased background checks on potential gun buyers and for new limits on assault rifles and high-capacity ammunition magazines. All will face heavy opposition from the National Rifle Association and its Capitol Hill allies in both parties.

Synopsis:

A total of $3.6 billion in cash payments will begin going out Friday to about 4.2 million borrowers whose home mortgages were in any stage of the foreclosure process in 2009 and 2010 and serviced by one of 13 banks. The payments will range from $300 to $125,000, but the average will be about $850. Almost 80 percent will get $1,000 or less, according to a payment breakdown. The payments were part of an agreement reached earlier this year between the servicers and two federal regulators - the Office of the Comptroller of the Currency and the Federal Reserve.

Time: 2:27 pm

Synopsis:

Conservative senators from both parties announced their support for expanding background checks for gun buyers Wednesday, giving a burst of momentum to supporters of stronger restrictions. But big questions remain about whether President Barack Obama can push significant gun controls through Congress. The compromise between Sens. Joe Manchin, D-W.Va., and Patrick Toomey, R-Pa., boosted the chances that the Senate will agree to broaden required background checks, a step gun control groups laud as an effective way to keep weapons from criminals and the mentally ill. The senators are among the most conservative members of their parties, both have received "A" ratings from the National Rifle Association, and their endorsements could make it easier for hesitant colleagues to back the effort.

Mixing modest curbs on spending with tax increases reviled by Republicans, President Barack Obama proposed a $3.8 trillion budget on Wednesday that would raise taxes on smokers and wealthy Americans and trim Social Security benefits for millions. Obama's 2014 blueprint combines a $242 billion infusion of new spending for road and rail projects, early education and jobs initiatives -- all favored by Democrats -- with longer-term savings from programs including Medicare and the military. It promises at least a start in cutting huge annual federal deficits.

The 15-year study involved 330 volunteers between the ages 18 and 35. Researchers measured their breasts using a slide ruler and a caliper and recorded any changes throughout the study period. Women who did not wear bras had a 7 millimeter lift as measured from their nipples each year. Their breasts were also firmer, and their stretch marks faded. The Boston bombings and the foreign-born suspects have become part of the Capitol Hill debates on legislation to overhaul immigration law -- with critics of the proposal saying Sunday the terror attacks expose gaps in the country's system and supporters saying the tragedy could be a turning point in fixing a broken system. Graham and New York Democratic Sen. The bombing suspects-immigration debate essentially started when Iowa Republican Sen. Four key parts of the immigration bill are the improved Visa tracking, securing U.S. borders, improving the employee verification system known as E-Verify and providing a path to citizenship for some of the roughly 11 million illegal immigrants in the U.S.

The court said Moncrieffe should have had the opportunity to contest his deportation. Sotomayor said in her opinion for the court that marijuana offenses must involve either the sale of the drug or possession of more than a small amount to count as serious enough to warrant automatic deportation. The decision means that Moncrieffe will be able to return to the United States so that he can make the case that he should be allowed to remain in the country where he has lived since the age of 3, said Thomas Goldstein, his Washington-based lawyer. Wall Street's self-regulator, the Financial Industry Regulatory Authority, says financial firms need a way to follow up on "red flags" suggesting misuse of a personal account, according to a spokesman. Finra has asked lawmakers in about 10 states to make changes to proposed legislation, the spokesman said. California, Illinois, Maryland and Michigan adopted social-media privacy laws last year, and a similar new law in Utah takes effect in May. Social-media privacy legislation has been introduced or is under way in 35 states since the start of 2013, according to the National Conference of State Legislatures. Hispanics are at the forefront of the rebounding housing market, despite paying more for housing. Latino and Black home buyers paid 3.5 percent more than whites buyers for comparable homes in four major U.S. cities, according to a Duke study, over the last 18 years. The Duke study compared home prices for comparable quality homes within the same neighborhoods from 1990 to 2008 in Los Angeles, Chicago, Baltimore/Washington, D.C., and San Francisco. The 3.5 percent actually translates to between $5,000 and $10,000 per housing sale. Multiply that amount with the average number of times Americans move, every five to seven years, and you will come to a substantial amount. The study compared prices of more than 2 million home sales but failed to reveal any clear explanation as to why minorities were paying more for their homes. A buyers' wealth, income, access to credit, racial prejudice or animosity on the part of home sellers could not be proven as reasons why minority buyers paid more when buying a comparable home. Years after the historic Fair Housing Act of 1968, which prohibited the discrimination in housing transactions based on race, gender, religion, etc., there are still disparities in the housing sector. But why? Pat Bayer, economics professor and senior author of the Duke study, believes that minority homeowners are more likely to be first time home buyers and therefore are not as experienced in negotiating home prices. The median age of Hispanics in the U.S. is 27, ten years younger than the average age of Americans overall.

The U.S. Supreme Court today rejected the state of Alabama's request to review a provision of the state's anti-immigrant law that was blocked by the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Eleventh Circuit last year. In February, Alabama Attorney General Luther Strange, petitioned the Supreme Court to consider the provision of the law that criminalizes neighborly acts of kindness, or Section 13 the "harboring and transporting" provision. This provision criminalized individuals who engaged in routine daily activities with undocumented immigrants, like giving them a ride or renting housing to them. The Circuit has blocked most of Alabama's anti-immigrant law as unconstitutional, including provisions that would have chilled Latino student access to Alabama elementary schools. Last summer, the Supreme Court struck down most of Arizona's SB 1070, which served as a model for the Alabama law. The tide is clearly turning on gay rights, with same-sex marriage being legalized in states across America and several countries all over the world. But supporting gay rights can still be a political liability in Washington. Sen. Patrick Leahy (D-Vt.) has said that he will introduce an amendment to the Gang of Eight's immigration reform bill that would allow gay American citizens to sponsor their foreign-born partners for green cards, just like straight couples can. That's a big no-no for Republicans, says Marco Rubio, who has served as the Gang of Eight's public face. Rubio has repeatedly said that he is confident the bill - which includes a 13-year path to citizenship, billions for border security, and new visas for high- and low-skill workers - has a good chance of passing. Now it could all come undone over this gay-rights amendment, Rubio tells it will virtually guarantee that it won't pass. This issue is a difficult enough issue as it is. I respect everyone's views on it. But ultimately, if that issue is injected into this bill, the bill will fail and the coalition that helped put it together will fall apart. In the meantime, gay rights groups are calling out the Gang of Eight's four Democratic senators for supporting gay marriage but not recognizing it in the immigration bill.

Topic: NEW IMMIGRATION CONTROLS

Time: 9:37

Synopsis:

On Monday, May 6, 2013, U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services will implement customer identity verification, or CIV, in its field offices. Individuals will now be required to submit biometric data, specifically fingerprints and photographs, when appearing at USCIS offices for interviews or to receive evidence of an immigration benefit. CIV will help to both defend against threats to national security and protect customers from identity fraud by enhancing the agency's ability to verify identity. Currently, USCIS requires applicants and petitioners requesting immigration or naturalization benefits to visit one of the Application Support Centers to provide biometric data. USCIS uses this data to help determine eligibility for requested benefits. This requirement, along with providing a government-issued document for examination, will not change. Under this new process, staff will take two fingerprints and a photograph of the individual and input this information into the United States Visitor and Immigrant Status Indicator Technology's or US-VISIT's Secondary Inspections Tool which is a Web-based application that processes, displays and retrieves biometric and biographic data. US-VISIT also links databases associated with border inspections and security. After identity verification is satisfactorily completed, individuals will proceed to their interviews or be issued their immigration documents.

Topic: INTERNET SALES TAX

Time: 2:26

Synopsis:

Traditional retailers and cash-strapped states face a tough sell in the House as they lobby Congress to limit tax-free shopping on the Internet. The Senate voted 69 to 27 Monday to pass a bill that empowers states to collect sales taxes from Internet purchases. Under the bill, states could require out-of-state retailers to collect sales taxes when they sell products over the Internet, in catalogs, and through radio and TV ads. The sales taxes would be sent to the states where the buyer lives. Current law says states can only require retailers to collect sales taxes if the merchant has a physical presence in the state. That means big retailers with stores all over the country like Wal-Mart, Best Buy and Target collect sales taxes when they sell goods over the Internet. But online retailers like eBay and Amazon don't have to collect sales taxes, except in states where they have offices or distribution centers.

Men still will need a prescription to buy the blue, diamond-shaped pill on viagra.com but they no longer have to face a pharmacist to get it filled. And for those who are bothered by Viagra's steep $25-a-pill price, Pfizer is offering three free pills with the first order and 30 percent off the second one. Pfizer's bold move blows up the drug industry's distribution model. Drug makers don't sell medicines directly to patients. Instead, they sell in bulk to wholesalers, who then distribute the drugs to pharmacies, hospitals and doctors' offices.

The Sonora Desert claims the lives of hundreds of people crossing the U.S.-Mexico border each year. Many of the dead -- about one out of three -- go unidentified. Now, there may be an easier way to put a name to some of these suspected border-crossers who died north of the international boundary. Monday, the Pima County Office of the Medical Examiner joined with Humane Borders to launch a Web-based system that will allow the public to identify the deceased found in the desert in the Tucson area -- more than 2,000 dating back 13 years. The International OpenGIS Initiative for Missing and Deceased Migrants will feature a map documenting deaths as far back to 2001. The database contains customizable search tools available through menu options. It will allow any user to query data concerning migrant deaths and view the data using online maps and tables. Also, it allows the public to download the data for further use.

Topic: GREEN CARD LOTTERY COULD BE ELIMINATED

Time: 5:21 pm

Synopsis:

In the contentious debate over immigration policy, three groups have dominated public and political attention: the roughly 11 million undocumented immigrants seeking to become legal, the skilled foreign workers bound for high-tech jobs and relatives waiting to be reunited with their families. Then there are those who won the green card lottery. The new figures signal the dawn of an era in which whites no longer will be in the majority of Americans. This tiny visa program, aimed at diversifying the pool of immigrants to the United States, selects 55,000 applicants at random each year. Unlike the other U.S. visa programs, it offers the "winners" and their spouses and children U.S. residency with almost no strings attached. Although the odds of winning are infinitesimal, the program is so wildly popular that last year almost 8 million people applied. And now it is likely to be quietly cut. Under a Senate compromise, the program would be eliminated and its visa slots would be subsumed into a broad system that stresses skills, education and other criteria for legal immigration. A few defenders, including members of the Congressional Black Caucus, have urged that the lottery be preserved. They say it helps compensate for the lopsided history of legal immigration, long dominated by a few large countries with high-skilled workers, such as China and India, and those with strong family ties to the United States, such as Mexico and the Philippines. They also note that it creates wide international goodwill for the United States at a low cost, amounting to only 5 percent of legal immigrants.

Civil rights groups had filed a lawsuit in U.S. District Court in Phoenix in November against Governor Jan Brewer and two state transportation department officials on behalf of five Mexican immigrants who qualify for deferred deportation status under a program pushed by President Barack Obama. The suit challenged the legality of an order issued by Brewer in August that denied the young migrants licenses, arguing that the federal deferred action program did not give them lawful status or entitle them to public benefits. Judge David Campbell ruled that while the young immigrants appeared likely to prevail in their argument on constitutional equal-protection grounds, they had not proved they would suffer irreparable injury as the case proceeds.

The bill, approved by the Illinois House in April, now moves to Governor Pat Quinn's desk to await his signature. Quinn has indicated he is sympathetic to the bill, especially as it would benefit injured veterans. The Illinois bill passed by a vote of 35-21 after an emotional, hour-long debate in which some Republicans said they opposed legalizing medical marijuana because it could be a "gateway drug" to abuse of other illegal substances. Others said they were not convinced that the benefits of smoking marijuana for certain medical conditions outweighed the potential negative consequences. Democratic State Senator Bill Haine, a former county prosecutor and the bill's sponsor, said it is the toughest in the nation. He noted that doctors' groups had endorsed the bill. Eighteen states and the District of Columbia have legalized medical marijuana, according to Riffle. The immigration reform legislation, introduced a few weeks ago by the "Gang of Eight," would require undocumented immigrants to show the ability to speak, read and write English or be enrolled in English classes before they can seek permanent residency. A recent Latino Decisions poll found that 82 percent of the 400 Latino undocumented immigrants surveyed said they would be willing to learn English. Matt Barreto, co-founder of Latino Decisions, said during a conference call with reporters last week that while the desire to learn English is "very high" among Latino undocumented immigrants, he fears there aren't enough programs in place that could help them learn English. He said such programs would be "essential," especially for undocumented immigrants who've never attended school in the U.S. and have low education attainment. He noted that 51 percent of Latino undocumented immigrants have less than a high school education, 26 percent have a high school diploma and 21 percent have at least some college education or more. In preparation for the reform it is important to have a criminal record search done to make sure there is anything on your record that would prevent you from passing a government search. These victims are among hundreds of undocumented immigrants who die in search of the American dream. Last year the number of victims who died in this area of Texas went up to 129 turning this part of Texas into the deadliest of the entire border. Among some of the reasons many find death in this area is due to the fact that there are no mountains and people get lost easily. "Legal status is also explicitly granted to millions who have committed serious immigration and criminal offenses." The Senate version of the bill, which has not been introduced to the floor, will offer legalization to most of the country's 11 million undocumented immigrants, provided they pass a background check and pay fines. Of course, the committee must first come to agreement on a few dicey issues. Among them are the amendments regarding high-skilled immigrant visas, approved by the high-tech industry but opposed by labor unions. Critics point to data showing that the aggressive search tactic is used in hugely disproportionate numbers on innocent black and Latino New Yorkers. Mayor Michael Bloomberg and Police Commissioner Ray Kelly have dismissed these concerns, claiming that stop-and-frisk has dramatically reduced the city's murder rate. Experts say that Bloomberg's equation of more stop-and-frisk searches with fewer murders is far too simplistic. In fact, according to sociologist Anthony Harris, the reduction in New York City homicides - which hit a record low of 414 murders in 2012, down from a historic high of 2,245 murders in 1990 - doesn't have much to do with stop-and-frisk at all. A more important factor, he says: Doctors, nurses, EMTs and ambulance drivers have been getting better at bringing wounded people back from the brink.

Complaints of deputies pulling over and singling out people who are dark skinned and speak Spanish to check their immigration status have long been levied against the Maricopa County Sheriff's Office. Time: 2:16 PM

Synopsis:

The partial collapse on Thursday night of a heavily used river bridge on Interstate 5 caused no deaths, but as the long holiday weekend began it underscored the vulnerability of a transportation system that hinges not just on high-profile water crossings and tunnels, but on thousands of ordinary and unremarked components that travelers mostly take for granted. A 160-foot section of the 58-year-old four-lane steel truss bridge, which crosses the Skagit River about an hour north of Seattle, crumpled around 7 p.m., apparently after being struck by a truck carrying an oversize load, state officials said. Three people were injured, none of them seriously, when vehicles went into the river. Investigators from the National Transportation Safety Board also arrived Friday to begin an inquiry into the accident's causes. The chairwoman, Deborah A. M. Hersman, said an early priority was to interview witnesses, especially the driver of the vehicle carrying the load that struck the bridge. Whether it should be considered reassuring or alarming about the state of the nation's infrastructure, the Skagit River bridge had not been judged unsafe or structurally deficient, according to inspection records. The bridge and its approach lanes, totaling just over 1,100 feet, were only considered to be past their useful life span, meaning that the time had arrived for a bigger, broader structure. But even calling a bridge structurally deficient does not necessarily mean that it is unsafe, as federal officials often point out; it only means that at least one major component has deteriorated, and actions may be taken to address the issue, like restricting traffic to ensure that the bridge is not stressed beyond its limits.

Some of the stop-and-frisk statistics reported in the Friday paper and online were incorrect regarding the NYPD's use of the practice in Brooklyn, Queens, Harlem and the Bronx. In addition, several calculations that expressed year-over-year percentage changes of stop-and-frisk statistics in Harlem and the Bronx were incorrect. This story has been amended to reflect the corrected statistics. The number of police stop-and-frisks dropped by 25% in Harlem and Bronx precincts last year, mirroring a citywide decrease in the police interrogations amid harsh protests by critics who deride the tactic as racial profiling. In the 15 precincts covering those areas, the number of people stopped dropped from 161,938 in 2011, compared to 121,388 in 2012, according to a Daily News analysis. The NYPD has steadfastly maintained that stops have been instrumental in recovering illegal guns and driving crime down to record levels. But citywide, the number of "stop, question and frisk" detainments dropped by 22%, from 685,724 in 2011, to 532,911 in 2012, police data shows.

Time: 9:35 PM

Synopsis:

Univision's correspondent traveled the Arizona Desert where migrants have found a riskier path. As security at the border has tightened, pushing migrants to seek more remote and dangerous routes, the largest number of the deaths last year occurred along the punishing stretch of desert that spans the southernmost tip of the Border Patrol's Tucson sector, the busiest along the border. The only riskier stretch is the Rio Grande Valley sector in Texas, where, from Oct. 1 to April 30, law enforcement officers or ranchers found the bodies of 77 immigrants, or more than half the number of bodies recovered there in all of the past fiscal year: 150. He found the different water stations that several organizations have left behind to aid those taking the dangerous path.

Topic: CATHOLIC CHURCH TO RELEASE SECRET FILES

Time: 7:40pm

Synopsis:

Thousands of pages of secret files held by Roman Catholic orders concerning priests accused of molesting children will be released throughout the summer beginning as early as next month, according to attorneys. Los Angeles County Superior Court Judge Emilie Elias set a deadline of September for the religious orders to turn over files on dozens of priests for public release at a hearing Tuesday. The release of confidential files kept by the orders, such as the Silesians, Vincentians and Marinists, were agreed to as part of settlements with victims. The secret files which are required by Catholic church law, would shed light on how high-ranking officials at the orders and leaders of the L.A. archdiocese dealt with allegations of abuse by priests who were assigned to work in Los Angeles. The Archdiocese of Los Angeles released 12,000 pages of its own closely-held document cache in January, but many of the files for priests who belonged to Catholic orders were scant.

Topic: DEBATE OVER THE COST OF IMMIGRATION REFORM

Time: 3:22 pm

Synopsis:

Legislators debated the cost of the reform today and even opponents were against the cost of the reform. The new Heritage report, authored by Heritage Foundation scholar Robert Rector, concludes that granting "amnesty" to the 11 million undocumented immigrants in the U.S. would cost taxpayers $6.3 trillion over 50 years. The report comes as the Senate works on a comprehensive immigration reform bill authored by a bipartisan "gang of eight" senators -- though as Rector noted on Monday, his analysis does not study the entire bill, just the prospect for "amnesty." He concluded that over the course of their lifetimes, formerly undocumented immigrants would pay $3.1 trillion in taxes but receive $9.4 trillion in government benefits -- that includes benefits from Obamacare, Social Security and more than 80 other programs. For the basis of his analysis, Rector notes that the typical undocumented immigrant has a 10th-grade education. Households without a high school degree get about $35,000 more in benefits than they pay out in taxes, he noted.

Synopsis:

Arizona lawman Joe Arpaio, who styles himself as "America's toughest sheriff," said on Wednesday he would appeal a federal court ruling that found his agency had engaged in racial profiling of Hispanic drivers in its zeal to crack down on illegal immigration. "One hundred of my deputies were authorized and trained by the federal government ... to enforce federal immigration laws," the Maricopa County sheriff said in a video posted on YouTube. "Now the federal court has ruled that federal training was unconstitutional and it led to racial profiling. We will appeal this ruling," Arpaio said. Arpaio has been a lightning rod for controversy over his aggressive enforcement of immigration laws in Arizona, which borders Mexico, and an investigation into the validity of President Barack Obama's U.S. birth certificate. A federal judge ruled on Friday that Arpaio had violated the constitutional rights of Latino drivers in his crackdown on illegal immigration, and ordered him to stop using race as a factor in law enforcement decisions. The ruling came in response to a class-action lawsuit brought by Hispanic drivers that tested whether police could target illegal immigrants without racially profiling U.S. citizens and legal residents of Hispanic origin.

Mothers are the primary or sole source of income for a growing number of U.S. families in a dramatic shift in American homes and the workplace from just a few decades ago, the Pew Research Center said in a study released on Wednesday. Based on data from the U.S. Census Bureau, the study said a record 40 percent of all U.S. households with children relied on mothers as their main or only source of income. That marked a sharp increase from 11 percent of families in 1960. The so-called "breadwinner moms" are split into two camps, with married mothers who have a higher income than their husbands accounting for 37 percent and 67 percent consisting of single mothers, the survey said.

The bill, which cleared the state House last week, passed 19-16 in the Senate early Thursday. Under the plan, immigrants would be able to obtain driver's licenses beginning in January 2015. Applicants would need documentation proving their identities and showing they have lived in the state for at least 90 days. They also would have to pass driving tests and background checks verifying they have no felony convictions in the state. The licenses would be marked "for driving purposes only" and would need to be renewed every three years, rather than the standard six years. Democrats said the measure would improve highway safety.

Synopsis:

President Barack Obama on Friday urged Congress to prevent an increase in student loan rates, saying rising college costs hold back the entire middle class and unfairly saddle young people with more debt just as they are starting out in their adult lives. Interest rates on new subsidized Stafford loans are set to double, from 3.4 percent to 6.8 percent, on July 1. Lawmakers from both parties say they want to avoid the increase but are divided over how to act. Obama made his case flanked by college students dressed in business suits and dresses during remarks in the Rose Garden on a steamy Washington morning. The event marked the beginning of a public campaign by the President to temporarily extend current student loan rates or find a long-term compromise to avoid the July 1 rate increase.

At a press conference in Seattle today the former president of Mexico, Vicente Fox, backed plans in Washington and Colorado to make a legal market for marijuana in the United States. Citing the loss of human life in his country due to the failed war on drugs and the black market that grew up in its shadows to feed the massive market for marijuana in the U.S., Fox said he hoped for an orderly and tightly regulated marijuana market here. "We all understand that we human beings perform best in scenarios of peace and harmony. A new responsible society will bring this peace and harmony. About the loses? We cannot be worse than where we are. The war [on drugs] has been lost all along and it has been lost again and again. It's time for a new start. It's time for a new vision. That's why I applaud this group," Fox said. The conference was organized by former Microsoft manager and now marijuana advocate Jamen Shively to announce his company's plans to create a national brand and business out of the legal marijuana markets coming online in Washington and Colorado.

Synopsis:

The Texas House of Representatives on Monday gave final approval to a proposal to allow concealed handgun license holders to carry guns into buildings on college campuses. The proposal, which was approved on a vote of 102-41, would allow public colleges and universities to opt out of allowing guns in buildings after consulting with students, faculty and staff. Private colleges and universities could opt in. The measure, known as the Campus Carry Bill, now goes to the Senate, where a different proposal has stalled. The author of the House proposal, Republican Allen Fletcher, said he was not trying to arm people so that they could be heroes during mass shootings on college campuses, but to protect themselves. Texas is one of 22 states that ban carrying a concealed weapon on a college campus, according to the National Conference of State Legislatures. Sixteen states introduced bills in 2012 to allow concealed carry on college campus, and none of those proposals passed. In Texas, where the Legislature meets every other year, a campus carry proposal failed to pass in 2011. In January, three people were shot when a 22-year-old man allegedly open fire on a campus of the Lone Star community college system near Houston, Texas.

A government watchdog has found that the Internal Revenue Service spent about $50 million to hold at least 220 conferences for employees between 2010 and 2012, a House committee said Sunday. The chairman of that committee, Rep. Darrell Issa, R-Calif., also released excerpts of congressional investigators' interviews with employees of the IRS office in Cincinnati. Issa said the interviews indicated the employees were directed by Washington to subject tea party and other conservative groups seeking tax-exempt status to tough scrutiny. The excerpts provided no direct evidence that Washington had ordered that screening. The top Democrat on that panel, Rep. Elijah Cummings of Maryland, said none of the employees interviewed have so far identified any IRS officials in Washington as ordering that targeting. The conference spending included $4 million for an August 2010 gathering in Anaheim, Calif., for which the agency did not negotiate lower room rates, even though that is standard government practice, according to a statement by the House Oversight and Government Reform Committee.

Nevada's Republican governor signed a bill on Friday to authorize driving privilege cards for illegal immigrants in a move likely to win favor with the state's large and growing Hispanic community. Governor

Brian Sandoval, a moderate Republican of Mexican ancestry in a state where Hispanic residents comprise over a quarter of the population, signed the bill in a ceremony at the state Capitol. The step comes during national efforts for immigration reform that saw a U.S. Senate panel approve legislation earlier this month that would usher in the biggest changes in immigration policy in a generation if passed by Congress. "Allowing undocumented immigrants to obtain a driver's privilege card will increase the number of drivers on Nevada's roads that are insured and aware of traffic rules and regulations," Sandoval said in a statement. The Nevada law, which passed the Democratic-led state Senate and Assembly this month, will allow immigrants to use foreign birth certificates to obtain driving cards that would be valid for a year. It will take effect at the start of 2014. Nevada requires proof of legal status in the country to obtain a full-fledged driver's license.

The American Psychiatric Association just released the fifth edition of the Diagnostic and Statistic Manual of Mental Disorders (DSM-5). In the revised version, caffeine withdrawal has been classified as a "caffeine-related disorder." "But it does have a letdown afterwards. If you drink a lot of coffee, at least two or three [236 ml] cups at a time, there will be a rebound or withdrawal effect." Caffeine-related disorders are not a new category in the DSM, as the DSM-IV also included the section. The new edition shows caffeine withdrawal as a direct consequence of caffeine intoxication. Symptoms of intoxication include restlessness, nervousness, red face, gastrointestinal upset, muscle twitching, rambling speech and rapid or irregular heartbeat. Once a person stops consuming caffeine, withdrawal brings on depression, headaches, fatigue and difficulty concentrating.

The Internal Revenue Service, already under fire after officials disclosed that the agency targeted conservative groups, faces increased scrutiny because of an inspector general's report that it spent about $50 million to hold at least 220 conferences for employees between 2010 and 2012. The report by the Treasury Department's inspector general about conference spending is set to be released Tuesday. The White House and the agency were on the defensive before the report on conference spending. Agency officials and the Obama administration have said the targeting of conservative groups was inappropriate, but the political tempest is showing no signs of

Gov. Chris Christie said Tuesday that he wants to hold a special election in October to fill the U.S. Senate seat made vacant by Frank Lautenberg's death on Monday, and that he intends to appoint someone to serve in the meantime. The decision means the state will have two statewide elections three weeks apart. At a news conference, Christie didn't answer the big question of whom he'll appoint to the seat in the meantime, but said he has a list of possibilities in his head. Christie's decision could bring criticism for putting more elections on the calendar, which can be expensive. The state Office of Legislative Services says each election costs the state about $12 million. Christie said the state will pick up the tab. In this case, there would be two -- an Aug. 13 primary and the special election on Oct. 16. The general election is Nov. 5. "The people need to have a voice and choice," he said. Time: 7:39PM

Synopsis:

A group of scientists in Mexico is busy at work on a new birth control method for men that doesn't involve using hormones or sterilization. It's not yet clear whether this new method would be a pill, cough syrup, injection, or something altogether different. But its developers have promised two things: The new contraceptive will have no major side effects and will only temporarily suspend a man's fertility. If it works, the new method would offer an alternative to hormone-based male contraceptives with familiar side effects like wild mood swings, acne, and loss of sexual appetite. It might also mean that men could take a greater role in birth control responsibilities, which often fall primarily on women. Here's how it would work: The researchers -- biochemists and molecular biologists based at Mexico City's UNAM University -- say they have discovered two proteins that are unique to sperm cells, called CatSper and Slo3. These proteins essentially give sperm the energy they need to navigate a woman's ovaries and fertilize her eggs. Scientists in Mexico are working on a new contraceptive that may give men other options, when it comes to birth control. New contraceptive methods for males could be quite important in cattle ranching and fisheries, according to Dr. Alberto Darzon, the UNAM team's leader. But he added that human males could also use more options for birth control.

Time: 8:17PM

Synopsis:

Gov. Rick Scott on Tuesday vetoed a bill that would have allowed children of immigrants who are not U.S. citizens to use a new federal form to get temporary Florida driver licenses. Scott said he vetoed HB 235 because it would have benefited people who are covered by a change in federal policy instituted by President Barack Obama last year that wasn't approved by Congress. Under the policy known as "Deferred Action Process for Childhood Arrivals," young people brought to the U.S. illegally as children are not subject to removal if they meet certain criteria. "Deferred action status is simply a policy of the Obama administration absent Congressional direction, designed to dictate removal action decisions using DHS (Department of Homeland Security) agency discretion," Scott wrote in a veto message. "It was never passed by Congress, nor is it a promulgated rule." The Florida Democratic Party excoriated the Republican governor's action. "Rick Scott continues to alienate and discriminate against thousands of undocumented immigrants. Instead of joining the legislature's near-unanimous consensus around HB 235, Governor Scott imposed his rigid ideology on Floridians - to the detriment of the young immigrants who are Florida's future," said party spokesman Joshua Karp. "This measure would have improved the everyday lives of thousands of undocumented immigrants. With a driver's license, undocumented young people can drive to school or their jobs without the threat of being thrown into jail or deported."

Marco Rubio walked across the Capitol on Wednesday afternoon to sell a large group of skeptical House conservatives on comprehensive immigration reform. But the House Republicans did not emerge from the meeting singing a different tune. Instead, most of them dug in their heels against the Senate's bipartisan immigration reform bill. That leaves Rubio, the Gang of Eight's chief envoy to conservatives, in a difficult bind. House members reiterated their doubts about a pathway to citizenship, and said that the border security language isn't strict enough. They also commented that they would rather address immigration in pieces rather than a comprehensive bill. "There were no surprises in there," Rep. Raúl Labrador (R-Idaho), who is working on immigration legislation in the House, told reporters. That resistance among House Republicans has Rubio twisted into a pretzel. Here's how. Rubio was one of eight authors of the original bill. He's been extremely vocal in selling the proposal on conservative talk radio and to his colleagues in Congress. But now that he's hearing serious resistance to the bill from his fellow conservatives, he's threatening to vote "no" on the very bill he helped write unless changes are made to strengthen the border security provisions-Sen. Marco Rubio, R-Fla, talks with reporters about immigration reform on his way to the luncheons in the U.S. Capitol on May 7, 2013. "Well, I think if those amendments don't pass, then I think we've got a bill that isn't going to become law, and I think we're wasting our time," he told conservative radio host Hugh Hewitt, when asked if he would vote against the bill if it's not amended. "So the answer is no." That's quite a reversal for Rubio, whose own website calls the existing language 'the toughest border security and enforcement measures in U.S. history.'

New information is surfacing that the government has allegedly been monitoring the internet activity of millions of Americans. Documents reveal U.S. spy agencies ordered phone and internet companies to allow them access to personal information and communications of U.S. citizens, a potentially explosive disclosure about how easily the government can collect information on line. The Washington Post and the British newspaper, The Guardian, are reporting that the National Security Agency, NSA, and FBI are tapping directly into the servers of nine leading internet companies, including Microsoft, Yahoo, Google, Facebook, AOL, Skype, YouTube, and Apple. That's according to a top secret NSA presentation. Intercepting data like video, photographs and emails flowing online. What this program enables the National Security Agency to do is to reach directly into the servers of the largest internet companies in the world --things that virtually every human being in the western world now uses to communicate with one another. The program appears to be intended to grab foreign intercepts many of which flow through the robust U.S. internet. Several of the companies reportedly cooperating with the government issued denials of involvement. This follows the stunning news that a secret Federal Court order directed Verizon to hand over phone records of millions of Americans. Former intelligence officials and privacy advocates say it's reasonable to presume other telephone companies got similar orders. If this is an open ended and indiscriminate collection process as this seems to be, then one would expect it to be much bigger than Verizon business.

The plan creates a pathway to citizenship for illegal immigrants already in the country and would tighten border security as well as institute new guest and high-tech worker visa programs. But many Republicans say the path to citizenship amounts to amnesty and are pushing amendments for tougher border security provisions. Sen. Marco Rubio (R-Fla.) who helped draft the bill and a key figure for winning conservative support said last week he would not vote for the legislation without changes to the border security provisions. Synopsis:

The U.S. Senate overwhelmingly voted on Tuesday to begin consideration of a White House-backed bill to overhaul the U.S. immigration system, burying a procedural roadblock that opponents regularly use to delay or kill legislation. With last November's election indicating broad support for the landmark measure, even some senators who have expressed opposition voted to allow the debate and amendment process to commence. By a vote of 82-15, the Senate cleared the way for consideration of the measure that could stretch through the end of this month.

Title: STUDY FINDS MANY DESIGNATED DRIVERS IMPAIRED

Time: 2:25pm

Synopsis:

A new study suggests designated drivers are not taking their duties seriously -- or soberly. The study published in the upcoming issue of the journal of studies on alcohol and drugs, found that 35-percent of designated drivers drink alcohol while serving as the "d-d." and one in five had blood-alcohol levels high enough to impair their driving. Researchers interviewed and tested 11-hundred people in the downtown area of a southeastern college community. Of the designated drivers who drank alcohol, half had blood alcohol levels higher than .05%. That's the new limit recommended by the national transportation safety board to all 50 states. The current limit is .08%.

Title: IMMIGRATION BILL

Time: 2:24 pm

Synopsis:

Backers of far-reaching immigration legislation are turning their attention to courting support and counting votes after the Senate pushed the contentious bill over early procedural hurdles. Two votes to place the bill formally before the Senate and open for amendments each drew more than 80 votes Tuesday, reflecting a bipartisan desire to debate the legislation to remake the nation's immigration laws and open the door to citizenship to millions. Despite the lopsided votes, Republicans served notice they will seek to toughen the bill's border security provisions and impose tougher terms on those seeking to gain legal status. "This bill has serious flaws," said their party leader, Sen. Mitch McConnell of Kentucky. A vote was possible Wednesday on an amendment by Sen. Charles Grassley, R-Iowa, to prohibit anyone from taking the first steps toward citizenship until the secretary of Homeland Security has certified to Congress that the U.S.-Mexico border has been under control for six months, according to Grassley's office. The measure is opposed by Democrats and some Republican backers of the bill.

Title: 71% OF FLA VOTERS BACK UP IMMIGRATION REFORM

Time 3:24

Synopsis:

More than 7 in 10 Florida voters favor the concept of the bipartisan immigration reform plans proposed in Congress, according to a new survey that indicates the issue might not be as politically polarizing as many say. The results released Thursday from Republican-leaning Harper Polling and Democratic-leaning Public Policy Polling could be a big boost to Florida's Republican Sen. Marco Rubio, a potential presidential candidate in 2016. Rubio helped craft his chamber's compromise plan only to face a fierce blowback from the conservative media elite and immigration hardliners. But Florida Republicans overwhelmingly back the proposal: 71-22 percent, with 43 percent saying they "strongly support," the poll of 500 voters says. By an even bigger spread of 82-14 percent, Florida Republicans said their senator should support the plan. Those results are mirrored across the nation and in Republican states, according to the pollsters, who conducted the survey for a bipartisan coalition backing comprehensive immigration reform.

Apple has joined Microsoft and Facebook in releasing details of requests from US law enforcement agencies for customer data amid continuing concerns over the extent of secret government surveillance. Apple said in a statement it received between 4,000 and 5,000 requests over the six months from December 2012 to May 2013 covering between 9,000 and 10,000 accounts or devices. The requests came from federal, state and local authorities and related to both criminal and national security matters. "The most common form of request comes from police investigating robberies and other crimes, searching for missing children, trying to locate a patient with Alzheimer's disease, or hoping to prevent a suicide," the statement said.

It's not as simple as whether gays and lesbians can marry or not, and whether they become eligible for federal benefits. The two decisions are likely to create new questions for couples in civil unions and those who move between states, as well as for employers. Title: SUPREME COURT RULES AGAINST ARIZONA LAW

Synopsis:

The Supreme Court on Monday tossed out a provision in Arizona's voter registration law that required proof of citizenship. The 7-2 majority said the state's voter-approved Proposition 200 interfered with federal law designed to make voter registration easier. The state called the provision a "sensible precaution" to prevent voter fraud. Civil rights group countered that it added an unconstitutional and burdensome layer of paperwork for tens of thousands of citizens. Justice Antonin Scalia said the National Voter Registration Act of 1993 "forbids states to demand an applicant submit additional information beyond that required by the federal form." But in a nod to state authority, he said the federal law "does not prevent states from denying registration based on any information in their possession establishing the applicant's eligibility." The appeal was a classic federalism dispute, on the often delicate line between conflict and cooperation between state and federal governments over enforcing voting procedures. During last year's election, there were numerous court challenges to state voter identification laws at the polls. The current fight has produced a range of states, lawmakers and advocacy groups on both sides on the gateway issue of registration. The Obama Justice Department opposed the Arizona law, which went beyond what other states have done to ensure integrity in the registration system.

Time: 7:40 pm

Synopsis:

Current and former U.S. officials stormed the talk show circuit on Sunday to tamp down the controversy swirling about the National Security Agency's recently revealed surveillance programs, saying the man who leaked their existence - and the media reporting on them - are misrepresenting the extent of the government's surveillance authority. Retired Gen. Michael Hayden, who helmed the NSA and the CIA under former President George W. Bush, told NBC's "Meet the Press" that it was "unfortunate" that two specific programs were leaked at the same time, saying the details of the two programs have bled together in the media's reporting and the public's understanding, "much to the harm of the national debate." One program, the telephone "metadata" program that obtains call logs from Americans' telephone lines, "does touch upon Americans in a massive way with phone records," Hayden explained, but does not survey the "content" of conversations. The other program, called PRISM, surveys foreigners' Internet use, "and it is about content," Hayden said.

concealing and harboring illegal immigrants, Loretta Lynch, U.S. Attorney for the Eastern District of New York, said Monday . "From their 7-Eleven stores, the defendants dispersed wire fraud and identity theft, along with Slurpees and hot dogs," Lynch said at a Brooklyn news conference. She said the 7-Eleven defendants allegedly forced the immigrants to work 100 hours a week and pocketed the majority of their pay, while also forcing them to live in and pay rent in boarding houses that the defendants owned. Ten stores in New York and four in Virginia were seized today as part of the federal investigation which found the undocumented workers from Pakistan were given identities stolen from children and the deceased, according to federal prosecutor Loretta E. A key committee in the Republican-led House moved Tuesday toward approving a tough enforcement-focused immigration bill opposed by Democrats and immigrant advocates, who interrupted the proceedings with cries of "Shame, shame, shame!" Meanwhile in the Senate, a Republican lawmaker floated a compromise border security proposal he hopes can win over support for sweeping immigration legislation under consideration there. And on a day of fast-paced developments on an issue that is a top priority for President Barack Obama, House Speaker John Boehner, R-Ohio, moved to quiet speculation that he might bring the Senate immigration legislation up for a vote despite opposition from many conservatives in his chamber. "Any immigration reform bill that is going to go into law ought to have a majority of both parties' support if we're really serious about making that happen. And so I don't see any way of bringing an immigration bill to the floor that doesn't have a majority support of Republicans," Boehner said. He added that border enforcement would be key for any immigration bill, "And I frankly think the Senate bill is weak on border security." As Boehner addressed reporters, the House Judiciary Committee was meeting to consider a bill, called the Strengthen and Fortify Enforcement Act, by Rep. Trey Gowdy, R-S.C. It would empower state and local officials to enforce federal immigration laws, make passport and visa fraud into aggravated felonies subject to deportation, funnel money into building more detention centers, and crack down on immigrants suspected of posing dangers. As soon as Judiciary Chairman Bob Goodlatte, R-Va., gavelled the proceedings open, more than a dozen protesters who had been seated in the hearing room stood up and began clapping and chanting, "Shame, shame, shame! Prospects for passage of a U.S. immigration bill with strong bipartisan support brightened on Wednesday when a group of Republican and Democratic negotiators reached a tentative deal on ways to shore up U.S. border security, senators said. Some Democratic senators already were buoyed by Tuesday's Congressional Budget Office report, which concluded that the Senate immigration bill would reduce federal budget deficits by nearly $900 billion over 20 years and boost the U.S. economy. The economic projection is "a big game-changer," New Jersey Democratic Senator Robert Menendez, a member of the bi-partisan "Gang of Eight" that wrote the bill, told Reuters. Menendez said the CBO report undermined Republican arguments that the measure would cost the government trillions of dollars over the long term, mainly in federal benefit payouts to illegal immigrants who are put on a path to citizenship. Meanwhile, Corker said the CBO's projection that the bill would reduce illegal border crossing by only 25 percent "added some momentum to our discussions about doing something very substantial on border security."

While the American Medical Association may not have the clout it once did, it's still the largest single group of doctors making waves about health and the practice of medicine. So it's not anything when the AMA's House of Delegates approves a measure to label obesity a disease. The group's deliberative democratic body passed a measure in Chicago Tuesday that broadly, if vaguely, says obesity is a medical condition. The AMA isn't vested with legally binding authority on what's a disease and what's not. And, in fact, when it comes to the labeling of diseases, there's a whole other global ball of wax called the International Classification of Diseases, which already has a range of categories covering obesity - from the type "due to excess calories" to the kind that's a side effect of prescription drugs. So what's the big deal with the AMA? The group still has a considerable bully pulpit. And the vote could give more oomph to efforts to have obesity interventions paid for by insurers and to get the public focused on the problem. "We felt it's time to take a stance and say we're going to identify this as a disease," Dr. Douglas Martin, chairman of the AMA public health committee that referred the resolution for vote, told MedPage Today. "We think that's going to send a message not only to the public but to the physician community that we really need to make it a priority and put it in our cross hairs."

A border agent every 1,000 feet, every hour of every day, supported by 700 miles of fencing along the Mexican frontier. No green cards for the 11 million immigrants living illegally in America until those steps and others to enhance border controls are taken. And none of it increases the federal deficit or debt. A bipartisan group of senators unveiled a compromise on Thursday intended to ensure Senate passage of a major immigration reform bill with enough Republican support to persuade the GOP-controlled House to also take up the measure that is a priority of President Barack Obama. The bipartisan amendment would require 20,000 more border agents, completing 700 miles of fence along the boundary with Mexico, and deploying $3.2 billion in technology upgrades similar to equipment used by U.S. forces in Iraq and Afghanistan. The proposal, negotiated by a group of senators from both parties known as the "Gang of Eight," also insists on stronger worker verification and border entry-exit controls. Only after those five conditions have been met and verified by the Department of Homeland Security can undocumented immigrants get permanent residency, supporters said. GOP Sens. John Hoeven of North Dakota and Bob Corker of Tennessee introduced the compromise amendment, saying it incorporated proposals from other senators to try to fix a broken immigration system.

The U.S. Supreme Court on Monday avoided a major ruling in a closely watched racial case on the affirmative action admissions policy at the University of Texas at Austin by sending the case back to a lower court. The court, on a 7-1 vote, said an appeals court did not apply the correct standard in deciding whether the Texas policy violated the U.S. Constitution's guarantee of equal protection. In doing so, Justice Anthony Kennedy made it clear that the program is not on solid legal ground and could still be overturned. When the case returns to the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans, the university "must make a showing that its plan is narrowly tailored to achieve the only interest that this court has approved in this context," Kennedy wrote. Under court precedent, that means a program that takes into account a broad array of qualifications and characteristics -- of which racial or ethnic origin is but a single though important element." The Supreme Court avoided making a decision on whether to overturn a 2003 precedent in a ruling written by the now-retired Justice Sandra Day O'Connor that let universities use race in admissions as one factor among others that make particular applicants more desirable.

Synopsis:

In a pair of major victories for the gay rights movement, the Supreme Court on Wednesday ruled that married same-sex couples were entitled to federal benefits and, by declining to decide a case from California, effectively allowed same-sex marriages there. The rulings leave in place laws banning same-sex marriage around the nation, and the court declined to say whether there was a constitutional right to such unions. But in clearing the way for same-sex marriage in California, the nation's most populous state, the court effectively increased to 13 the number of states that allow it. If California becomes the 13th state to allow same-sex marriage, about 30 percent of Americans will live in jurisdictions where it is legal. Until last year, when four states voted in favor of same-sex marriage at the ballot box, it had failed - or bans on it had succeeded - every time it had appeared on a statewide initiative.

Large swaths of California sweltered under extreme heat warnings, which are expected to last into Tuesday night and maybe even longer. The forecast for Death Valley, California, called for 128 degrees (53 degrees Celsius) on Saturday, but it was 3 degrees shy of that, according to unofficial reports from the National Weather Service. Death Valley's record high of 134 degrees (56.6 degrees Celsius), set a century ago, stands as the highest temperature ever recorded on Earth. Forecasters said temperatures in sun baked Las Vegas, Nevada, shot up to 115 degrees (46 degrees Celsius) on Saturday afternoon, two degrees short of the city's all-time record.
