Topic: IMMIGRATION REFORM

Time: 2:24PM

Synopsis:

The immigration debate is shifting to the Republican-led House, where lawmakers have shown little appetite for the comprehensive approach their Senate colleagues embraced last week. The Republican chairman of the House Judiciary Committee said Sunday that any attempt at comprehensive immigration legislation cannot offer a "special pathway to citizenship" for those in the United States illegally. Democrats have called that component a deal-breaker. Rep. Bob Goodlatte, the Virginia Republican who leads the House Judiciary Committee, is suggesting a pathway to legal standing, similar to immigrants who have green cards.

Topic: LATINO PRESIDENTIAL VOTERS ON 2016 CANDIDATES, IMMIGRATION REFORM

Time: 3:21PM

Synopsis:

After suffering historic losses in two consecutive presidential cycles, the Republican Party is finally recognizing that it has a Latino problem it needs to fix in order to remain a viable national party. With the Senate on the verge of passing historic immigration legislation, all eyes are quickly turning towards the House to see how the lower chamber handles this issue, in a make or break movement for the GOP. Monday, July 1st at 12pm EST, Latino Decisions and America's Voice will release a new poll of Latino "presidential voters"-people who are extremely likely to participate in the 2016 elections based on past history. The poll tests where they stand on key potential matchups, such as Hilary Clinton vs. Senator Marco Rubio (R-FL) and many more, and how the outcome of the immigration debate in Congress may impact their vote. The nationwide poll was conducted from June 20 - June 29, 2013, among 1,200 Latinos who voted in both 2008 and 2012, and carries an overall margin of error of +/- 2.8%.

Topic: INTEREST IN STUDENT LOANS DOUBLE

Time: 5:19PM

Synopsis:

College students taking out new loans for the fall term will see interest rates twice what they were in the spring -- unless Congress fulfills its pledge to restore lower rates when it returns after the July 4 holiday. Subsidized Stafford loans, which account for roughly a quarter of all direct federal borrowing, went from 3.4 percent interest to 6.8 percent interest on Monday. Congress' Joint Economic Committee estimated the cost passed to students would be about $2,600. Efforts to keep interest rates from doubling on new Stafford loans fell apart last week amid partisan wrangling in the Senate. Democratic senators and the White House both predicted that a deal would be reached in Congress to bring the rates down again before students return to campus. But if an agreement remains elusive, students could find themselves saddled with higher interest rates this year than last.

Topic: "STOP AND FRISK" LATEST

Time: 2:24PM

Synopsis:

Mayor Michael Bloomberg threatened on Monday to campaign against City Council members who supported two bills aimed at addressing the New York Police Department's controversial stop-and-frisk tactic. Mr. Bloomberg, a multibillionaire, didn't specify exactly what he would do to influence the upcoming elections of council members who approved legislation to create an inspector general for the NYPD and another bill that allows racial-profiling lawsuits to be filed in state court. Mr. Bloomberg has promised to veto both bills. Supporters of the legislation said they will override those vetoes. The council needs 34 votes to override a mayoral veto, which means on the racial-profiling bill the mayor needs only one council member to switch positions or fail to show up for the override vote. The mayor has previously expressed reservations about using his personal fortune, estimated by Forbes at $27 billion, to influence this year's municipal elections. NYPD officers have made more than five million stops-many of which led to frisks-since Mr. Bloomberg took office in 2002.

Topic: WOMEN OVERDOSE IN PAINKILLERS

Time: 3:19PM

Synopsis:

The number of women overdosing on prescription painkillers such as Vicodin and OxyCotin has increased by more than 400 percent in the past decade, a new national survey on drug use and health from the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention has found. About 18 women die every day from taking prescription painkillers, according to the survey. Since 2007, more women have died from overdosing on prescription painkillers than in motor vehicle accidents. And death rates from opioid abuse in women are more than four times higher than death by cocaine and heroin use combined. In 2010, nearly a million women visited emergency rooms for drug misuse or abuse, and 6,600 of them died. Prescription drug abuse by women doubled between 2004 and 2010. Since women are smaller than men, they feel the impact of prescription drugs on smaller doses, said Foster. They also become addicted to prescription drugs more quickly than men and are more likely to use prescription drugs in combination with other drugs, such as alcohol, according to the report.

Topic: GABBY GIFFORDS AND "GUN CONTROL"

Time: 5:19PM

Synopsis:

Former congresswoman Gabby Giffords kicked off a seven-state tour Monday to advocate for universal gun background checks. Giffords and husband Mark Kelly starting their day in Las Vegas demonstrating that they, too, are gun owners. Giffords fired a gun at a shooting range. It's the first time she's used a gun since a deranged gunman shot her in the head in 2011. A dozen other people were also wounded and six others were killed. Giffords and her husband say, as gun owners, they join with a high percentage of people who do want universal background checks to keep guns out of the hands of the mentally ill. Giffords, who is still recovering from her attack, is speaking up for change. The couple says 84 percent of Nevada voters support background checks and are encouraging Senator Dean Heller to change his "no" vote on background checks. Giffords' husband says he and his wife have asked for a meeting with the NRA leadership on the issue, but so far no meeting has been granted.

Topic: CALIFORNIA PRISON WILL MOVE 2,600 INMATES DUE TO FUNGUS

Time: 8:25PM

Synopsis:

State corrections officials said Tuesday they will comply with a federal court order to move thousands of inmates out of two Central Valley prisons -- where an airborne fungus has led to widespread illnesses.

Department of Corrections and Rehabilitation spokeswoman Deborah Hoffman told The Associated Press on Tuesday that it is not yet clear where the 2,600 inmates will go. U.S. District Judge Thelton Henderson last week ordered the transfer of most black, Filipino and medically at-risk inmates from Avenal and Pleasant Valley state prisons because those groups are more vulnerable to the naturally occurring fungal infection that causes valley fever. Hoffman says officials could also seek an extension if they cannot completely comply within Henderson's 90-day deadline.

Security will be tighter than ever in several US cities during Independence Day celebrations this week, which will see some of the largest public gatherings in the country since the deadly Boston Marathon bombings in April. Security officials said they would deploy record numbers of police, install scores of new surveillance cameras and search checkpoints at fireworks displays, concerts and other Fourth of July events in Boston, New York, Washington and Atlanta. The National Explosives Task Force has urged fireworks sellers in the US to report buyers who raise suspicion, according to an industry advisory. The Boston Marathon bombers had used materials from fireworks bought at a store to build bombs, as had a man convicted of attempting to bomb Times Square in New York in 2010.

Topic: GAY MARRIAGE AND IMMIGRATION

Time 8.26 pm

Synopsis:

U.S. immigration officers will begin reviewing visa applications for same-sex spouses of American citizens, Homeland Security Secretary Janet Napolitano said on Monday. Her statement was in response to last week's Supreme Court decision that found a key provision of the Defense of Marriage Act, which denied certain federal benefits to same-sex couples, unconstitutional. President Barack Obama has directed federal agencies to begin reviewing their practices to ensure the court's decision is swiftly implemented. Previously, even if a gay or lesbian couple wed in one of the 12 states that allow same-sex marriage, they were prevented from benefiting from a federal provision that allows a non-American spouse of a U.S. citizen from applying for a work visa. On its website, the Department of Homeland Security now tells same-sex couples they are permitted to file petitions for immigrant visas, and that those applications will no longer be automatically denied because the partners are of the same sex. Legislation has been introduced over the past decade that would recognize same-sex partners for immigration purposes, though none has been successful. Same-sex couples in which one partner is a non-U.S. citizen have either moved to other countries or lived apart.

Topic: GAS PRICES

Time: 5.19 pm

Synopsis:

If cheap gas is considered as patriotic as draping Old Glory in the back window of your pickup truck, the news from the government's oil price watchers couldn't come at a better time. The price of regular-grade gasoline has fallen below $3.50 a gallon on average nationally just in time for the Fourth of July weekend in the weekly survey by the Energy Information Administration reports. And it wasn't just a tiny price drop. A gallon of regular fell eight cents during the week from $3.577 to $3.496. That's unusual, given not only that the four-day holiday weekend is coming up, but also because the nation is entering the heart of the summer vacation driving season. Among regions, the cheapest gas can still be found, as usual, on the refinery-rich Gulf Coast. There, it averaged $3.312 a gallon, down from $3.377 a gallon. And the prices? In California, the country's driving Mecca, gas still tops an average of $4 a gallon -- but just barely. It's $4.002 in the survey. On the West Coast in general, including California, gas averages $3.892.

Topic: US HOMELAND SECURITY CONSIDERING ARMING BORDER DROMES WITH WEAPONS

Time: 6.45

Synopsis:

Attacks by U.S. unmanned drones in the Middle East and Africa are commonplace, but it would be unheard of to see these aerial military weapons appearing over the U.S.-Mexico border. Yet it's a possible scenario, according to a newly-unearthed document from the country's leading federal border agency, U.S. Customs and Border Protection. According to a Customs and Border Protection reports obtained by the Electronic Frontier Foundation through a Freedom of Information Act lawsuit, the agency has considered adding weapons to its Predator drones that currently serve as the agency's eyes in the sky on the lookout for undocumented immigrants and drug trafficking coming across the border. A section of the heavily redacted 107-page report that deals with the equipment mounted on the drones states that "Additional payload upgrades could include expendables or non-lethal weapons designed to immobilize."

Topic: IMMIGRATION-SOUTH AS USUAL

Time: 5.48 pm

Synopsis:

Two years after Georgia and Alabama passed laws designed to drive away people living in the country illegally, the states' agricultural areas are still heavily populated with foreign workers, many of whom don't have legal authorization to be here. There are still concerns over enforcement and lingering fears among immigrants, but in many ways it appears that people have gone on with life much as it was before the laws were enacted. Farmers say many of the foreign workers have returned because the laws are not heavily enforced and it once again seems safe to be here. But the story is more complicated than that: Some are still staying away or have gone underground, according to community activists, and some farmers say they are filling labor shortages not with returning immigrants but with workers hired through a program that grants temporary legal visas.

The state's attorney general, Chris Koster, has warned that unless Missouri is allowed by the state supreme court to press ahead quickly with pending executions under its current lethal-injection protocol, its drug supplies will expire. In that case, the state might have to turn to the only other option open to it - the gas chamber.

Time: 3:19 pm

Synopsis:

The immigration debate is focused on border security and people in the country illegally, but the nation's farmers are hoping for legislation that makes it easier for them to hire workers. Producers of cherries, apples and other fruits in Michigan say the immigration crackdown is leaving them short of laborers to harvest their crops. The same complaint is heard from Christmas tree growers in the Appalachians, dairy farmers in Wisconsin and California's many fruit and vegetable operations. A recently approved Senate bill would let experienced farm workers become eligible for year-round residency. Another new program would let farmers hire foreign "guest workers" under temporary visas. But conservative critics say those programs amount to "amnesty."

Topic: FITNESS HEAT

Time: 3:19 pm

Synopsis:

Fitness experts say one way for outdoor exercisers who dread the long, hot summer days of steamy runs and breathless aerobics during a heat wave is to embrace it. "It takes most healthy people 10 to 14 days to fully acclimate to exercising in the heat," said Dr. Cedric X. Bryant, chief science officer of the American Council on Exercise. "In order to achieve that you need to be exercising in heat." The heat-acclimated individual will sweat sooner and that sweat will be more dilute, Bryant said. There will be a lower risk for dehydration and a reduction in the heat gained through exercise that will help maintain a lower core temperature and heart rate response. He said as much as 25 percent of the healthy population is estimated to be heat intolerant in an unacclimated state. Once they get acclimated that drops to 2 percent. A 2011 report from the U.S. Centers for Disease Control showed that about 6,000 people a year seek emergency treatment for heat illnesses suffered while playing sports or participating in other recreational activities outdoors.

Topic: IN THE HANDS OF THE REPUBLICAN PARTY/ IMMIGRATION REFORM

Time: 3:20 pm

Synopsis:

The House timetable is unclear, with majority Republicans scheduled to hold a closed-door meeting on Wednesday to plan their next steps. Senate Majority leader Harry Reid urged Speaker John Boehner on Monday to allow a vote on the Senate-passed measure, but that is unlikely, at least in the short run. Boehner has said previously he will only place legislation on the floor that has the support of at least half of his party's rank and file, a formula that so far, appears to rule out the path to citizenship that is at the core of the Senate-passed measure. The Senate bill's treatment of immigrants already in the U.S. illegally is distinct from the system it would create for legal immigration. Working out a comprehensive GOP House response could be complex because the Senate version itself is complicated. It would expand various temporary and permanent visa categories, shut down others and create still other new ones. Some visa programs would be capped and some wouldn't. Some would expand or contract in response to demand. Under current law, around 1 million people get green cards granting permanent U.S. residence each year. That would rise to between 1.5 million to 1.7 million annually under the Senate bill within about five years of enactment, the Migration Policy Institute estimates.

Topic: THE REPUBLICAN PARTY LATEST IN THE IMMIGRATION REFORM

Time: 2:27 pm

Synopsis:

President Barack Obama jumped into the immigration debate on Wednesday by releasing a report touting economic benefits from reforms and meeting with Hispanic lawmakers, as Republican lawmakers gathered to try to craft their response. The release of the White House report signaled a new engagement by Obama, who has made immigration a top legislative priority but stayed on the sidelines of the debate that raged in the Senate in May and June. The report said passing reforms would expand the economy 3.3 percent by 2023 and reduce the federal deficit by almost $850 billion over 20 years. Obama also met with the Congressional Hispanic Caucus as he launches an offensive to pressure hesitant Republicans in the House of Representatives to act on comprehensive immigration legislation this year. "He said he was open to do anything we thought in Congress would be helpful," Democratic Representative Xavier Becerra said following the White House meeting. Meanwhile, House Speaker John Boehner invited all 233 of his Fellow House Republicans to a two-hour meeting to discuss the bipartisan Senate bill to give legal status to around 11 million undocumented residents and eventually allow them to apply for U.S. citizenship. The Democratic-led Senate passed the sweeping immigration bill at the end of June. But the legislation's fate is unclear in the Republican-controlled House. Immigration advocacy groups said they hoped the meeting would bring clarity on whether enough House Republicans want to try to pass some sort of bipartisan bill this year.

Any apple juice containing more than 10 parts per billion could face removal from the market and its manufacturers could risk legal action, the agency said. FDA officials emphasized that the agency has been monitoring arsenic levels in apple juice for decades, and that the overwhelming number of products on the market already meet such a standard. "The FDA is committed to ensuring the safety of the American food supply and to doing what is necessary to protect public health," FDA Commissioner Margaret A. Hamburg said in announcing the move. Two hundred and fifty-five suspected child predators were arrested and 61 victims of child sexual exploitation were identified during a five-week operation announced Monday by U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement and its Internet Crimes Against Children task forces across the United States and its territories. Operation iGuardian," which ran May 28 to June 30, was described by ICE as a "surge operation" aimed at identifying and rescuing victims of online sexual exploitation, and arresting their abusers as well as others who own, trade and produce images of child pornography. "Protecting our youth in the digital age requires all of us to be on the lookout for child predators abusing and extorting victims online," ICE Director John Morton said. "Children and parents need to understand that not everyone online is who they say they are. According to investigators, a "disturbing trend" is emerging in which child predators are increasingly using the Internet to entice children to produce and share sexually explicit material online. During Operation iGuardian, ICE agents said they encountered various child predators chatting online with minors about sexual topics, sending them obscene images, encouraging them to produce nude or sexual photos and videos, and attempting to meet them in person to engage in sexual activity. In some cases, they said, child predators are also sexually extorting, or "sextorting," the minors into producing additional and increasingly graphic images and videos.

In television interviews taped with four Spanish-language newscasts, Obama said he thinks many Republicans need more time to grapple with concerns about border security and the changing demographics of America. After the Senate passed a comprehensive bill that includes a path to citizenship for millions of undocumented immigrants in the United States, Obama argued that the House had "more than enough time" to review and pass it before the August break, when lawmakers head home to their districts. But House Republicans have since made it clear they will come up with their own reforms, and plan to tackle the immigration issue in smaller bills.

Topic: QUICK RULING ON DRIVER'S LICENSES FOR 'DREAMERS' SOUGHT IN COURT

Time 3:18 pm

Synopsis:

Claiming the trial judge was wrong, attorneys for Arizona "dreamers" want a federal appeals court to immediately order the state Motor Vehicle Division to start issuing licenses to deferred action recipients. Legal papers filed late Monday contend there are real dangers to those in the program, formally known as Deferred Action for Childhood Arrivals, including arrest for driving without a license and the inability to get certain jobs. That, coupled with a state policy of issuing licenses to those in other deferred action programs, shows challengers are facing "irreparable harm." That question is crucial: Federal court rules require a judge weighing whether to issue any kind of injunction to consider whether there is a chance of irreparable harm to those seeking the relief. The judge also has to balance the hardships on each side of the dispute. In this case, the lawyers contend, that harm to the dreamers, including the five plaintiffs in the case, is quite real. The lawyers pointed out one of the plaintiffs already has been cited for driving without a license, pleaded guilty and was forced to pay a fee to have the vehicle released from an impound lot. Last month U.S. District Court Judge David Campbell concluded the challengers may eventually win the lawsuit after a full-blown trial, saying there is evidence the state policy violates equal protection provisions of the U.S. Constitution.

Cooler temperatures are within sight but probably not soon or cool enough for a large swath of the country hit with dangerously high temperatures for days, as the largest heat wave of the summer failed to budge from South Dakota to Massachusetts. The relief is expected to begin arriving Thursday in some regions of the country as a cold front drops south from Canada. But that's not soon enough for places such as New York City, which was bracing for another day of temperatures in the high 90s. Cooler temperatures are likely to sweep through the Midwest and into the Mid-Atlantic and Northeast regions by Saturday. They might be accompanied by severe thunderstorms. The heat wave has stagnated over large regions, bringing sizzling temperatures and little hope of relief without rain -- a growing possibility for some hard-hit areas as the weekend approaches. Most states in the U.S. had at least one area where the temperature hit 90 degrees Wednesday, according to the National Weather Service, though the worst heat was in the Midwest to Northeast. If a stranger claiming to be from the government calls to offer you an "Obamacare card" or threatens to throw you in jail unless you buy insurance, hang up the phone. It's a scam. Fraudsters are poised to take advantage of widespread confusion over the Affordable Care Act - also known as Obamacare - to steal Americans' credit cards, Social Security numbers and other personal information, consumer advocates and government officials say. "This is the huge, new government program. There's no doubt in my mind that the fraudsters view it as an opportunity to rip people off," said Lois Greisman, associate director for the Federal Trade Commission's division of marketing practices. The FTC already has issued a consumer alert about one telemarketing scheme, in which impostors claiming to be from Medicare told consumers they needed to hand over their personal or financial information in order to continue eligibility because "change is on the horizon." But nothing in the Affordable Care Act threatens existing benefits for Medicare enrollees, Greisman said. The official-sounding calls were just a ploy to steal consumers' identities and money. Synopsis:

A federal appeals court rejected an ordinance by a Dallas suburb that sought to bar landlords from renting to immigrants living in the U.S. without legal documentation, concluding that it illegally interfered with the federal government's prerogative to enforce immigration laws. The ruling Monday by the Fifth U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans was a major blow to Farmers Branch, Texas, a city of about 28,000 people approximately 15 miles north of Dallas. The suburb has garnered national attention since it first attempted to enact its law in 2006, citing an unwelcome influx of undocumented immigrants. Backed by a popular vote, the law would require prospective renters to declare they were legal residents and would subject landlords to possible criminal penalties if they rented to someone who was in the country illegally. The federal challenge to the law was brought by a group of local landlords and tenants.

Title: HOT SAUCE CONTAINS HIGH LEVELS OF LEAD STUDY SAYS

Time: 8:20 pm

Synopsis:

Many imported hot sauces sold in the U.S. contain dangerous levels of lead, according to a what is billed as a first-of-its-kind environment and food study. Shawn Gerstenberger, lead researcher for the University of Nevada-Las Vegas study, told the Los Angeles Times that there are no U.S. government standards for the amounts of lead in hot sauce brands. UNLV researchers tested 25 bottles of hot sauce imported from Mexico and South America. The products were bought in the U.S. at ethnic markets and grocery stores. Four bottles, or 16% of the sample, exceeded U.S. Food and Drug Administration standard for safe levels of lead. The product packaging was also tested because lead in packaging has been known to leak into food.

Title: REACTION TO STEVE KING COMMENTS ON IMMIGRATION

Time: 3:18 pm

Synopsis:

A Hispanic Democratic lawmaker blasted Rep. Steve King (R-Iowa) on Tuesday for comments he made recently regarding immigrants illegally crossing the U.S.-Mexico border, calling the Republican's statements "beneath the dignity" of the House of Representatives. Rep. Steve King (R-Iowa) opposes immigration reform legislation. Rep. Joe Garcia (D-Fla.) called out King for the comments during a House Judiciary Committee subcommittee hearing on how Congress might establish the legal status of the children of illegal immigrants. With King sitting across the dais, Garcia read the comments and then said: "It is offensive. And it is beneath the dignity of this body." King didn't respond or clarify his comments when he spoke just a few moments later. In a recent interview with the conservative Web site Newsmax King said that legalizing undocumented immigrants will not occur because of the high number of undocumented immigrants who carry drugs across the border. "Some of them are valedictorians, and their parents brought them in," King told Newsmax in an interview last week. "It wasn't their fault. It's true in some cases, but they aren't all valedictorians. They weren't all brought in by their parents." "For everyone who's a valedictorian, there's another 100 out there who weigh 130 pounds - and they've got calves the size of cantaloupes because they're hauling 75 pounds of marijuana across the desert," King said later in the interview. "Those people would be legalized with the same act."

Title: STUDENTS LOANS

Time: 3.26 pm

Synopsis:

College students and their parents can breathe a sigh of relief. Yesterday the Senate agreed to a compromise to end a dispute over interest rates on education loans. Because of a standoff in Congress, those rates doubled on July 1st to 6.8%. But under this deal, rates will drop down to 3.86% for this upcoming year. That sigh of relief may just be temporary. The Senate compromise links interest rates to financial markets. The good news - lower rates right away - but they could potentially increase as the economy improves. Democrats said the plan leaves students vulnerable to market fluctuations. Democrats insisted on and secured a measure that would ensure loan rates will be capped in the future. Undergraduate loans won't be allowed to rise past 8.25%; graduate loans 9.5%. President Obama called the deal a major victory for American students. The bill is expected to pass the House soon and head to the President's desk for his signature.

Title: CALIFORNIA OUT OF UNEMPLOYMENT BENEFITS

Time: 7.16.pm

Synopsis:

The California economy continues to improve, but the economic growth means unemployment benefits will soon be running out for some. The reason is because California is losing its eligibility for "Tier Four" federal unemployment extensions. The tier 4 extension lets claimants get an extra ten weeks of unemployment benefits while they continue to look for a job. However, many people in the north state are still unemployed. Unemployment rates in Butte, Shasta, Tehama and other surrounding counties are still well above the state average, ranging between 9.4 and 11.3 percent. The California unemployment rate recently dropped to 8.5 percent, which is below the level required by federal guidelines in order to provide the ten weeks of additional benefits. Tier 4 is the final extension of unemployment benefits, and E.D.D. estimates that more than 100,000 Californians are currently collecting benefits as part of the Tier 3 federal extension and will be the first to be impacted by the loss of eligibility. According to E.D.D., anyone starting a tier 4 extension prior to August 11th can still collect the remainder through December 28th of this year. Tier 4 benefits have been payable in California since February of 2010. The loss of such benefits means the new maximum potential benefit amount available for claimants is up to 63 weeks.

USCIS reminds eligible nationals of El Salvador (and persons without nationality who last regularly resided in El Salvador) and who currently have Temporary Protected Status (TPS) to re-register for TPS by Monday July 29, 2013. Failure to re-register by this deadline may result in the loss of TPS status and work authorization. Eligible Salvadoran TPS beneficiaries who re-register during the registration period and request employment authorization will receive a new Employment Authorization Document (EAD) with an expiration date of March 9, 2015. USCIS recognizes that some re-registrants whose EADs expire in September may not receive their new EADs until after their current EADs have expired. Therefore, USCIS is automatically extending current TPS El Salvador EADs bearing a Sept. 9, 2013, expiration date for an additional six months. Title: NY SODA BAN UNCONSTITUTIONAL

Time: 7:40 pm

Synopsis:

New York City's crackdown on big, sugary sodas is staying on ice. A mid-level state appeals court ruled Tuesday that the city's Board of Health exceeded its legal authority when it voted last year to put a 16-ounce size limit on high-calorie soft drinks served in restaurants, theaters, stadiums, sidewalk food carts and many other places. In an unanimous opinion, a four-judge panel of the state Supreme Court Appellate Division said that while the board has the power to ban "inherently harmful" foodstuffs from being served to the public, sweetened beverages don't fall into that category. Soda consumption is not necessarily harmful when done in moderation, the court wrote, and therefore "cannot be classified as a health hazard per se." The panel didn't address whether the size limit would have infringed on personal liberties, but said that in adopting it, the health board improperly assumed broad lawmaking powers given only to legislative bodies, like the City Council. Mayor Michael Bloomberg, the driving force behind the regulation, promised a quick appeal. The American Beverage Association, which had been among the groups challenging the rule, applauded the ruling, which was the second to find that the Board of Health had overstepped its authority. A similar lower court ruling in March kept the regulation from taking effect.

For a hamburger that cost more than $300,000, you might expect fries and a shake too. But this is no ordinary burger. At a public tasting in London on Monday, scientists are prepared to serve up the first hamburger grown in a laboratory from stem cells of cattle. Mark Post, whose team at Maastricht University in the Netherlands developed the burger after five years of research, hopes making meat in labs could eventually help solve the food crisis and fight climate change. But Post says success doesn't hinge on science. "For the burger to succeed it has to look, feel and taste like the real thing," he said. The burger, to be served to two volunteers, was made from cow muscle cells from two organic cows. The resulting patty will be seasoned with salt, egg powder, breadcrumbs, red beet juice and saffron. Post and colleagues took muscle cells from a cow and put them into a nutrient solution to help them develop into muscle tissue. The muscle cells grew into small strands of meat, and it takes nearly 20,000 strands to make one 140 gram (5 ounce) burger. The project cost 250,000 Euros ($332,000).

The mayor cited the benefits of stop-and-frisk, crediting the tactic for making the city safer and for ridding the streets of thousands of illegal guns. He said the trend toward heroin use began in 2009, following a crackdown on abuse of prescription opiates, such as oxycodone. The number of pieces of police evidence that tested positive for heroin totaled 842 in 2007 and increased to 2,251 in 2012 statewide, according to Banta-Green's data. The rise in heroin use is also concerning because of the risks of infectious disease, such as hepatitis, and overdose. He said about 70 percent of King County injection drug users have hepatitis-C.

Topic: HISPANIC TEENS MORE LIKELY TO ABUSE DRUGS

Time:

Synopsis:

Hispanic teens are more likely to abuse illegal and legal drugs than their black or white peers, a new report finds. Fifty-four percent of Hispanic teens surveyed said they had used an illicit drug, compared with 45 percent of black teens and 43 percent of white teens. The survey found that 62 percent of Hispanic teens have been offered drugs -- including Ecstasy, crack/cocaine, heroin and methamphetamine -- at least once, compared with 53 percent of white teens and 46 percent of black teens. And schools are not drug-free zones, the report suggested. Forty-two percent of Hispanic teens have been offered drugs at school, compared with 30 percent of white teens and 28 percent of black teens. Conducted yearly, the latest survey included responses from nearly 3,900 teens and more than 800 parents questioned in 2012. In many cases, when it comes to teen drug use, parents aren't communicating disapproval, especially when it comes to marijuana, Clarkin noted. According to the report, 21 percent of Hispanic parents "think it's OK if their teen smokes marijuana sometimes," compared with 11 percent of black parents and 6 percent of white parents. In addition, 28 percent of Hispanic parents say using prescription drugs is safer than using street drugs, compared with 20 percent of black parents and 9 percent of white parents.

Synopsis:

Firefighters on Saturday battled to gain control of a fast-moving wildfire raging on the edge of Yosemite National Park that is threatening power and water supplies to San Francisco about 200 miles (322 km) to the west. The so-called Rim Fire, which had grown to just over 125,000 acres (50,585 hectares) as of early Saturday, remained largely unchecked with extreme terrain hampering efforts at containment. California Governor Jerry Brown on Friday declared a state of emergency, warning that the fire had damaged the electrical infrastructure serving the city, and forced the San Francisco Public Utilities Commission to shut down power lines. There have been no reports of blackouts in San Francisco. Ashley Taylor, a spokeswoman for the U.S. Forest Service, said high humidity and firefighting efforts through the night had helped some.

Time: 5.38 pm / 6.13 pm

Synopsis:

Faculty members and advocates were let down by President Barack Obama's speech on education at the State University of New York at Buffalo Thursday. Some faculty members and advocates labeled Obama's new proposal to lower the cost of tuition and make college more accessible and higher education's version of "No Child Left Behind." The proposal, they said, does not guarantee student learning, but still focuses on calculable outcomes like graduation rates. Other people skeptic of the plan pointed to financial cutbacks forcing public universities to hike up their tuition to remain open. This, Aaron Bady, Ph.D. candidate in African literature at the University of California at Berkeley, said makes it difficult for such schools to offer a high-quality and low-cost education. Obama's plan did have its supporters, however. Paul LeBlanc, president of Southern New Hampshire University said the plan is a much-needed reform to the current business model for many universities.

Time: 8.24 PM

Synopsis:

More than 40 uncontained, active and large wildfires dot the western U.S. from Arizona to Washington state and Alaska, taxing national firefighting resources and helping to push spending past $1 billion for the year. The National Interagency Fire Center in Boise has raised the national wildfire preparedness level to the highest tier for the first time in five years. The center lists two central Idaho wildfires as the country's top priorities, helping provide crews and resources for the Beaver Creek Fire, which forced the evacuation of 1,250 homes in the resort area of Ketchum and Sun Valley and has cost nearly $12 million so far. President Barack Obama was briefed Tuesday on the wildfires by his homeland security adviser, Lisa Monaco. Four days into the battle, the cost has topped $1 million. The boost in priority for Idaho's Beaver Creek Fire gave fire managers resources they needed to start attacking the fire more directly, said fire spokesman Rudy Evenson. Weather conditions were also improving.

Time: 2:26PM

Synopsis

Teenagers looking to buy cigarettes in New York may have to look elsewhere if a city council proposal is approved and signed by Mayor Michael Bloomberg. The proposal would raise the legal age to buy any form of tobacco from 18 to 21. But will it be effective in limiting smoking among young people? Approximately 90% of smokers have already started smoking by age 18, according to the Surgeon General. "Of every three young smokers, only one will quit, and one of the remaining smokers will die from tobacco-related causes," according to the Surgeon General's 2012 report, "Preventing Tobacco Use Among Youth and Young Adults." The key is to "try to reduce the number of young people who ever try a cigarette," said Dr. Michael Steinberg, director of the Tobacco Dependence Program at Rutgers University in New Brunswick, New Jersey. Steinberg is the co-author of a commentary published Monday in the Annals of Internal Medicine that looks at the pros and cons of the New York proposal. Critics say small businesses will suffer, and the city will lose tax revenue. Others say the proposed law will be hard to enforce and will impinge upon individual rights.

Time: 4:20PM

Synopsis:

Drivers in New Jersey were left stunned, after state Appeals Court judges found that when a driver is texting and causes an accident, the recipient of the texts can also be held liable for negligence. The decision stemmed from a 2009 accident where a 17-year-old girl texted a friend just before that friend crashed his pickup truck into a Morris County couple on a motorcycle. The man and woman on the motorcycle, David and Linda Kubert, both lost parts of their legs. They sued not only the truck's driver, but also the girl who was texting him. On Tuesday, a state Appeals Court ruled that the girl in that particular case could not be held liable. But it also ruled that a person sending text messages has a duty not to text someone who is driving if the texter knows, or has special reason to know, the recipient will view the text while driving.

Time: 2:24PM

Synopsis

New York fast-food employees joined thousands of colleagues from across the country in a Thursday strike aimed at boosting their salaries to $15 an hour - more than double the current minimum rate. Paying the bills is tough for employees who typically earn the minimum wage of $7.25 an hour. The nationwide walkout, including 60 cities nationwide, is targeting chains like McDonald's, Taco Bell and Wendy's. Organizers billed the McJobs strike as the largest ever by fast-food workers. Davis joined several hundred fellow fast-food workers at a Fifth Ave. rally outside a McDonald's near the Empire State Building. The married mother of three and her husband both work, but still share an apartment with her mom and fight to put food on the table. In fact, she said, the family could only recently afford to buy a kitchen table. The fast-food companies said doubling their workers' salaries would simply be bad for business. The raises "would potentially have a negative impact on employment and business growth in our restaurants, as well as value for our customers," read a statement from McDonald's. Scott DeFife, spokesman for the National Restaurant Association, said fast-food operations were already facing higher costs for ingredients as well as health care. The minimum wage was last raised in 2009. President Obama hopes for a boost to $9, which is well below what the workers are seeking.

Nugtella' is the creation of Organicares, a San Jose based company that specializes in producing 'medical edibles'. Their new spread is marketed as a "hazelnut spread with Medical Marijuana". The marijuana is added by combining 320mg of hash oil with the chocolate base. Nugtella can only be purchased from medical marijuana dispensaries in California. Only those with a prescription for medical marijuana can buy products from these dispensaries. According to Organicares Instagram page, the treat appears to be a hit amongst cannabis clubs across the state of California, the first state in Same-sex married couples will be allowed to file joint federal tax returns, the same as married heterosexual couples, the Treasury Department and Internal Revenue Service announced Thursday. The new policy, a response to a Supreme Court ruling that overturned a key provision in the Defense of Marriage Act, allows same-sex married couples to claim marriage-related exemptions, credits and deductions even if they live in jurisdictions that don't recognize gay unions. Like heterosexual spouses, gay couples will be required to declare "married filing jointly" or "married filing separately". The report criticizes the VA for lax enforcement of its rules on accrediting financial planners, attorneys, insurance agents and others. Obamacare affects executive and legislative employees differently. The law pushes members of Congress and the staffers onto healthcare exchanges, but executive-branch employees can keep their existing plans. Treasury Secretary Jack Lew said in a statement that the move "assures legally married same-sex couples that they can move freely throughout the country knowing that their federal filing status will not change. "The policy applies only to legally married couples and not to those in registered domestic partnerships, civil unions or similar formal relationships recognized by certain states.

For immigration advocates, September was supposed to be the month. A national network of immigrant's rights groups had set the end of this month as a deadline for the House of Representatives to respond to years of protests and pleas by passing a comprehensive immigration reform bill. For a while, it looked like Congress might just be responsive, picking up immigration reform as a top item when they returned to Washington, D.C. this coming week. Then, there was Syria -- and everything in Washington came to a screeching halt. For the past week, Congress has been singularly focused on preparing to vote on a measure to authorize military strikes on targets in Syria, where American, French and British intelligence services have determined that Syrian President Bashar Assad used deadly chemical weapons. The Obama administration removed more than 1.5 million illegal immigrants over the last four years, and there's every indication it plans to remove just as many in a second term. Some of those who have been deported were DREAMers, despite President Obama's claim that Immigration and Customs Enforcement is removing only hardened criminals. Diabetes pills known as DPP-4 therapies got a mixed safety report on Monday as studies showed they did not raise the risk of heart attacks but might be linked to heart failure, where the heart fails to pump blood adequately. Reassuringly, the medicines were not associated with increased rates of either inflammation of the pancreas or cancer - something that has been a worry in the past. However, in the case of AstraZeneca and Bristol-Myers Squibb's approved drug Onglyza, there was a small increase in hospitalizations for heart failure. It is a little bit concerning," said Dr. Christopher Grainger of Duke University Medical Center, who was not involved in the research. "I'm sure the FDA (U.S. Food and Drug Administration) will want to know more about it". Citigroup analyst Andrew Baum, who forecasts Onglyza sales of $2.47 billion in 2018, said the latest data would not ameliorate growing pressures on the DPP-4 drug class in terms of winning reimbursement and achieving wider use. Doctors and regulators are wary of the cardiovascular safety profile of diabetes drugs following past problems, including GlaxoSmithKline's Avandia pill, since patients with diabetes are at increased risk of heart troubles. Researchers from Brigham and Women's Hospital in Boston, who studied Onglyza over two years in 16,492 patients, said the heart failure finding was unexpected and deserved further investigation.

The capsules, which sell for $5 to $10, promise increased sexual stamina and bigger penis size - but not all of these products are all natural or safe, the FDA says. Yet despite the risks, New Yorkers still admit to taking the pills. "I didn't want to look like a schmuck and underperform," said a Queens man in his early 30s who used the products twice in the past two or three years. "It's a lot of pressure for a guy, you know?" Dr. Pieter Cohen, an assistant professor of medicine at Harvard Medical School compared New Yorkers who buy the mystery sex pills to "human guinea pigs." "It's one thing to get a prescription drug but it's another thing to get an entirely new drug, never tested in humans, much less in mice, on the streets of New York," said Cohen, author of the study, "Adulterated Sexual Enhancement Supplements: More than Mojo." A Daily News survey of stores found one product previously banned by Canadian authorities and another that appeared in an FDA warning in June. SX Male Enhancement, recently purchased in Woodside, Queens, was recalled in 2010 by Health Canada for containing a substance similar to the prescription-only erectile dysfunction medication, Sildenafil. TIME: 5:24 PM

Synopsis:

A divided Senate Foreign Relations Committee on Wednesday approved an authorization of force against the Syrian government, setting up a showdown next week in the full Senate on whether President Obama should have the authority to strike. The 10-to-7 vote showed bipartisan support for a strike, but bipartisan opposition as well. Republicans voting yes included Senators John McCain of Arizona, Bob Corker of Tennessee and Jeff Flake of Arizona. Democrats against the authorization included Senators Tom Udall of New Mexico and Chris Murphy of Connecticut. The Senate's newest member, Edward Markey, Democrat of Massachusetts, voted present. The panel had struggled to draft the resolution, with the senators deeply divided over how much force should be brought to bear to punish Syria's government for the use of chemical weapons. The committee's bipartisan leaders pressed forward with a resolution limiting the duration and nature of military strikes, while Mr. McCain demanded more - not less - latitude for the military to inflict damage on the government of President Bashar al-Assad. The approved resolution would limit strikes against the Syrian government to 60 days, with the possibility of 30 more days upon consultation with Congress, and it would specifically block the use of ground troops. But to retain the support of Mr. McCain, considered crucial to the authorization's final passage, the committee toughened some of the language. Before the vote, the balance of power appeared to lie with the interventionists. The panel set aside a resolution by Senator Rand Paul, a Kentucky Republican leading the opposition to the strikes that would have declared that the president has the authority to act unilaterally only when the nation faces attack, then approved language by Mr. McCain and Senator Chris Coons, Democrat of Delaware, to toughen the resolution.

Topic: IRS RULES ON TIPS WILL HIT WAITERS WALLETS ON JANUARY

TIME: 5.17 PM

Synopsis

Restaurants are required to report to the IRS what their employees earn on tips and to pay Medicare and Social Security taxes on those amounts. Restaurants are eligible for an income-tax credit for some or all of those payments, but service charges aren't eligible, according to Marianna Dyson, a payroll tax attorney in Washington, D.C., who represents restaurant chains. Restaurants adopted automatic gratuities to help ensure that their servers-whose tips supplement a salary that is often less than the federal minimum wage of $7.25 an hour-weren't stiffed on large tabs. But many servers are likely to support dropping the practice because they don't like the idea of their tips being treated as wages, which requires upfront withholding of federal taxes, and means they won't see that tip money until payday. The change comes amid increasing costs and record-keeping requirements for restaurants. In January, restaurants with 50 or more full-time workers will be required to offer health coverage to employees working 30 or more hours a week, though penalties don't begin until 2015.

U.S. unemployment rate decreased slightly in August while total nonfarm payroll employment increased by 169,000, the U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics reported on September 6th. Employment rose in retail trade and health care. Both the number of unemployed persons, at 11.3 million, and the unemployment rate, at 7.3 percent, changed little in August. The jobless rate is down from 8.1 percent a year ago. In August, the number of long-term unemployed (those jobless for 27 weeks or more) was about unchanged at 4.3 million. These individuals accounted for 37.9 percent of the unemployed. Over the past 12 months, the number of long-term unemployed has declined by 733,000. The civilian labor force participation rate edged down to 63.2 percent in August. The employment population ratio, at 58.6 percent, was essentially unchanged. The number of persons employed part time for economic reasons (sometimes referred to as involuntary part-time workers) declined by 334,000 to 7.9 million in August. These individuals were working part time because their hours had been cut back or because they were unable to find a full-time job. In August, 2.3 million persons were marginally attached to the labor force, down by 219,000 from a year earlier. (The data are not seasonally adjusted.) These individuals were not in the labor force, wanted and were available for work, and had looked for a job sometime in the prior 12 months. Synopsis:

A newspaper is reporting that the Obama administration quietly won permission from a surveillance court in 2011 for the National Security Agency to search for Americans' communications in its huge databases of intercepted phone calls and emails. The Washington Post reported Saturday that officials got the court to lift the ban on those kinds of searches, which the court imposed in 2008 at the government's request. The court also extended the length of time the NSA is allowed to retain intercepted communications from five to six years. The Post reported the search authority has been used, noting that the permission to search and keep data longer expanded the NSA's authority in significant ways without public debate or any specific authority from Congress.

Topic: STUDY: SINGLE MOTHERS AND HAPPINESS

TIME: 12:36 PM

Synopsis:

Single mothers are less happy than other American women. But over time, the happiness gap has shrunk, with single mothers saying they are happier than their counterparts from decades ago, a new study shows. The Journal of Happiness Studies tracks how women answered questions on a nationally representative survey between 1972 and 2008. When the researchers tried to tease out what made single mothers less happy, they found that the biggest factor was being single. The researchers weighed possible explanations of why single moms might be closing the happiness gap. The rise in happiness does not seem to be explained by the fact that more single mothers are raising kids with a partner, or by the changes instilled through welfare reform in the 1990s, they wrote. Instead, Ifcher and Zarghamee suggested that single mothers may face fewer stigmas than in the past. It might also be possible, they speculated, that more single mothers are having their children by choice as birth control became more widely available. The happiness gap has shrunk as single mothers have become increasingly common, growing from 7% to 25% of American households with children from 1960 to 2011, according to a recent Pew Research Center report. Young adults are much less likely than their elders to think the rise of single motherhood is a problem, Pew found in a survey this year. The new study was based on the General Social Survey, a project of the independent research organization NORC. Ifcher and Zarghamee plan to follow up on their research to see whether the trends changed after the recession hit in 2008.

The 2013 Atlantic hurricane season, which forecasters had predicted would be more active than normal, has turned out to be something of a dud so far as an unusual calm hangs over the tropics. As the season heads into the historic peak for activity, it may even enter the record books as marking the quietest start to any Atlantic hurricane season in decades. In an average season the first hurricane shows up by August 10, usually followed by a second hurricane on August 28 and the first major hurricane by September 4. Since the dawn of the satellite era in the mid-1960s, Feltgen said the latest date for the first hurricane to arrive was set by Gustav when it made its debut on September 11, 2002.

On the 12th anniversary of the September 11th terror attacks, families wept for loved ones at the World Trade Center site, President Barack Obama held a moment of silence at the White House and mourners laid a wreath where Flight 93 crashed in Shanksville, Pa. Has it really been 12 years? Or 12 days? "Sometimes it feels the same," said Michael Fox, whose brother, Jeffrey, perished in the south tower. "Sometimes I reach for the phone so I can call you, and we can talk about our kids like we used to do every day." Bells tolled at 8:46 a.m. and 9:03 a.m. to mark the times the hijacked jets hit the towers and later when the skyscrapers fell. Topic: FDA APPROVES BOTOX

TIME: 5:22 PM

Synopsis:

The U.S. Food and Drug Administration today approved a new use for Botox Cosmetic (onabotulinumtoxinA) for the temporary improvement in the appearance of moderate to severe lateral canthal lines, known as crow's feet, in adults. Botox Cosmetic is the only FDA approved drug treatment option for lateral canthal lines. The FDA approved Botox Cosmetic in 2002 for the temporary improvement of glabellar lines (wrinkles between the eyebrows, known as frown lines), in adults. Botox Cosmetic works by keeping muscles from tightening so wrinkles are less prominent. This additional indication will provide people with a new FDA approved treatment option for those seeking a smoother appearance by temporarily minimizing the appearance of crow's feet at the sides of the eyes," said Susan Walker, M.D., director of the Division of Dermatology and Dental Products in the FDA's Center for Drug Evaluation and Research. Botox Cosmetic is administered via intramuscular injections. Treatment for both frown lines and crow's feet can be given at the same time. Botox Cosmetic's safety and effectiveness for treating lateral canthal lines were established in two clinical efficacy and safety studies. The studies enrolled 833 adult participants with moderate to severe lateral canthal lines who were randomly assigned to receive Botox or placebo. Results showed that those treated with Botox had greater improvement compared to placebo in the appearance of lateral canthal lines.

Topic: BREAKFAST IS A MYTH

TIME 5:22

Synopsis:

Breakfast is the most important meal of the day, we are often told, mostly because it helps us keep off the excess weight. But a new meta-analysis now shows that science doesn't actually back up this claim. Conventional wisdom suggests that skipping breakfast will make us hungrier throughout the day, thereby causing us to overeat and snack more frequently. We've been told since we were children that we need to eat three square meals a day. But new research shows that we don't need to be eating. The American Journal of Clinical Nutrition is throwing this assumption out the window, claiming that the breakfast myth is the result of inaccurate, self-serving, and misconstrued studies. At most, say the researchers, missing breakfast has little or no effect on weight gain. What's more, people who eat breakfast sometimes end up consuming more daily calories than those who skip it. Basically, what the findings show is that skipping breakfast has virtually no effect on weight gain, and that either strategy works just as well. According to the researchers, the observational literature on the matter has "gratuitously established the association, but not the causal relation, between skipping breakfast and obesity."

Chicago, home to some of the toughest gun-control measures in the nation, suffered a setback in December when a federal appeals court ruled that an Illinois concealed-weapons ban was unconstitutional. While Chicago officials reluctantly agreed to adopt the law Wednesday, they approved concealed-weapons regulations for many bars and restaurants that serve alcohol. Bullets and booze don't mix, said Alderman Edward Burke, one of the sponsors of the ordinance. TIME: 7:35PM

State senators on Thursday revived and approved legislation that would allow undocumented immigrants to receive a driver's license in California. Assembly Bill 60 by Democrat Luis Alejo of Watsonville would allow state residents to apply for driver's licenses regardless of their immigration status. Current law generally requires drivers to carry a license to operate a vehicle -- with limited exceptions such as for farm machinery and off-road highway vehicles. The 28-8 vote follows Alejo's comments on Wednesday that he would delay the bill until January to address the concerns of immigrant advocates about how the card could be distinguished from traditional licenses. On Thursday afternoon, Alejo said he's inclined to hold the bill and not take it up for a final vote in the Assembly, but isn't sure. If it gets through the Assembly, Gov. Jerry Brown is likely to sign it.

A national Latina advocacy group has asked the Federal Trade Commission to investigate the business practices of a Los Angeles nutritional products company. MANA, a Washington-based group that advocates for Latinas, is the latest organization to call for an investigation of Herbalife. The company has been under fire since December, when billionaire hedge fund manager Bill Ackman said he believed the company operates a pyramid scheme that victimizes its independent sales force, many of them Latinos. Alma Morales Riojas, MANA's president, echoed Ackman's concerns in a letter to the FTC. She said Herbalife irresponsibly promotes the opportunity to sell its products when very few of its distributors make a livable wage. She cited Herbalife data showing that more than 80% of its distributors did not receive any commissions in 2012. Herbalife, which recently hired former Los Angeles Mayor Antonio Villaraigosa as a consultant, insists that its business model is legal and similar to many other multi-level marketing companies. The company said most of its distributors sign up to receive discounts on products they personally consume, not to make a living selling its meal replacement shake mixes, vitamins, snacks, drinks and personal care products.

Topic: CALIFORNIA APPROVES DRIVER'S LICENSE FOR UNDOCUMENTED IMMIGRANTS

TIME: 8.40PM

Synopsis:

Democratic lawmakers and Latino activists are on the verge of seeing immigrants who are in the country illegally granted the right to a driver's license in California after lawmakers revived a bill that was left for dead in the waning hours of the legislative session. The state Assembly approved the bill on a 55-19 vote late Thursday, hours after the Senate also voted to pass it. Gov. Jerry Brown issued a statement indicating he would sign it into law, allowing some 2 million people in California to drive legally. The legislation also would make drivers eligible for insurance and training, including written and driving tests required by the Department of Motor Vehicles. The approval on the final day of this year's legislative session came as a surprise. Democratic Assemblyman Luis Alejo of Watsonville, was prepared to put his legislation on hold until next year because of opposition from immigrant-right groups. They had objected to a provision that calls for the licenses to look different from regular licenses by giving them a special designation.

The SAFE Act was passed by the House Judiciary Committee and will possibly be brought to the House floor for a vote in October, according to House Judiciary Committee Chairman Bob Goodlatte (R-VA). The proposal, which mirrors Arizona's SB 1070 law, grants states and localities the authority to enforce federal immigration laws. But today, immigrant groups said it would give state and local authorities permission to implement "racial profiling" immigration laws, prohibit humanitarian groups from helping undocumented immigrants and end the Deferred Action program.

Topic: FAMILIES THAT DEPEND ON FOOD STAMPS

TIME: 3:28 PM

Synopsis:

Food stamps have figured in Americans' ideas about the poor for decades, from President Lyndon Johnson's vision of a Great Society to President Ronald Reagan's scorn for crooked "welfare queens" and President Bill Clinton's pledge to "end welfare as we know it." Partisans tend to see what they want to see in the food stamp program: barely enough bread and milk to sustain hungry children, or chips and soda - maybe even steak and illicit beer - for cheaters and lay bouts gaming the system. Those differences were on display last week when the House voted to cut almost $4 billion a year, or 5%, from the roughly $80 billion-a-year program. The House bill would tighten eligibility standards, allow states to impose new work requirements and permit drug testing for recipients, among other cuts to spending. A Senate bill would cut around one-tenth of the amount of the House bill, or $400 million a year. Republicans argued that work requirements target the aid to the neediest people. Democrats said the swelling rolls - more than 47 million people are now using the food stamps, or 1 in 7 Americans - show that the program is working at a time of high unemployment and great need.

TIME: 5:25 PM

Synopsis:

Immigration advocates are intensifying pressure on the Obama administration to act unilaterally to stop deportations or grant legal status to some of the 11 million people now living in the U.S. illegally. Activists are stepping up acts of civil disobedience like one last month in Phoenix, where they blocked a bus full of immigrant detainees. And labor leaders plan to press the issue with a top White House official in an upcoming meeting. Many advocates continue to hold out hope for a legislative solution even as some shift their focus to the White House. The possibility of executive action is inflaming Republican suspicions. Sen. Marco Rubio, R-Fla., and others warn that President Barack Obama will be tempted to act on his own to legalize some or all of the people now living in the country illegally. The administration acted on its own a year ago to change policy and suspend deportations of some immigrants brought illegally into the country as children. More than 450,000 of them have benefited so far. White House officials refuse to publicly entertain any discussion of taking further steps. "The only way to bring 11 million undocumented individuals out of the shadow economy is for Congress to pass common-sense reform with an earned path to citizenship. That's it. Full stop," said White House spokesman Bobby Whithorne.

TIME: 7:32 PM

Synopsis:

The number of accepted applications for deferred-action status is approaching a half-million undocumented individuals, but the submission rate is slowing, according to monthly data released 20Types by U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services. November was the peak for applicants seeking to secure rights to remain in the U.S. under the Deferred Action for Childhood Arrivals program, which President Obama authorized last summer for people under 31 by June 15 and who came to the U.S. before age 16. By then, federal processes were in place and immigration attorneys more familiar with procedures, so 47,954 people were granted rights to remain in the U.S. for two years. The cumulative total of accepted applications through February was 437,441; the number of reviewed approvals reached 221,776. Thus far, 453,589 applications have been received since USCIS began accepting them in August. Nearly 16,000 of those applications have been rejected (about 3 percent). Further, in mid-March an additional 100,000 are under review. Through mid-March, the number of applicants from Mexico is more than 4.5 times the total of people applying from the nine other highest-drawing nations combined. So far, applicants from Mexico top 338,000, followed by El Salvador with nearly 18,500. About 27 percent of the applicants reside in California (128,412), followed distantly by Texas at 73,258 and New York at 25,735.

TIME: 2:25 PM

Synopsis:

The governor of Arizona, Jan Brewer, decided to suspend the federal regulation which allows undocumented to be able to obtain a drivers license. Immediately following this decision people took to the streets to protest. The state's Republican governor, Jan Brewer, announced a year ago that Arizona would deny licenses to young illegal immigrants granted a deportation reprieve under a federal program approved as Obama pushed for a broader immigration overhaul. Brewer argued at the time that deferral of deportation did not give the migrants lawful status or entitle them to public benefits such as driver's licenses. The expansion of Arizona's bar on licenses was announced in a document filed with the U.S. District Court in Phoenix on Tuesday by lawyers for Brewer and two state transportation department officials embroiled in a lawsuit over the issue. According to the American Civil Liberties Union of Arizona, one of the groups that brought the original lawsuit, the expansion would deny licenses to immigrants who have been allowed by the federal government to remain in the country for humanitarian reasons. They include survivors of domestic violence and victims of human trafficking and sexual exploitation. Brewer, whose office referred comment to the state transportation department, has taken a tough stance on illegal immigration. In 2010, she signed a state law requiring police to question people that they stop and suspect of being in the country illegally about their immigration status.

On Wednesday, Starbucks will run an open letter from CEO Howard Schultz that asks customers not to bring guns with them on their morning coffee runs. In the wake of a number of shootings and the more specifically coffee-oriented Starbucks Appreciation Day, the company has bought ad space in major papers, including the The New York Times, The Wall Street Journal, The Washington Post and USA Today. After briefly addressing Starbucks's inadvertent role in the gun debate, the letter states: "Our company's longstanding approach to "open carry" has been to follow local laws: we permit it in states where allowed and we prohibit it in states where these laws don't exist. We have chosen this approach because we believe our store partners should not be put in the uncomfortable position of requiring customers to disarm or leave our stores. We believe that gun policy should be addressed by government and law enforcement-not by Starbucks and our store partners. Recently, however, we've seen the "open carry" debate become increasingly uncivil and, in some cases, even threatening. Pro-gun activists have used our stores as a political stage for media events misleadingly called "Starbucks Appreciation Days" that disingenuously portray Starbucks as a champion of "open carry." To be clear: we do not want these events in our stores. Some anti-gun activists have also played a role in ratcheting up the rhetoric and friction, including soliciting and confronting our customers and partners. For these reasons, today we are respectfully requesting that customers no longer bring firearms into our stores or outdoor seating areas-even in states where "open carry" is permitted-unless they are authorized by law enforcement personnel."

The Fed plans to keep that strategy in place for the time being, and will re-evaluate the policy at its next meeting at the end of October. The program, which is the third round of a controversial policy known as quantitative easing, still doesn't have a scheduled end date. But Fed Chairman Ben Bernanke has previously said he expects to begin tapering off the purchases later this year, and to end them completely by the middle of 2014. Synopsis:

With time running out before the government closes for the first time since 1996, congressional Republicans are rallying around the same message: A shutdown won't be our fault. It was preemptive damage control as the GOP tried to counter the narrative that the House essentially voted early Sunday to close the federal government when they amended a Senate-passed continuing resolution to include several Obamacare-related provisions. Sen. Ted Cruz said it is Senate Majority Leader Harry Reid who is being obstructionist for refusing to advance the House legislation. Cruz, who derided Obamacare in a floor speech that spanned more than 21 hours last week, declined to say whether he will try to halt any further progress on the CR as it heads back to the Senate. The House amended the Senate-passed CR to include provisions that would delay the health care law for a year, repeal the medical device tax that helps fund Obamacare and postpone until 2015 the law's requirement that employers cover birth control as part of their health insurance packages.

Topic: AIRLINES FEES

Time 2:24 pm

Synopsis:

Airlines are introducing a new bevy of fees, but this time passengers might actually like them. Unlike the first generation of charges which dinged fliers for once-free services like checking a bag, these new fees promise a taste of the good life, or at least a more civil flight. Extra legroom, early boarding and access to quiet lounges were just the beginning. Airlines are now renting Apple iPads preloaded with movies, selling hot first class meals in coach and letting passengers pay to have an empty seat next to them. Once on the ground, they can skip baggage claim, having their luggage delivered directly to their home or office. In the near future, airlines plan to go one step further, using massive amounts of personal data to customize new offers for each flier.

Topic: BUDGET

Time 5:21pm

Synopsis:

President Barack Obama ramped up pressure on Republicans Monday to avoid a post-midnight government shutdown, saying that failure to pass a short-term spending measure to keep agencies operating would "throw a wrench into the gears" of a recovering economy. Late Monday, Obama called Republican and Democratic congressional leaders but there was no breakthrough in the budget impasse. Earlier, Obama urged House Republicans to pass a short-term spending bill free of any conditions that would weaken the nation's 3-year-old health care law. Obama spoke after the Senate rejected a House proposal to delay implementation of the health care law. House Republicans were preparing to vote on another stop-gap spending measure Monday, this one putting off a requirement that people must obtain health insurance. The White House issued a veto threat to that proposal shortly after GOP leaders announced it.

Topic: BREAST CANCER DRUG FDA

Time 7:33pm

Synopsis:

A biotech drug from Roche has become the first medicine approved to treat breast cancer before surgery, offering an earlier approach against one of the deadliest forms of the disease. The Food and Drug Administration approved Perjeta for women with a form of early-stage breast cancer who face a high risk of having their cancer spread to other parts of the body. Surgery to remove tumors is usually the first step in treating most forms of cancer. Perjeta is the first drug to be approved as a pre-surgical step. Doctors hope that using cancer drugs earlier could help shrink tumors, making them easier to remove. In some cases, that could allow women to keep their breasts, rather than having a full mastectomy. Doctors also say that treating the disease at its earliest stages could prevent tumors from returning later, though studies have not yet established that benefit.

Perspectiva Nacional FCC Report
Third Quarter – July to September 2013

July 6-7, 2013 Washington, DC – Show #27 2013 (WFDC)	Armando Guzmán	The Supreme Court recently struck down an important part of the Voting Rights Act of 1965 by a 5-to-4 vote. As a result, nine states can now change their election laws without the advanced approval of the federal government. It leaves the door open to racial discrimination in voting. The decision had immediate practical consequences, Texas being one of the first states to make moves on the opportunity, saying that a voter identification law that had been blocked would go into effect immediately. President Obama said he was “deeply disappointed” by the ruling. This is one of the issues at hand in our show, discussed with two Latino activists and a political analyst: Ben Monterroso, from Mi Familia Vota; Hector Sanchez, from the Labor Council for Latin American Advancement (LCLAA); and Estuardo Rodríguez, respectively. Another recent ruling from the Supreme Court calls for tougher scrutiny of colleges’ race-conscious admissions policies or Affirmative Action, a topic analyzed in our show by conservative Daniel Garza, from The Libre Initiative. Finally, Armando Guzman had a chance to talk with two Latin American former Presidents: Leonel Fernandez, from the Dominican Republic; and Marco Vinicio Cerezo, from Guatemala. They express their views on how Latin America perceive the decisions of the U.S. in terms of Immigration and other topics.	TRT is 23:52 and segment times as follows: Segment #1: 09:04 Segment #2: 05:35 Segment #3: 06:12 Segment #4: 03:01

July 13-14, 2013 Washington, DC – Show #28 2013 (WFDC)	Armando Guzmán	We continue our discussion on the federal Health Care Reform, this time on the coverage of the Affordable Care Act for small businesses. Teresa Niño, spokeswoman of the federal Department of Health tells us why it is a great alternative for small business owners and their employees, and will also explain why certain changes took effect on this part of the law. Meanwhile, Hector Barreto, former Administrator of Small Business under the administration of President George W. Bush, critiques the government's Health Care Reform and offers his opinion on the effectiveness of coverage to small businesses. Also, Dr. Rene Gonzalez offers his position on the Affordable Care Act and tells us what the positive and negative impact on medical practice.	TRT is 23:50 and segment times as follows: Segment #1: 09:49 Segment #2: 06:39 Segment #3: 06:28 Segment #4: 00:54

July 20-21, 2013 Washington, DC – Show #29 2013 (WFDC)	Armando Guzmán	Scarcely two weeks are left before the federal lawmakers take their Summer break. And that's exactly the time that remains in this session for the Immigration Reform as a priority in the House of Representatives. Otherwise, when they return in September, Congress could change their political agenda, at the expense of such an important issue for Latinos and undocumented immigrants. So we keep talking about Immigration Reform in our program. First, we get to talk with Texas Democratic congressmen, Robert "Beto" O'Rourke and Pete Gallego, about what is happening on Highway 281 in El Paso. According to an undercover border agent, drug raids and arrests are made there more often than ever... but other than seizing the narcotics, the traffickers are not sent to jail due to lack of funding. Armando Guzman questioned his guests on the subject of security and militarization of the border, in the context of the Immigration Reform. We also discuss Immigration Reform with Republican Congressman Trey Radel from Florida. Where is the Republican conference on the subject? Will there be a bill before the end of the year? Is this still a priority for the Republican-controlled Congress? These are some of the questions we get to ask them. Finally, we spoke with the Executive Director of the LIBRE Initiative, Daniel Garza, on a national advertising campaign on Immigration. We also analyze the Zimmerman case in Florida with attorneys Jose Pertierra and John C. Kiyonaga, especially the not guilty verdict on the death of the African American teenager Trayvon Martin.	TRT is 23:51 and segment times as follows: Segment #1: 09:09 Segment #2: 04:24 Segment #3: 06:39 Segment #4: 03:39

July 27-28, 2013 Washington, DC – Show #30 2013 (WFDC)	Armando Guzmán	There's only one week left of work at the Congress of the United States, and apparently the legislation on Immigration Reform in the House of Representatives will stay on the shelf... at least until the next session, which begins in September. In this show, we will discuss what has been achieved with the Senate bill and the challenge for U.S. Representatives to propose a measure that harmonizes with the one in the Senate, and also to make the long-awaited reform of the country's immigration laws. We begin with a special report summarizing the path of this legislation in both houses of Congress, prepared by Viridiana Vidal Las Vegas, Nevada. The analysis will be in the hands of representatives from the left, right and center: Vanessa Cardenas from the Center for American Progress, Israel Ortega from The Heritage Foundation, and Juan Carlos Hidalgo, from the CATO Institute. Finally, we present the activist's point of view on this issue and Kilder Fuentes, Director of the Peruvian American National Council, will be the one joining us for it.	TRT is 23:50 and segment times as follows: Segment #1: 08:17 Segment #2: 06:12 Segment #3: 05:14 Segment #4: 04:07

Although it seems that they don't have much in common, the three get to discuss the impact of so-called Obamacare, in terms of costs. They talk about the impact of the current health care situation and how getting insured under the Health Care Reform will benefit the community, as well as how investing in a health plan will be reflected in the taxes. But the discussion also brings into question how making health care more accessible and affordable will also have an impact in hospitals. The panel consists of Dr. Ligia Peralta, Dr. Fabian Sandoval and Alejandro Mendoza, CPA. In addition, we have the point of view of one of the largest health insurers in the country: Kaiser Permanente. Their spokeswoman, Mariella While, will explain in detail how the Marketplace will work under the Affordable Care Act.	TRT is 23:52 and segment times as follows: Segment #1: 08:58 Segment #2: 08:05 Segment #3: 06:27 Segment #4: 00:22

Aug 17-18, 2013 Washington, DC – Show #32 2013 (WFDC)	Armando Guzmán	Just last month, Puerto Rico celebrated the 61st anniversary of becoming a Commonwealth of the United States. But ever since, its political status has been the center of controversy, as there are sectors of its 4 million inhabitants who favor the island to become a permanent state of the Union or an independent nation. Yet the current Governor and the political party he represents, favor Puerto Rico to remain a Commonwealth. The political status of the island has been yet again under the federal legislative consideration, and key Puerto Rican political leaders visited Washington, DC to defend their respective views before the powerful U.S. Senate Committee on Energy and Natural Resources. Perspectiva Nacional was at the hearing, and also had a chance to talk with Governor Alejandro Garcia Padilla of Puerto Rico, and Pedro Pierluisi, Resident Commissioner of the island in Washington, DC. Moreover, we get a chance to understand what a Commonwealth of the U.S. represents for Puerto Rico, with the Executive Director of the Puerto Rico Federal Affairs Administration, Juan Eugenio Hernández Mayoral. In addition, two California farmers and entrepreneurs join to our studios to tell us the need for Immigration Reform for the strawberry industry. Employing directly and indirectly more than a thousand workers, Lorena Chavez and Jesus Alvarado will tell us that with time, and without an Immigration Reform, there are fewer people available to keep their farms in the Salinas Valley, and providing strawberries to the market , even could close operations.	TRT 23:50 and segment times as follows: Segment #1: 08:03 Segment #2: 07:54 Segment #3: 04:51 Segment #4: 03:03

We analyze the report, the Welfare benefit and all the issues it poses and whether if it's fair or not that a person who does not work receive aid beyond what is earned in the workplace. To this end, our guests Ana Sol Gutierrez, Democratic delegate in the Maryland state legislature; Ben Monterroso, SEIU union leader, and Maricruz Magowan, economist and Republican strategist, joins us in the show. In addition, Juan Carlos Hidalgo, from the CATO Institute, defends the study and its results, and is confronted with in depth questions and comments from two journalists covering the federal capital: Antonio Avendaño, editor of the newspaper El Tiempo Latino, and Eva Saiz, Washington correspondent, for Spain's newspaper El Pais. Sept. 14-15, 2013 Washington, DC – Show #36 2013 (WFDC)	Armando Guzmán	The U.S. intervention on Syria was the focus of attention this week in Washington, DC. President Obama lobbied in Congress for approval on a military attack, but Russia took a leading role this week with a diplomatic effort to disarm Syria of its chemical weapons. What does this mean for the country? Is diplomacy a better strategy than a military one? That's what we get to talk about with Senator Tim Kaine, Democrat from Virginia, and his colleague Henry Cuellar of Texas. With the latter, we also talked about the status of an immigration reform proposal in the House of Representatives. Immigration is also discussed with former Republican Congressman Lincoln Diaz-Balart, and Mary Ann Gomez. They are president and executive director of the Congressional Hispanic Leadership Institute (CHLI), respectively. CHLI announced this week that they are backing an immigration reform, especially to support hundreds of young people involved in the organization through internships and projects. Diaz-Balart offers a brief analysis of what would happen if the Immigration Reform is not approved this year. Finally, the Mayor of Washington, DC, Vincent Gray, visit our studios. We talked with him about the particular situation of the capital city, very similar to Puerto Rico in terms of political status. The nation's capital pay federal taxes, but have no vote in Congress; they depend on the federal government to get their laws approved and have no recognized ID for its residents; it has a great cultural diversity, and the number of Latinos living in the capital city is growing rapidly. These are just some of the issues we get to talk about with the Executive of the nation's capital.	TRT is 23:53 and segment times as follows: Segment #1: 08:29 Segment #2: 06:09 Segment #3: 08:39 Segment #4: 00:36

Sept. 21-22, 2013 Washington, DC – Show #37 2013 (WFDC)	Armando Guzmán	We are barely two weeks away to initiate the marketplace of the Health Care Reform, where people across the country who do not have health insurance and who qualify, can buy one. But as the date approaches, there are still too many questions: how much does it cost? Who qualifies? Is it applicable to undocumented immigrants? How about residents or those who are in the U.S. with TPS? These and other questions will be answered in our show, which will be town hall meeting-style, and held at the headquarters of the Casa de Maryland organization. We'll take advantage of the fact that the state of Maryland is ready for the marketplace, and showcase it as an example of what will be the coverage of the states, and how it will be in those cases where the federal government will assume that role. The panel who will answer questions is: the Secretary of Health of the State of Maryland, Dr. Josh Sharfstein; Teresa Niño, Spanish spokeswoman for federal Department of Health and Human Services; and George Escobar, Director of Health and Human Services of Casa de Maryland.	TRT is 23:50 and segment times as follows: Segment #1: 07:41 Segment #2: 06:26 Segment #3: 03:22 Segment #1: 06:21
