Topic: GROSS MINIMUM WAGE

Time Aired: 4:23 pm

Synopsis:

Hundreds of thousands of workers are set to get a pay raise to start 2013, as 10 states increase their minimum wage. Washington State will again lead the way Tuesday, raising its starting salary to $9.19 an hour. Washington was first to adopt automatic adjustments in 1998 to compensate for inflation. Nine of the 10 states adjusting wages this week did so automatically. The adjustments have expanded the pay gap between areas that make annual adjustments and those that don't. Many states still follow the federal minimum wage of $7.25. San Francisco has set the highest local minimum wage and will have workers paid at least $10.55 an hour in 2013.

Topic: 'FISCAL CLIFF' DEAL

Time Aired: 5:40 pm

Synopsis:

President Barack Obama and congressional Republicans looked ahead on Wednesday toward the next round of even bigger budget fights after reaching a hard-fought "fiscal cliff" deal that narrowly averted potentially devastating tax hikes and spending cuts. The agreement, approved late on Tuesday by the Republican-led House of Representatives after a bitter political struggle, was a victory for Obama, who had won re-election on a promise to address budget woes in part by raising taxes on the wealthiest Americans. But it set up political showdowns over the next two months on spending cuts and on raising the nation's limit on borrowing. Republicans, angry the deal did little to curb the federal deficit, promised to use the debt ceiling debate to win deep spending cuts next time.

The National Highway Traffic Safety Administration says on its website that Subaru will install an additional fuse at no cost to the owners. The recall is expected to begin in February.

Synopsis:

Houston, the biggest city in the southern United States, saw home sales rise for the 18th consecutive month last November and saw a 27 percent increase year on year, according to the monthly report released by the Houston Association of Realtors last December. Trulia, an online real estate firm, said that strong job growth and a low number of properties available make this city one of the hottest housing markets in the country. Houston economist Patrick Jankowski said that he has seen the city's housing market expand with its population growth and industries like oil, gas, and transport have also benefited. Homes are selling fast in Houston and construction is everywhere. With more people moving to the area for jobs, the current number of new homes stands at just over 36,000 to serve a population of 6.1 million, a report said.

Time Aired: 2:35 pm

Synopsis:

The Illinois House of Representatives on Tuesday voted to grant temporary driver's licenses to illegal immigrants, the final legislative step before Democratic Governor Pat Quinn is expected to sign the measure into law. Illinois would be the fourth state to offer some form of permits along with Washington State and New Mexico, which offer drivers licenses, and Utah, which provides driving permits. The vote in the General Assembly or House, was 65 to 46, after the state Senate on Dec. 4 overwhelmingly approved the legislation. Supporters said an estimated 250,000 illegal immigrants drive in Illinois and the measure would make the roads safer by subjecting migrants to driving tests. Republican opposition to drivers licenses for illegal immigrants faded after the Nov. 6 election when Hispanics voted heavily for the reelection of President Barack Obama and Democrats in the Illinois state legislature.

Nearly 80,000 Americans were denied guns in 2010, according to Justice Department data, because they lied or provided inaccurate information about their criminal histories on background-check forms. Yet only 44 of those people were charged with a crime. The staggeringly low number of prosecutions for people who "lie and try," as it is called by law enforcement officials, is being studied by the Obama administration as it considers measures to curb gun violence after the Connecticut elementary school shootings.

Topic: LATINOS AND FLU

Time Aired: 7:26 pm

Synopsis:

The Centers for Disease Control is urging Latinos to get a flu shot, as the most aggressive flu outbreak in years sweeps the nation. There's a reason the CDC is making a concerted effort to target Latinos. The demographic is less likely than other ethnic groups to take measures to prevent the flu. That's because Hispanics have more limited access to medical care than other ethnic groups, particularly Latinos that have arrived in the country recently. Latinos are also more likely to face language barriers and to move from location to location for work. But flu vaccines can be especially important for Latinos. Hispanics are more likely to have pre-existing conditions such as diabetes, which can make getting the flu much more dangerous. Efforts by the CDC and other governmental and nonprofit groups to inform Latinos about vaccinations are underway. Information has been distributed to targeted communities in the form of Spanish-language videos and pamphlets.

President Barack Obama is launching the nation's most sweeping effort to curb gun violence in nearly two decades, urging a reluctant Congress to ban military-style assault weapons as well as the kinds of high-capacity ammunition magazines used in last month's massacre of 20 elementary school children in Newtown, Conn. The broad package Obama will announce Wednesday will also include efforts to stop bullying and boost availability of mental health services. It's expected to include more than a dozen steps the president can take on his own through executive action. Those measures will provide a pathway for skirting opposing lawmakers, but they will be limited in scope, and in some cases, focused simply on enforcing existing laws. But Congress would have to approve the bans on assault weapons and ammunition magazines holding more than 10 bullets, along with a requirement for universal background checks on gun buyers.

He says that's what it will take to make a "real and lasting difference." His executive orders include tougher penalties for people who lie on background checks. The fanfare at Instituto del Progreso Latino included performances by a mariachi band and a roster of speakers 15 dignitaries deep. Supporters said the measure will make it easier for undocumented immigrants to get insurance. It could soon cost you more to shop with a credit card at some stores. As of this Sunday, Jan. 27, merchants who accept credit cards issued by Visa and MasterCard will be allowed to add a service charge to the purchase price. Visa and MasterCard had always prohibited merchants from doing this. They agreed to change the rules and allow the surcharge as part of the settlement of an antitrust suit brought by retailers. The surcharge is supposed to equal the actual cost of processing the credit card transaction, which is typically 1.5 to 3 percent. Under the agreement, the fee is capped at 4 percent. The surcharge can vary based on the type of card. For example, it could be higher for a rewards card or premier card. Merchants still cannot add a surcharge to debit card transactions.

The immigration overhaul framework top senators released Monday relies heavily on more drones to patrol the Southwest border as a key way to control the flow of illegal immigrants. The proposal doesn't say how many drones would be added to the federal fleet, but the reliance on drones could be problematic at a time when some in Congress are calling for a review of how law enforcement uses them. And the Homeland Security Department's inspector general has reported that U.S. Customs and Border Patrol's current drone program is chaotic and the agency can't keep its drones flying at the rate it had promised. The agency didn't even budget for enough maintenance money to repair broken drones.

On March 1, $85 billion in across-the-board federal spending cuts-known in Washington parlance as the sequester-are set to begin, prompted by a 2011 law designed to reduce the government's budget deficit. Here are answers to some commonly asked questions about how it would work, assuming it takes effect as scheduled. The sequester cuts - including painful slashing of defense spending - now seem inevitable. The question now is how long they'll last. With Washington at loggerheads over spending and taxes, a round of harsh spending cuts - known as the 'sequester' - is imminent. The sequester was one result of the deficit-reduction deal struck by the White House and Congress in the summer of 2011, which also raised the government's borrowing limit, and fits within Washington's broad yet stuttering efforts to bring the budget deficit down to levels most economists consider sustainable. Republicans wanted significant spending cuts as a condition for voting to raise the debt ceiling. The parties agreed to raise the debt ceiling and implement new caps on spending for 10 years, which would save $917 billion. Both sides knew they would need more deficit reduction to win Republican support. So the White House proposed a process aimed at forcing lawmakers to craft a deal over the next 16 months.

Synopsis:

Hundreds of immigrants spend months or even years in federal immigration detention centers without being offered a bond hearing, attorneys from the ACLU Foundation of Southern California (ACLU/SC) told a panel of judges of the U.S. Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals on Monday. ACLU/SC brought the case on behalf of immigrants detained across Southern California. Access to a bond hearing while they fight their cases in the immigration courts is part of due process guaranteed by the Constitution.

A U.S. appeals court ruled on Monday on the side of day laborers seeking work in Arizona, upholding an injunction that bars the state from enforcing part of its immigration law that prohibits motorists from stopping traffic to pick up workers. In the unanimous ruling, a three-judge panel of the San Francisco-based U.S. Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals found the state law, by criminalizing certain interactions between drivers and day laborers, went too far in restricting commercial free speech rights.

Topic: UNEMPLOYMENT RATE FALLS 7.7 PERCENT IN FEBRUARY
Time Aired: 5:25 PM
Synopsis:

Despite the Obama administration's doomsday warnings about the impact of sequester, hiring picked up last month as the unemployment rate fell to the lowest level in four years. The February jobs report released Friday showed the economy added 236,000 jobs, bringing the unemployment rate to 7.7 percent from 7.9 percent the month before. The report comes as the market picks up, with the Dow Jones Industrial Average consistently closing above 14,000 this week. The economy is still shaky and recent reports have also reflected a jittery jobs market. There are still 12 million unemployed, with even more who are in part-time jobs or have left the job market altogether. And the automatic government spending cuts which took effect March 1 will likely take time to ripple into the broader economy.

Among those marching Sunday was a brother and sister who say they were brought to the United States from Mexico as children. Both say they have been deported and separated from their families. Sunday's march was part of a month-long series of events called Coming Out of the Shadows, in which people are urged to publicly state their immigration status.

Time Aired: 5.25 pm

Synopsis:

Department of Homeland Security (DHS) Secretary Janet Napolitano announced her agency plans to release even more detained illegal aliens to address budget cuts mandated by sequestration. Immigration and Customs Enforcement (ICE) had already released 2,000 illegal aliens prior to sequestration taking effect and planned to release an additional 3,000 by the end of March. At the time ICE downplayed the report, claiming that several hundred "low-risk" illegal aliens were released. During the event, Napolitano again repeated the Administration's narrative that "only" several hundred detainees were released. However, House Judiciary Chairman Bob Goodlatte (R-VA) published an internal ICE document - presumably the one reviewed by AP - that explicitly details the Administration's plan to release 1,000 detained illegal aliens per week from February 15 through March 31.

Topic: AIDS LATEST

Time Aired: 4.30 PM

Synopsis:

Treating people with HIV rapidly after they have become infected with the virus that causes AIDS may be enough to achieve a "functional cure" in a small proportion of patients diagnosed early, according to new research. Scientists in France who followed 14 patients who were treated very swiftly with HIV drugs but then stopped treatment found that even when they had been off therapy for more than seven years, they still showed no signs of the virus rebounding. The research, published in the journal PLoS Pathogens, follows news earlier this month about a baby girl in Mississippi in the United States being effectively cured of the human immunodeficiency virus (HIV) after receiving very early treatment. Christine Rouzioux, a professor at Necker Hospital and University Paris Descartes and a member of the initial team who identified HIV 30 years ago, said the new results showed the number of infected cells circulating in the blood of these patients, known as "post-treatment controllers", kept falling even without treatment for many years. A functional cure describes when the virus is reduced to such low levels that it is kept at bay even without continuing treatment. The virus, however, is still detectable in the body. Most of the some 34 million people with HIV across the world will have to take anti-AIDS drugs known as antiretroviral therapy for the whole of their lives. These drugs generally keep the disease in check but also have side effects and a high cost impact on health systems. Worldwide, the number of people newly infected with HIV, which can be transmitted via blood and by semen during sex, is falling. At 2.5 million, the number of new infections in 2011 was 20 percent lower than in 2001, according to the United National AIDS programme (UNAIDS). And deaths from AIDS fell to 1.7 million in 2011, down from a peak of 2.3 million in 2005.

The high court will hear arguments Monday over the legality of Arizona's voter-approved requirement that prospective voters document their U.S. citizenship in order to use a registration form produced under the federal "Motor Voter" voter registration law that doesn't require such documentation. This case focuses on voter registration in Arizona, which has tangled frequently with the federal government over immigration issues involving the Mexican border. The release of illegal immigrants from U.S. detention due to budget concerns was undertaken with care to ensure that security was not compromised, the head of the immigration enforcement agency said on Tuesday. Immigration and Customs Enforcement Director John Morton, at a House Judiciary Committee hearing, defended his agency's decision last month to release 2,228 illegal immigrants from detention centers because of budget constraints. They were placed on alternative supervision such as being required to call in regularly or wear an electronic monitor. Republicans charged that the release was part of scare tactics used by President Barack Obama's administration over mandatory budget cuts, and they pressed Morton on whether his agency had received any pressure. Morton repeatedly denied that his agency had spoken with officials from the White House and the Department of Homeland Security about the decision to release the illegal immigrants before it happened.

Time Aired: 5:17 pm

The NRA has won. Congressional leaders said Tuesday a proposed federal ban on assault weapons is all but dead, crushed by the powerful gun lobby. Although anticipated, the move let down still-grieving loved ones of those massacred in Newtown, Conn., and more than 140,000 Daily News readers who petitioned for the legislation. Support for reinstating the ban on assault weapons and high-capacity magazines seemed to mount in the weeks after 20-year-old Adam Lanza mowed down 20 kids and six adults with an AR-15 assault rifle at Sandy Hook. President Obama, who vowed to push for the ban, delivered a powerful speech Feb. 10 that invoked Newtown and the July 2012 Colorado movie theater massacre that left 12 people dead and 58 injured. But the Senate's top Democrat said Tuesday that there wasn't enough support in the Senate to pass the ban on the manufacture and sale of 157 types of semi-automatic assault weapons.

President Barack Obama is trying to show that the economy remains a top priority -- with a visit to Florida today to promote a plan that would create construction and other jobs. Obama outlined the plan at a Miami port that is undergoing $2 billion in upgrades -- paid for with government and private dollars. He said even though the unemployment rate among construction workers has been cut in half over the past three years, it's still the highest of any industry. Obama said rebuilding the nation's infrastructure is a way to create jobs and strengthen the economy over the long run. The proposals would need approval from Congress. They include $4 billion in new spending on two infrastructure programs that award loans and grants. He's also urging higher caps on what are called "private activity bonds." He argues that, though a comprehensive Immigration Reform is imminent, the President needs to compromise and commit on several points to achieve it. But that's not exactly how Congressman Luis Gutiérrez sees it. He also joins our show to put things into perspective, with tips from inside the Capitol Hill.	TRT 23:50 and segment times are as follows: Segment #1: 10:16 Segment #2: 05:47 Segment #3: 07:03 Segment #4: 00:44

February 23-24, 2013 Washington, DC – Show #8 2013 (WFDC)	Host: Armando Guzmán	Last week, Armando Guzmán and his guests discussed the possibility of a Temporary Protection Service (or TPS), as a solution for the 11 million people waiting for the Immigration Reform. Among those currently under the TPS are people from El Salvador living in America, who claim that a better measure should be granted. Arq. Francisco Altschul, Ambassador from El Salvador in the U.S., joins us in the show to defend why a broader solution to his constituents should be included under the Immigration Reform. A special report from Cristian Benavides from Tampa, FL, will tell us more of the personal struggle from people under the TPS. Also, we get to discuss the impact of the federal budget sequestration to municipalities and counties around the country. Arlington County in VA, serves as an example. It's a prosperous area which will suffer a severe impact, if the reduction of government employees takes effect starting March 1st. J. Walter Tejada, Arlington Co. Chief Executive will go into details of how the local economy will be affected, a situation that will be echoed in several counties and cities throughout the country. To further discuss the measures that State governments are evaluating to avoid the fiscal impact of federal cuts, Maryland Delegate Ana Sol Gutiérrez joins us in the show, along with Economist and American University professor, Manuel Suárez-Mier. Included in the economic discussion, we will also discuss school security proposals across the nation. While some cities are considering granting more money to better prepare security officers in schools, in Denver, CO, different steps are taken to guarantee safe and arm-free classrooms. Rafael Henríquez will give us a special report on the issue.	TRT is 23:51 and segment times as follows: Segment #1: 09:07 Segment #2: 08:12 Segment #3: 06:07 Segment #4: 00:25

March 2-3, 2013 Washington, DC – Show #9 2013 (WFDC)	Host: Armando Guzmán	This week, important issues are under scrutiny in our show. First, Congressman Tony Cárdenas, from California, will join us in the show to discuss the decision before the Supreme Court to change Section 5 from the Voting Rights Act. He will also discuss the Immigration Reform, in terms of the status of this legislative piece in Congress and the possible provisions and protections it will grant to the 11 million immigrants in America. Along with him will be Immigration attorney Luis Paoli, and Jaime Contreras, leader of the SEIU Labor Union. Also, political activists have the state of Texas on the aim. Why? They want to turn this republican bastion into a democrat territory before the next election. Will the Lone Star state become a battleground state in 2016? The topic is discussed with Ricardo Ramírez, Democrat strategist, and Estuardo Rodríguez, political analyst. Finally, this weekend there will be rallies in various cities in the U.S., where Puerto Ricans who favor statehood will demand action from Congress and President Obama to include the island in the Federal Union. Last November, a referendum determined that people in Puerto Rico preferred statehood as a political status... and right when they celebrate the 96th anniversary of obtaining the U.S. citizenship, the topic is still a problem without an apparent solution. That's what we get to discuss with Pedro Pierluisi, Resident Commissioner of Puerto Rico in Congress.	TRT is 23:50 and segment times as follows: Segment #1: 10:56 Segment #2: 06:27 Segment #3: 06:01 Segment #4: 00:26

March 9-10, 2013 Washington, DC – Show #10 2013 (WFDC)	Host: Armando Guzmán	The theme this week again is the Immigration Reform. This time, as part of a national event that was held in Washington, in which dozens of organizations serving Latinos in the United States came together to advocate for the issues that matter most to this community. At this time, the main focus is immigration, but also issues such as social justice, civil rights, economics, among others. Behind this event is the National Council of La Raza (NCLR), which is represented in our show with Janet Hernandez. She will be joined by Abel Núñez from CARECEN, and Ramona Félix, spokesperson of Mujeres Campesinas in California. Both organizations visited Congress and other agencies in Washington to advance the Latino causes in America. In addition, we discuss the situation in Venezuela. Much was speculated about President Hugo Chavez because of his deteriorating health, and now after the announcement of his death, we'll take a look at the political maelstrom that dominates this country and what is the outlook for the region. Two Latin American analysts join us to discuss the topic, Carl Meacham from the Center for Strategic International Studies (CSIS), and Juan Carlos Hidalgo of the Cato Institute. They also offered their views on the foreign policy of the United States to that country. Hon. Aníbal Gómez, Consul of Mexico in the capital city, will visit us to warn about unscrupulous approaches to Mexican immigrants, which under the the promise to "advance" the papers for Immigration Reform, a new scheme of Immigration fraud has developed.	Total running time is 23:51 and segment times as follows: Segment #1: 09:10 Segment #2: 07:49 Segment #3: 06:25 Segment #4: 00:27

March 16-17, 2013 Washington, DC – Show #11 2013 (WFDC)	Host: Armando Guzmán	For those who thought that partisan politics is a matter of every four years, we have to say: think again! This week, conservatives gathered in Washington to discuss, among other things, the future of the Republican party. But the Democrats have taken a bit of lead when it comes to strategy, and to tell us why Congressman Henry Cuéllar from Texas and Ben Ray Luján of New Mexico, joins us in the show.. They are responsible for a campaign to recruit Latinos to the ranks of their party, to run for a seat in Congress. And with the election of the first Latin American Pope to lead the Catholics in the world, it is time to rethink the future of the Church. What will happen with the cases of pedophilia among priests of this faith? Is there place in the near future for Catholic women to become ministers, bishops and religious leaders? What about celibacy? Could such old discipline be revoked soon? That's what we discussed in our next show with Father Eugenio Hoyos, of Virginia, and with Father Vidal Rivas, a priest of the Episcopal Church, who left the Catholic faith to exercise his religious vocation with the inclusion of women.	TRT is 23:50 and segment times as follows: Segment #1: 10:38 Segment #2: 07:10 Segment #3: 05:04 Segment #4: 00:58

March 23-24, 2013 Washington, DC – Show #12 2013 (WFDC)	Host: Armando Guzmán	This week several deadlines weren't met by various legislative groups to present a draft of what could become the Comprehensive Immigration Reform. Despite public pressure, Congress ended up with nothing, failing to present the country with a solution that could determine the immigration status of 11 million people. Precisely because it needs to be done, Washington has received this week hundreds of activists who came to press on the Reform. These include Colorado businesswoman Ellen Krible, who depends on Mexican seasonal workers each year for her business. She joins us in the show to explain why she calls for action not only to politicians, but also proposes the "Red Card Solution", an identification which she says is the fastest and most effective way to address the immigration issue. In this segment we will have a special report from Luisa Collins in Denver, who puts us in perspective what the situation of workers and immigration is in the state of Colorado. In addition to Mrs. Krible , community organizations and evangelical churches join the clamor for an Immigration Reform. Kica Matos, from Keeping Families Together, and Bishop Minerva Carcaño of the United Methodist Church in the U.S. will tell us why they've gone door to door in Congress to demand immediate action on the issue. Others who have been lobbying in Washington this week are organizations that promote and protect the Latino vote. Why? To prevent the Supreme Court from supporting an Arizona law requiring proof of citizenship to register to vote, a move that Lydia Camarillo, from the Southwestern Voter Registration Education Program, says is aimed to reduce the Latino vote, which in the case of Arizona corresponds to 25% of the population.	TRT is 23:54 and segment times as follows: Segment #1: 11:33 Segment #2: 06:28 Segment #3: 05:17 Segment #4: 00:36

March 30-31, 2013 Washington, DC – Show #13 2013 (WFDC)	Host: Armando Guzmán	The Organization of American States (OAS) met in assembly last week, to discuss the situation of the Americas regarding human rights. The Secretary General of the Inter-American Court of Human Rights, Emilio Alvarez Icaza, visited the show to tell us what's the 21st century perspective being addressed by this organism, in charge of enforcing justice and equality for all people in the Western Hemisphere. Most interestingly is, says Alvarez Icaza, that what motivated the creation of this court were cases under dictatorships and other anti-democratic systems, a scenario that has greatly changed today. Now the complaints have the face of the immigrants, looks after social justice and socio-economic status of the citizens, among other examples ... including cases in the United States. And speaking of justice, Arizona is yet again the center of controversy, after state Rep. John Kavanaugh proposed that, in order to use a public restroom in that state, people have to show documents evidencing their biological sex. This move is seen as discriminatory by LGBT groups, including transgender people. The topic is discussed with three activists who have experienced firsthand gender discrimination: Lisbeth Melendez Rivera, Conzuella Lopez and Cindi Reyes. Finally, two months before the election in Los Angeles that will determine who will succeed Antonio Villaraigosa, mayoral candidate Eric Garcetti joins us in the show. With him, Armando Guzmán discusses his projects for the city and what the future holds for the people of Los Angeles, if elected to office.	TRT is 23:50 and segment times as follows: Segment #1: 08:15 Segment #2: 08:33 Segment #3: 06:07 Segment #4: 00:55
