BISMARCK, N.D. (AP) - North Dakota Attorney General Wayne Stenehjem ~~says a man~~ reportedly lost almost $9,000 as a result of a fake Internal Revenue Service call.

~~Stenehjem on Thursday~~ said the caller threatened to get the victim arrested if he didn't settle a phony debt stemming from his 2005 tax return.

The scammer directed the Wahpeton man to purchase 18 Green Dot cards totaling $8,897 and to read off the numbers on the back of each card. The scammer then emptied the money from the cards.

~~Stenehjem says~~ hundreds of people are receiving these calls. He says the caller often has a foreign accent and it appears the calls were placed in Ireland.

He adds people should never agree to send money without first independently verifying whether an alleged debt is valid.

Developer Plans to Go Ahead with RTC Development Plan

9-3-14

Historic Kirkbride developer Ray Willey (WILL-ee) spoke to the Falls City Council. They have decided to go ahead and redevelop the former state hospital.

[PHASES ON RTC]

:31 "Our original plan called for doing it in one phase, but now we're going to divide it in half now, doing it in two phases. We're doing the hotel now and doing the hotel maybe a year or two later. There's a number of reasons, but the biggest issue I think. We think that makes sense. Phasing, capacity, etc."

Willey said they have finalized all of the details and reached a conclusion that doing the project in two phases makes sense.

Willey along with his tax credit attorney, John Anderson, met with the council in a closed session to present more the financial information requested by the council.

Willey says this saves the building from the wrecking ball: [GO OR NO GO]

:47 "Coming from the outside, there's a pervasive something in the air hanging over that. It's literally like a wrecking ball hanging over the air. It sends a chill of a threat of destruction, demolition. It's hard, it's almost paralyzing. It almost, I'd say, emasculates the community if that threat is hanging over that building. If we can go forward and we can save half of it and not mothball the other half but protect the other half, cover the roof up, redo the roof and do that and a year or two later do the hotel, I think that makes sense and it takes off the table the whole issue of go or no go."

The council announced that they would not reconvene the meeting. A vote on the proposal could come at the next council meeting September 15th.

Grave Markers Added at FF State Hospital Cemetery

9-3-14

More than three thousand people are buried in the Fergus Falls State Hospital Cemetery but there only a few markers. That is changing. More than 500 markers have been installed including 12 of relatives that contacted Remembering with Dignity, the group that is overseeing the project.

Halle O'Falvey [HAL-ee OH-FELL-Vee] says that researching the names is fun but also challenging:

"It's very difficult. They're hand written and when it comes to genealogy and verification there is never ever a right or wrong answer, nothing is ever final and sometimes we have four different spellings of one name. We use a variety of documents. We use county records, state records, Minnesota State death records, cemetery records, hospital records and it's trying to find the best we can do."

A dedication ceremony will be held this Sunday at the Fergus Falls cemetery (September 7) at 1:30 pm. Plan to park behind the Veteran's home and walk in.

Remembering with Dignity is putting markers on 11 state hospital cemeteries. Fergus Falls is the largest. More markers will be added a future date.

BISMARCK, N.D. (AP) - North Dakota's Agriculture Commissioner says more combiners are needed to help bring in the state's harvest this year.

Farmers can call the hotline and the department will match them up with someone who needs harvesting help or work. Department employees answer the phones daily from 7 a.m. to 4 p.m. The hotline is free of charge.

FARGO, N.D. (AP) - North Dakota Governor Jack Dalrymple (DAHL'-rimp-ul) has told federal regulators who oversee railroad service issues that he considers the ongoing delay in grain shipments in some Upper Plains states an emergency situation.

Dalrymple was among dozens of officials from the Dakotas and Minnesota who testified Thursday in Fargo, North Dakota, before the National Surface Transportation Board. Many crops in the three states are at near-record levels; producers say the backlog is costing them millions.

Some believe the increased shipments from North Dakota's western oil fields are largely behind the delays.

New Minnesota Minimum Wage Law Affecting Restaurants

Some restaurant owners in Minnesota are crying foul about the new minimum wage law which does not provide an exemption for restaurants. In fact one restaurant in southern Minnesota is already charging a surcharge to customers to recoup the difference. We spoke with Greg Stumbo of Cafe 116 in Fergus Falls who said that there aren't any changes for him that he can see at this time.

"We have employees who are under the guidelines that are exceeding the guidelines that the state set forth, so I don't see anything changing right now. We've been able to pay our employees more than that than the minimum wage anyway. Some restaurants are concerned, the restaurant association is concerned that there is not a tip exemption on it, you know for tipped employees, like Wisconsin where they enacted the minimum wage and had that exemption for tips or tipped servers, Minnesota doesn't have anything on there like that. "

Some restaurants around the state are reportedly changing their menus and repricing everything higher, and instead of having busboys clearing tables, they are reportedly going to have their waitresses doing it now because they will be getting paid more.

GOVERNOR-PARK SYSTEM

Dalrymple unveils state parks improvement plan

* BISMARCK, N.D. (AP) - Gov. Jack Dalrymple wants the state to spend more oil tax revenues to improve North Dakota's park system and for statewide conservation enhancements.

Dalrymple's plan calls for raising the cap on the North Dakota Outdoor Heritage fund from $30 million every two years to $50 million.

The plan also calls for investing an additional $30.4 million in new funds to improve state parks.

The GOP governor's plan comes as conservation advocates are pushing a measure for an even bigger slice of North Dakota oil tax revenues for a fund to benefit water, wildlife and parks projects. The measure will appear on the November ballot.

Backers want 5 percent of the state's oil extraction taxes for the fund. That would raise about $260 million during the 2015-17 budget cycle.

Crews Hit History with New Gas Line

7-2-14

The work in the alley between Mill Street and Court Street will take longer since they have been running into Fergus Falls history-literally.

Crews with Great Plains Natural Gas were boring for a new line going through the alley and were hoping to do it under ground. City Engineer Dan Edwards: [HITTING HISTORY DAN EDWARDS]

:20 "Going through there they found out what they are hitting. There are various sizes of rocks and boulders in there but they're also running into some unknown foundations left over from sheds or other buildings from way back or other obstacles and that's slowed them down."

They will not be able to put the lines in that way. Instead they will be making an open trench.

They will fill the area in on Thursday so traffic can go through this weekend and have access to the mailbox and payment drop boxes. The alley will again be closed on Monday when work starts back up. They anticipate the alley to be closed Monday through Friday next week.

Council Tables Bike Lane Plan for Fir Ave

7-8-14

The city council did not take any action on the plan to add bike lanes to Fir Avenue. 91 notices were sent out to residents living on Fir between Union Avenue and Friberg Avenue June 18th.

Only 14 responded. Half of those (7) were opposed to adding bike lanes. Six people said they were in favor of the proposal but four of the six do not live on the street.

A motion to table the decision passed and the city council will take the matter up again at the next meeting July 21.

Mill and overlay work is to be done this summer so the street would need to be re-striped after that work. The proposal calls for no parking on the ~~north~~ ^{South} side of Friberg Avenue and bike lanes would be added on both sides. Fir has been identified as a connecting route to another bike path going in on Co Hwy 27 (Cleveland Ave) and other bike routes.

Direct comments on the plan to City Engineer Dan Edwards or your council representative or attend the next city council meeting July 21, 5:30 pm in the council chambers.

Railroads report backlogged grain shipments

Eds: APNewsNow.

BISMARCK, N.D. (AP) - Farm commodity rail shipments are running about a month behind in North Dakota.

The U.S. Surface Transportation Board has told BNSF Railway and Canadian Pacific to submit plans to address backlogs in northern Plains states and begin filing weekly updates.

The companies filed their first updates last week.

BNSF Railway reported 4,942 past due rail cars in North Dakota averaging 32 days late. North Dakota had the most past-due rail cars followed by Montana, Minnesota, Washington and South Dakota.

BNSF promised in April to add more locomotives and crews in an effort to address the agriculture shipping delays.

Canadian Pacific's report does not include a specific number of past-due rail cars or average lateness. But the railroad estimated a backlog demand of 10,000 to 12,000 cars across its system.
