

Quarterly Report WNXF July-September 2021

WNXP is a music discovery station serving Nashville and Middle Tennessee striving to reflect the depth and diversity of the region and its music community through on-air programming and arts journalism presented across multiple platforms. The focus of the daily playlists ranges from emerging to established artists with a special emphasis on Nashville.

Our local hosts bring context to the music they play and stay connected to the community through live updates on news and issues important to our listeners. With hosts that include award-winning journalists, these updates go deeper than simple, biographical artist information and serve to enrich the listener's experience.

As live music began to reemerge from lockdown and eventually hit the Delta roadblock over this period, WNXF used its platform to keep listeners informed about the shifting landscape of restrictions, mandates, and expert advice on concert attendance. With Nashville having the highest concentration of music workers in the world, WNXF also reported on the multi-layered impact on venues, music businesses and artists and updated stories from live music vaccination requirements to being the first to break the news about the cancelation of Bonnaroo.

WNXP launched new community collaborations during this period and continued special series. Editorial Director Jewly Hight spearheaded a weekly check-in with editors and contributors from the Nashville Scene called "In The Scene" spotlighting their work covering everything from overlooked jazz musicians to the decisions facing festival organizers in the pandemic. Beginning in July with events and concerts in nearly full swing, WNXF launched "What Where Whens-days" with Do615 looking at Middle Tennessee events from music to arts to sports and volunteer opportunities.

The Touching Base series concluded with perspectives from three more diverse Nashville artists who released records during the pandemic and how they navigated an unprecedented time, stayed connected with fans and dealt with the emotional fallout.

We continued to coincide with national celebrations of diversity including our weekly, interactive themed show Thematic Static which brought in community voices for Hispanic Heritage Month and we hosted two special, themed weekends – Indie-pendence Weekend (July 3-5) which focused on artists on independent labels and brought in voices from Nashville's independent music business community alongside the songs and Best of the Fests weekend which was changed at the last minute to bring in community voices impacted by the absence of Bonnaroo as well as fans and artists who were interviewed at festivals in the weeks before about their experiences coming back after lockdown.

Our ongoing Record of the Week and Nashville Artist of the Month series continue to elevate local and international artists and our feature stories and interviews from those artists illuminate an array of topics from race to sexual identity to mental health.
