List of Issues Q2 2023

The following issues were addressed on WSJV 28.1 during the second quarter of 2023. Specific titles, times, dates, and duration of public service announcements are listed below.

1. Safety: Messages from the American College of Emergency Physicians highlighted the importance of eliminating distractions and wearing a helmet to prevent serious scooter injuries. While the National Crime Prevention Council warned of fake products that could put you in danger—especially safety items like bike helmets. A series of Ad Council PSAs pointed out the danger of texting and driving. The CDC warned about the health risks of misusing antibiotics and how it can lead to antibiotic-resistant infections. Messages from the FDA reminded parents to promote a safe home by disposing of unused prescription medications. The National Foundation for Infectious Diseases warned of the dangers of the flu, especially if you have preexisting conditions. The Hearing Health Foundation cautioned that listening too long and too loud can lead to permanent hearing loss. NHTSA offered advice and resources for proper child car seat safety. PSAs from the National Pest Management Association reminded viewers of the safety and health risks posed by common household pests. The International Fund for Animal Welfare reminded viewers to include their pets in their family disaster plan. The Ad Council reminded gun owners to lock up their guns because kids can find anything. And the American Academy provided a phone-ready quiz to help parents decide if they're ready for a cell phone.
2. Health: To address the mental health crisis among adolescents 10-14, a series of messages aired to encourage caregivers to have meaningful conversations with middle schoolers about their mental wellbeing. Messages from the American Cancer Society encouraged parents to vaccinate their children against HPV to protect them from up to 6 different cancers later in life. While the National Foundation for Infectious Diseases urged parents to vaccinate their children and offered programs to help. Announcements from SPARK urged parents of autistic children to enroll in their research program to accelerate the understanding of autism. Jennifer Coolidge provided a memorable reminder about hands-only CPR. Combatting blood cancer takes willing bone marrow donors. PSAs from DKMS encouraged viewers to join a registry to help match donors with blood cancer patients. The Ad Council encouraged adults to talk to kids about the dangers of vaping. While the US Department of Health and Human Services and the Substance Abuse and Mental Health Services Administration provided advice on talking to kids about alcohol and other drugs. The Muscular Dystrophy Association invited viewers to join an online gaming event to raise money for MDA programs. And the Ronald McDonald house reminded viewers that they're there for families when a child is sick in the hospital.
3. Community & Family: The Foundation for a Better life reminded us of the importance of being there for others and to show gratitude to others through kind gestures. The National Crime Prevention Council encouraged individuals to start a conversation with local police to make communities safer. Children shouldn't have to worry about being hungry. Feeding America showed viewers where to donate or where to seek help through a series of PSAs. And to help feed, educate, and support children around the world, Child Fund International and UNICEF provided viewers with the means to get involved. In our communities here at home, our first responders put their lives on the line to help where they're needed most; sometimes suffering injuries or paying the ultimate price for their service. The First Responders Children's Foundation is there for families who suffer a loss. Their messaging showed viewers how to thank first responders by supporting the foundation. Tricia Yearwood and Garth Brooks encouraged people to support Habitat for Humanity. And messages from Make a Wish empowered viewers to grant wishes for sick children across the U.S. Pets provide companionship and enrich our lives. We can save them from neglect or euthanasia by adopting shelter animals. Messages from the Shelter Pet Project and Best Friends Animal Society showed viewers how. They also encouraged people to adopt kittens to help alleviate shelter overcrowding. A little praise goes a long way in helping children succeed. Boys Town's public service announcements offer parental advice on how to use praise to raise confident children.

4. Environment: The trees in our forests are vital for our survival—purifying our air and water and protecting against harmful erosion. But our forests are threatened by fires, insects, and disease. Through a series of public service announcements, the Arbor Day Foundation demonstrates how trees can address many of our social issues and invites viewers to be a part of the solution by supporting efforts to replant our damaged forest land. And it's not just forests that are important to our lives, our country's wetlands and waterfowl play an important role as well. Ducks Unlimited conserves, restores and manages our wetlands. Through PSAs, Ducks Unlimited teaches about the importance of our wetland habitats. Wild Aid reminded us that we can protect the environment by carpooling. Plus, a series of PSAs encouraged viewers to keep America beautiful by recycling. And messages from the National Wildlife Foundation and the San Diego Zoo Wildlife Alliance spoke of the importance of understanding and protecting our wildlife.
5. Education: For some kids, staying in school can be a challenge. Communities in Schools provides support to help kids stay in school. Their PSA encourages the public to get involved and help keep kids in the classroom. Reading is essential for young minds and reading with a parent is particularly influential. But when a parent is absent due to military deployment, kids lose that connection. United Through Reading helps connect kids with deployed military parents so the reading can continue. United Through Reading's on-air messages invited viewers to learn more and to support their programs. And the Ad Council reminds parents that kids are more likely to graduate from high school when they see their parents doing the same through high school equivalency programs. The Milton Hershey School offered a special place for disadvantaged kids to learn. And the PGA showed how their First Tee program can help kids develop positive skills and character.
