WBST, WBSB, WBSH and WBSW- Indiana Public Radio

For the period of July 1, 2023, through September 30, 2023.

Indiana Public Radio, consisting of FM radio stations WBST, WBSB, WBSW, and WBSH, has determined that the following issues were of importance to its audience community during the past three months and has aired the following news stories to address these issues:

Health

Youth tobacco use among Hoosiers is the lowest since 2012, according to data collected last year.

Indiana Public Broadcasting's Violet Comber-Wilen reports despite declines in overall usage, state health officials are still concerned about youth tobacco use.

07/09/23                      TRANSGENDER CARE ROADBLOCKS IN INDIANA                      AP

On an early morning in June, Flower Nichols and her mother set off on an expedition to Chicago from their home in Indianapolis.

The family was determined to make it feel like an adventure in the city, though that wasn't the primary purpose of the trip.

The following afternoon, Flower and Jennilyn Nichols would see a doctor at the University of Chicago to learn whether they could keep 11-year-old Flower on puberty blockers. They began to search for medical providers outside of Indiana after April 5, when Republican Gov. Eric Holcomb signed a law banning transgender minors from accessing puberty blockers and other hormone therapies, even after the approval of parents and the advice of doctors.

On June 16, a federal judge blocked parts of Indiana's law from going into effect on July 1. But many patients still scrambled to continue receiving treatment.

At least 20 states have enacted laws restricting or banning gender-affirming care for trans minors, though several are embroiled in legal challenges. For more than a decade prior, such treatments were available to children and teens across the U.S. and have been endorsed by major medical associations.

Opponents of gender-affirming care say there's no solid proof of purported benefits, cite widely discredited research and say children shouldn't make life-altering decisions they might regret. Advocates and families impacted by the recent laws say such care is vital for trans kids.

Mental health needs are at a peak among U.S. children and teens.

About three out of every 10 Indiana high schoolers said they'd considered suicide in a 2021 national survey. Nearly HALF felt persistently sad or hopeless — the highest rate in two decades of surveys.

Those challenges show up in classrooms.

08/04/23

8/4/23 Sex Assault Victims And Abortion Brandon Smith

Sexual assault victim advocates say they're worried victims will become hopeless as abortion access in Indiana is effectively cut off amid uncertainty over the state ban taking effect.

Beth White is the president and C-E-O of the Indiana Coalition to End Sexual Assault and Human Trafficking. The state's impending ban does allow abortions in cases of rape or incest, but only up to 10 weeks post-fertilization. White says that arbitrary time limit makes the exception "meaningless," especially for underage victims.

CUT 25071 :15 "...find that acceptable." "Those young people don't know what's happening to their bodies. They don't even understand what it means to be pregnant ... again, it is cruelty on top of trauma and I do not understand how, in the state of Indiana, we can find that acceptable."

While abortion clinics are no longer providing abortions, many are helping people travel to places where they can access such care. White says her organizations are funded through state and federal dollars — meaning, they can't provide that sort of direct help.

CUT 25072 :08 OUT: "...missing work." "We try to wrap around help for folks who need to get out of state — what about child care, what about missing work?"

White says she's most concerned about victims feeling like they have no options and trying to end pregnancies on their own, in unsafe ways.

The Indiana Family and Social Services Administration (FSSA) announced Friday the personal health information of more than 200,000 Hoosiers on Medicaid may have been exposed in a global software breach in late May.

The names, addresses, Social Security numbers, dates of birth, and other data of 212,193 Medicaid recipients utilizing Indiana's services was likely compromised.

Two Indiana programs are getting more than $1.7 million in federal grants to reduce overdose risks from fentanyl and other opioids in rural counties.

One program is 4C Health Comprehensive Mental Health Center in Cass County. It's getting $1 million to prevent and treat substance use in children and adolescents.

The other program is Indiana Rural Health Association in Washington County, which is getting more than $700,000 to establish sites where people can access medications to treat opioid use disorder.

More Indiana residents now die from overdoses than car crashes. People in rural areas are also disproportionately affected.

SEPM (SLW EDIT)

The 9-8-8 Suicide Prevention and Crisis Lifeline has received more than five million calls, texts and chats in its first year. Still, surveys show that most people in the US do not even know that 9-8-8 exists.

Earlier this month, the Biden administration announced a way to get the service to more Americans - those who are deaf and hard of hearing who use American Sign Language to communicate. The new video chat service connects a sign language speaker in crisis to a 9-8-8 operator that uses sign language, meaning there's no need for interpreters.

As the United Auto Workers begin a “targeted strike” over union contracts at General Motors, Ford, and Stellantis, Indiana workers aren’t striking ... for now.

The first three plants to strike are assembly plants, which combine parts made by other plants to produce vehicles. Before the strikes began, some expected the union to target parts plants first... causing shutdowns as supplies of key parts deplete. But the U-A-W did the opposite.

U-A-W Local 6-85 President Gary Quirk says that may affect the Kokomo parts plants he represents.

Delaware County jail short on staff again

SLW 07/25/23

Delaware County is once again seeing a staffing shortage at the county jail.

On Tuesday (today/yesterday), Delaware County Sheriff's Department financial officer Nancy Marvin told the county council that there are 10 openings at the jail.

CUT 31552 :11 ... EVERYBODY ELSE OVER.

"One more will make us an entire shift. Thus, next month you'll see me transferring all the excess salaries into overtime. [Being] short people makes us having to work everybody else over."

Though Marvin says employment numbers at the jail fluctuate, having staff shortages is a reoccurring trend. In 2021, the sheriff's department spent more than $100,000 in overtime pay to cover short staffing. In the spring of 2022, the department told the county council it was short 12 correctional officers.

The sheriff's department is advertising corrections officer jobs with a salary of about 38-thousand dollars with benefits. According to data from the Indiana Department of Corrections, that's slightly higher than the midpoint salary across the state. The maximum salary for a corrections officer that has completed training is about 47-thousand dollars.

Planned Parenthood Booked Up Before Ban Brandon Smith

One of Indiana's primary abortion care providers says they have no more open appointments ... three weeks ahead of the state's near-total abortion ban taking effect.

In a statement today (WED), Planned Parenthood says it's at full capacity for abortion care through the end of July ... though its clinics are still able to provide other reproductive services.

In a recent ruling, the Indiana Supreme Court allowed the state's ban to take effect August 1st. The law only allows abortions if the pregnant person's serious health or life is at risk ... if there's a lethal fetal anomaly up to 20 weeks post-fertilization ... and in cases of rape or incest, but only up to 10 weeks.

And even for legal abortions in Indiana, the law won't allow Planned Parenthood to perform them. It bans abortion clinics outright, only allowing care to be provided at hospitals or surgical centers owned by hospitals.

There's a separate lawsuit challenging the ban. A judge in that case halted the law from taking effect, but only for people whose religious beliefs compel abortion care.

Indiana Attorney General Todd Rokita is suing TikTok in an Allen County court on behalf of the state ... accusing the China-based company of violating Indiana's Deceptive Consumer Sales Act .... by not disclosing that user data may be subject to Chinese law.

In a 62-page motion, TikTok cites a number of reasons why the lawsuit should be tossed out ... or at least delayed. Among them, the company says Indiana does not have jurisdiction over TikTok ... and it doesn't violate the state's sales act because the app is free.

Rokita's office has until August 23rd to reply. A message seeking comment from the Attorney General has not yet been returned.

Earlier this year, TikTok and its parent company ByteDance asked for the case to be transferred to federal court. That request was denied. At the time, U.S. District Judge Holly Brady called the state's case "political posturing" and says the state was arguing a case beyond its legal claim.
