Voting, politics	KENTUCKY NEWSMAKERS	We're now about six weeks away from the Kentucky primary on May 17, and preparations are well underway. It'll be different with early voting and different procedures in some locations. The voting lists should be the cleanest they've ben in years with the secretary of state having purged thousands of dead voters and others from the election rolls. Keeneland also has new ventures underway in southern Kentucky with a harness track in Corbin and a historic horseracing facility in Williamsburg to be called Cumberland Run. Keeneland is also rolled out some details about the Breeders' Cup coming back to the area this fall. Economy, election	KENTUCKY NEWSMAKERS	Governor Andy Beshear joins us to answer questions about a major jobs announcement in the commonwealth, as well as the just-concluded session of the legislature that saw Republicans enact a slew of legislation that the governor disagreed with. He voted 25 bills and the legislature dutifully overrode him on virtually every one of them. That includes legislation on abortion, charter schools, guns in courtrooms, and raises for lawmakers themselves. Kentucky's primary is now a month away on May 17. There will be some changes and there are some things to know about who can vote in the various races. Fayette County Clerk Don Blevins Jr. raised concerns about early voting but worked out a plan for the primary. Now, the legislature has made some other adjustments that will mean some will vote before the actual primary day gets here. Blevins joins us to discuss.	Gov. Andy Beshear; Fayette Co. Politics	KENTUCKY NEWSMAKERS	This week we have two different perspectives on the recently concluded session of the Kentucky General Assembly. A historic surplus allowed the legislature to invest in raises, projects, higher education, and new initiatives. Republican lawmakers also pushed through a conservative social agenda with some of the tightest abortion restrictions in the country, a ban on transgender girls playing girls' sports, funding for charter schools, and rules about how history is to be taught. Rep. Meade also pushed through some tighter rules for those on public assistance, but not all he wanted. Democrats had a tough scenario during the session, being far outnumbered in both chambers. It was hard for their ideas to get traction or, in some cases, even be heard.	Rep. David Meade; Sen. Reggie Thomas	04/24/2022 11:35 PM	026:03

Agriculture, climate change	KENTUCKY NEWSMAKERS	It's been a while since we've visited with Quarles. He joins us on Newsmakers to talk about the new legislation passed in the recently concluded General Assembly session, like what the outlook is for crops as spring has had its fits so far. Farmers markets are also getting up and running for the session and have been greatly expanded during Commissioner Quarles' tenure. Then there are the political questions-- long considered a likely Republican candidate for governor, Quarles hasn't said a lot about that lately. The Citizens Climate Lobby is proposing putting a cost on carbon as a way to combat climate change. The group said a strong, economy-wide price on carbon could reduce America's emissions by 50% by 2030. That's less than eight years away. So how would it work, and	Ky. Ag. It's been a wild ride of ups and downs for the Beshear-Coleman administration. Coleman was an educator and successful coach before becoming beshear's running mate in 2019. Now, the governor is running for re-election and most assume Coleman will again be his running mate, although candidates don't have to make that decision now until after the primary.
