Host Beverley Beshia Moore talks with Dr. Pastor Michael Cokes Sr. of City of Faith, about providing food for those in need. Church members and faith partners have been trying to do things the word's way and not the Kingdom's way. There is a need to teach people to be good stewards and to prosper in life. Many people do not have a good job with benefits. If they learn to trust God, He will provide. The church gives out food on a weekly basis. Many come back and have said they have nothing to eat. It is for the community to give to those in need. Jesus fed the multitudes before preaching. They also need to be made aware of other resources that are available. Along with that, they may need to learn how to function, manage money or have substance abuse counseling. Single parents need to learn how to work with financial challenges and believe for an increase. The church will be giving away 10,000 lbs. of food soon. They have been doing it for 10 years. The objective is to be a blessing. Pastor met his current deacon by giving him food. There are at least 15 other pastors in the metro area who are also doing it. Everyone knows someone who needs help. It is a great joy to show people the love of Jesus.

CBN News Reporter Caitlin Burke Reports: Disruptive innovation: While you may not recognize the term, it's affecting life and business as we know it. It happens when new ideas and technology shake up old markets by creating new ones. We've seen it in transportation, hospitality and now with banking. It's being called Wall Street's "Uber moment." Rob Morgan, vice president of Emerging Technologies at the American Bankers Association, says customers expect to have the same type of digital access to banking as they do to other important services. Think about it. You can get your mail through a smart phone, order dinner, even hail a cab, all just by pulling up an app. Now thanks to financial technology, you can also access your money. Apple, Google, Amazon are the tech giants all on board with financial technology. Most of them are starting off with digital payment apps. While they may be a little late to the party, major banks have entered this new reality. Banks are competing in this space, but it seems they face an uphill battle. According to Harris Research firm, 77 percent of consumers have a positive impression of the tech industry, compared to 35 percent who feel good about the financial industry. Those skirmishes seem to be taking the shape of regulations. The tech industry wants breathing room for young startups, while the banking industry believes its new competitors should follow the same rules it does. Security is a major concern of consumers when it comes to digital financial services. Brian Peters, with Financial Innovation Now, an organization that represents Apple, Amazon, Google, Intuit and PayPal, says your cell phone will eventually provide better protection of your information than a debit or credit card. Some of the popular services include Venmo, Google Wallet and Apple Pay. They allow you to transfer money and buy products without ever stepping into a bank or pulling out your credit card. This especially appeals to the millennial generation. According to Viacom Media, 73 percent of Millennials prefer using digital services than going to a bank. But it's not Millennials who stand to gain the most from this technology. Despite battles on Capitol Hill, both the banks and the tech industry agree that, ultimately, the consumer will be the winner.

Apostle David Kind, Founder of Wisconsin God Squad and Host Beverley Besha Moore talk about equipping our city through viable employment. Companies are having problems finding workers and workers are having problems finding jobs. The problem is transportation. He has reached out to employers in Dodge & Washington Counties. There are soft skill classes available for potential workers. They are encouraged to look at it as a career and an investment. There are many felons in the population he serves and they have difficulty finding a job. Many people don't know how to fill out an application and can't read. He wants people who have no dreams to start dreaming and believing in themselves, so that they can be a blessing. Apostle King teaches in church about the Kingdom. When someone needs help they need to learn how to be self-sufficient, not just how to receive charity. They can get help with budgeting. He has picked up people to get them to work, thereby moving things out of the way that have caused them to have excuses about not going.

Host Beverley Besha Moore and Bishop Walter Harvey, from Parklawn Assembly of God discuss how economic development can bring positive change. The last 20 years have seen much change in Milwaukee neighborhoods. They have gone from being middle class to seeing factories closed (resulting in a lack of good jobs.) Technology has emerged, but people's minds have not made the transition to that type of economy. The jobs available are not family sustaining jobs. The unemployment rate among African American males is quite high compared to the rest of the state's rate. A number of them are illegally employed. More education is required for good jobs. Transportation and child care are issues. A growing population of young adults are using drugs for recreational use. They can't pass the drug tests. There needs to be opportunities for people to retool themselves. Entrepreneurship is a turning point for the economy. God has given us marketable gifts and skills

Dr. Debbie Lassiter, CEO of Convergence Resource Center and Host Beverley Besha Moore discuss developing skills for employment. For those getting out of prison, being employed is one of the top things to keeping them out. There are challenges to getting a job- sometimes it's themselves and sometimes it's the employers. Skillsets are needed to get and keep a job. There is a need for professional clothing. Ex-offenders can become some of the best employees. In Wisconsin, the unemployment rate amongst African Americans is high. There may be mental health issues and negative self-talk, that's it's not cool to go to work every day. The unemployed can be vulnerable to being sex-trafficked, which occurs in every county in the state. Dr. Lassiter discussed sex-trafficking and how victims get pulled into it. Each woman she works with is a work of art and each one is different.

Rev. Leondis Fuller, Program Director at Word of Hope Ministries, Inc. and Host Steven Tipton discuss opening the door to a living wage. There are barriers keeping people from jobs, such as lack of training. WOHM partners with employers to find what they are looking for. They have met with employers in West Bend, who have jobs but not the people. Unemployment affects families. Jobs are needed with good benefits and promotions. Rev. Fuller talked about the Fast Forward training program. This is through the Dept. of Workforce Development. A grant was received to establish a partnership with companies looking to hire in the next years. There are employers who have agreed to hire those who have completed the Fast Forward training. Transportation can be a barrier. WOHM has partnered with Legal Action WI to help people get their license back. They also help to address a lack of education and substance abuse issues. They want to help people stay employed. People have God-given gifts. They need to understand what they are good at and be trained to use them.

CBN News Reporter Caitlin Burke Reports: Personal trainers at Inner City Weightlifting (ICW), are considered some of the best in Boston. Trained by world class instructors, they're sought out by some of the city's top business men and women. For them, a career in personal training isn't what they anticipated, but it's a job that's saving their lives. Just about all of the trainers at ICW have spent significant time behind bars. At the ripe young age of 31, Lemon has been shot, seen friends die and been arrested for things he's done and things he hasn't. He says the violence from his old life wasn't as much a choice, as it was survival. When it comes to getting off the streets, plenty of programs offer, help, but not a real way out. ICW founder Jon Feinman shares little in common with someone like Lemon but he has a passion for disrupting the system that Lemon says could have destroyed him. Feinman started ICW in 2010. One of the early challenges was figuring out how to reconcile the dream of changing lives through weight-training, with the realities of life on the street. Still, the ICW team moved forward—knowing they had a lot to learn. By listening, they discovered ways to improve their program. First, they learned people wanted a true sense of community. Second, many people on the streets lack hope. That's where weight training makes a difference. Not only does it offer community, ICW also provides a career-track in personal training. In 2016 nearly 400 ICW clients trained with a student-trainer. While Sarah Downey originally came for the workout, she told CBN that her perception of the world changed as she got to know her trainer. That moved her to use her network to bring her trainer other clients and provide him with odd jobs to make extra cash. As communities and networks become inclusive, opportunities become endless.

Bishop Walter Harvey, from Parklawn Assembly of God, and Host Beverley Besha Moore discuss the topic-restore Milwaukee. The church is in the Sherman Park neighborhood, where an unarmed African American man was killed by a police officer. Riots ensued. Bishop Harvey needed to keep a relationship with the police and also with the community. The church helped with neighborhood cleanup and brought the presence of Christ to the community. He began to strategize with other pastors about making a sustaining impact. Out of this came the Milwaukee Declaration. This declaration is for meant for racial reconciliation and walking it out. It addressed many things that plague the community. The church (in general) has had an ostrich approach. Now issues are coming to the church. There is a need to provide leadership inside and outside the state. Wisconsin has many issues. Reaching out to youth while they are young is important. Parklawn and Elmbrook churches have partnered to train food entrepreneurs. When people come to Parklawn, hospitality is very intentional. People are embraced where they are at. There is no success without succession. The next generation must be equipped. Bishop Harvey talked about The Outpouring Ministry Network. This is expanding the power and influence of the Gospel in the Milwaukee area.

CBN News Reporter Caitlin Burke Reports: The Catholic Church is known for its sacred traditions. Those traditions, however, can make the Church seem resistant to change. One Philadelphia parish challenged that perception when it moved to transform along with the neighborhood it serves. In the 1960s, the Mount Airy neighborhood was half Jewish, half Irish or Italian Catholic. Over the course of eight years that changed entirely and now it's completely African American. The synagogues left, but churches like St. Raymond of Penafort Catholic Church stuck around and welcomed their new neighbors. That may seem like typical neighborhood outreach, but culturally and historically, the Catholic Church doesn't offer much to African-Americans. Father Walsh wanted to change that. Walsh found it wasn't theology that needed to change, it was a congregation needing to convince neighbors that St. Raymond met their needs. Author Chris Lowney uses Father Walsh and St. Raymond as a prime example of how the Catholic Church needs to change. In his book, "Everyone Leads: How to Revitalize the Catholic Church," Lowney writes that to thrive in today's world we don't have to drink some 21st century cocktail. He writes that the church is facing its worst crisis in 500 years. Lowney offers what he calls an "EASTeR Strategy." That stands for Entrepreneurial, Accountable, Serve, Transform and Reach. Looking at St. Raymond as a model: It first established leadership teams to help manage operations, ministries and projects—much as a business would do. Then they gathered information about what people wanted from their walk with Christ and how the Church met those needs. After analyzing that data, they made any needed changes. St. Raymond serves the neighborhood with a Catholic school, which provides families a safe place for their children to learn. Philadelphia's public schools are some of the most violent and lowest performing in the country. Long-time parishioners felt St. Raymond once depended on "church welfare." Low attendance meant borrowing money to keep the doors open. Now, thanks to the cultural transformation, complete with music and decorations, people travel from other parishes to help pack the pews each Sunday. Pastor Walsh believes that when it comes to reaching Millennials, encouraging their involvement differs from past generations. Lowney points out that even the Pope is encouraging an attitude of innovation within the Catholic Church. Pope Francis recently appeared on screen as one of the speakers at the annual TED conference. As he talked to tech company founders, artists, and cultural leaders, he surprised his audience by using modern tools of the digital age to reach them. Lowney feels this strategy is universal and can revitalize any church, no matter the belief set or denomination. For it to work, however, he stresses it can't just be from the top down, even if it's the Pope who calls for change. It requires everyone to lead.

Host Kelry Krschenmann talks with Pastor James Buske, Executive Director of Lighthouse Youth Center, about providing a safe place for youth. Many kids need a safe place to go to after school. Lots of juveniles get in trouble between 3:00 & 5:00 P.M. When Pastor Buske started the Center, not many kids came at first. He began to teach them about safety and respect. More youth began to come. Youth need to learn to be successful and to love Jesus. Kids need time to just be kids and do unstructured things. After that they need to be a student, so there is tutoring and mentoring every day. Then again they need fun time and then a devotion. A worship service occurs on Friday nights. Volunteers are important and are positive Christian role models. The community and other churches are involved in bringing in dinner. A block watch in the neighborhood was named after the Center. They have a connection with the police department. This helps to show respect for those in authority. The city has a need to invest in the youth.

Host Beverley Beshia Moore and Apostle Venner Alston of City Church discuss raising up Kingdom proficient youth. Apostle Alston believes there should be 3 generations worshipping together. Youth need to be disciplined to emerge as leaders. Children have dreams and God speaks to them. They need to be trained to know His voice. During open mic times, children can come up and talk about what they hear God saying. They are revamping a service that allows youth to do the whole service. They want to get them up front as quickly as possible. There is a goal to establish another school in the city. There are undereducated youth and systemic poverty is one of the reasons. The current teaching system being used is from 100 years ago. It is a one size fits all and some children are in the wrong model. Senior citizens can be part of a great support system for youth. They have a grandparent's day at church. Youth are trained at church and sent back to their schools to become the prophets, intercessors and the voice of God in their schools. Parents need to be encouraged to be advocates for their children. They are the gatekeepers for their children and need to be involved in their child's school.

Jerry Wallendal, Badgerland Youth for Christ Fresh Start and Host Beverley Besha Moore talk about bringing freedom to captive youth. He is the Director of their Juvenile Justice Ministry. He works with juveniles at jails. The ministry includes Bible studies, teaching life skills and showing movies. FreshStart Aftercare is for those released from jail and also for their friends. They are mentored and shown they can change their lives around. This was developed because Jerry saw that many who were ministered to in jail, ended back up there again and again. Many of the youth are in survival mode. They are not thinking of long term ramifications or college, etc. Their concerns are whether they will have a place to live or food to eat, or will they end up in a foster home or a facility. They may have exited a bad neighborhood and end up trying to recreate it in a new one. They don't have dreams, they just survive. Jerry teaches them life skills so they can learn to deal with life situations. Many come from dysfunctional homes and use their experiences to lead their way. By following the Bible, they have a compass that works 100% of the time. Relationships are huge. Many of the youth don't have them. By meeting in the jail several times a week, they are able to hear God's story. Many have trouble with those in authority but are learning to respect them. The youth in the aftercare program are less likely to fall into recidivism or truancy. The West Bend ministry has been collaborating with churches to help the kids find a place to live, get food, clothing and a job.

Brad & Cindy Christiansen, Founders of Mission Possible and Host Beverley Besha Moore talk about reaching youth through music and drama. The ministry was birthed after they went on a mission trip. They decided to bring to Wisconsin what they saw being done on that trip. They wanted to give kids the tools to do ministry. A lot of the ministry they do is on the street, for the homeless, in prisons, schools and even funerals. When they ministered in prisons, it shows the inmates they can have a different life. Establishing priorities is a problem for young people. In the 18 years they have been in the ministry, they have seen a shift. Kids are involved in too much. They don't see a big difference between church and unchurched youth. They do let unsaved youth be a part of the ministry in the hopes that they will catch the vision. Young people have to make a decision-will they attend church on Sunday morning or soccer? Drama & music are very effective. They do use secular music to reach out to kids. They did that and a young depressed person came forward and said it was their favorite song. They trust that when the young person hears that song again, they will also recall the Gospel message that was presented to them. People understand the drama they present. The response is universal. It elicits the same feelings. The drama presents the Gospel also. Barriers come down. The solution is always JESUS. They have seen many lives changed.

Host Beverley Beshia Moore talks with Pastor Andre Pirtle, Director of ReignStorm Youth Rescue, about youth- from being rescued to reigning. It is important to reach youth before they are targeted to join gangs. There are many temptations and enticements. It can be easier for a 15-year old to get a gun than a job. Many youth are in single parent households or are being raised by grandparents. Gangs have an alliance with trafficking. Both inner city and suburban kids get trafficked. Some of their parents may be working 2 jobs and are not able to give their kids the support they need. Pastor Pirtle works to get kids to live a Kingdom lifestyle. He teaches them something different than they know. The majority of them want a better life. He would rather have them have fun in a safe place. Kids think they are looking for a good time. What they are really looking for is Christ. He wants to connect them in a way that relates to them and then they begin to ask questions.

Pastor Melva Henderson of Melva Henderson Ministries, talks with Host Kelly Terry about how women can positively impact their families. Women are juggling so much. They are overwhelmed and burnt out. Because many of them have to work there are now latchkey kids. If women are pouring out so much, they need to be replenished. They need to take care of themselves. Jesus went away by Himself. When their output exceeds their input, this becomes a downfall. They need to eat healthy and be mindful of their mental processes. There are opportunities available through the church to help empower women. This in turn helps them to be better mothers. If moms have no time for their kids, the kids get stressed out. When women take time to let God speak to them, there are tremendous results. Marriages can be restored. Women need to be intentional about taking care of themselves. They need to position themselves to reflect and let God speak to them. We were born to be connected through relationships. When women come together something powerful happens. What they get they can then release back into their own families.

Host Beverley Beshia Moore talks with Mike Thirtle, President and CEO of Bethesda Lutheran Communities, about help for families with a disabled member. It is challenging to for families to send their loved one to a home. They have been providing care 24/7. It is often seen that when they transition to another residence that significant growth is seen. Parents are amazed when they see how happy their child is. It is a faith walk to allow their loved one to transition. Adaptive equipment and technology can help people live as independently as possible in a safe and secure way. Parents want their children to be safe. Employees wear many hats and are like family. It is difficult to find people with the skills and passion to do this. There is one common denominator across the workforce and that is they are helping fellow human beings live the life they want. Some residents don't have families. There are volunteer opportunities to pray for people and with them and to invite them to church. There is a Christian responsibility to serve people.

Dr. Robertson had a patient, Sonya, whom she had gotten to know quite well. They would have Sonya's boys over once a month. Before Sonya passed away she asked if the Robertsons would become legal guardians for the boys. After Sonya passed the boys moved in. The Robertsons took time off from work to help them settle in. Their home now has a lot more excitement with the boys, along with their own children. Their church is the families' support system. She calls them her rockstar village. The neighbors also help a lot. The need for families to open their home to children is tremendous. Apostle Elias Ramsey, Gateway Global Ministries and Host Beverley Besha Moore talk about strengthening our city through viable churches. He has a family orientated church. They bring restoration to families and teach and empower people through the love of God. They will have an upcoming event called Community Day. Neighborhood kids are invited to come. After last year's event he saw people trickle into church. They have been able to minister to the families who came as a result of the outreach. They want to increase what is offered at Community Day. They want to address economic and health issues and increase ministry to youth. They are in the 53206 zip code, an area with high poverty. It is a tough place. People come in all the time with needs and they do their best to minister to them, by praying or doing something tangible. Families in that zip code face many issues. Milwaukee has seen the rise of very large churches. Before that were the neighborhood churches. He would like people to realize both mega churches and neighborhood churches are important. There have been changes in the family structure. The challenge is to really teach people. There is a high unemployment rate, especially for black men. A man needs something to feel like a man and he needs opportunity. It can be challenging to teach them to trust God. They lack opportunity. While canvassing the community, he comes in contact with men. He tries to encourage them right where he finds them and to bring God into their lives. He wants the men to see they can be more than they are at the moment. Many don't graduate high school and are challenged on their view in life. Children who attended Community Day go home with the Word, with lots of love and are encouraged to come back to church and get involved in worship.

Host Dr. Carolyn G. Anderson and Rabbi Frank Susler, from Beth Messiah- Milwaukee and Grace Christian Church talk about bringing Jew & Gentile together as one family. He knew heard about Jesus until he was 23. He married a Gentile. He talked about his journey to salvation and how he came to Jesus. He became a pastor and then also a rabbi of a Messianic congregation. Christians need to understand their Jewish roots. It is most amazing to see Jew and Gentiles worship together in a Messianic Congregation. They have teams going out on the streets to spread the love of God and pray for people. He teaches people how to witness properly to Jewish people. They plant the seed and God does His part. When Jews and Gentiles come together it is a great witness of God. It is God's purpose that they come together. Rabbi discussed both the Messianic congregation and the Evangelical church he pastors. The mission of the Beth Messiah is to show Jewish people their Messiah. They attend Jewish events and reach out to the people. People from both the synagogue and church go out together to minister to people. Beth Messiah celebrates the Jewish feasts. Rabbi prays for the viewers.

Host Kelly Terry talks with Patrick Vanderburgh, President of Milwaukee Rescue Mission, about the causes of homelessness. MRM started as the result of a citywide evangelistic campaign, to meet the physical & spiritual needs of people. MRM serves on average 300 people per day. He is seeing more mothers with children there. For single men, the biggest reason for being homeless is substance abuse. For mothers it is more varied and complex. Domestic violence, eviction, loss of a relationship and running out of money are some of the reasons they are homeless. The vast majority of people are from poor families. Some do come from the middle or upper class. They may have gotten involved in addictions and burned many bridges. There is often a stigma attached to being homeless. Listening to people's story and being empathetic are part of working at MRM. For people in the shelter programs, there are many things to help them become self-sufficient. Moms can learn life skills. Children can go to their own school or attend school there. There is a long-term residency program to help people get back on their feet. The Christian response to homelessness is to have compassion and a heart for the people experiencing it. The number goal is to reach the lost for Christ and then to meet their needs.

Patrick Vanderburgh, President of Milwaukee Rescue Mission, and Host Kelly Terry discuss solutions for homelessness. MRM is looking to see lives transformed. New Journey is a long-term program for men. They receive many services designed to help them become stable and obtain permanent housing. After 12 months they will need to look for a job. Once they transition out, they will need to have continued drug testing. About 80% of graduates remain employed, stable and in permanent housing. There are opportunities for those who don't want long-term help. There is a 90 day program for them. If a homeless person gets a 2nd or 3rd shift job, there is a place for them to stay at MRM during the day. Transformation is integral their mission. MRM uses every opportunity to share Christ. Joy House is for women. Safe Harbor is for men. At Joy House single mothers and children can be part of the 6 month program, Fresh Start. They have the very same programs as the men do. Cross Trainers Academy is their school for children. It is a vocational school. MRM wants to equip and support families. There is a daycare on site.

Pastor Max Ramsey, from Immanuel Church of Brookfield, and Host Beverley Besha Moore talk about bringing hope to those who are homeless. Many of the people he works with are out of incarceration. The Kingdom is not about building walls on Sunday mornings. The work he does on the streets is not always "safe." Pastor Ramsey helps connect the homeless to resources they need. Those who are homeless often have a lack of resources. It can be the fruit of incarceration. Women of color and children can be homeless because of eviction. This is traumatic for the children. A huge number of kids in school are homeless. On any given day there are 1400 homeless persons. There are great resources but they are stretched. Many homeless are mentally ill or have a substance abuse issue. Poverty is a crushing lack of hope. Being homeless disconnects people from anyone who could help them. It is isolating. Those who minister to them must have the passion to do so. It is not easy work. They must be spiritually prepared or they will be swallowed whole. It is important to develop relationships with homeless persons. They want us to know they are fully human and that we are more alike than realized. If given bootstraps, they will pull themselves up. They are precious in God's sight. They want a roof over their heads, respect and a place in society.

Host Jeannette Richardson talks with Nancy Szudzik, Homeless Services & Major Nelson De La Vergne, Corps Officer of the Salvation Army, about services from prevention to permanent housing. There are many homeless- men, women & families. There aren't enough shelter beds for them. They are at capacity every day. There are different causes for being homeless. For men, substance abuse is a big one. Homelessness can occur because sometimes housing is just not available, a lack of education, untreated/undiagnosed mental illness or transportation. There is a misconception that all are lazy or addicted. Entry level jobs don't pay well enough to cover housing. People suffer a loss of dignity. No one wants to ask for help. Upon entering the shelter, people are assigned a social worker, who will discuss all aspects of being homeless- health care, employment, transportation, substance abuse, clothing, etc. A holistic approach is used. They see a lot of success. They do have a permanent housing unit that is always filled. It is important to fill the spiritual needs of the people. The Gospel is presented to show God cares for them. Their physical needs are met, then the spiritual.

CBN News Reporter Charlene Aaron Reports: The homeless population in Los Angeles County recently soared 23 percent over just the last year. According to the LA Times, the startling jump has touched every significant group, including youth, families, veterans and the chronically homeless. In 2015, Elvis Summers, who was once homeless himself, started tackling the problem, one tiny house at a time. It all started after he became friends with a woman named Irene McGhee, better known as Smokey. Irene had been homeless for 10 years, following the loss of her husband. That revelation moved Summers to build Smokey a place she could call home: a tiny home. It took five days to build the three-and-a-half by eight-foot house. Video of the construction went viral. Since then, Summers has raised more than $100,000 to build more of these house for people in his community. Although not officially recognized by the government, each of the tiny homes comes with its own personal address. Some local governments around the country are also using tiny homes to help their homeless populations. Tiny homes for the homeless are popping up from Chicago to Portland, Oregon, where the idea has grown to tiny house villages. But in Los Angeles, some officials see the small houses as nuisances with some saying they pose health and safety risks. Earlier this year the LA City Council moved to seize the homes without prior notice. Summers managed to move eight of them to Faith Community Church, but the people who lived in them were once again on the street. Tim Chambers pastors Faith Community Church. After months of backlash and media attention, the city said it is developing a process to work with non-profit groups, including Summers, to help those living on the streets. Meanwhile, Smokey recently passed away. He said that her memory motivates him to help others.

Pastor Dr. Michael Cokes Sr., City of Faith and Host Kelly Terry discuss freedom from drug abuse. He has had a lot of family member on drugs. Prescription drugs are frequently abused. People get them on the streets or steal them from others. People are suffering spiritually, emotionally and physically. Some know the LORD but are not as close as they could be to God. They then substitute this with drugs. This affects even very intelligent and smart people. They are turned inward, not outward. When facing difficult life issues, they look for a temporary fix. The family doesn't know how to handle it. Relationships, resources and responsibilities are affected. Pastor Cokes is going through training to be a counselor at church. He takes it as far as he can now, and then sends people to substance abuse agencies. Once someone gets set free, they may not be strong enough yet and can get enticed into abusing again. They need a strong relationship with God and a support team. The church needs to support those who are suffering. People in church need to share testimonies of God setting them free. People need to know they are not the only ones struggling. Pastor Cokes' own daughter was addicted. He discussed how they confronted her and got help for her. They were very transparent with the church during that time.

Host Beverley Beshia Moore discusses prevention, intervention & support with Sandi Lybert, Co-Founder & Katie Westerman, Educational Coordinator of Your Choice to Live. Sandi's son is a recovering addict. They lived through that devastation and decided to do something about it. Katie was very inspired by Sandi's story and began to collaborate on the programs offered. All the educational programs they have relay the power of prevention. Parents are the first line of defense. They educate parents. Intervention should be done early and support helps families to know where to go for help. When the Lyberts were going through this, they had nothing to go to. They have a program called the Wakeup Call. It is a bedroom model that shows red flags of drug use. It alerts parents what to look for and is very eye opening. It impresses upon parents that no one is immune, even if they are doing all the right things. Parents need to keep educating and monitoring their children. Sandi never thought it would happen to them. If kids hear about the risks from their parents, they are 50% less likely to abuse drugs. It is important to build supportive relationships, have consequences for actions, know their children's friends and their friend's parents, teach kids why they need to make healthy choices and explain the consequences. Sandi encourages those going through someone's substance abuse to never give up, have faith, don't lose hope and to take quiet time. They felt alone and shunned. Faith is important when everything else is falling apart. They turned their son over to God and that was life changing. They have made themselves available 24/7 to help others going through it.

Host Jeannette Richardson discusses help for exploited women with Deanne Lawson, Executive Director of Inner Beauty Center. Her husband was a pastor. The church was by a popular corner for prostitution. A woman came in and said God told her that the people in the church would help her if she would go in the there. (Prior to that, they had been ignoring the women.) She said should was being coerced. The church helped the woman return to her hometown. Sometimes people get into it by deception, sometimes through a grooming process and sometimes by force. Deanne went to a conference on human trafficking and realized the victims were on the church steps. There was a call to action. There is now a drop-in center for the victims. One of the women stood on the church steps for 10 years and Deanne apologized to her. Prostitution and human trafficking overlap. A number are addicted to drugs. Every week those in the ministry are on the streets attempting to make contact and to bring basic care items. They don't preach but will ask if they can pray with the victims. Victims will usually not come to the drop-in center unless they have developed a relationship with those in the ministry. There is also a mobile unit being started. If a victim tells them they want to get off the streets, a process is started to serve them in the best way and get them out of that neighborhood. It's all about money for the abusers. One of the women who was a prostitute for 30 years got out of it once her john was murdered and now she is a house mother.

CBN News Reporter Mark Martin Reports: Author and activist Erin Merryn is on a mission to protect children from being sexually abused. With millions of victims in the United States alone, the Illinois woman is taking her fight to all 50 states and beyond. People magazine named her one of 15 women changing the world. With a bubbly baby girl, supportive husband, and infectious personality, you'd never guess Erin Merryn has endured tragic, unimaginable acts. This vibrant 30-year-old is a survivor of sexual abuse. Merryn said it started when she was just 6 years old at her first sleep-over. She said the uncle of her best friend sexually abused her during the night. The first time. Merryn never told anyone, and she says until she turned 8 and a half, when her family moved from the area, the man repeatedly sexually abused her. He even brutally raped her just weeks shy of her seventh birthday. She said he continued to threaten her to keep quiet, and she complied. Even after she and her family moved to a new neighborhood, sexual abuse continued. Merryn said this time the perpetrator was an older cousin, someone she had viewed as a brother figure. Merryn wrote about her despair in her childhood diary. Merryn finally broke her silence when her younger sister told her that she, too, was being sexually abused by the same cousin. The two told their parents who believed them 100 percent. The next step was telling their story to a forensic investigator at The Children's Advocacy Center of North and Northwest Cook County. More than 900 of these non-profit centers exist around the country. The room where Merryn found her voice has a two-way mirror. As she shared her story with a trained therapist, behind that mirror investigators listened, collecting information to build a case against a perpetrator. Merryn said her cousin confessed to the crime, was sentenced to seven years probation, and put in a sex offender treatment program instead of receiving jail time. However, her early childhood abuser was never prosecuted. What Merryn and her sister went through is by no means isolated. Merryn eventually went on to become a social worker at a counseling agency. But God had different plans for her to help children and teens on a national and international level. He used her childhood diary to spark a new idea. At that, Erin's Law was born. The law requires age-appropriate personal body safety and sexual abuse prevention curriculum for pre-kindergarten through 12th grade students in public schools. It educates kids on safe touch, unsafe touch; safe secrets, unsafe secrets; how to get away and tell. Merryn is on a mission to find either a state senator or representative in each state to sponsor the bill, draft it, and introduce it to lawmakers for an eventual vote. Erin's Law is spreading like wildfire, even drawing the attention of celebrities like Oprah and Katie Couric, and magazines like People and Glamour. In a little more than four years it's passed in 21 states and pending in 22, with seven to go. It's a legacy she'll leave for her baby girl and millions of other children who, because of a law, will be protected from the grip of sexual abuse.

Minister Frank Woods Sr., Program Director of GENEIS in Milwaukee, Inc. and Host Beverley Besha Moore discuss ministering to prisoners. The Milwaukee area code 53206 is known nationally. Many living there are in prison. Minister Woods has a passion to reach them and see God transform them from the inside out. Being in prison is a game changer. Men have built up walls in their lives to protect themselves. Trust needs to be birthed through intimacy. Where there is a church that is incarcerated and on fire for God, there is godly sorrow and pain for the victims of their crimes. Minister Woods sees individuals transformed before his eyes. He shares with the men that he had to be reconciled with his father. He tells the men that God is interacting with His creation and everything in life should be centered around Him. Minister Woods went to Angola Prison in Louisiana and saw their discipleship program. He came back praying for the same transformational environment in Milwaukee and Wisconsin. Preparing men for re-entry starts from the inside out. They use 4 areas- spiritual renovation, family development, financial literacy & substance abuse. These are focused on 6-12 months before release. When released, they men go to a welcome center where others come alongside them to help them as returning citizens.

Minister Frank Woods Sr., Program Director of GENEIS in Milwaukee, Inc. and Host Beverley Besha Moore discuss ministering to returning citizens. Once at the gate they are met with family and others to help implement a re-entry plan. They will be have a mentor or life coach. The men need to get a job, learn to manage their money and to give back to the community. Each one has a tailored re-entry program. For someone who has been in prison for 30 years, everything on the outside will be different. They are frightened and scared. There is a welcome home stage to get re-acclimated in their return to society. It is very brief. The men will need to get housing and possibly a GED. Resources are brought to them to help them successfully return to society. There is a need for ongoing discipleship. They work with The Captive Project to help men study the Word and where applicable, serve the community through outreaches. Many men need to learn how to be godly fathers. Minister Woods believes the ministry is a conduit to help those who have committed a crime be reintegrated back into society. When successful, this lessons the recidivism rate.

Host Beverley Beshia Moore takes with Janice Gorden, Founder of Victims of Milwaukee, about help for those who have lost a loved one to violence. God laid it on her heart to help these victims. Most have no insurance if someone passes away. There is a burial fund assistance program for the families. They may also be able to get some help from the Crime Victim Compensation Program, administered through the state. Inmates contribute to the fund. Family members come to her or she gets a referral. Initially they don't trust her. She must show herself trustworthy and then they begin to trust. Ms. Gorden can refer them to mental health or grief support groups. She related how a woman whose son was murdered came to her and went to a grief support group. She was very grateful and over time started looking radiant. She has worked with families who lost a loved one that was a criminal. They are devastated because they can't bury them. Once they get past that, they can start grieving for their loss. The Christian response is to get past our thoughts and judgments. It was not the fault of the family. Citizens need to report criminal activities. Moms need to know what their kids are doing. Someone's life may be saved by reporting them.

If they return to the same area they came from, they need help to not recidivate. WOHM goes into institutions before they are released and builds relationships. Many of them will need help with getting a GED, substance abuse case management and job training. WOHM also works with the families. It is important to minister to ex-offenders as "the least of these." The staff at WOHM is very caring to help those in need and to help give them a life of hope. Some have never had a legitimate job before. Many will need a mentor to help them. They will need help with job interviewing skills and clothing. Host Beverley Beshia Moore talks with Krysta DeBoer about preparing & supporting urban school teachers. Krysta is the Executive Director of the Center for Urban Teaching, Inc. She talked about how she became involved in inner city schools. The Center has a summer school program which is the heart & soul of preparing teachers for inner city teaching. High performing teachers & leaders need to be identified. They hope to have 500 actively serving teachers by 2020. The ministry of urban teaching is a massive challenge & a great opportunity. Milwaukee is the #1 segregated city in the nation. It has the highest jobless rate for black males. It has a huge racial achievement gap. Black males have a 50% chance of graduating from high school & 10% for college. There is generational poverty & trauma. The schools need teachers who are prepared. The greater the challenge, the greater the opportunity to touch lives, shape character & impact eternity. To succeed, the #1 thing schools need is people- teachers. Schools are facing a massive teacher shortage. Enrollment is down by 30%. If a teacher comes in unprepared, they face fear, frustration, fatigue and failure. Teachers should find an organization dedicated to preparing them for the inner city. They can explore high performing urban models and find a coach or mentor. For a Christian, it is the difference between a career & a calling. Teachers need to ground themselves in God & His Word. Then they can love students unconditionally. They need to enter the profession on their knees or it will bring them to their knees.

CBN News Reporter Heather Sells Reports: President Donald Trump wants to budget an extra $20 million for school choice but the big question is—does it work? CBN News decided to visit a state where, after years of trial and error, school choice has begun to make a real difference in the lives of students and their families. At 8 o'clock every morning, the K-8 students at Paideia Academics, a public charter school in South Phoenix, recite their mission statement and sing about their education. A few miles away, students at the Arizona School for the Arts, another public charter school, work intently on their ballet technique in preparation for an upcoming school recital. And, at the Espiritu Schools, students are tackling math and getting ready for their next community service project. Service is a major value for the school. Executive Director Adrian Ruiz says Espiritu is very intentional about encouraging and teaching students to give back. Charter schools are a big part of the choice landscape in Arizona. More than 500 serve students across the state. In the 1990's, Arizona lawmaker Lisa Graham Keegan sponsored the original charter school bill and went on to become the state superintendent of public instruction from 1995 to 2001. Arizona, she says, has always been open to new ideas. The state started with open enrollment which allows students to choose their public school regardless of their address. Next came tuition-free charter schools and other strategic educational choice tools. A state voucher-type program, known as Empowerment Scholarship Accounts, provide money for educational accounts for parents ranging from $4,000 - $30,000 a year. Its goal is to help students with disabilities and those in low-performing public or charter schools to pay for an alternative private education. Tax credits are also available for those who contribute to private school scholarships. It's all part of a mix, according to Keegan, that not only helps children and their families but teachers as well. Dr. Brian Winsor, the principal at Paideia, greets his students every morning by name and with a handshake as they run onto the playground. After previously working in the state's public schools, he loves the freedom of running a charter. While the State Board for Charter Schools grades its schools and can ultimately shut them down if they fail to meet academic standards, Winsor says he has a great deal of flexibility. He recently switched the school's math curriculum within a matter of months when data showed it wasn't working well. He can also hire and fire as needed. Joanna De'Shay chose Paideia for its philosophy of using moral principles to educate the whole child. It especially helps in a low-income area like South Phoenix she says. As a bonus, an on-site family resource center at the school links families in need with social services and counseling. De'Shay, a school board member, says parents who come and tour the school often cannot believe that it's tuition-free. Cynthia Moraga is an Espiritu parent who discovered the school after an intensive search to help her daughter who was struggling at her public school after suffering from a concussion. School choice made all the difference she says. Ultimately she chose Espiritu for its charter board "A" rating, attentiveness to her daughter and community service focus. Phoenix-based educational entrepreneur Jaime Martinez founded Schola Solutions to help parents like Moraga who are searching for the best school for their child. Accessibility is a downside of school choice that even Education Secretary Betsy VeVos, an ardent advocate for school choice, has noted. Martinez has developed a search engine to help parents explore and navigate their options. He believes that despite the current political climate, the timing is right for education reform. Martinez says that millennial parents are realizing that traditional educational models don't always work for their kids and are looking for and demanding options. In Arizona, after decades of work, school choice is on the rise. Keegan notes that in the last five years, 100,000 families have moved their children from low to high-performing schools. She credits a mix of educational options and the state's strategy of closing charter schools that don't perform and encouraging the ones that do to replicate themselves. In South Phoenix, the strategy has paid off. Keegan calls it a "golden corridor" – which in Arizona education circles means an area that was previously known for its under-performing schools – transformed into an area known for its high educational offerings. That kind of scenario, she says, is the goal and hope, of school choice.

Mike Thirtle, President and CEO of Bethesda Lutheran Communities and Host Beverley Besha Moore discuss helping those with disabilities live well. Bethesda serves those with intellectual and developmental disabilities, which can include Down Syndrome, autism and traumatic brain injury. People are taken care of in residential settings and they participate in devotions. Bethesda started 100 years ago and were ahead of the curve on moving people out of institutions and into the community. People can be integrated by living, working and going to church in the community. There are Bible studies in the homes and local Pastors teach them. The front line staff are providing services to those with disabilities. It can be challenging, but very rewarding. There is a challenge finding and keeping people willing to carry out the mission.

Host Beverley Besha Moore discusses heart awareness and stroke prevention with Dr. Felicia Robertson, an Aurora Health Care Physician. The leading cause of premature death is smoking. Excessive weight and obesity are common causes of unhealthy patients. Plaque buildup is a risk factor for heart disease, even in children. Dr. Robertson spoke on blood sugar control, blood pressure, elevated cholesterol, waist diameter & exercise. There are fewer people smoking and there is a decline in the number of heart attacks and strokes. They are 80% preventable. There are still 1 million yearly. Prevention includes eating more fruits and vegetables and getting enough potassium and calcium. Salt consumption should be less than 1500 milligrams daily. With a heart attack there is usually left side discomfort and squeezing. Women can have atypical symptoms. A physician should be consulted about changes in health. God is concerned about our total health. The challenge is to take care of ourselves. We need to find things we enjoy doing. A stroke is a brain attack. Symptoms include facial asymmetry and speaking issues. If these occur 911 should be called. If there is time, it is recommended to chew an aspirin. This will be one of the first things given at the ER. It is a clot buster. If there is concern about a heart attack or stroke without acute symptoms, a doctor should be seen.

Host Beverley Besha Moore and Dr. Felicia Robertson, an Aurora Health Care physician, discuss the topic: Public Health Care Crisis: Domestic Violence. Domestic violence occurs when anyone in an intimate partner relationship is harmed by the other person. It does not discriminate. It is an epidemic. In church people (victims) put on their masks. It is important for leaders to discuss the possibility of it. Church leaders can also be affected by it. Ten million children experience it (in their homes.) The statistics of the number abused come only from those who admit it. Survivors often feel guilt, shame and embarrassment. Physicians are often on the frontline. They see people with black eyes, bruises & sprains and their stories are not matching up. It's important that the victims know they are not at fault. They need to be safe. They can call a hotline or go to a shelter. They need to know they are fearfully and wonderfully made and are not a punching bag. When Dr. Robertson sees someone with the symptoms she will help to get them into counseling and give them shelter information. Dr. Robertson has a Facebook page where she educates outside of her office.

Host Jeannette Richardson talks with Nancy Szudzik, Homeless Services at the Salvation Army, about health care for the homeless. They suffer from many medical issues. It is difficult to make appointments, to get them, and to make the co-pay. It is an added difficulty when not having an address, phone or email. Mental illness is a big concern. That is what keeps many homeless. They need to see a professional and take medications to be stable. There is a shortage of doctors who can prescribe these. It may take 3 months to be seen after calling for an appointment. The homeless medical clinic is free to anyone coming in. They traditionally treat the uninsured. They partner with a health care provider for the services. A lot of homeless have chronic illnesses- high blood pressure, diabetes, asthma & heart disease. These can cause problems if untreated. Respite care is offered. People may be discharged from a facility and have nowhere to go. A nurse will provide follow up care. They can then transition into a shelter or housing. As Christians, we need to realize homeless persons may have suffered traumatic events and we should not judge them. They are not all drug addicts or criminals. This is a misconception. They may have been a professional person who had a breakdown and ended up in a shelter. They are human beings with feelings.

Today on the Dr. Leaf Show, Dr. Caroline Leaf is joined by Dr. Avery M. Jackson, III, a board-certified neurosurgeon, with complex spine fellowship training, to discuss Osteoporosis. There are two types of Osteoporosis. There's primary osteoporosis and then there's secondary. Primary osteoporosis is specifically when there's a change in menopause, postmenopausal. Secondary osteoporosis is due to diabetes. Inactivity is another. Lifestyle choices such as smoking, and drinking alcoholic beverages, can also cause osteoporosis. There's a whole host of other disease processes that can cause secondary osteoporosis, like thyroid issues. Certain medications are very helpful that are anabolic or that help to build bone. But, likewise, you can really focus on the diet side and exercise. Your diet, your exercise and your water intake are really important pieces.

Today on the Dr. Leaf Show, Dr. Caroline Leaf is joined by Dr. Avery M. Jackson, III, a board-certified neurosurgeon, and a Christian, to discuss how prayer activates your brain and benefits the people you pray for. Ninety-nine percent of his patients are more than happy to pray prior to surgery, and more often than not, when they believe, it had a very calming effect on the patients and the families very much are touched. Dr. Avery explains that prayer is a form of conversation with God in various ways. When we pray and the spiritual energy of God moves from the throne of Grace, it changes whatever it hits and that change physically results in structural change in our brain. Dr. Leaf shared that it has been found that twelve minutes of daily focus prayer over an eight-week period can change the brain to such an extent that it can be measured on a brain scan.

Today on the Dr. Leaf Show, Dr. Caroline Leaf is joined by Dr. Avery M. Jackson, III, a neurosurgeon and spinal surgeon, and Dr. Jeffrey Schwartz, a neuroscientist and psychiatrist, to discuss taking responsibility for our thought lives. Dr. Leaf explains that only a few decades ago scientists considered the brain to be a fixed and hardwired machine. This view saw the damaged brain as incurable and the focus was compensation and not restoration of function. However, research shows that we can change the physical nature of our brain through our thinking and choosing as we consciously direct our thinking. We can wire our toxic patterns of thinking and replace them with healthy new thoughts - and new thought networks grow. We can increase our intelligence and bring healing to our minds and physical bodies. It all starts in the realm of the mind with our ability to think and feel and choose. Not everyone is aware of the power they have because we are so conditioned by society and the media. Dr. Jeffrey recommends taking time for reflection. Learn how to veto some of the onslaught of sensory information, sensory overload that floods your brain. Learn how to make choices and decisions. That is the power of the mind, choices and decisions about what to focus on in consultation with the wise advocate, your Holy Spirit.

Today on the Dr. Leaf Show, Dr. Caroline Leaf explains that she is frequently asked about what happens to the brain and the mind when one suffers a brain injury of some sort. The first part of her answer is that the mind and the brain are separate and that the mind controls the brain. We also know the brain can change and grow with experience and stimulation. However, the human mind works through the substrate of the physical brain, and therefore, if there is brain damage from trauma of some sort, this will affect how the mind functions, which we see in the person's cognitive, emotional, social, intellectual, and behavioral functioning. The human brain is attached to the spinal cord in such a way that it's not fixed in one position, but it's flexible and can move around the skull. This means that any impact to the head will jog the brain and cause shockwaves to move throughout the brain, causing different types of brain damage. Furthermore, any impact will cause the brain to literally bounce off the walls of the skull, resulting in additional damage. There are many different ways this can happen, including car, motorbike and bike accidents, falls, war, and, of course, sports injuries. The subsequent damage is classified either as traumatic brain injury, shortened to TBI, or chronic traumatic encephalopathy, shortened to CTE, based on the type of impact. TBI and CTE have similarities and differences on the neurological, cognitive, emotional, and behavioral levels. Dr. Caroline is joined by Dr. Dr. Avery M. Jackson, III, a board-certified neurosurgeon, to discuss these differences. On the CTE side, prevention is really the key. It's really important to follow those traumatic-head-injury guidelines and prevention. Attitude is massive and really makes a difference. If they have the injury and there is a cognitive deficit, it's going to be important to really work on memory and there are a lot of memory techniques.

Today on the Dr. Leaf Show, Dr. Caroline Leaf asks the question: "If love is the most powerful force in the world, then why does communication between man and woman often feel more like war than love?" Nowhere is this more painfully evident than in the relationship designed to be filled with love, the bond between a husband and a wife. Divorce, separation, and ugly breakups leave lasting wounds that take time to heal, wounds that go beyond the man and the woman and impact the entire family as a whole. Because God created families as the foundation of society, it's not an overstatement to say that the future of the world depends on our ability to love and understand one another. Dr. Leaf and her guests, her husband Mac, and good friends, Mel and Desiree Ayres, discuss some of the challenges they experienced in their marriage as well as pearls of wisdom. Dr. Leaf explains that God has called us to help each other and that understanding male and female brain differences can help us to immerse each other in love.

Today on the Dr. Leaf Show, the topic is "Eating Disorders." Dr. Caroline Leaf explains that much research is focused on how negative, destructive emotions contribute to anorexia, bulimia, and other disorders. These are seen as emotional eating patterns. Yet, there's been a sore lack of research that could help gain insight into how positive emotions are distorted by those suffering with these life-threatening disorders, which have a death rate up to 12 times higher than all other causes of death combined for females between the ages of 15 and 24. Dr. Leaf is joined by her daughter Jessica and Pastor Desiree Ayres who discuss their experience going through eating disorders. Dr. Leaf shares that research shows the more you immerse someone in love, the more courage they have to actually face their issues and to look critically at the way they're dealing with the issue. An eating disorder is classified in the DSM as a disease. A disease implies that it is something that is biologically wrong and controls you and you don't have control; it is genetically in your genes. However, that has actually never been proven. Ultimately, Jessica and Pastor Desiree made the choice to overcome their eating disorder, with loving support and their faith in Jesus Christ and the power of His word.

CBN News Reporter Lorie Johnson Reports: Hippocrates, the father of medicine, once said, "All disease begins in the gut." Now, 2,000 years later, that belief still rings true. Some of our latest medical breakthroughs focus on what's happening in our intestinal system. Bacteria, also known as bugs or germs, we assume they're all bad, right? Not so fast. Scientists recently discovered much, if not most, of the bacteria in our body is good for us. The key to good health depends on having enough of the right kind. We all have trillions of bacteria living in our intestines—hundreds of different species, each with different functions. Scientists call it our "gut flora." Neurologist Dr. David Perlmutter, author of "Brain Maker" is one of many physicians warning against disrupting this fragile ecosystem. Dr. Vincent Pedre, author of "Happy Gut," agrees. Unfortunately, when it comes to good gut bacteria, many of us are sorely lacking. After all, antibiotics kill bacteria—bad and good. Perlmutter says most people have no idea how severely antibiotics damage our gut flora. In addition to antibiotics, processed food can also disrupt the gut biome. Perlmutter says processed foods contain heavy doses of the wrong kinds of fat, like heated oils such as soybean, corn and vegetable oils. He also advises against consuming hydrogenated oils, also known as trans fats, which are common in processed foods. However, he points out not all fat is bad. Even babies delivered by Caesarian section can miss out on getting enough good bacteria. So while our lifestyle choices really do a number on the gut bacteria that's so critical to our health, the good news is we can improve it with probiotics and prebiotics. Probiotics are the good bacteria we need and often lack. You can find these living, microscopic organisms in supplements as well as in cultured and fermented foods like kim chee, sauerkraut, yogurt, kefir and kombucha. Prebiotics are the food for the probiotics - they keep probiotics living and growing as they should. Just like good soil, they create a nurturing environment in your gut so your bacteria can thrive. You can get prebiotics in supplement form as well as in foods, like asparagus, onions, leeks, garlic and dandelion greens. Perlmutter says many people are only aware of the benefits of probiotics, but he stresses prebiotics are equally important. Not only can it help your mood — Perlmutter says even serious brain disorders, like attention deficit hyperactivity disorder, autism, even Alzheimer's disease can improve by increasing good bacteria. That's because they help make neurotransmitters and vitamins while at the same time aid in reducing harmful inflammation. And not just the brain. Scientists are now identifying specific strains of good bacteria that treat all kinds of problems, from skin rashes to the flu. That means a targeted probiotic could take the place of a prescribed drug. Pedre says that opens the door to a wide range of natural treatments. So if you want to boost your health, doctors say improve your gut flora. That means avoiding processed foods, even antibacterial cleansers and antibiotics when advisable. Then add good bacteria with probiotics and boost them with prebiotics, also available as supplements or in certain foods.
