It is becoming very prevalent in the middle school age group. It is not an illegal activity so kids are willing to talk about it. Becky discussed what signs might indicate a child is involved in this. Parents need to talk with their children about this "game" and educate about the dangers of it.

Youth are bombarded by mixed messages, making it harder for them to make healthy decisions. Decisions such as smoking, drinking, early sexual activity, etc. can seriously affect lives. Most youth don't think the consequences apply to them, so they need to be told over and over about them. Youth are capable of making good decisions. It is important to raise the expectations and build assets in them, which will help avoid the pitfalls of unhealthy decisions and reap the benefits of making healthy decisions.

Media often presents youth with the idea of having an ideal body. This contributes to eating disorders, low self-esteem and even affects their projection of their future and careers. Girls in particular are targeted with ads that promote thinness, objectification, powerlessness, shopping and over sexualization. This can lead to other negative behaviors. Girls, boys and parents need to be given tools to analyze commercial content. They need to learn to make decisions based on who they are, not what others think they should be.

There are 3 basic types- anorexia, bulimia and compulsive eating. They are serious health issues. Youth are particularly susceptible to media influence that says "thin is in.", with a strong focus on outward appearance. Parents should educate themselves about eating disorders and not ignore symptoms in their children. Getting professional help is necessary.

Heather Sells, CBN News Reporter: The City of Brotherly Love is squaring off with a long-time ally -- the Boy Scouts of America. At issue: the Scout's 80-year-old headquarters building in downtown Philadelphia and the right of the Scouts to ban homosexuals from leadership. The City of Philadelphia says it will evict the Boy Scouts from their headquarters on June 1 if they don't change their policy banning homosexuals. The city says it told the Boy Scouts last June that they either need to stop "discriminating" and abide by the city's fair practice ordinance or get out of the building. Several conservative groups including the ACLJ, Conservative Defense Alliance, and the Conservative Leadership PAC have launched a campaign to support the Boy Scouts. The Cradle of Liberty Council told CBN that it's considering its options and a First Amendment action is one of them. But it remains hopeful that the matter can be resolved without litigation. Philadelphia joins several other cities including Berkeley and San Diego, CA that have recently challenged the Scout's use of public facilities. CBN host Pat Robertson meets with Governor Rick Perry (Texas) and talks about the Boys Scout issue. Boy Scouts have impacted young boys in a positive way but the law suits are negatively affecting them. There have been many issues and now this latest one. They discuss his book "On My Honor" to help the Scouts; they discuss the Supreme Court case fought over the Scouts. They discuss the Polygamist controversy and 416 children – some abused – in Texas. Texas moved in appropriately and we're getting these children in safe places so they can get on with their lives.

CBN News Charlene Israel reports on the quest for happiness being older than America itself. For some that means having more money; a recent Gallup pool found that 90 percent of people who make at least $250,000 a year say they are "very happy" compared to only 42 percent of those who make less than $30,000. 700 Club Host Pat Robertson talks with Arthur Brooks, author of Gross National Happiness about those who take their families seriously, faith seriously are the happiness. If we can be successful and creating happiness for others that will be the work that will give us enduring joy. The negative effect of government policy is also discussed and the "nanny state" that does not work – the data shows the more control we have in our individual lives the happier we'll be.

Tim Branson interviews 'Supernanny' Jo Frost about raising babies and being a confident parent. A confident parent is one who is able to make decisions, and in doing so, remain consistent, follow through, and see results. I want to encourage parents to keep talking, and certainly there are parents who are on their own and raising infants single handedly. It is important to talk about reaching out to your extended family and your friends, and feeling okay to reach out. It is okay for moms to want a break and to do that. The baby needs you to be healthy so that you can give all it needs and be ready for the demands of a newborn.

Scott Ross 700 Club talks with George Foreman on Fatherhood. You look up one day you're a teenager, the next day you're a grandfather and you think, "I sure hope my kids don't make the same mistakes." We have ten kids, five sons, five daughters. You know when you've been a successful parent, when each of your kids come to you individually and say, "Look, I need a little time to myself. Let me have my life." And they think they're telling me off, but it's a thing of pride when they tell me, "I've been in their life long enough, give them some space." You've got to look for all the things, the qualities in one kid. The best thing that happened to me was finding a good wife who understood that children are not just something you can have today. In raising children life brings forth those things where you do what you should never have done and what I taught you never to do. When my kids have done those things, I just say "Now you know life." When you're raising children, you've got to understand that you've got to put certain things first. Time is number one, embracing is number two, and never allowing them out of your life.
