CHILDREN'S SUMMER WORKSHOP AT HRT SET TO BEGIN IN JULY

Harnett Regional Theatre is scheduled to present their 2003 Children's Summer Workshop at the Stewart Theatre in Dunn, July 7 through 26.

Daily workshops will be held Monday through Friday from 1 to 5 pm. Children ages 8 to 18 are encouraged to participate in the workshop. Workshop tuition is $195.00 per student. However, in the past we have been able to reduce the tuition to $150.00 per student due to the generosity of people who provide tax-deductible donations to help fray the cost of each student. Donations of any amount may be sent to: HRT Children's Summer Workshop, P.O. Box 1471, Dunn, NC 28335.

Jim Martz, a teacher of theatre arts in the Wake County School System, will serve as the director for the fourth consecutive year. He will be assisted by Hope Overby and Lora Black, teachers at "Alicia's School of Performing Arts" in Benson.

During the workshop the students will learn how to apply skills for plays and educational needs. The workshop includes onsite choreography, costuming, guest speakers, theatrical makeup, auditions, stage and performing lighting, total theatrical production skills and live stage performances on Friday, July 25 and Saturday, July 26. The play we plan to perform this summer is "The Music Man". In addition we have planned a swimming party for Friday, July 18th at the Keith Hills swimming pool from 7:00-9:00 pm

All students interested in registering for the Summer Workshop should request an application by contacting Alice Beidler at (910) 897-7188 or Lynn Godwin at (910) 892-1061 or (910) 892-9118.

ATLANTIC AND GULF COASTS AT RISK FOR CASTROPHIC STORMS MORE PEOPLE MOVE INTO HARM'S WAY RESULTING IN HIGHER INSURANCE COSTS, WARNS THE I.I.I.

THE 2003 HURRICANE SEASON PREDICTED TO BE SEVERE

The I.I.I. Offers Insurance and Safety Tips

*Elizabeth
Moseley*

NEW YORK, June 30, 2003 – Coastal areas have seen a population boom of over 31 percent in the last 30 years. With more than 68 million people now living in hurricane-vulnerable locations, a major storm could be catastrophic and cause billions of dollars in property damage, warns the Insurance Information Institute (I.I.I.)

The Atlantic and Gulf coasts are at high risk during hurricane season, which runs through November. The risk of severe windstorms and high property values make Florida the state with greatest exposure to losses. New York's Long Island and coastal areas of Texas and South Carolina are also at risk during hurricane season and have experienced tremendous increases in population and development.

To make private insurance available and more affordable in hurricane-prone locations, 17 states allow insurers to use catastrophe deductibles for hurricanes and windstorms. They are in the form of a percentage rather than a dollar deductible. Catastrophe deductibles range from 1 percent to 15 percent of the home's insured value. A coastal resident with a home insured for $200,000 could be responsible for at least $2,000 and perhaps as much as $30,000 worth of storm damage before the insurance kicks in. In some states, consumers have a "buy back" option, and can pay a higher premium in exchange for a dollar deductible. There may also be the option of a supplemental policy that will cover the deductible.

Colorado State University hurricane researcher Professor William Gray predicts "higher than average hurricane activity this year with 14 named storms of which eight are expected to be hurricanes, three of them intense." A storm is named when it reaches tropical storm strength with winds of 39 mph. A storm becomes a hurricane when its wind speed reaches 75mph.

Hurricane Andrew, which struck in August of 1992, caused $15.5 billion in insured property damage making it the most costly natural insured catastrophe in U.S. history. It is estimated that if it had hit Miami (which was only 20 miles away), the cost could have exceed $50 billion.

Over the past 10 years, insurers paid out more than $100 billion in catastrophe-related losses—about $700 million per month—many times more than in previous decades. Catastrophes include well-known events such as Hurricane Andrew and the Northridge earthquake, but also hundreds of smaller disasters associated with tropical storms, wildfires, hail, and snow. The extraordinary costs associated with these disasters is one of the primary reasons for the rising cost of homeowners insurance which is estimated to go up 9 percent in 2003, according to research conducted by the Institute.

Increasingly, the insurance industry has focused on measures that prevent or reduce damage caused by natural disasters. Insurers have formed a new organization, the Insurance Building Code Coalition, to press for stronger, standardized building codes nationwide and proper enforcement. An added advantage of a uniform code is that adjusters and building inspectors trained in one part of the state can be deployed to help in other parts that suffer a disaster, thus expediting the rebuilding process. Through the Institute for Business & Home Safety (IBHS) www.ibhs.org, insurers are supporting a program, "Fortified. for safer living," to protect lives and property through code-plus construction that better withstands natural disasters. In hurricane-prone regions, this means increasing the structure's ability to withstand high wind, and decreasing the chance flying debris will penetrate doors and windows. Once wind gets in, a home faces pressure from the inside as well as the outside, multiplying its chance of destruction and destroying the home's interior and contents in the process.

Windstorms are covered by standard homeowners, renters and mobile home policies and include:

- The cost of rebuilding the home

- Replacing personal items
- Reimbursement for additional living expenses and lost rental income.

"The very real threat of severe windstorms is why we need insurance. It provides financial protection for disasters that most people would not be able to afford on their own," says the I.I.I.'s Vice President of Consumer Affairs, Jeanne M. Salvatore. "Insurance prices are going up in part because of the increased cost of reinsurance, construction and repairs and because more people live in places prone to catastrophes."

The I.I.I. suggests that consumers:

- Review insurance coverage now: Make sure it is up-to-date with major additions, alterations or lifestyle changes. Maintain enough insurance to rebuild your home and replace everything in it and ask about:
- Replacement cost coverage for personal possessions: This pays to replace items without a reduction for depreciation.
- Guaranteed or extended replacement cost: If available, these policies provide additional protection over and above the cost to rebuild the home.
- Inflation guard: Adjusts the rebuilding costs to reflect changes in costs.
- Building code upgrade: Also referred to as ordinance or law, this would pay to rebuild a home to today's tougher building codes if a home is damaged or destroyed by a hurricane or other insured disaster.
- Water back-up: Insures property for damage caused by the back-up of sewers or drains.
- Consider flood insurance: Ninety percent of disasters involve some form of flooding. Damage from flooding is not covered under standard homeowners or business insurance policies. Instead, it is available from the federal government's National Flood Insurance Program

- www.nfip.gov Coverage is available from insurance agents or company representatives. Claims are handled with the same insurance professional. It is also available for renters and condominiums or co-op owners. There is a 30-day waiting period.

- Create your own disaster preparedness plan: The Federal Emergency Management Agency www.fema.gov suggests that disaster preparedness plans be simple and easy to remember and suggests that residents:
- Have an emergency preparedness kit: This should include a battery-operated radio, flashlight with extra batteries, prescription medications, first aid kit, emergency food and water, cash, sturdy shoes and a change of cloths.
- Post emergency contact numbers near the phone to make it easy during an emergency: List school and workplace numbers, as well as fire, police, ambulance and family or friends who may be helpful in an emergency. Teach children how to use this information.
- Learn how to shut off utilities: Review this with family and place reminder notes to make it simple in an emergency.
- Identify a family meeting place: If loved ones become separated in a disaster, they need to know exactly where to meet. Decide on this location ahead of time. Ask an out-of-state relative or friend to serve as the family contact and make sure that everyone knows the number.
- Plan escape routes ahead of time: If the local or national authorities suggest evacuation, heed the warning and leave as soon as possible. It can be difficult to leave many densely populated areas – especially during the summer tourist seasons. Plan what to do with pets ahead of time.

Consumers who need additional information should contact their insurance professional and check the I.I.I.'s website at www.iii.org or call the National Insurance Consumer Helpline at 800-942-4242.

Dear Ron:

This year Habitat for Humanity of Harnett County celebrates its tenth anniversary of successfully endeavoring to provide decent and affordable housing for Harnett County families in need. Habitat's success is attributable to the generosity of individuals like you who provide the funds for home construction. Since the beginning in 1993, persons like you have enabled Habitat to build one house each year.

Habitat is a non-profit ecumenical Christian housing ministry that seeks to eliminate substandard housing in Harnett County by making decent shelter a matter of conscience coupled with action. Habitat provides a hand-up rather than a hand-out. Homes are built with volunteer labor, materials purchased through your generosity, and 500 hours of "sweat equity" provided by the new homeowner and his or her family.

Habitat is guided by the Biblical admonition found in Exodus 22:25. Habitat homeowners purchase their new home through an interest-free mortgage. The accumulated mortgage payments from all the homeowners goes back into the agency budget and, along with your assistance, helps to build yet another home. Habitat is not a give away program----it is a working partnership between volunteers, contributors, and homeowners.

Monika Johnson Hostler, director

The NC Coalition Against Sexual Assault is an inclusive statewide alliance working to end sexual violence through education, advocacy, and legislation.

History

The North Carolina Coalition Against Sexual Assault (NCCASA) was first organized in 1986. What began with a retreat for rape crisis advocates in 1986, grew into the establishment of a Board of Directors in 1987, and in 1988, NCCASA officially became incorporated. In 1996, NCCASA hired its first Executive Director, who helped NCCASA grow into the professional agency that it is today. With this leadership, and the continued dedication of the NCCASA members and staff, NCCASA has become a powerful voice across the state of North Carolina.

NCCASA Working for You on a Local Level

- Providing information, referrals, and resources to individuals, rape crisis programs, and other organizations
- Supporting rape crisis programs and other individuals in their efforts to address sexual violence in their communities
- Advocating for local rape crisis programs
- Creating networking opportunities for those involved in the rape crisis movement

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE: JUNE 26 2003

You Make the Call: The FTC's New Telemarketing Sales Rule

The Federal Trade Commission's (FTC) amended Telemarketing Sales Rule (TSR) puts consumers in charge of the number of telemarketing calls they get at home. The amended Rule created the National Do Not Call Registry, which makes it easier and more efficient for consumers to stop getting telemarketing sales calls they don't want.

How can I put my number on the National Do Not Call Registry?

Consumers will be able to register for free in two ways: online or by telephone. Online registration for the National Do Not Call Registry will be available to consumers coast-to-coast on June 27, 2003. Telephone registration will open for consumers in states west of the Mississippi River—including Minnesota and Louisiana—on the same date. On July 7, 2003, telephone registration will be available to the entire country. As of October it will be illegal for most telemarketers to call a number listed on the registry.

When will the National Do Not Call Registry take effect?

The FTC and the states will begin enforcing the National Do Not Call Registry on October 1, 2003. That's the when consumers already on the registry will notice a downturn in the number of telemarketing calls they get.

What does registration entail?

If you register by phone, you must call from the number you want to register. If you register online, you must provide an email address for confirmation. You will have to open an email and click on a link in it for your online registration to be complete. The only identifying information that will be kept in the registry will be the phone number you register. You can expect fewer calls within three months of the date you sign up for the registry.

B'zzt Jun 8/3/03

How does the National Do Not Call Registry work?

Your number will stay in the registry for five years, until it is disconnected, or until you delete it from the registry. After five years, you will have to renew your registration.

The law requires telemarketers to search the registry every three months and synchronize their call lists with the phone numbers that are on the registry. If you receive telemarketing calls after you have registered your telephone number and it has been in the registry for three months, you can file a complaint. You will have to know the company's name or phone number to file a do not call complaint. A telemarketer who disregards the National Do Not Call Registry could be fined up to $11,000 for each call.

Will the National Do Not Call Registry cover all telemarketing calls?

Placing your number on the National Do Not Call Registry will stop most telemarketing calls, but not all. Some businesses are exempt and can call you even if you place your number on the national registry. Political organizations, charities, telephone surveyors, and the business of insurance to the extent that it is regulated by state law are permitted to call you.

Organizations with which you have an established business relationship can call you for up to 18 months after your last purchase, payment or delivery—even if your name is on the National Do Not Call Registry. And companies to which you've made an inquiry or submitted an application can call you for three months. However, your request to a company not to call you trumps an existing business relationship. That is, if you ask a company not to call you, it must honor your request, regardless of an established business relationship.

If you place your number on the national registry, you may still give written permission to particular companies that you want to hear from. And if you don't put your number on the national registry, you can still prohibit individual telemarketers from calling, one by one, by asking them to put you on their company's do not call list.

One more important point: Although callers soliciting charitable contributions do not have to search the national registry, a for-profit telemarketer calling on behalf of a charitable organization must honor your request to be on the charity's do not call list.

What if I'm on my state's do not call list?

Most of the 27 states that have active do not call lists will transfer the numbers from their lists to the National Do Not Call Registry. A current list of states transferring their do not call lists to the national registry will be posted at www.ftc.gov/donotcall. Consumers in states that are transferring their do not call lists to the national registry do not need to re-register. But consumers in states that have their own do not call lists, but are not transferring numbers to the national registry should register their number on the national registry if they choose to limit the number of telemarketing calls they get at home.

Are there other protections against unwanted telemarketing calls?

The Telemarketing Sales Rule prohibits deceptive and abusive telemarketing acts and practices and protects consumers from unwanted late-night telemarketing calls:

- Calling times are restricted to the hours between 8 a.m. and 9 p.m.
- Telemarketers must promptly tell you the identity of the seller or charitable organization and—before they make their pitch—that the call is a sales call or a charitable solicitation.
- Telemarketers must disclose all material information about the goods or services they are offering and the terms of the sale. They are prohibited from lying about any terms of their offer.

In addition to creating the National Do Not Call Registry, the amended TSR:Restricts unauthorized billing.

Before billing charges to your credit card account, telemarketers must get your express informed consent to be charged—and to charge to a specific account. If a telemarketer has your account information before the call and offers you goods or services on a free trial basis before charging you automatically—this is known as a “free-to-pay conversion” offer—the telemarketer must get your permission to use a particular account number, then ask you to confirm the number by repeating the last four digits, and, for your protection, record the entire phone transaction.

Reduces abandoned calls.

Starting October 1, 2003, telemarketers will be required to connect their call to a sales representative within two seconds of the consumer's greeting. This will reduce the number of "dead air" or hang-up calls you get from telemarketers. These calls result from the use of automatic dialing equipment that sometimes reaches more numbers than there are available sales representatives. In addition, when the telemarketer doesn't have a representative standing by, a recorded message must play to let you know who's calling and the number they're calling from. The law prohibits a sales pitch. And to give you time to answer the phone, the telemarketer may not hang up before 15 seconds or four rings.

Requires caller ID transmission.

Beginning January 29, 2004, telemarketers must transmit their telephone number and if possible, their name, to your caller ID service. This will protect your privacy, increase accountability on the telemarketer's part, and help in law enforcement efforts.

FIRESTORM [BOOK]

Preventing and Overcoming Church Conflict

In Firestorm: Preventing and Overcoming Church Conflicts, author Ron Susek writes that the first and worst casualty of all church turmoil is the gospel of Jesus Christ.

Ron, who served as an interim pastor for a church whose numbers were reduced by two-thirds and left without a pastor, is available as a speaker to pastors' seminars, church conferences and the local church. He has spoken on the subject of church conflict across North America and internationally.

President of the Susek Evangelistic Association for thirty-five years, Ron's heartbeat is for churches to return to the simple basics of the Christian faith. It is Ron's prayer that through this book God will help bring the church out of conflict and into conformity with Christ's prayer that we become one as He and the Father are one (John 17:22).

Subject: 101 Smart Questions to Ask on an Interview -- Interviews with Ron Fry available

Lottie Squires
 Host
 Public Affairs Interview

Hi Lottie -

Most job candidates, author Ron Fry contends, think of the interview as a one-way process, preparing endlessly for all the questions they are sure will come their way. In this companion to his best-selling 101 Great Answers to the Toughest Interview Questions, he shows how the job interview is actually a two-way street-that the questions you ask are just as important as the answers you give.

In 101 Smart Questions to Ask on your Interview, Fry shows you how to take charge of the interview process, and in so doing, present yourself as the self-managing, versatile, and confident individual most employers seek. Fry demonstrates how to use the interview process to sell the company on you while obtaining necessary information to make sure you are sold on them.

Asking questions the smart way will also proclaim that you are interested in the job. Silence or lack of questions indicates disinterest or apathy. So don't become tongue tied in the most crucial phase of the interview process. Gain the job seeker's advantage with 101 Smart Questions to Ask on Your Interview no matter what your age, your experience, or your goals may be.

About the Author

Ron Fry is the best-selling author of 101 Great Answers to the Toughest Interview Questions and the brand new editions of 101 Great Resumes, Your First Interview, and Your First Resume (all from Career Press), four of the more than 40 books he's written. He is an acknowledged authority, frequent speaker, and seminar leader on a wide variety of job-search topics, at schools and associations nationwide.

Smart Questions to Ask During Your Interview

Questions about the company

- * Will you be entering any new markets in the next couple of years? Which ones and via what types of distribution channels?
- * How many employees work for the organization? In how many offices? In this office?
- * What major problems or challenges have you recently faces? How were they addressed? What results do you expect?

- * What is your hiring philosophy?
- * What do you like best about this company? Why?

Questions about the department

- * Could you explain the organizational structure of the department and its primary functions and responsibilities?
- * With which other departments would I work most closely?
- * What are the department's current goals and objectives?

Questions about the job

- * What kind of training should I expect and for how long?
- * How many people will be reporting to me?
- * Could you describe a typical day in this position?
- * Does this job usually lead to other positions in the company? Which ones?

Questions about the next step

- * How many other candidates have you interviewed? How many more will you be interviewing before you expect to make a decision?
- * With whom will I be meeting next? What issues are important to each of them? What are they like?

Subject: Go To College For Almost Free - interviews available with Ben Kaplan

Lottie Squires
 Producer
 Public Affairs Interview

Hi Lottie -

Why pay for college when you can go almost for free? THE SCHOLARSHIP SCOUTING REPORT An Insider's Guide to America's Best Scholarships is a true beacon of hope in this era of skyrocketing tuition costs, Ben Kaplan, age 25, has helped tens of thousands of students attend colleges they never thought they could afford by showing them how to find and win scholarship money. Now the celebrated author of How to Go to College Almost for Free has rolled up his sleeves once more to push scholarship science to the next level. The result is his groundbreaking guidebook, THE SCHOLARSHIP SCOUTING REPORT: An Insider's Guide to America's Best Scholarships (HarperCollins; February 2003; $21.95).

Meticulously researched and based on hundreds of revealing interviews with scholarship judges, administrators, and past winners from coast to coast, THE SCHOLARSHIP SCOUTING REPORT is the first behind-the-scenes tour of the nation's best, most accessible scholarship opportunities. In its pages readers discover valuable details on over 100 exceptional college cash programs for students of every age and interest, as well as essential strategic advice distilled from Kaplan's in-depth analysis of thousands of winning scholarship essays, applications, and entries. Known internationally as "The Scholarship Coach," Kaplan writes with a passion and insight that can only come from genuine experience: Only a few short years ago, Kaplan himself sidestepped a future mired in student debt by winning more than two dozen scholarships worth nearly $90,000-enough to cover virtually the entire cost of his Harvard education.

Arranged alphabetically, THE SCHOLARSHIP SCOUTING REPORT spotlights lucrative scholarship possibilities-ranging from $1,000 to $100,000-for high school and college students, graduate students, nontraditional students of all ages and life stages, and even kids under 14. Each featured award program chosen for the book has a proven track record, benefits students from a variety of backgrounds, and can be used at any accredited college, community college, vocational school, or university-thereby enabling school choice. Additionally, the vast majority of profiled scholarships use judging criteria beyond just grades and test scores, are available to students of all ethnicities and geographic residencies, and are awarded regardless of a student's family finances or documented need.

For each profiled scholarship, Kaplan has already performed the exhaustive detective work, bare-knuckle research, and in-depth strategic analysis, so the reader doesn't have to. Among other features, each individual scouting report entry includes:

- * "A Closer Look" at the entire application process, with comprehensive discussions of both the official and the "hidden" judging criteria
- * A special "Coach's Analysis" section that delves into surefire application strategies and common mistakes, while providing concrete action steps that maximize an applicant's chances of winning
- * Candid and revealing quotes from scholarship judges and winners

*B'cuz - see 9/14/03
10502*

8/21/2003

- * Sample winning entries, application excerpts, and inspiring essays, along with insightful comments and annotations from the author
- * User-friendly icons that help readers easily identify scholarships suited to their strengths and interests, and quickly locate entry requirements, dollar amounts, and other key data
- * Special keywords that unlock important bonus material at the author's interactive scholarship website, ScholarshipCoach.com

In addition, THE SCHOLARSHIP SCOUTING REPORT is designed not only to provide useful information on specific scholarships, but also to teach students, by example, the fine art of creating a successful scholarship application package. By presenting a carefully designed series of real-world case studies that illustrates and reinforces the fundamental principles of scholarship success, Kaplan helps readers internalize these principles and leverage them into any new scholarship application they may encounter in the future.

As the ideal companion volume to How to Go to College Almost for Free-Ben Kaplan's step-by-step guide to the underlying methodology of finding and winning college cash-THE SCHOLARSHIP SCOUTING REPORT is an indispensable resource designed to help all students navigate a winning route to top scholarship destinations. As Kaplan so skillfully demonstrates, searching for scholarships doesn't have to be an overwhelming and frustrating process: THE SCHOLARSHIP SCOUTING REPORT will help students focus their search, position their scholarship candidacy, and ultimately afford the college of their choice.

About the Author

Ben Kaplan, now age 25, won more than two dozen scholarships-amassing nearly $90,000 in scholarship winnings for use at the college of his choice. In 1999, he graduated from Harvard debt-free, with virtually the entire cost of his education covered by his scholarship winnings. Known internationally as "The Scholarship Coach," he is the author of the hugely successful How to Go to College Almost for Free and has advised thousands of students and parents on scholarships, financial aid, and personal growth. Kaplan has also appeared on hundreds of television and radio programs, including Oprah. He lives in Portland, Oregon.

If you are interested in setting up an interview with Ben please give me a call at 617-254-4500 x118.

Subject: HARNETT LITERACY COUNCIL.Interview.doc

(Lottie, Here are some ideas that you might use. I'm afraid that I have given you more than you might want but we'll wing it. Call me if you have any questions. (891-1176)

HARNETT LITERACY COUNCIL
 INFORMATION FOR INTERVIEW
 ON THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 4 AT 10 A.M.

The month of September has been designated as International Literacy Month and International Literacy Day is September 8. It focuses attention on worldwide literacy issues and needs. It is estimated that 860 million of the world's adults do not know how to read and write (nearly two-thirds of whom are women) and that more than 100 million children lack access to education.

Because International Literacy Day coincides with the beginning of a new school year in many countries, classroom teachers use this special day to recognize the importance of literacy in the lives of children and adults.

It is anticipated that Libraries and other groups will have special activities to commemorate the day, but Harnett Literacy plans to have a special emphasis on informing the public of its services through various media and through presenting special programs to civic groups throughout the month.

Harnett Literacy was organized in --- Currently Harnett Literacy has 22 tutors who are working with 32 active students. Two of these tutors work in classrooms with 3 or 4 students at a time. Other tutors work one-on-one in providing instruction. During the past year volunteers provided a total of 1009 volunteer hours, which includes teaching, preparation, and travel time.

In 1997, the National Adult Literacy Survey (NALS) estimated that more than 20% of the adult population in Harnett County could not perform at Reading and Math Level I, the beginning level of literacy. This means: They could not locate a single piece of information stated in a short paragraph or sentence...could not locate or enter specific information on a form...and could not perform single, simple, specified arithmetic operation from numbers provided. Level 2 deals with integrating and making inferences from material—34% were unable to do Level 2. At Levels 3-5, 41% of Harnett County Adults could not integrate information from complex or lengthy passages—multiply two or more numbers, nor perform 2 or more math operations from word problems. Who are the people who have all these problems? They are our parents, brothers, sisters, family members, neighbors, friends, employees, co-workers, and maybe even our bosses.

(Lottie use any of the previous material for your introduction and even to develop questions)

Our guest is Mr. James D. Roberts (J.D.) who is a volunteer tutor with the Literacy Program. Tell us how you came to be involved in Literacy.

Answer: My background is in teaching but that is not a prerequisite for volunteering. I have had cancer and through a lifestyle change, the Lord has extended my life and I feel that I need to give back to my community as the Lord leads. I volunteer with the Cancer center at Betsy Johnson and at the Averagesboro Battlefield museum. I have really found that work I do at the Literacy council is most rewarding.

Question:

Tell me something about the process of teaching someone to read.

Ans. All the material we use is fully programmed. The lesson plans tell you each step to follow. We start with pictures and associate the words with the pictures. The materials were developed by Frank Laubach who was a missionary to the Philippines. He discovered that if you can read, you have the ability to teach someone else to read. He felt that if you could you read you could advance yourself and your standard of living so he developed the One-teach-One method with the ultimate goal of one teaching one (to read) and one leading one to Christ.

How many students are you working with?

Currently I am working with two students: one wants to learn to read the Bible so that he won't be embarrassed when he is called on in church. He has made good progress and the Lord is helping him because when he reads Bible passages, he does better than when we read regular text. The other student has made wonderful progress and he had the goal of start his own business.

How can people become involved?

Right now they can call the office at 891-4111 and give their name to Agnes Austin or they can just leave it on the answering machine. Agnes will arrange an interview and schedule them for a training session so they can learn to use the materials. They will then be assigned to work with a student according to their schedule. It is a wonderful opportunity for someone to be a teacher who has always had that desire but has never had formal training.
