What started as a routine (and, according to the preacher, "lackluster") chapel service at Asbury University became something remarkable. Instead of heading off to classes, students stayed. Services have continued ever since, with people traveling from near and far to join in prayer, repentance, and song. What is being called a "revival" by some and an "awakening" by others has now spread to other Christian colleges.

231 years ago this month, King Louis XVI of France lost his head. His execution by guillotine was a precursor of the Reign of Terror, a 10-month period from 1793 to 1794 when French Revolutionaries executed nearly 17,000 of their countrymen. The French Revolution, one of history's most profound examples of the power of ideas, erupted out of the Enlightenment.

Ideas tend to sprout up in academia, but the ones that matter do not stay there. Even when birthed in epistemology, ideas can have a major impact on culture. This is especially evident in the modern to postmodern shift from an objective and verifiable understanding of truth to a subjective & socially constructed understanding of truth. This shift has landed us in "standpoint epistemology."

One feature of American life for some time now is that women, as a group, tend to fall to the left of men politically. One factor behind this striking political divide between the sexes, is the Left's obsession with condemning "the patriarchy" and "toxic masculinity." Many young men hear this as a condemnation of their very existence. Similarly, the leftward lurch among women could have something to do with the perception that abortion is a women's issue

The old saying goes..."To a hammer, everything looks like a nail." Among the hammers today is psychotherapy, and too many wielding it are convinced that every human problem is a nail. However, the unprecedented rise of mental health problems in Generation Z suggests that the overuse of this tool has done as much harm as good. In a bold new book, Abigail Shrier confronts the idea of psychology as an all-consuming ideology.

Did you know that the number of abortions in the U.S. since 1973 is over 66 million? That is six times greater than the total number of deaths due to the Civil War, World Wars I and II, the Korean War and the Vietnam War put together! Michele Bachmann interviews Allan Parker, Jr., president of The Justice Foundation and the author of the book, Reversing Roe v. Wade: My Journey with Roe, Doe and God.

Gallup polls say, 71% of Americans think same-sex "marriage" should be legal, and 64% believe gay or lesbian relationships are morally acceptable. These numbers are double from a generation ago. Among those who attend church weekly, 41% support same-sex "marriage," while 67% of those who attend church less frequently do. How is it that so many, including so many in the Church, now embrace a view of marriage that was unthinkable just a few decades ago?

In 1973, the landmark case Roe v. Wade legalized abortion in America. Then in 2022, we saw the reversal of that evil law, leaving each state to decide independently the legalities surrounding abortion. Today on Family Talk, Michele Bachmann continues her riveting discussion with Allan Parker, Jr., about how God called him to represent the two women whose cases resulted in abortion in America.

Last week, Kamala Harris became the first U.S. vice president in U.S. history to make a public visit to an abortion clinic. Though the Democratic party's support for abortion is nothing new, Harris' Planned Parenthood appearance does illustrate how that support has become a flagrant celebration of abortion as a public and personal good, essential to both "freedom" and to "healthcare."

Our imagination affects our ability to empathize with others. When we can imagine the lived experience of others, we tend to be more compassionate, gracious, and open to wonder. David Brooks lamented that our society is terrible at cultivating a healthy imagination which, he said, is "the faculty that we may need the most." Jesus is the perfect expression of the proper role imagination.

When we think of Christ's work to bring salvation to the world, we rightly focus on how Jesus reconciles us to God by freeing us from the guilt we have because of our sin. We may overlook or even forget another crucial part of redemption that we each desperately need. By His work, Jesus not only takes our guilt and exchanges it for His righteousness (2 Corinthians 5:21), but He also takes our shame and exchanges it for His honor.

On Sunday morning, Christians will gather in houses of worship around the world-like they have since the very first century-and make a proclamation to one another. It's the central claim of the Christian faith: "Christ is risen! He has risen indeed!" This Easter, it won't just be American Christians who say, "Christ is risen! He has risen indeed!" Our brothers and sisters in various parts of the world who, by saying these words, risk great harm, will, too
