Series Title: Spotlight: Riffe Gallery
Episode Title: Land of Latitudes: Contemporary Art From Chile
Length: 30 minutes
Air date: 5/19/2012 9:30:00AM, 5/19/2012 5:30:00PM, 5/19/2012 1:30:00AM

Land of Latitudes confirms Chile's international reputation in printmaking and ceramic work, but also exhibits how the nation's artists take full advantage of every conceivable option and freedom in pursuit of personal creativity. Chilean artists operate outside the narrow specializations often practiced by North American artists. Many simultaneously explore painting, printmaking and sculpture, experimenting with materials, techniques, styles and approaches. The power of Chile's landscape is one of the threads uniting the exhibition's diversity of work. Other influences include Chile's literary figures, its indigenous cultures and its political history. The exhibition, curated by Sara Johnson, director of visual arts at the Southern Ohio Museum and Cultural Center, and Betty Talbott, director of the Ohio Craft Museum, features the work of 51 artists living in the South American nation.

Series Title: Sound of Ideas
Episode Title: Bring Jobs Home
Length: 30 minutes
Air date: 4/7/2012 2:00:00PM, 4/7/2012 10:00:00PM, 4/8/2012 6:00:00AM

We've heard for years the complaints about American companies shipping jobs overseas. Off shoring is done in such large numbers that often it can be difficult to find a product that's truly American made. A new movement is afoot, though, to bring those jobs back home from places like China, India and Mexico. On the next Sound of Ideas, we'll examine the reshoring initiative and look at how it's impacting manufacturing in Ohio.

Series Title: State of Ohio
Episode Title: Presidential Politics, Tax Amnesty and Pension Reform
Length: 30 minutes
Air date: 5/7/2012 1:00:00PM, 5/7/2012 8:00:00PM, 5/8/2012 5:00:00AM, 5/8/2012 3:30:00PM, 5/8/2012 11:30:00PM, 5/9/2012 7:30:00AM

It's a big weekend in presidential politics in Ohio. President Obama is officially launching his re-election campaign by starting in Columbus, with a rally on the Ohio State campus. Meanwhile, the day before the rally, Romney was making phone calls in lieu of a visit – for now. Romney talked with Ohio Public Radio. Six peace officers who died in the line of duty in the last year were remembered at the Peace Officers Training Academy in London this week. Just in time, Ohio regulators have granted an operating license to a company slated to open the casino in Cleveland, the state's first casino, this month. Gun control advocates are criticizing an upcoming fundraiser for a Republican state representative from southwestern Ohio that encourages people to bring their own guns and shoot them at a firing range. The Ohio Senate has passed a bill that would update rules related to public records at the state's new private job creation agency. Senate President Tom Niehaus said the changes would address concerns from Attorney General Mike DeWine on phrasing over public records at JobsOhio. A bill to ban texting behind the wheel might seem to be non-controversial – after all, 37 states and the District of Columbia have banned the practice for drivers. And hundreds of communities across the country have additional local bans on texting. Ohio is six states that has no ban on texting behind the wheel – until this week. The Senate passed a ban on texting on Thursday, but not without some party-line crossing debate from Sen. Tom Patton (R-Strongsville), Capri Cafaro (D-Hubbard), John Eklund (R-Munson Township) and Bill Seitz (R-Cincinnati). The bill passed overwhelmingly, and Gov. Kasich has said he supports it. For the first time in six years, individual taxpayers who either failed to pay or fell behind on their taxes can come clean with the state. Ohio's tax commissioner Joe Testa talks about the state's tax amnesty program. And now an update from last week's show – about how to pay for retirement, with defined benefit systems such as pensions or defined contribution systems such as 401ks. Ohio's public employees are part of the state's pension system, which is made up of five funds. Those funds have made recommendations for changes and reforms to state lawmakers, and legislation related to those changes is starting to move forward. Senate President Tom Niehaus has said it could come up in the next week, but Rep. Kirk Schuring, the chair of the House committee that would hear pension reform is urging lawmakers to slow down.

Series Title: State of Ohio
Episode: Lawmakers Debate Tax Plan And Other Ideas In Budget Update
Length: 30 minutes
Air date: 4/2/2012 1:00:00PM, 4/2/2012 9:00:00PM, 4/3/2012 5:00:00AM, 4/3/2012 3:30:00PM, 4/3/2012 11:30:00PM, 4/4/2012 7:30:00AM

The November election is months away, but an issue that Democrats put on that ballot is a step closer to being moot. The Ohio Senate approved a repeal of House Bill 194, the election reform law. But lawmakers from both parties came together to honor 50 police officers, firefighters and other first responders from the tragic school shooting in Chardon in February. Two new polls out this week are tracking the presidential race and the US Senate contest in Ohio – and so far, the Democrats in both races are in the lead. Supporters call it “right to work.” But critics call it “the right to work.....for less.” The conservative think-tank the Buckeye Institute has released a study applauding the concept, which would change state law so that union contracts cannot require workers pay dues to get or keep jobs. Ohio University economist Richard Vedder says states with right to work laws have had higher rates of growth. But critics, including the coalition We Are Ohio - which brought the repeal of Senate Bill 5 to the ballot last year - gives no credence to the study. The debate continues in various House and Senate committees on Gov. Kasich’s budget update, even though the highest-profile proposal in it was stripped out by Republican lawmakers. That would be the plan to impose a severance tax of up to 4% on oil and natural gas drillers in Ohio, to fund an income tax cut that could go as high as 5% eventually. Here to talk about the budget update bill are two key members of the House Finance Committee – its chairman, Rep. Ron Amstutz (R-Wooster) and Rep. Mike Foley (D-Cleveland).

Series Title: Sound of Ideas
Episode: Growing Up, Not Out
Length: 60 minutes
Air date: 5/1/2012 9:00:00AM, 5/1/2012 5:00:00PM, 5/2/2012 1:00:00AM

Houses have sprouted where amber waves of grain once dominated the landscape outside of urban centers in Northeast Ohio. Paved streets. Shopping complexes. Miles of new utilities. Some say this kind of development is not progress: Suburban sprawl, they contend, is causing economic and environmental problems. Folks buying a piece of the suburban American dream may beg to differ. The argument for shrinking our regional footprint. Hunter Morrison, Executive Director, Northeast Ohio Sustainable Communities Consortium Stephen D. Hambley, Medina County Commissioner Brad Whitehead, President, Fund for Our Economic Future

Series Title: Feagler and Friends
Episode: Allegations of Dirty Parks & Dirty Pool
Length: 30 minutes
Air date: 6/25/2012 4:00:00PM, 6/25/2012 10:00:00PM, 6/26/2012 6:00:00AM

Bad Parks: Many of northeast Ohio’s lakefront parks are drowning in weeds, driftwood and trash, the victims of poor or non-existent maintenance. A Plain Dealer report this week canvassed three parks, Edgewater, Euclid Beach and Wildwood and found them in appalling condition. Each of these is under the umbrella of the State of Ohio which has put little money into them in recent years. Politics on the Down-low: Republican Senate candidate Josh Mandel has touched off debate with recent criticism of incumbent Senator Sherrod Brown. Mandel has called Brown hypocritical for portraying Republicans as anti-women when he was once accused of domestic violence. The accusations grew out of a decades-old divorce case. Brown’s camp called Mandel’s action ‘despicable’ while the Mandel camp says the old family dispute is legitimate political rhetoric. New Allegations for Cleveland Firefighters: A city investigation of firefighter leave time abuse shows several firefighters repeatedly took sick days without producing evidence of illness. Others are suspected of paying colleagues to work their shifts, illegal under city law. A special investigator has recommended that criminal charges be filed against five firefighters. Hang Up and Drive, or Else: Drivers in Beachwood stand to lose more than just money if they're caught using a cell phone or texting while driving. The city will also place two points on the violator's driving record in addition to levying the standard fine. Accumulating twelve points within two years brings about a license suspension. The state of Ohio recently enacted a texting-while-driving ban. Goodbye to Akron Radio Great: Friends and listeners gathered Thursday to remember longtime radio talker Howie Chizek, who died last week at the age of 65. Chizek spent 38 years entertaining listener's midday on WNIR and was also respected for his charity work. He leaves a lasting mark on the world of basketball. Chizek pioneered a flamboyant style of public address announcing that's widely imitated in NBA arenas.

Economy

Series Title: State of Ohio
Episode Title: Good and Bad News in Welfare Reform
Length: 30 minutes
Air date: 4/9/2012 1:00:00PM, 4/9/2012 9:00:00PM, 4/10/2012 5:00:00AM, 4/10/2012 3:30:00PM, 4/10/2012 11:30:00PM, 4/11/2012 7:30:00AM

The embattled chief of the Ohio Republican Party has announced he's stepping down, just days ahead of a central committee vote on his leadership. Meanwhile, the chair of the Ohio Democratic Party chair has a challenger as he runs for another term at the helm of his party. This week Marc Dann became the first former attorney general to come before the Ohio Supreme Court with his law license on the line. Ohio's welfare rolls have dropped 18% over the past year. The improving economy is one reason for the drop, but the state has also been kicking people off the welfare rolls. Federal welfare reform requires half of the state's welfare recipients to be working or in job training programs for 30 hours a week for single-parent families, and 55 hours a week for two-parent families, though there are some exceptions. Ohio was slapped with the highest fines in the nation last year, and could $130 million in funding by the end of September unless that percentage goes up to 50%. Talking about this new effort and the work requirement idea as part of welfare reform are four people on the front lines: Michael Colbert, Director of the Ohio Department of Job and Family Services, Joel Potts, executive director of the Job and Family Services Directors' Association, Phil Cole, executive director of the Ohio Association of Community Action Agencies, and Jack Frech, director of the Athens County Department of Job and Family Services.

Series Title: Sound of Ideas
Episode Title: What's the Future for Newspapers?
Length: 60 minutes
Air date: 6/21/2012 9:00:00AM, 6/21/2012 5:00:00PM, 6/22/2012 1:00:00AM

Even if it's not a front page headline, it's no secret that newspapers are losing circulation, shedding staff and in some cases, ceasing daily publication. There seems to be more content on the internet than ever before, but is it the same quality? Is the watchdog role in peril? On the next Sound of Ideas, we'll examine the effect on communities, and on democracy as a whole, as major news organizations continue to cut the bottom line. Dean Starkman, editor, Columbia Journalism Review, David Abbott, executive director, The George Gund Foundation Thom Fladung, managing editor, The Plain Dealer Tom Skoch, editor, Lorain Morning Journal Tim Smith, journalism professor, Kent State University

Is Court Review of Denied Workers' Compensation Claim Limited to Issue(s) Addressed In Order Being Appealed? Or Must Claimant Present Medical Evidence Not Considered by Industrial Commission? Mark A. Bennett v. Goodremont's, Inc., et al., Case no. 2011-0902 Sixth District Court of Appeals (Lucas County) ISSUE: When the administrative order denying a workers' compensation claim is based solely on a finding that the claim is invalid because it arose while the claimant was "going to or coming from work," and does not address the existence or cause of the claimant's alleged injury, does a court reviewing that order under R.C. 2143.512 err when it finds that the claim should not have been denied based on the "going to or coming from" rule, but affirms denial of the claim based on the claimant's failure to present evidence of a work-related injury during the appeal proceeding?

Energy

Series Title: State of Ohio
Episode Title: Gov. Kasich Updates Budget with Reforms in Energy and Income Taxes
Length: 30 minutes
Air date: 4/23/2012 1:00:00PM, 4/23/2012 9:00:00PM, 4/24/2012 5:00:00AM, 4/25/2012 12:30:00PM, 4/25/2012 8:30:00PM, 4/26/2012 4:30:00AM

This week brought the first of many likely executions in Ohio over the next 21 months. This week 49 year old Mark Wiles of Portage County was executed by lethal injection for stabbing to death 15 year old Mark Klima, the son of his former employer, in 1985. For weeks, lawmakers have been talking about Gov. John Kasich's big budget update, and Republicans have been tinkering with it since he unveiled it – taking out the severance tax that Kasich wanted to use to fund an income tax cut, and this week adding 46 amendments, including one that makes big funding cuts to the 37 health centers operated by Planned Parenthood. Now Democrats in the Ohio House have come up with their own addition to the budget update, saying they want a $400 million fund for cities and schools that they say are suffering from huge budget cuts in the Governor's spending plan last year. Minority Leader Armond Budish (D-Beachwood) and Rep. Matt Lundy (D-Elyria) talked about it, while Rep. Barbara Sears (R-Sylvania) and Rep. John Adams (R-Sidney) dismissed it. Gov. Kasich had split with members of his own party in the legislature over one of the final steps in the Great Lakes Compact, the agreement signed in 2005 by eight states and two Canadian provinces to ban diversion of water outside the region except when approved by area officials. Now Kasich and the bill's sponsor in the House, Rep. Lynn Wachtmann of Napoleon in northwest Ohio, have come to a deal. Environmentalists say they have problems with the deal. Jack Shaner is with the Ohio Environmental Council. The fall vote is months away, but it's clear that Ohio will once again play a critical role in the presidential contest. President Barack Obama and presumptive Republican nominee Mitt Romney were both in Ohio this week. And a former presidential candidate was in Ohio to stump for Republican US Senate candidate Josh Mandel - Republican US Sen. John McCain. McCain talks about his thoughts on Mandel, on what the US Senate needs in a successful candidate, and on the GOP campaign for president. And Thursday was Holocaust Remembrance Day, and it was commemorated for the 32nd year at the Statehouse this week, as the Governor talked about the Holocaust memorial coming to the Statehouse.

Who knew that mud-loving hogs were so high tech? In carefully secured laboratories, scientists use computer programs, genetic histories and the latest research to provide Ohio hog farmers like Chuck Wildman, with very precise breeding tools. The Many Lives of a Single Crop Today, corn from a single field can be used for so many different things – ethanol, cattle feed, corn syrup, cornstarch. This segment follows corn from the field to processing to how we see it in our everyday lives -- and the many different ways we see it. Lavender Farm Lavender is one versatile plant; it's used to promote healing, for culinary purposes, cosmetics, and more. Our next stop: Daybreak Lavender Farm, the very first lavender farm in Ohio.

Series Title: State of Ohio
Episode: The State's Utility Watchdog
Length: 30 minutes
Air date: 5/14/2012 1:00:00PM, 5/14/2012 9:00:00PM, 5/15/2012 5:00:00AM, 5/15/2012 3:30:00PM, 5/15/2012 11:30:00PM, 5/16/2012 7:30:00AM

Oil and gas field inspectors are now wanted at the Ohio Department of Natural Resources, which plans to triple its staff of inspectors to keep up with the increase in drilling activity around the state. Gov. John Kasich says Ohio now has a new policy for emergency rooms and urgent cares when it comes to prescribing prescription pain killers. A wide-ranging bill to bring order to Ohio's gambling laws has cleared the state Senate, but it won't make it to the governor's desk in time for the opening of the state's first casino. Now on its way to the Governor's desk – and perhaps then to court - is a measure to repeal a contentious new election law that was supposed to be before voters this fall. And a big education bill that the governor has criticized for lowering state reading standards has cleared the Ohio Senate. And now the latest in pension reform - Senate leaders, including President Tom Niehaus (R-New Richmond), say they are ready to go ahead and pass the changes that the management of Ohio's five public pension funds want. But Speaker Bill Batchelder (R-Medina) says it won't be on the fast track in the House. Last week, five animals that had been taken after the exotic animal tragedy in Zanesville last fall were returned to the widow of the man who was found dead not long after those animals were released from their cages on his farm. This comes as the proposed ban on new ownership of exotic animals moves into the House, after having passed the Senate almost unanimously. Among the dozens of exotic animal owners who've testified against the ban are Robert Siders and Joe Schreibvogel, who say the state should take a different approach and suggest owners will fight it every step of the way. But Karen Minton, state director for the Humane Society of the United States, argues the ban makes sense. Last year was a rough one at the Ohio Consumers' Counsel, the watchdog agency funded by the state to fight for consumers in rate cases and to provide information on utilities issues. Gov. Kasich's budget cut funding to the OCC in half, and the Consumers' Counsel resigned in protest. Now Bruce Weston is in charge at that office, and is taking on some big issues with a lot less money behind him. And this week winners of the Governor's Awards for the Arts were honored: individual artist Michael Jerome Bashaw of Kettering and Barbara Robinson of Columbus for her lifetime achievement in the arts, along with Ed Stern and Buzz Ward of Cincinnati's Playhouse in the Park, the Toledo School for the Arts, Arts Patron Louise Nippert and Vectren Energy Delivery of Ohio for their support of the arts.

Series Title: Sound of Ideas
Episode: New Gas Drilling Rules
Length: 30 minutes
Air date: 6/7/2012 9:00:00AM, 6/7/2012 7:00:00PM, 6/8/2012 1:00:00AM

The natural gas boom is on in Ohio. Governor Kasich will soon sign into law new regulations for natural gas drillers. The "Fracking" technique used to extract the gas from deep shale deposits still alarms environmentalists. The state regulations don't offer adequate protection, they say. But drilling advocates counter that requirements are among the strictest anywhere, and the potential financial rewards are staggering. Thomas E. Stewart, executive vice-president, Ohio Oil & Gas Association Beverly Saylor, associate professor of geology, CWRU David Simons, Energy Committee chair, Ohio Sierra Club State Rep. Robert F. Hagan, D-Youngstown May Court Grant Non-Relative Temporary Visitation With Child Against Natural Parent's Wishes While Custody Suit Is Pending? Without Court First Finding That Fit Natural Parent Consented to Shared Custody Julie Rose Rowell v. Julie Ann Smith, Case no. 2011-1053 Tenth District Court of Appeals (Franklin County) ISSUE: When a non-relative has filed a petition for shared custody of a child in a juvenile court, and that petition is opposed by the child's natural parent, does the court have authority to issue an order directing the parent to temporarily allow visitation with the child by the non-relative while the custody case is pending, without the court first determining that the parent previously entered into a legally binding shared custody agreement with the petitioner?

Series Title: State of Ohio
Episode: New Rules For Medicaid Moms
Length: 30 minutes
Air date: 6/11/2012 1:00:00PM, 6/11/2012 9:00:00PM, 6/12/2012 5:00:00AM, 6/13/2012 1:00:00PM, 6/13/2012 9:00:00PM 6/14/2012 5:00:00AM

There was an unusual, last minute development before the scheduled execution of 53 year old Abdul Hamin Awkal, as Gov. John Kasich issued a rare two-week reprieve to give a judge time to rule on his competency to be executed. Gov. John Kasich signed 17 bills into law, including the exotic animal ban and the law that puts into place rules for Ohio as part of the multi-state Great Lakes Compact. An ODOT panel has voted to move up most major road projects that were delayed by several years, but officials know it might not be enough to satisfy communities that are depending on those projects to get done. The Ohio Supreme Court dealt a blow to public school districts this week, ruling that they are not allowed to keep charter schools from buying their property and using it for classes. One racino is open, and another is on its way down the stretch as video lottery terminals will be coming to Thistledown racetrack southwest of Cleveland. A former chief of Ohio's rail commission was one of two people killed in boat accident in Canada last weekend. Ohio is breaking down a bureaucratic obstacle to low income pregnant women seeking medical care. The process to determine Medicaid eligibility can take 45 days, and if a pregnant woman who's applied for Medicaid needed care during that time, she might end up at an emergency room, where the care is at its most expensive. But with a new pilot program, pregnant women go through an initial screening process and then work with providers to complete the full Medicaid application. Ohio's Medicaid chief John McCarthy, Sandy Oxley of the advocacy group Voices for Ohio's Children and Sen. Dave Burke (R-Marysville) speak about it. It's been a blockbuster few weeks for Ohio movie buffs. "The Avengers", which was shot in part in Cleveland, has been raking in money since it opened on May 4. And this week, Gov. John Kasich signed a bill that not only extended the tax credit the state offers to moviemakers who film in Ohio, but doubled it – from $10 million to $20 million a year. One of the leaders in the movement to push the motion picture tax credit is Ivan Schwarz, the executive director of the Cleveland Film Commission, which helps to connect moviemakers with those who work with the industry in northeast Ohio. But Rep. Lynn Wachtmann (R-Napoleon) was one of the few lawmakers who voted against it, and says it's because he disagrees with the concept behind the program. The governor is still hoping to change and increase the tax on oil and natural gas drillers in Ohio to fund his income tax cut. Wachtmann says he and other Republicans are working on a plan related to that severance tax now. But it's splitting fiscal conservatives on the national level.

The Ohio Statehouse commemorates the 150th anniversary of the 19 Ohio soldiers and two civilians who volunteered for the most daring raid in military history. Their plan was to board a train headed north out of Atlanta for Chattanooga, capture the train and continue steaming north, stopping frequently to cut telegraph lines and burn bridges, thereby disrupting Confederate lines of communication and aiding the Union Army's drive on Chattanooga. Unfortunately, the plan went awry, and all the men were captured. Eventually 19 of these men were awarded the Medal of Honor. The official citation for their award is: "Nineteen of twenty-two men (including two civilians) who, by direction of General Mitchell (or Buell), penetrated nearly 200 miles south into the enemy's territory and captured a railroad train at Big Shanty, Georgia, in an attempt to destroy the bridges and track between Chattanooga and Atlanta." This program is presented in partnership with the Ohio National Guard. Program participants include Sgt. Major Dwight Chambliss, Sgt. 1st Class Joshua Mann, and Major General Deborah Ashenhurst, Ohio's Adjutant General.

Patricia Schulte-Singleton, St. Patrick's Parish, member of the Save St. Pat's Committee
Hundreds of Cleveland-area Catholics go the news they'd been waiting for—Bishop Richard Lennon will not appeal a Vatican order directing him to re-open 12 parishes he closed in a recent reorganization. The 12 were among 13 that appealed the closings. It's not yet clear when the churches will re-open. Roundtable: Sharon Broussard, editorial writer, The Plain Dealer; David Arredondo, vice-chairman, Lorain County Republican Party. President Obama and Mitt Romney Visit The national political spotlight shone on Lorain County this week. President Obama spoke to a private gathering at Lorain County Community College, calling jobs the number one issue of our time. As he spoke, a Romney campaign bus was parked across the street where volunteers placed campaign calls. Romney himself was scheduled for a campaign appearance in Lorain Thursday, Cleveland School Cutbacks If general acclamation for a Cleveland school reform plan was a step forward, an announcement this week could be regarded as a step back. School leaders okay-ed a plan to drop 700 teachers, mostly through layoffs, at the end of the school year and the school day will be shortened by nearly an hour next year. The moves are aimed at making up a big chunk of an anticipated deficit. School officials also say they're exploring plans to sell their downtown headquarters building. Republicans Target Planned Parenthood Legislative Republicans want to move Planned Parenthood to end of a line of social service agencies that receive federal funding. If they're successful, Planned Parenthood would lose close to $2-million; similar agencies would also lose money. Angry Democratic lawmakers call it another shot in a war on women. Changing Gears Northeast Ohio is no longer the home of giant smoke-belching factories that typified the Industrial Revolution. The economy is slowly but surely striking out in new directions as the region works to diversify. Medical devices and services, polymers, processed foods, even Fracking, are all in the vanguard of long-term change. Mr. Feagler looks at the big picture with Thomas A. Waltermire, President and CEO of Team NEO.

Catholic nuns and parishioners rallied in Cleveland this week in support of American nuns criticized by the Vatican for actions contrary to church doctrine. The Cleveland rally mirrored many others held in churches nationwide. The Vatican order placed the Leadership Conference of Women Religious under the guidance of an archbishop. Protesters want that order rescinded.

Roundtable: Kevin O'Brien, editorial writer, The Plain Dealer; Brian Tucker, publisher and editorial director, Crain's Cleveland Business; Bill Sheil, weekend anchor, Fox 8 News. Deleting Internet Cafes: Cuyahoga County prosecutor Bill Mason ordered 50 so-called internet cafes to close down this week, calling their operation illegal. The county also handed down racketeering indictments against the leaders of a software supplier for games played at the cafes. The action came less than two weeks after the opening of a casino in downtown Cleveland and another one in Toledo. Russo Still Free: Ex-Cuyahoga County auditor Frank Russo long ago pleaded guilty on corruption charges, but he's still a free man because he's cooperating with federal prosecutors. Russo testified against former commissioner Jimmy Dimora, who's now in prison. Russo is expected to testify against others caught in the sweeping corruption probe. He's been the object of much media attention this week as he enjoyed his remaining months on the outside. No Turbines on Third Frontier: People with their hands on the purse strings of Ohio's Third Frontier money are refusing a $5-million grant for the proposed Lake Erie wind farm project. Members of the Third Frontier Commission who voted with the majority expressed doubts about the future of wind energy and the high cost of water-based turbines. It's painful for the wind farm's planners because the state grant would have positioned the project for larger federal grants. Mitt's It: Results from this week's Texas primary gave Mitt Romney enough committed delegates to sew up the Republican presidential nomination. Now Romney turns full attention to the fall campaign against President Obama and the Obama camp can turn its full artillery on Romney. Attention also turns to the next big campaign question, the identity of a Romney running mate.

In the bleak and desolate days of the depression of the 1930s, the residents of Waterloo, Ohio, had little about which to be happy. In this rural Appalachian town, 20 miles outside of Ironton, residents had been hit hard with job losses and did whatever they could to make a living. The depression was on everyone's mind until - the Waterloo Wonders. The boys in Waterloo got a little creative when it came to entertaining themselves. They tied rags together to make a basketball, hung bushel baskets in a barn, and learned to play the game of basketball - with a ball that wouldn't bounce. What came out of this endeavor was a group of boys who learned how to pass the ball so proficiently that no opponent could stop them. Individually, they were good basketball players, but together they made history as they became Class B state champions in 1934 and 1935. Their story is the focus of this documentary "The Eighth Wonder: The Waterloo Wonders." Produced by WOUB's Cheri Russo, see how a small group of farmboys from Waterloo, Ohio overcame obstacles to give hope to a region that had suffered greatly during one of the most difficult times in American history.

Series Title: Cleveland Connects

Episode: Culture of College

Length: 60 minutes

Air date: 6/23/2012 12:00:00PM, 6/23/2012 8:00:00PM, 6/24/2012 4:00:00AM, 6/27/2012 12:00:00PM, 6/27/2012 8:00:00PM, 6/28/2012 4:00:00AM, 6/30/2012 9:00:00AM, 6/30/2012 5:00:00PM

One of the best predictors of long-term prosperity and growth for our region is educational attainment. An education that ends in high school is no longer enough. College brings higher pay: $1,053 a week for the median bachelor's degree holder last year, versus $638 for a high school graduate with no college, says the U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics. Last year's unemployment rate was 4.9% for college grads versus 9.4% for those with no college. (Wall Street Journal – 5/4/2012) As a community, it is imperative that we raise the expectations of our young people and send them clear, consistent messages about educational achievement after high school graduation. But that won't be easy, especially in predominantly poor or blue-collar communities where college, or more broadly, post-secondary education, has not been the norm. How do we help parents who didn't go beyond high school graduation understand why it matters and how to support their children? What kind of school and community supports are necessary to help kids prepare for post-secondary education - beginning at birth and extending through the time they're on campus? And, what pieces of the "solution puzzle" are present in Greater Cleveland and what do we need to develop, import or invent? These are just some of the questions we will use to stimulate a community dialogue about how to create a CULTURE OF COLLEGE in Northeast Ohio. Sandra Pianalto, President and Chief Executive Officer of the Federal Reserve Bank of Cleveland will give a key-note address on why increasing educational achievement is so critical to our regional economy and why doing so is everyone's responsibility. The presentation will be followed by a panel discussion involving key stakeholders in our region. Questions will be taken from the studio audience and from people watching a live web-stream of the event on ideastream.org and cleveland.com. Joe Frolik, Chief Editorial Writer at The Plain Dealer will serve as moderator.
