"They drove straight under the water," 16-year-old Corion Evans said. "Like, only a little bit of the car was still above the water." Evans and a friend jumped in the river and get the girls to the top of their vehicle. "I was just like, 'I can't let none of these folks die. They need to get out the water'. So, I just started getting them," he said. "I wasn't even thinking about nothing else." Moss Point Police Officer Gary Mercer, who responded to the scene, swam out to help but he ran into trouble and started to go under. The officer called out for help. So, Evans, pulled three girls from the car and got them to shore and also rescued the police officer. . Police Chief Brandon Ashley said, "The police department and I commend Mr. Evans's bravery and selflessness he displayed by risking his own safety to help people in danger. If Mr. Evans had not assisted, it could have possibly turned out tragically instead of all occupants rescued safely"

				One of the victims took to Facebook to show her appreciation saying he, "saved my life right before my last breath."

Raymond Turner said he took a job as a producer at Sparklefly Recording Studio, a recording studio at Cook Children's Hospital in Fort Worth where patients can record their own music. Turner started his job the same year that Christina Sadberry started bringing her then-4-year-old son, Bryson, to the hospital for treatments. Turner's wife, Maria, bought him a 23andMe DNA kit for Christmas in 2021 so he could learn more about his lineage, and they were surprised to find he matched with a sibling: Christina Sadberry. The siblings said they are now enjoying getting to know one another and that they already feel like family.

All concerts will be rescheduled throughout February – April 2023 and tickets will be honored at the new dates. When rain waters that seemed heavier than usual began to fall in eastern Kentucky roughly two weeks ago, Pastor Brad Stevens of the Church of God Worship Center in Clay County, KY, said he wasn't afraid. As the pastor became aware of how the rain had taken its toll on the masses, he immediately felt deep within his heart a call from God to take action — to be the "hands and feet of Jesus" — by devoting his time to helping his community. Stevens took to social media, holding multiple live videos from his Facebook page to show his followers the devastation caused by the flooding. He informed viewers that he needed donated funds to further aid in disaster relief work. Stevens said he then began receiving donations from "generous" donors across the nation, allowing him to provide aid to over 300 Kentucky residents directly impacted by the flooding. He delivered food and water to those in need while helping rebuild infrastructure and bridges.

In April of 2021, Leanne Waite and her husband, Chris, were dressing their three-year-old son when they noticed his left arm was in severe pain after it got caught in his t-shirt. A lump on his collarbone was found and that was when doctors gave him 6 to 12 months to live. The little boy underwent surgery...chemotherapy...and radiotherapy. Then, eight months after the diagnosis, the family learned that he had made a miraculous recovery—and just two days before Christmas Albie got to ring the bell at Bristol Children's Hospital to declare he was cancer-free. Now the family treasures every day together and urges other parents to follow their instincts when they know something is wrong. They said, "We don't take any family time for granted and cherish each moment we have together."

Lyon shares the rest of the news	90.9 KWRB The Rest of the News	9-21-2022 10:40AM	60 Seconds	The daughter of the late Evangelist Billy Graham, Anne Graham Lotz, told a gathering of Christian conservatives about the importance of looking to God and remembering He is the ultimate authority, even in what she perceives to be a "crisis" in our nation. The AnGeL Ministries founder and author was a featured speaker during the Family Research Council's Pray Vote Stand Summit held at First Baptist Atlanta. She believes the nation is in "crisis." Sharing the message of Isaiah 6, Lotz stated that the most appropriate response in such situations is to follow the prophet's example by looking up to God and asking what He wants. The Museum of the Bible has opened what curators say is one of the first exhibits to its scale illuminating the history of the Samaritan people group, which features an ancient stone inscription loaned by Israel President Isaac Herzog. The museum highlights how the Samaritans are not just a people group mentioned in biblical and rabbinic texts but still exist as a micro community numbering roughly 850 people in the modern world.
