Jordan: California, which is a Democrat-run state, put forth bipartisan legislation that would turn child trafficking of teenagers and children younger than 18 and make it a serious felony on par with murder, arson and rape which would bring longer prison terms and potential life sentences without a chance for a plea bargain. And yet, a handful of democrats in the California legislature blocked this move now protecting child traffickers from more severe sentences by saying putting them in prison doesn't stop anything.

Today on the Eric Metaxas Show: Keith Guinta, Editor at WinePatch.org and with WipeEveryTear.org, talks about the Wipe Every Tear ministry, based out of Boise, Idaho, with its primary staff in the Philippines. Angeles, Pampanga just north of Manilla, is one of the worst places on the planet for sex trafficking. Wipe Every Tear has set shop up there with safe homes and offices. The staff consists of ladies who are Filipino, who have been rescued from trafficking that want to help girls on this journey out of trafficking. The girls also receive an education, both high school and college, and sponsorship for their children. Keith and Eric talk about the history of their friendship which began at St. Paul's Episcopal Church in Darien, Connecticut. Keith shares his born-again experience as a teenager during the Jesus movement. Through a 'bar ministry,' Wipe Every Tear has a team of men and women who gain entrance into the bars in Angeles City, Philippines to rescue these girls. Keith shares that the engine and key to this ministry is praise and worship.

CBN National Security Correspondent Caitlin Burke Reports: Two recent cyber-attacks highlight a new way hackers have found to successfully target businesses and governments alike. The strategy, which is growing in popularity, involves bad actors targeting third-party vendors who provide a service used by a network of companies or government agencies. Once the hackers find a way in, they have access to those providers' entire customer base. It's called a cyber supply chain attack, and according to security experts, these types of attacks mean you're only as strong as your weakest link. The two most recent attacks on the cyber supply chain were carried out by two different U.S. adversaries. In the first, Chinese hackers targeted an email security provider, and in the other, Russian hackers infiltrated a file transfer program used by the federal government. The SolarWinds cyber-attack back in 2020 remains the highest-profile example of this kind of strategy. Hackers placed malware on signed versions of software from the IT management system's supplier and then used it to gain access to 18,000 government and private organizations. Scott White, director of George Washington University's Cyber Security Program, says this supply chain hack is being used by both criminals and Advanced Persistent Threats (APT's) like China, Russia, and North Korea. He says protection against this line of attack is especially difficult because hackers could gain access at any point across very interconnected systems. That's especially true for global supply chains, with many countries not requiring the same security standards as the U.S. Research shows why securing these critical supply chains is so important. According to Gartner Inc, 45 percent of global organizations can expect a software supply chain attack by 2025. White says the federal government already offers resources to help U.S. organizations examine their various member networks and come up with a risk management process. While these specific attacks don't always make headlines, they must be taken seriously. In 2022 alone, more than 10 million people, and some 17,000 organizations fell victim to a cyber supply chain breach. That number is expected to rise in the future.

CBN Reporter Heather Sells Reports: The "Sound of Freedom" has passed $163 million in box office ticket sales, outgrossing big-budget competitors and becoming the surprise hit of the summer. All this despite early criticism of the movie by detractors who mislabeled it "Q-anon and adjacent" and called out the politics of star Jim Caviezel. For anti-trafficking advocates who have sought for decades to shine a spotlight on the exploitation of sex trafficking victims, the movie has provided welcomed awareness. Anti-trafficking advocates acknowledge that controversy over the film has politicized the issue in some ways, complicating their messaging. Still, they recognize that "Sound of Freedom" has provided an opportunity to educate moviegoers who want to better understand what's happening in their own communities and take action. Trafficking survivor Lisa Michelle founded Untethered Ministries in San Antonio, Texas, and says she's been overwhelmed with an outpouring of inquiries since the movie debuted. Michelle said she almost didn't see the movie, fearing it would hit too close to home. Along with other advocates in the U.S. Michelle regrets that "Sound of Freedom" focused on trafficking overseas, rather than here at home. Still, she says this summer provides a unique opportunity. In the wake of the movie, Safe House Project has also released new faith-based content for church groups wanting to engage with the issue. Other faith-based anti-trafficking advocates like Shared Hope, International Justice Mission, and Street Grace also provide resources for churches to access. Linda Smith, founder of Shared Hope International, says she hopes that more people will begin to recognize the signs of trafficking and understand how to keep kids safe. Michelle says people often are blind to trafficking in their neighborhoods. For parents, says Michelle, perhaps the most challenging task is keeping kids safe on their phones. That's typically where traffickers, posing as interested friends, prey on children and teens.

700 Club CBN NewsWatch #08172023	52:30	5:00	REC	PA/O/E	8/17/2023	12:00 PM

CBN Reporter Brody Carter Reports: Reaching potential mass shooters before they pull the trigger has become the goal of a new initiative working to share a message of hope and deterrence. It's called "Let's Talk to Them." The organization started in 2020 following the back-to-back tragedies in Uvalde, Texas, and Buffalo, New York. In those cases, both shooters bought their weapons after turning 18 and used social media as their sounding board. The number of mass killings so far in 2023 number more than any other year at this point since 2006. As America struggles with this epidemic of violence as well as surging mental health crisis, young people are often caught in the middle. It's a morbid connection that suicide and homicide are the second and third leading causes of death for those between the ages of 10 to 24. Given the staggering growth of these violent deaths, national leaders and experts often find themselves dealing with the aftermath rather than planning on prevention. One of the more frightening statistics is the number of deadly mass shootings carried out by someone 21 or younger. That's become a focus for the Let's Talk to Them initiative. Jordan Estrada, acting director of the organization, is certainly familiar with the issue as a first responder. He's spent the last 15 years helping organizations put together active shooter response plans. Using that background and experience, he wants to focus on prevention by connecting potential killers with those willing and able to help. Estrada believes people are looking for a mental health solution without necessarily knowing what that solution is. Ken Churchill, founder of TalentED Ventures is helping finance the initiative. Churchill believes in innovating pathways for societal health. In this case, he points out how big tech's search engine optimization (SEO) on the topic of self-harm can provide help for anyone browsing the internet with self-destructive thoughts or questions – but nothing exists for people looking to commit mass violence. Compare that to search results on a statement like, "I want to commit mass murder" – where there's not one link to help. Instead, you can find step-by-step instructions on how to carry out a mass shooting in Google's top three results. The team is better understanding the mindset of potential mass murders by working closely with someone who strongly considered shooting up a public venue, a man by the name of Aaron Stark. Stark is a mental health advocate, sharing his story of how he strongly considered mass murder until help from a friend stopped his plans. Today, Stark helps Estrada and Churchill try to better understand that mindset. The team is searching for and curating content, media, blogs, and videos that might speak to anyone contemplating mass violence. The introduction page on the Let's Talk to Them website shares their vision to help. However, an undisclosed dark web page is now fully operational, connecting potential mass shooters with redirection content and chat features. The organization says this isn't about surveillance or espionage. Instead, the goal is to be a light shining into the dark corners of the web. Each situation varies, however, so police could potentially get involved. Estrada says the reason for his decision to help is because God's love is for everyone, even some capable of committing mass violence.

700 Club CBN NewsWatch #08212023	52:30	5:00	REC	PA/O/E	8/21/2023	12:00 PM

CBN Medical Reporter Lorie Johnson Reports: Young people as young as middle school need to know just one pill from a friend or a drug dealer can secretly contain a deadly amount of fentanyl. That's the warning being issued by experts on drug abuse and a father who lost his son to an accidental fentanyl overdose. David Magee, author of "Things Have Changed: What Every Parent (and Educator), Should Know About the Student Mental Health and Substance Misuse Crisis" told CBN News his son William seemed on top of the world. He was a track star and honors student at Ole Miss. Then the unthinkable happened. Beginning in high school and through college, however, William treated his anxiety with prescription medication he bought on the street. After rehab, it appeared William kicked his habit, but after an apparent relapse, his father found William dead from an accidental overdose. Davis learned his son bought and took a pill that he didn't know contained a deadly amount of fentanyl. The grieving father recommends parents talk to their children about their emotions as early as possible. Fentanyl is a synthetic opioid that's up to 100 times more potent than morphine. In fact, it's so powerful only a speck, just two milligrams, can kill. That's the size of a few grains of salt. Drug dealers often add a little fentanyl to the prescription pills they manufacture in illegal labs, where they make counterfeit versions of medications like Xanax, Adderall, Percocet, Oxycontin, and more. They add fentanyl to make the drugs more addictive and keep their customers coming back for more. However, sometimes these pills contain deadly amounts of fentanyl. That's why people of all ages who take pills purchased on the street are overdosing from fentanyl without ever intending to take the drug, even children as young as middle school. The National Institute on Drug Abuse has monitored illicit drug use among middle school children for more than 40 years. Current Director Dr. Nora Volkow told CBN News today's numbers represent a good news-bad news scenario. On one hand, she says the number of middle school children who are using illicit drugs is lower than in previous years. However, those who are taking them face a much greater risk of death than in the past. Technology has a major impact in making today's drug trade more prevalent. Kelly Newcom, founder of Brave Parenting told CBN News that parents need to become educated about teen drug use. For example, parents need to be aware that kids who buy so-called "street drugs," such as counterfeit prescription pills, no longer have to meet a dealer in some random alley or on an actual street as they did in years past. Today, all they have to do is make a deal on their smartphone, in some cases right under their parent's noses. The pills are then usually dropped off, even on the front doorstep, disguised for instance, as a food delivery. Psychologists say starting in middle school, teenagers can experience tremendous emotional upheaval. For this reason, many young people reach for pills to feel something different. Licensed psychologist Carolyn Rubenstein, PhD recommends parents try to make their children feel comfortable talking about their emotional challenges, adding it's helpful when parents explain to their children if they ever want to take prescription medication it must be prescribed by their doctor and purchased at a pharmacy. Newcom said parents should try to eliminate distractions when they attempt to discuss drug use with their children.

Tonight Praise Presents: Expanding the Mission with Robert Morris. Senior Pastor of Gateway Church, and Best-Selling Author, Robert Morris shares how and why he wrote the book "The Blessed Life" and began teaching that we get to give, we don't give to get. God wants to prosper us for the right reason; so that we can be a blessing. We are the most like God when we give, even when we're not going to get anything in return. He tells us true riches are people (souls). Christian television is the largest missionary organization in the world. Pastor Morris shares that to become a generous giver we must deal with a selfish heart, deal with a grieving heart, develop a generous heart, and develop a grateful heart. Everything we have come from the Lord. In the same way God gave His Son, the most extravagant gift we can ever give God is ourselves by making Him Lord of our life. Matt and Laurie tell viewers our gift this month is "Thank you."

Today on Takeaways with Kirk Cameron: How do you transform a mom-and-pop shop into a multi-billion-dollar business? Leadership. That's what we're talking about today. How can we apply biblical wisdom in today's world? How can we create a culture that is magnetic and draws people in? How do we better serve one another? These are all questions we'll be exploring today on the topic of leadership with our two guests. How did David Green take Hobby Lobby, a company which he started in his home, to become the largest privately owned arts and crafts retailer in the world? We'll hear exactly how he did it in a moment. We'll also hear from best-selling author and speaker Clay Scroggins, who found the secret to becoming a powerful servant leader who leverages influence to get things done.

CBN Reporter Mark Martin Reports: There's welcome news on the economic front in the form of some financial relief. Inflation across America is at its lowest annual rate in more than two years, as of June, but there could be a ways to go. Although prices are rising at a slower rate, they are still continuing to rise. The latest report from the Bureau of Labor Statistics shows the inflation rate is slowing, with prices rising at a 3 percent rate, the slowest pace in 2 years. That's thanks, in part, to lower gas prices, airline fares, grocery costs, and even cheaper used cars. The Consumer Price Index shows price increases easing a year after inflation rates spiked to their highest level in 4 decades. The inflation rate is down from a 4 percent annual rate in May. Experts say that means wages are now finally rising faster than prices. Although prices are rising more slowly, shoppers can still expect some sticker shock, compared to pre-pandemic levels. Also, prices are still above the Federal Reserve's 2 percent target. Economists are keeping their eyes on whether this trend continues through the summer. And as far as a potential recession? Treasury Secretary Janet Yellen says it's "not completely off the table." That causes E.J. Antoni of the Heritage Foundation concern. Another question is whether the decline in the inflation rate will affect the Fed's policy of hiking interest rates to bring down inflation. While economists say it appears those hikes are helping, they're still putting the squeeze on Americans trying to pay down credit cards or buy a home or car.

CBN Washington Correspondent Hilary Powell Reports: Americans have hit a new high in credit card debt. The surge means their overall balance shot above $1 trillion for the first time. While credit card balances are at historic highs, the New York Federal Reserve reports people are generally still paying their bills on time, at least for now. There are currently 70 million more credit card accounts open than before the pandemic, and it's definitely making an impact on how families choose to spend. The larger concern is credit cards are increasingly being used to pay down household bills. Experts say that could be the reason why credit card debt for families nationwide is unprecedented at a record-setting $1 trillion. CPA Howard Dvorkin, chairman of Debt.com, said the use of plastic is back up after consumer took a pandemic pause on spending. Other balances such as retail stores, consumer loans, and car loans are added to what the household balance sheet owes and also add to families' financial frustration. A recent Debt.Com survey reports Americans who admit feeling stressed after using credit cards is up 15 percent from last year. When you add in elevated interest rates, paying off debt becomes more expensive. Bankrate reports the average credit card charges more than 20 percent interest. The federal government is in the same boat with the Congressional Budget Office projecting the national debt to be nearly twice as large as the entire U.S. economy in 30 years. Congress could slow that trend by cutting spending. One suggestion from the CBO, however, mentions limiting Social Security as an option that won't be popular with politicians in an election year. The office also warns higher debt can erode confidence in the U.S. dollar. Dvorkin said before their next bill arrives, families should create a budget and seek a CPA.

Obesity in America has reached epidemic proportions with 1 in every 3 adults considered obese. The reasons behind this dangerous and growing health crisis may not always be what you expect. In any case, losing the weight is a journey. Keeping it off can be even harder. On this episode of "Taking Care of Business" we will discover that how we choose to lose weight is just as important as why.

On this emotional episode of Taking Care of Business we explore the difficult subject of youth suicide. Youth Suicides are now a pandemic in our country. The suicide rate for young people between the ages of 14 and 19 has jumped 70% in the past 10 years. 157,000 young people are hospitalized each year for self-harm. Many feel that this coincides with the launch and popularity of many of the social media apps and platforms. Most young people don't realize that social media sites are not accurate representations of the authentic lives of those using them. Meet young people who tell their stories of how they attempted to end their lives but lived to tell about it!

In a recent year, 47,000 individuals committed suicide in this country, 70,000 people died of drug overdose and many more died because of alcohol addictions. What is happening and, more importantly, what is being done to intervene? Depression and addictions are causing more suicide related deaths than at any other time in American history. Self-harm is not always caused by a gun; often it is a drug overdose or alcohol induced event. On this edition of Taking Care of Business, see the sad realities facing our society and meet those who are trying to intervene.

Tonight on Praise: Jordan Rubin, America’s Health Coach, Co-Founder of Ancient Nutrition and "New York Times" Best-Selling Author, and Todd Vincent, Director of Farming for Ancient Nutrition, share how they connected and began the new venture of the Ancient Nutrition Center for Regenerative Agriculture. Jordan explains that organic truly means a way of raising and growing food that doesn’t involve pesticides, herbicides, or fungicides. Regenerative is quite literally leaving the land better than you when found it. Regenerative Organic Certified is a new standard on foods, beverages, skincare, and now supplements. He shares that Organic Superfruits & Organic Superveggies are the first ever Regenerative Organic Certified supplements and are packaged in biodegradable packaging. Todd shares how his farming is different and that they are using water buffalo, cattle, sheep, and goats on their farm and do not use fertilizer. The animals provide the fertilizer. They’re almost through year one of a fourteen-year program. These animals will graze in a program fashion for six years, and the seventh year they will let the land go fallow, as the Bible says. And all the while scientists are on site measuring the results, so that they can share this information with the world. Jordan shares his mission to end food waste. Jordan also shares that to heal the planet, feed the world, and transform health is their mission and what Ancient Nutrition exists to do as a founder and farmer-led company is to bring information, hope, and tools to transform lives.

Tonight on Praise: Matt and Laurie sit down with Sheila Walsh in Israel as she brings her new first-time perspective to the Holy Land. We take a sneak peek at her brand-new series called "My First Trip to Israel with Sheila Walsh." Matt and Laurie talked about his mother's depression, how she was delivered and testified about it for the rest of her life and was so joyful. Sheila talks about growing up with a profound sense of shame because of her father's violence before his death by suicide, and her suicide attempt later in life. They discuss the acts of faith and miraculous healings as told in the Bible when Jesus told the disciples to go to the other side of the Sea of Galilee, the deliverance of the man filled with demons, the woman with the issue of blood, Jairus' daughter, and the centurion. Sheila tells viewers that although we may feel overlooked, forgotten, anonymous, or unworthy, Jesus not only sees us but seeks us out. That has never been clearer to her than since she set her feet on the soil of Israel. Although we think we know the stories, when we set our feet where Jesus set his feet, it changes everything. She will not be the same again. She invites viewers to come to Israel.

					9/9/2023	9:30 AM

Tonight on Praise: Rick Warren, Founder of Saddleback Church, Pastor, and "New York Times" Best-Selling Author of "The Purpose Driven Life: What on Earth Am I Here For?" tells us there is no more fundamental question than 'Why am I alive?' He asks the question of existence (Why am I alive?) significance (Does my life matter?) and purpose (What am I here for?). He explains God's five purposes for our lives: 1. You're planned for God's pleasure. 2. You're formed for God's family. 3. You're created to become like Christ. 4. You're shaped to serve God. 5. You're made for a mission. To fulfill these five purposes love God with all your heart, soul, mind, and strength (worship) and love your neighbor as yourself (service). Let God love you because we were created for God to love. Pastor Rick shares his personal pain when his wife, Kay, had cancer, and when his son, Matthew, struggled with mental illness and committed suicide. Out of their greatest pain, Pastor Rick and his wife, Kay, began ministering to families with mental illness and families struggling with the suicide of a family member. Pastor Rick expresses the importance of recognizing the deeper the pain, the fewer words should be used. Simply show up and shut up; this is the ministry of presence. Pastor Rick encourages viewers to use their pain to help others.

They share the story of how they met and started music together and ultimately gained national exposure. Brian talks about the physical impact fear, anxiety and stress had on his body as well as heart issues of forgiveness. He shares how the word of God brought healing to his mind and sustained him each day, giving him peace that relieved his panic attacks. Through his experience he learned his limitations and the necessity to spend time with God each morning. Brian’s life story is detailed in his book, "When God Becomes Real," which is also the statement of faith he told his children during his health crisis. Brian wants to give people hope that they will get through whatever they are going through. Brian and Jenn also share how several of their songs came about. They started a School of Worship to help train people in practical things but also spiritual things, bringing experts from around the world. They also have online school that is year-round. Brian shares that the heart of worship is that moment when God is in the room.

Dr. Cloud shares that although we think of COVID as over, many people developed patterns in their lives during COVID and have not rebooted their lives to get reconnected, in control, in routines, to pursue and process things. Although everyone was impacted, it was most difficult for the younger generation. Dr. Cloud shares the concept of boundaries. He explains the five foundational issues of trust which are Understanding, Motive, Ability, Character and Track Record. He also explains the Second Law of Thermodynamics. He encourages viewers to reach outside of themselves and find some groups, or a counselor, or a pastor or some wise friends to start, who understands and has the wisdom and knowledge to do what needs to be done.

Tonight on Praise: Matt and Laurie Crouch are joined by Rabbi Jason Sobel and Pastor Jentezen Franklin as they tour Israel to explore the Holy Land. Along the way, Pastor Jentezen teaches us that the fact that Jesus bled from different parts of his body, and the fact that he bled from his head speaks especially to this generation after COVID. He bled for our mental health, he bled for the healing of our minds, healing from depression, hopelessness, mental illness, mental distress, trauma, pain, and sorrow. He tells us to keep our mind stayed on Jesus and no matter what's going on he can give us the perfect peace referenced in Isaiah. In the Old Testament, he had a temple for his people. Under the new covenant, he has people for his temple. We are the temple of the Holy Spirit. Rabbi Sobel teaches us that when Jesus died on that cross, he died that we might find spiritual, emotional, relational, and physical healing as a result of his death and resurrection. Pastor Jentezen and Rabbi Sobel pray prayers of peace for viewers.

CBN Medical Reporter Lorie Johnson Reports: Doctors say regular exercise is a key to overall good health. However, if you're someone who thinks working out is boring and lonely, you might want to consider pickleball. It's now the fastest growing sport in America, especially among older people who are looking for exercise they are able to do, that's good for not only the body, but also the mind. Players are thrilled to discover something so healthy is also really fun. Although pickle ball looks like tennis, it's easier on the body. For example, there's less wear and tear on the joints. Pickleball is a slower game and much easier to grasp compared to tennis. Lessons are not needed. Like all sports, injuries are possible. Strains or tears in the feet, back, and should are the most common, especially among older folks. Experts recommend people talk to their doctor before starting a new activity and warming up before hitting the court. Pickleball was invented in 1960s Seattle when two men wanted to play badminton but only had the net. So they improvised using equipment from other sports – a waffle ball and ping-pong paddles. The name pickleball comes from the "pickle boat" in the rowing sport called crew, which instead of utilizing a designated team, uses various oarsmen from other boats. Pickleball surged in popularity during the COVID-19 pandemic, as people searched for ways to exercise outside, while keeping their distance. Health experts like Ashley Gorman, Ph.D., Board Certified Clinical Neuropsychologist with Atlas Neuropsychology, say pickleball offers many of the same brain benefits as ping-pong, a sport doctors recommend to help reduce cognitive decline, largely due to the constant hand-eye coordination. Pickleball can also improve reflexes. Many players say the social element is what keeps them coming back for more. This element is also good for the brain. Exercise can help us sleep better, and vitamin D from sun exposure can improve our mood. So while trying a new sport can be intimidating, especially if you've been on the bench for a while, pickleball can be easy, fun, and very healthy.

CBN Medical Reporter Lorie Johnson Reports: Nearly 70 million Americans report suffering from some type of digestive issue, according to government statistics, while it's believed many more suffer in silence. While the causes can vary, some point to an unhealthy diet and say reversing that pattern can make all the difference. While serving as a Bible camp counselor, Jordan Rubin became suddenly ill with an inflammatory bowel disease that became so severe it eventually caused him to lose 80 pounds and the ability to walk. After being diagnosed with Crohn's colitis, Jordan saw dozens of doctors over a two-year period to no avail. Then he met Joseph Brasco, M.D., a Huntsville, Alabama gastroenterologist. That changed, however, when the two embarked on a program for Jordan that finally produced positive results. Dr. Brasco helped Jordan adopt a diet to help balance his gut microbiome. That's the ecosystem of good and bad bacteria in the intestines that scientists have discovered can have wide-ranging health implications. The key for Jordan was to follow a diet plan putting lots of good bacteria, called probiotics, and other healthy foods into his system while staying away from items that led to the growth of bad bacteria. The experience was so profound, Jordan dedicated his life to becoming a natural health expert. He, Dr. Brasco, and fellow natural health expert Dr. Josh Axe, are sharing the plan that turned Jordan's life around in the book "The Probiotic Diet: Improve Digestion, Boost Your Brain Health, and Supercharge Your Immune System. The diet is for people struggling with all kinds of digestive problems. The Probiotic Diet involves taking a daily probiotic supplement, then moving to consume the various foods and beverages containing probiotics, so-called "good bugs," which are various types of living bacteria proven to be good for us. While many of these items may seem new, most are actually very old. Since the good bacteria are alive, like most living organisms, they need food, called prebiotics, to survive and reproduce. Fiber-rich foods, like vegetables, are what health experts consider to be prebiotics, which helps the good bacteria to stay alive and multiply. Other examples of high-fiber foods include fruit, beans, and whole grains. While a healthy gut microbiome involves adding lots of good bacteria and fiber to our diet, it also calls for subtracting other items, like processed foods and sweets, which lead to the overgrowth of bad bacteria. So while millions of people look for relief from painful digestive problems, for some, it can be found in The Probiotic Diet, which promotes consuming fermented selections and whole foods created by God. Modern scientists recently discovered this old plan can help us feel better by achieving the right balance of good and bad bacteria in our gut.

CBN Medical Reporter Lorie Johnson Reports: The U.S. Surgeon General says loneliness is now a public health threat so severe that it's on par with smoking and obesity. For far too many Americans, loneliness can become a painful secret, U.S. Surgeon General Vivek Murthy, M.D. said, revealing that he experienced this firsthand. Like many others, Dr. Murthy experienced loneliness as a child, and again as an adult. Last month, Dr. Murthy released a new Surgeon General Advisory calling attention to the public health crisis of loneliness, isolation, and lack of connection in our country. He said loneliness increases the risk of physical ailments like heart disease, dementia, and stroke plus mental ones, including depression, anxiety, and suicide. He adds the possibility of premature death due to loneliness could equal that of smoking 15 cigarettes a day and can pose a greater health risk than living with obesity. Murthy said about half of adults are struggling with loneliness and even greater numbers of children are. That can be surprising given the fact that many young people are frequently connecting with their peers online. However, Murthy said technology serves as a poor substitute for in-person connection. Mental health experts, like psychiatrist Daniel Amen, believe social media can prove to be addicting, and therefore predict the problem will only get worse. Dr. Amen said loneliness was a serious problem in America before the pandemic, but the COVID-19-related shutdowns made loneliness "exponentially worse." He points out that while the pandemic is over, many people continue to remain isolated from those with whom they interacted before the pandemic. Therefore, he recommends minimizing screen time while maximizing in-person interactions. Dr. Amen also believes more public resources should be used to hire and train mental health professionals so they're more accessible and affordable to the people who need them.

CBN Medical Reporter Lorie Johnson Reports: The World Health Organization (WHO) announced last week that the artificial sweetener aspartame could cause cancer, particularly cancer in the liver. The declaration captured the attention of consumers worldwide because since it was introduced into the food supply in 1980, the product has been added to more than 5,000 sugar-free, diet, and low-calorie foods and beverages including Diet Coke, Trident gum, Jell-O, Log Cabin Sugar-Free Syrup, Equal, Crystal Light, and Zero-Sugar Snapple. It can even be found in health products like toothpaste, chewable vitamins, and cough drops. However, just hours after WHO made the announcement, in a rare move, the U.S. Food and Drug Administration (FDA) publicly stated they disagree with WHO's classification of aspartame as a possible carcinogenic, largely because of the research the global health organization used to arrive at their conclusion. The FDA cited "significant shortcomings in the studies" the WHO used, and added, "FDA scientists do not have safety concerns." The WHO says unsafe levels of aspartame consumption begin at 40 milligrams per kilogram per day, which is the amount in about nine cans of Diet Coke. This isn't the first time aspartame and other artificial sweeteners have come under fire. For years, doctors have been warning about the impact on the gut microbiome, the balance of good and bad bacteria in our intestines that a growing number of doctors say has an enormous impact on our overall health. Studies show people who drink diet soda are at higher risk for dementia, stroke, and even weight gain, than people who don't consume these beverages. Most artificial sweeteners have no nutritional value, but neither do many natural sweeteners, like sugar. That's why doctors recommend avoiding both.

CBN Medical Reporter Lorie Johnson Reports: Heart disease remains America's number one cause of death, claiming one out of every five lives lost. However doctors say many of these deaths are preventable if we make certain changes to our lifestyles, such as lowering cholesterol. More than 200 million people worldwide take a statin drug because of its ability to significantly lower LDL, so so-called "bad" cholesterol. However, statins aren't perfect medicines. Research shows up to 29 percent of statin users complain of side effects. Muscle symptoms, like pain, weakness, and cramps, are by far the most common, but others include stomach problems and fatigue. Patients who experience side effects often stop using statins. But now, there are pharmaceutical alternatives for people who want a medicine to help lower their LDL cholesterol but don't want to take a statin. A Cleveland Clinic-led study shows bempedoic acid is effective and without the drawback some experience with statins. The study involved 14,000 statin-intolerant patients. The group that took bempedoic acid experienced significant benefits compared to the group that took a fake pill known as a placebo. Bempedoic acid did, however, raise a few red flags. In addition to bempedoic acid, doctors can prescribe a number of other non-statin cholesterol-lowering drugs. The American Heart Association announced the top eight ways to achieve good cardiovascular health, such as eating right, exercising, getting enough sleep, and keeping blood pressure in check. In addition to statins and statin-alternative pharmaceuticals, some doctors recommend natural products to help lower cholesterol, such as red yeast rice extract, fish oil pills, oatmeal, and niacin.

CBN National Security Correspondent Caitlin Burke Reports: For the first time since the Cold War, the Navy is expanding its Chaplain Corps. This year alone, the goal is to fill 70 active duty slots, a number that would place one chaplain on every U.S. Navy destroyer. Rear Adm. Gregory Todd serves as the Navy's Chief of Chaplains, a position that also covers the Marine Corps and Coast Guard. Over the course of his career, he's worked as a chaplain in all three branches, responding to Ground Zero after 9/11, and deploying to both Iraq and Afghanistan. With growing mental health issues threatening service members across the board, Todd says chaplains can be the tip of the spear. According to research from Columbia University, Duke, and Harvard, those engaged in spiritual practices are 50 to 80 percent less likely to suffer depression. Todd says the Pentagon's decision to grow the Chaplain Corp is part of an effort to better care for people – a new emphasis on what he calls spiritual readiness. Now it's up to him to fill the vacancies, and he's counting on a new generation to answer the call. While a chaplain at Emory University, Lt. Cmdr. Saul Burleson says God put military ministry on his heart. He now serves as a Navy chaplain on the USS Makin Island. While his sailors are similar in age to the college students with whom he once worked, the job responsibilities look quite different. Lt. Col. Brandon Moore is an Army chaplain. After years of deploying with soldiers, he now serves as a recruiter for the Chaplaincy School at Fort Jackson. As the branch with the largest Chaplain Corp, Moore says the Army isn't looking to grow, but rather to maintain. Military chaplains are required to meet the same age and physical fitness standards as any other service member. Plus there's educational requirements, which include a Bachelor's degree, a Masters in divinity, or some area of religion, and then professional ministry experience. 2nd Lt. Michael Englesgjerd is a candidate in the Army's Chaplaincy School. He felt called to minister to soldiers after his own military service. As he goes through the program, he's learning to view the men and women he serves alongside in a much different light. Three decades into his career, Rear Adm. Todd calls caring for the men and women of the Armed Services a sacred honor and privilege. While the Navy is currently asking for 70 additional chaplains, Todd anticipates a need for even further growth, with the Marine Corps and Coast Guard expected to follow suit.

CBN Medical Reporter Lorie Johnson Reports: Teenagers are participating in a dangerous trend that's sweeping the nation. A growing number of America's youths, even as young as 11 years old, are vaping THC, the ingredient in marijuana that makes a person "high." The most recent CDC figures available show more than one in five high school seniors vaped THC in 2020, which was a significant increase over prior years, and likely even greater today. Many parents may know THC is the main psychoactive compound in marijuana but don't realize vaping it is much more potent than smoking a joint. Unlike typical marijuana cigarettes that contain 10% THC, today's new THC vaping devices can concentrate it to a staggering 95%. Nora Volkow, M.D., director of the National Institute on Drug Abuse, told CBN News the high-content THC people are consuming can cause serious mental issues. In addition to mental health issues, Dr. Volkow said more doctors are seeing patients suffering from a number of physical health complications stemming from high THC consumption. Further complications include stomach issues, such as cannabis hyperemesis syndrome. Nick Sauber told CBN News he started vaping THC when he was just 14 years old and in the eighth grade. He noticed right away it got him very high, very fast. THC vape pens are small enough to fit in the palm of the hand, and are often smokeless and odorless. That means kids like Nick can vape THC pretty much anywhere they want without anyone noticing. Before long, however, Nick noticed the drug's effect. He quickly became addicted. A loophole in the 2018 Farm Bill, which legalized hemp, also legalized Delta-8 THC vape products, which are synthesized from hemp. That means in addition to cannabis dispensaries, Delta-8 vape pens can be sold at smoke shops, gas stations, dollar stores, and online, in nearly every state. Oftentimes, deliveries can be made to homes with the products packaged in containers that do not reveal what's inside. Manufacturers literally sweeten the deal by adding kid-friendly flavors like bubblegum and strawberry to their vape pens. Aubrey Adams, director of Every Brain Matters, which educates about the health dangers of marijuana, told CBN News people who develop THC-induced psychosis are at a five times greater risk of developing schizophrenia. Likewise, Christian parenting expert Kelly Newcom, founder of Brave Parenting told CBN News parents need to address the issue of vaping THC with their own children. Newcom advises parents to search vape pens online and become familiar with their appearance, because many adults may not even recognize the devices in their own homes because they can look like other common items like thumb drives, ink pens, or markers. Then Newcom suggests parents look for the devices in their child's bedroom or backpack, as well as missing or spliced charging cords, which are often used to power the devices. Newcom says if a child is vaping THC, the sooner the parent discovers the problem and intervenes, the better. Newcom says if a parent discovers, or suspects their child is vaping THC, the parent should confiscate their child's smartphone because that's often the primary tool used to advertise, buy and sell. Parents who confiscate smartphones and still want their children to have the ability to communicate can give their children a kid-safe phone, like Pinwheel. Parents can also use a drug test, available at most pharmacies and online, as a way to monitor their child. Adams said drug testing her son actually gave him an excuse to avoid marijuana while also saving face. Newcom says marijuana in a child's body can be detected long after they consume it. Some kids make THC vaping their drug of choice because they feel it's safer than other street drugs, such as pills, cocaine, and heroin, which can often be laced with deadly fentanyl, without the user's knowledge. While THC vapes typically are fentanyl-free, that could change. Fortunately, Nick got the help he needed to quit vaping THC. He urges others to kick the habit, or better yet, never start.

Every night in America, over 500,000 people sleep on the streets without a roof over their head. Millions more are homeless without a place to call their own. While homelessness is caused by many factors, in a nation where home ownership should be attainable by any citizen, this is not the case. Many people have given up on the American dream of owning a home. The reasons are many and complicated. Taking Care of Business examines our nation's housing dilemma.

TBN Special: The Rise of Artificial Intelligence. Science fiction films have warned for years of a dark future with super intelligent computers and all-powerful robots developing minds of their own and overthrowing their creators, sinister machines in a technological dictatorship that enslaves humanity. It wasn't long ago that these scenarios seemed more suited to a summer blockbuster than to real life. But in recent years something has changed. It seems everyone is now talking about A.I. Artificial intelligence and its potential to radically transform the ways in which we live. In some ways it already has. Practically all of us have been using some form of A.I. for years. From recommendations on amazon or Netflix, to Alexa or Siri, but with the onset of ChatGPT and systems like it, this technology has now reached a much more advanced level. In the process it raised some serious questions and concerns. Could A.I. eventually make some jobs obsolete? Could it further isolate people and limit human interaction? Could it be used to deceive, to even swing elections? Could A.I. be used to take away your privacy and create a surveillance state? Are we on the onset of an A.I. arms race with China and other American adversaries vying to master this powerful technology? For Christians, the questions go even further. What if A.I. is controlled by forces that are hostile to a biblical worldview? On the other hand, could Christians use A.I. to advance the kingdom of God to spread the gospel in new and innovative ways? And could A.I. play a role in Bible prophecy? Over the next hour join Eric Stakelbeck as we explore all of these questions and more with our guests, including one of the world's leading tech experts Brian Roemmele, Dr. James Spencer, Theologian, Author, and President of D.L. Moody Center, Tennessee Senator Marsha Blackburn, and Pastor James Kaddis, Senior Pastor of Calvary Chapel Signal Hill, and Pastor Matthew Pollock, Founder and Lead Pastor of The Way Family Church, as we break down the rise of artificial intelligence and what it means for you.

CBN Washington Correspondent Hilary Powell Reports: The Federal Reserve Wednesday escalated the inflation fight once more in its most aggressive series of rate hikes in 40 years. The Fed imposed another quarter-point rate hike on Wednesday in an effort to slash consumer demand and get companies to hire fewer people. It's the eleventh rate hike in the past 15 months. Economists say it's meant to slash shopping and spending in order to force the sky-high cost of living to go down. There are some visible ways to see if it's working. Vacant shops – a sight shoppers can get used to this summer. In downtown San Francisco, a bleak scene and a sign of the times that hiring is going down – which economists say is another goal of the Federal Reserve. Federal Reserve Chairman Jerome Powell hasn't ruled out additional rate hikes in the fall and noted the potential impact on working families. Economists say the idea is that higher rates make businesses tighten their belts, leading to less hiring and greater unemployment. Experts said to also expect lower income and higher borrowing costs. A small bright spot shows that savers are earning more on their cash – but there's also a cost to the nation. The borrowing cost for the U.S. Treasury may also rise. New numbers from the government's "FiscalData" website show this week the country's total public debt hit $32.597 trillion. Concerned, a bipartisan group of U.S. lawmakers is set to form a political alliance called the Bipartisan Fiscal Forum to focus on U.S. debt. Economists said many families are focused on their own checkbooks rather than the nation's economic growth. The cooldown of inflation coupled with resilient economic performance has given rise to optimism among some economists that the U.S. could avoid a recession. Most forecasters surveyed this week by the National Association for Business Economics said the probability of the U.S. entering a recession in the next 12 months is 50% or less.
