Joe Lopinto Sheriff of Jefferson Parish saw a big drop in major crime in 2023, the second-fewest crimes in the parish since 1974. We'll spend some time with Sheriff Joe Lopinto about what they've been doing to combat crime.

Michael Willis CEO and Founder of H.O.P.E. (Help Other People Endure) The core tenets of HOPE's approach to solving the crime problem that is so threatening to New Orleans are community engagement, community informing, community opportunities – and community accountability. Willis believes that successful approaches of the past can help solve the crime problem of today. Among these are mentorship programs like Big Brother, Big Sister and scouting, along with tutoring and test preparation courses. He is resuscitating the "It's 10:00, do you know where your kids are?" entreaty for parental accountability. And in a real retro touch, he is bringing back Crime Dog McGruff, as a way to "soften" young people's attitudes towards the police and authority in general.

8:45am Vincent Rossmeyer Policy director for the Cowen Institute at Tulane A new poll from the Cowen Institute at Tulane shows growing dissatisfaction with the direction of New Orleans leadership and the city's public education system

Anne Kirkpatrick NOPD Superintendent How did Chief Kirkpatrick enjoy her first Mardi Gras? And how did it go from the police perspective? We'll also get her perspective on the crime special session in B.R. Plus, the latest on yesterday's Crescent City Connection shooting!

Jim LaCour LA Dept. of Wildlife and Fisheries State Wildlife Veterinarian Feral hogs (Sus scrofa) are the most reproductively efficient large mammal on Earth, and they can adapt to survive in nearly any environment. Statisticians have estimated that due to the feral hog's high reproductive rate, 70 to 75% of the population must be harvested to control the population. In Louisiana, hunter harvest numbers are less than half that so populations are growing. Feral hogs are found in all 64 parishes in Louisiana, and Louisiana's feral hog population is currently estimated at 700,000. And there seems to be an uptick in the ravages the hogs bring. So what can be done to bring these voracious beasts under control? At 11:30, we'll talk with LA Dept. of Wildlife and Fisheries State Wildlife Veterinarian Jim LaCour for answers.

Paul Rainwater Chair of Gov. Landry's Sewerage & Water Board Task Force & former interim Director of the Sewerage & Water Board Governor Jeff Landry's Sewerage & Water Board Task Force is tasked with examining New Orleans drainage issues and power failures that result in damaging street flooding, like we saw just this past Monday. They're also charged with figuring out recommendations to be done legislatively... and fixes that can happen locally. The Task force is doing lots of work behind the scenes - meeting with rank-and-file employees and concerned citizens, and having conversations about improving billing system credibility and securing future funding. The SWB Task Force had their first meeting yesterday - we'll get an update from Task Force Chairman, PAUL RAINWATER, a former interim director of the Sewerage & Water Board.

Patricia Molina Head of the Physiology Department at LSU Health Sciences Center We spring forward this weekend. What does changing the clock do to our bodies?

Coach Derrick Henderson Founder of Don't Stop Dreaming (a local nonprofit) New Orleans Difference Makers! Every week we devote time to the New Orleans Coalition, a group determined to help make New Orleans a safe place to live, work & raise our families. This week's guest: Coach Derrick Henderson, Founder of Don't Stop Dreaming (a local nonprofit). Don't Stop Dreaming is a movement to reach the youth across the city of New Orleans and show them what a dream realized can be. Their mission is to encourage and promote purpose, community, self-love, and empowerment through the development of economic, educational, and spiritual supports with an emphasis on their natural gifts. The program was initially designed as a mentorship and enrichment summer camp geared towards young African American boys, whose parent is incarcerated, has been incarcerated, deceased, or absent in their lives yet we found the need is greater.

Allison Plyer Chief demographer at The Data Center Louisiana continues to lose residents according to the latest census estimates. Why are people leaving?
