The Missing and Murdered

A 200-mile journey on horseback honors Indigenous women and children past and present.

After the Dakota Uprising of 1862, 303 Dakota men were sentenced to death. President Lincoln commuted 264 of their sentences. On December 26, 1862 in Mankato, MN, 38 Dakota men were hanged until dead in the largest single day mass execution in American history. In April 1863, the remaining men, women and children were moved by boat to Nebraska and South Dakota.

The Missing and Murdered Indigenous Women and Children ride (MMIW) was created six years ago to raise awareness and commemorate those who were disappeared during that transition. Riders also bring their own names of loved ones who have been affected by violence since then, those who have been lost and left without a voice.

Their names are not forgotten. In June, 2019, the riders extended their ride by 60 miles, originating from the Santee Reservation in Niobrara, Nebraska, to Fort Thompson and on to the state capitol in Pierre to honor the victims. The Missing and Murdered is a locally produced film, broadcast by SDPB, that tells the history and follows the journey of the riders of today.

GREETINGS FROM FORT PIERRE

Travel with SDPB to Fort Pierre and around South Dakota on an all-new episode of Dakota Life, Thursday, May 6, at 8pm (7 MT) on SDPB1 and SDPB.org

Fort Pierre was built on Oceti Sakowin, Cheyenne, and Mnicoujou traditional lands along the Missouri River. Known as the oldest continuously occupied white settlement in South Dakota, Fort Pierre is home to natural and historic sites: the mouth of the Bad River, the Wakpa Sica Reconciliation Center, the Verendrye Monument establishing France's purported claim to the Louisiana Purchase, rodeo grounds and the Casey Tibbs Rodeo Museum, and the Fort Pierre Chouteau National Landmark, one of the largest Great Plains trading posts in the 1830s.

Meet John Banasiak, a photography professor at the University of South Dakota, who has been recognized with a Governor's Award in the Arts for Outstanding Service in Arts Education. Banasiak says the award is a group effort, as his art department colleagues work together to create an environment for learning and he continues to learn from his students.

DIAMOND A CATTLE CO.

The Diamond A Ranch near Eagle Butte was one of several large outfits established in western South Dakota at the turn of the 20th century. The grasslands west of the Missouri River were still mostly un-fenced and the big-time cattle bosses could continue to operate almost as they had during the days of the great cattle drives decades before.

BRINGING BUFFALO BACK: REDCO'S WOLAKOTA BUFFALO RANGE

Buffalo are returning in greater numbers to the Sicangu Lakota Oyate. A project of the Rosebud Economic Development Corporation (REDCO), Wolakota, meaning "to live the Lakota way of life," is building a bison herd on 28,000 acres of Rosebud Sioux Tribal lands. The multi-year build-up phase includes plans that convert the former working ranch known as Mustang Meadows from cattle to a 1,500-strong bison herd, as well as a workshop and gathering space. Wolakota is also exploring a processing plant, cultural and ecotourism and educational outreach.

The regenerative buffalo range is taking shape on land that was formerly under non-Indian ownership and control and is within the boundaries of the tribal nation. The plan is to build Wolakota into the largest Native-owned and managed buffalo range in the world.

REDCO is partnering with organizations like the World Wildlife Fund and the U.S. Department of the Interior, working to ensure the herd is grown sustainably and tended in a culturally appropriate manner, including a diverse range of animals such as older females and bulls who regulate and govern the herd. Buffalo from Badlands National Park, Theodore Roosevelt National Park, and Montana's American Prairie Reserve have been relocated to the Sicangu Lakota Oyate. Wizipan Little Elk (Sicangu Lakota), REDCO Chief Executive Officer, explains the origins and mission of Wolakota.

"The relationship between Lakota and buffalo is one that is inextricable. Buffalo cannot be separated from Lakota and Lakota cannot be separated from buffalo. We're one and the same people.

We consider buffalo to be our ancestors. When the buffalo were taken from us, it was a massive blow. When the genocide was committed against the Lakota and against other indigenous peoples, there was also a genocide committed against buffalo – a very specific and concerted effort to wipe out buffalo from the land. With colonial expansion, they knew that if they were able to eliminate buffalo from the land that it would then be easier to take our land and to move us onto the reservations.

The buffalo were everything to us. They were our food. They provided our clothing, our shelter, our ceremonial items. They were our teachers on how to organize ourselves and our society – on how to treat one another with kindness and compassion, on how to protect children, on how to honor our elders.

This is an opportunity to not dwell on the past, but to acknowledge it and move forward with new vision and with new light into a future that is healthy for our people, for our region, and for the planet.

The greatest opportunity that we're going to have with the Wolakota project is the ability to form meaningful relationships with buffalo and to bring them back – not necessarily into our daily lives, but perhaps into a part of our monthly or annual lives. We will have an opportunity to see them, to interact with them, and to form that relationship.

There are opportunities to heal our land. Buffalo are a keystone species. When you introduce buffalo back into the prairie ecosystem, the original prairie ecosystem starts to rebuild itself. You see increased biodiversity. We're going to see increased carbon capture. There are also going to be economic opportunities as well in terms of jobs that are created.

This is an opportunity for us to do what we call the development and implementation of local solutions to global challenges. And this is going to be an example not only for other native nations but really for the rest of the world to look at, and say, 'Hey, these guys are doing something pretty cool out in the middle of what we now call South Dakota. We can do that in our area as well.'

We have to be economically sustainable. Wolakota puts us on the map in a way that we've not been before and allows us to engage with the rest of the world in a different kind of way. It's important to understand that that no nation can be sovereign if it can't feed itself. This is just one component of a much larger plan and vision for the Sicangu Oyate to be able to feed itself and to not only be able to provide for our own, but for our relatives in the region. This is particularly important in the time of globalization and particularly poignant during the time of COVID where global food and supply chains have been upended.

The Rosebud Sioux Tribe has a constitutional provision that says that we are supposed to consider the implications of our decisions on the next seven generations. Instead of having that simply be an aspirational statement, let's actualize that and actually make a 175-year plan of prosperity, so that informs our approach and our work.

This herd doesn't belong to any one individual, one nation, or even one generation. This herd belongs to our people, the buffalo people, and it belongs to our future generations."

A new episode of Dakota Life premieres Thursday, May 6, 8pm (& MT) on SDPB1 and SDPB.org.

The chain of events that ignited Hindenburg's hydrogen remains one of the biggest mysteries in aviation history. Theories range from deliberate sabotage to sparks generated by static electricity or stormy weather conditions. Now, more than 80 years later, new footage has surfaced: an amateur 8mm film that shows the airship's final seconds from a fresh angle and in unrivaled clarity. NOVA Hindenburg: The New Evidence walks viewers through a novel set of experiments designed to test the likeliest scenarios that led to the Hindenburg's ignition.

Mothers in Crisis: Pandemic Stress

“All of our rituals of how we bring life into this world have changed and not necessarily in a good way.”

This month, Dr. Jill Kruse, a family medicine practitioner with Avera Medical Group in Brookings and a member of the Prairie Doc® team, hosts a live discussion with Dr. Clarissa Barnes on the particular ways COVID has impacted women.

Katy Beem: I’ve been working from home and remote-schooling our third grader for over a year. The role conflict can be very demanding. How are you seeing mothers in distress in South Dakota and what has it revealed about the realities of working women who are also caretakers? What can we learn from this?

Dr. Jill Kruse: “It’s definitely been an eye-opener. My husband is an ER nurse. I’m a physician. We’re both essential workers, but someone needs to be with our third- and fourth-graders. We had to do some very creative scheduling with coworkers. Last April, nearly half of mothers living with school-aged children weren’t working. That’s really concerning, especially if your job and your health insurance are tied to each other. So, I’ve been seeing a lot more stress and anxiety. And mothers tend to traditionally take a more active role in childcare and remote learning. Lots of guys have really stepped up and come a long way, but a good majority of that falls on moms – which can lead to emotional stress and isolation.”

KB: What kind of societal shift can we make, as individuals and organizations, to address what the pandemic has revealed?

JK: “The biggest thing is not being isolated. Getting rid of the stigma of asking for help. And with medicine, we’re doing more virtual visits, where I’m talking to patients in their own homes on their devices. During COVID, we had to take care of more people all at once that were sicker than we’re used to taking care of and so we’re using technology to monitor people from their homes safely and not having to transfer patients to larger hospitals that were at-capacity. Not everyone can drive to Sioux Falls to get care, so we have to consider how to keep people connected in our geographically spread area of South Dakota.”

KB: Many moms I know don’t necessarily reach out for care unless it’s a physical sickness, thinking anxiety and stress don’t qualify. Even though we should know better.

JK: “It’s so important to find your people, to form a group of women who can support, empower, and lift each other up and feel safe to admit that you’re not perfect and you don’t have this all figured out. Facebook and the internet have helped us find each other and say ‘I see your journey and I will rally, celebrate, cry and be there for you. I’m walking the same road.’ It’s important to have another person normalize that you’re feeling stressed and overwhelmed.”

KB: What are other issues women are experiencing from the pandemic’s impact?

JK: “This topic could be 20 different shows. For example, the changes in pregnancy and delivery with COVID, where we’re limiting people in the delivery room and visitors. Or, pregnancy is right up there with diabetes and heart disease for risk of severe COVID complications, so women are wondering if it’s safe to conceive during this

Images of the Past Old Guitars and the Local Musicians Who Love Them

SDPB goes behind the scenes of the collection at the National Music Museum in Vermillion to spotlight historic instruments and local musicians who love playing them.

Gibson Explorer — The Explorer model was one of a set of modernistic-looking electric guitars developed by Gibson in 1957-1958. This Explorer formerly belonged to John Entwistle, bass player of The Who and a long-time guitar and bass collector. He traded the instrument to his fellow-collector, guitarist, and bandmate Robert Johnson, who performed with him in his band Ox in 1975.

Martin D-28 — The Martin D-28, introduced in 1931, is an icon of American guitar-making. The D-28 is modeled after the wide, deep-bodied, style 111 guitars that Martin produced for Ditson in 1916 and called dreadnoughts after the heaviest class of British battleship during WWI. This large body, combined with steel strings, gave the D-28 a powerful sound that suited the emerging country music style, which needed a guitar that could stand up to a band and amplified voices. In 1941, when NMM 10738 was built, it was Martin's middle-grade dreadnought, with fancier inlay than the D-18, but not including the extensive abalone decoration of the D-45, first built at the request of the cowboy star, Gene Autry.

SDPB's Images of the Past is a multiplatform project that offers a fresh look at historic images and documents from the well-known and nearly unknown places, people, and events of South Dakota.

A story of immigration, assimilation and prejudice, The Donut King follows the journey of Cambodian refugee Ted Ngoy, who escaped the brutal Khmer Rouge in Cambodia. Ngoy arrived in California in the 1970s and through a mixture of diligence and luck, built a multi-million dollar donut empire up and down the West Coast. Over the next decade, Ngoy sponsored hundreds of visas for incoming Cambodian refugees and offered them steady employment in his donut shops.

Seth Tupper Named Supervising Senior Producer

Seth Tupper is transitioning from his job as an SDPB News reporter to the newly created position of Supervising Senior Producer.

In his new role, Tupper oversees the newscast team, as well as In the Moment on radio and South Dakota Focus on television.

“In my oversight of our growing newscast team, I will focus on planning and organization to ensure that our radio newscast slots are filled and news is flowing to our websites,” says Tupper. “Our hope is to get the newscast process operating as smoothly and automatically as possible with help from multiple sources within the organization, so that our beat reporters can focus less on filling the newscasts and more on in-depth, feature and investigative reporting.”

Tupper’s work with the public affairs shows will focus on upholding the new goals and standards developed as part of the recent revamp of In the Moment. “I’ll also continue working with South Dakota Focus host Jackie Hendry on a new identity for that show, which has already been under transition since she took the helm earlier this year.”

“Lastly, I hope to continue some of the reporting that I’ve so enjoyed doing for SDPB,” says Tupper. He says SDPB audience may see an even greater flow of content from the journalism team and even more integration among SDPB’s various platforms, all with the goal of keeping South Dakotans informed and engaged.

SDPB is pleased to partner with Levitt at the Falls to bring world class musical performances directly to you.

Matt Allen, aka Nur-D, is a hip-hop artist, activist, and self-proclaimed geek-culture aficionado active in Minneapolis' hip-hop scene since 2018. Nur-D's music radiates the power of positivity and hits with honest lyrics and pop culture punchlines. Nur-D's energetic performances and sharp lyrics have been on-stage at Paisley Park, First Avenue, Soundset and US Bank Stadium. He has toured with Brother Ali and shared a bill with Jaden Smith, Tyler the Creator, and the Wu-Tang Clan. His "clean rap" is free from cursing and covers topics from comic books to racial justice, to pro wrestling and body positivity.

About Levitt in Your Living Room

Produced in partnership with SDPB, Levitt in Your Living Room's spring programs feature artists with rich cultural traditions that they share with the world through their music.

NPR50: Shaping the Next 50 Years of Public Radio

This year marks the 50th anniversary of NPR's first on-air broadcast. For 50 years, NPR and SDPB have shared the responsibility and opportunity to execute the mission that NPR will "serve the individual, it will promote personal growth, it will regard the individual differences with respect and joy, rather than derision and hate. It will celebrate the human experience as infinitely varied, rather than vacuous and banal. It will encourage a sense of active, constructive participation, rather than apathetic helplessness."

As South Dakota's NPR station, SDPB is proud to celebrate NPR and use this moment as an opportunity to reimagine what public radio can be for the audiences of tomorrow.

Turn to SDPB for programs marking a half-century of excellence.

sound VISION

SDPB's Sound Vision: Building Community One Story at a Time

"We watched Sesame Street and it was wonderful. If only the world could be a better place like Sesame Street! We have 11 grandchildren. Some of them are young and I send the information to their parents. It's a whole new generation, and I'm excited there are programs to support kids, especially all SDPB's doing to help them learn online and during these difficult times."

- Andy & Barb Knight, Rapid City
Sound Vision Co-Chairs

SDPB's Sound Vision Campaign is a multi-year effort that has helped build studios, expand local journalism, enhance programming, and create outreach events South Dakotans trust and enjoy.

SDPB's ability to be the feet-on-the-ground source of information is vital. We are generating stories and news specific to your life. We are involved in the communities we serve, understanding that South Dakota is more than three big dots on the map.

The leadership phase of the Sound Vision Campaign has raised over $12.2 million towards the $13 million goal. The campaign goal is broken down in three parts:

- $1 million for facility upgrades
- $2 million to expand the reporting team and develop new programs
- $10 million for our endowment.

Now We are Asking You to Help Meet Our Goal by Making a Matching Gift.

Your gift will inspire your neighbors and colleagues to join you in giving to the Sound Vision Campaign. And because of the generosity of a group of SDPB donors, the first $125,000 in gifts towards the public phase of Sound Vision will be matched! Please do not miss this unique opportunity to help SDPB build community not one, but two stories at a time and double the impact of your gift.

To make a matching gift supporting the Sound Vision Campaign, visit: SDPB.org/SoundVision or use the envelope in this magazine. To make a multi-year pledge, please contact the Friends Development team by phone at 800-333-0789 or by email at Friends@SDPB.org

Friends of SDPB Establishes Endowment with Watertown Area Community Foundation

The Friends of South Dakota Public Broadcasting is pleased to announce a partnership with the Watertown Area Community Foundation (WACF) establishing an endowment account. The endowment with WACF enables SDPB donors from northeast South Dakota to keep their dollars locally within their community.

"We are honored to welcome the Friends of SDPB Fund to the Watertown Area Community Foundation," says Jan DeBerg, WACF Executive Director. "Whether you enjoy watching sports, the arts, or educational programming, a gift to this fund is another way to support your passion. South Dakota Public Broadcasting has been a long-time staple for many television viewers. This endowment fund ensures optimum local programming for generations to come."

"As a Watertown native, I am glad that we can partner with the Watertown Area Community Foundation," says Ryan Howlett, Chief Executive Officer of Friends of SDPB. "It is a wonderful community, and SDPB is happy to add to the vitality of Codington County and the surrounding area."

In addition to WACF, Friends of SDPB has established endowment funds at the Sioux Falls Area Community Foundation, the South Dakota Community Foundation, the Black Hills Area Community Foundation and SDPB's private foundation.

SDPB SUPPORTER SPOTLIGHT

SUSTAINING MEMBERS: JEN, TY & ALY MOOS, WEBSTER, SD

Jen and Ty Moos are originally from Helena, Montana. They relocated to South Dakota in 2006 for Ty's job as a fisheries biologist for SD Games, Fish & Parks. Jen is a social worker who works primarily with the elderly. She has also been active with volunteering for a local hospice, Webster Public Library's children's programming, the Day County Arts Center, and helped initiate Webster's city recycling program.

The Moos household recently cut the cord.

"We only have our antenna, which gets four PBS stations, and we find that quite fulfilling. Whether we want to watch the news, something cultural for music, or celebrate a holiday, watch something family-oriented that provides good information, we just turn on SDPB."

For their five-year-old daughter, Jen says she is especially appreciative that public broadcasting is commercial-free. "When my husband and I were growing up, we saw so many commercials that can affect your self-image: feeling like you had to fit in, you had to drink or be the pretty girl or not eat your meal. Those aren't messages we want in our home for Aly. I feel like PBS has not just cartoons but kid-friendly, positive, affirming messages, like, 'You are wonderful the way you are,' and 'What do you like about yourself?' and 'Let's talk about racial equality.' Just so many positive things!"

Watching Nature on SDPB is a Moos family tradition. "Almost every Wednesday night, we all gather our evening treat, sit on the couch and watch with awe at the Nature program offered on PBS. The quality is so amazing and it's very important information. It teaches our daughter to care about our environment, all the plants and animals that make up the ecosystem and makes science very 'cool' in our home."

Jen says the programming is very meaningful to their family.

"We're not paying anything for the antenna, but it's worth enough to me that I want to make a monthly donation to make sure we've got it in our home and that we're supporting it. We're very proud to partner with South Dakota Public Broadcasting."

TULSA: THE FIRE AND FORGOTTEN

Known as the Tulsa Race Massacre, a mob of white residents set fire to “Black Wall Street”—hundreds of Black-owned businesses and homes in the Greenwood district of Tulsa, Oklahoma—killing an estimated 100-300 Black residents and leaving an estimated 10,000 Black residents homeless. The documentary Tulsa: The Fire and the Forgotten examines this deadly assault on the 100th anniversary of the crime in the context of other racial massacres and police killings, including the one-year anniversary of the killing of George Floyd.

ASIAN AMERICANS

In an era of exclusion and U.S. empire, new immigrants arrive from China, India, Japan, the Philippines and beyond. Barred by anti-Asian laws they become America’s first “undocumented immigrants,” yet they build railroads, dazzle on the silver screen, and take their fight for equality to the U.S. Supreme Court. Asian Americans explores the impact of Asian Americans, the fastest-growing racial/ethnic group in the United States, on the country’s past, present and future. Told through individual lives and personal histories, the series is narrated by Daniel Dae Kim and Tamlyn Tomita.

Donkey Hodie, a new puppet series for kids ages 3-5, follows the adventures of Donkey Hodie, the granddaughter of the original Donkey Hodie from Mister Rogers' Neighborhood. Each episode is set in the land of Someplace Else, where Donkey Hodie and her pals empower preschoolers to dream big and overcome obstacles, to be resourceful, and to laugh themselves silly along the way! The colorful, multiplatform show features original new music and versions of Rogers' songs, reimagined for new audiences.

No Second Chance is a French thriller based on the novel by multi-award winning author Harlan Coben. When Dr. Alice Lambert wakes up in a hospital after 8 days in a coma, she finds that her life has taken a drastic turn. She has been shot, her husband killed and her daughter, Tara, abducted. The abductors are asking for 1 million Euros in exchange for her child with one rule: no police involvement.

A princess steals the heart of the President of the United States in an epic drama based on the World War II relationship of Franklin Roosevelt and Norwegian Crown Princess Martha.

Masterpiece Atlantic Crossing stars Kyle MacLachlan as Roosevelt, opposite Swedish star Sofia Helin (The Bridge) as the beautiful Martha, who flees the Nazis with her three young children and lives under Roosevelt's protection. Also starring Tobias Santelmann and Harriet Sansom Harris.

time, especially if they get sick and family can't be present to support. If you're a new mother with COVID, can you hold or breastfeed your baby? All of our rituals of how we bring life into this world have changed and not necessarily in a good way."

KB: The ripple effect is astonishing.

JK: "When the pandemic started, we stopped doing mammograms and pap smears. Now what happens to the women who missed an early breast cancer or early pap smear change? Now that we've started exams again, I've got an entire year of patients who are behind. Getting them caught up with mammograms, colonoscopies, pap smears, it affects that work. A CDC study shows pap smears dropped 85% with California's first stay at-home order. When that order was lifted, 25% of the exams were below normal.

On the program, we'll also talk about staying at-home and that caregiver stress. The typical caregiver for older adults is a woman in her 40s and 50s – the sandwich generation, where you're caring for your kids, your grandkids, and your parents. That's hard. And most frontline caregivers are women – women hold 78% of all hospital jobs, according to the Bureau of Labor Statistics. Women hold 70% of pharmacy jobs and 51% of grocery store jobs. The UN Women's World Health Organization showed violence against women increased by 25-30% during lockdown.

All of these issues, I'd love to touch on in the program, which is more than one episode can carry, but because it's a call-in show, our audience will tell us what is important to them and where we can take this conversation. There's definitely lots of things to talk about."
