A biography of America's seventh president, ANDREW JACKSON: GOOD, EVIL AND THE PRESIDENCY explores whether Americans should celebrate Jackson or apologize for him. Viewers discover that Jackson fought in the Revolutionary War when he was 13 years old and that he used the skills learned in battle to kill a man over a gambling debt; that Jackson led the American army to the most surprising victory in its history in the Battle of New Orleans, but that he also launched an unauthorized invasion of Florida; that Jackson was the first great champion of the common white man and owned more than a hundred black Americans; that Jackson dramatically expanded the United States and did so by brutally wresting vast regions of the south from Native Americans; that Jackson, in one of the boldest political strokes in history, founded the Democratic Party, yet was viewed by his enemies as an American Napoleon. The film concludes with the words of Jackson's first biographer, James Parton: "Andrew Jackson was a patriot, and a traitor. He was the greatest of generals, and wholly ignorant of the art of war. He was the most candid of men, and capable of the profoundest dissimulation. He was a democratic autocrat, an urbane savage, an atrocious saint." Martin Sheen narrates.

Series Title: By the People: Citizenship in the 21st Century
Version: SD-Base
Length: 60
Airdate: 1/6/08 3:00 PM
Service: PBS
Format: Other

Jim Lehrer hosts By the People: Citizenship in the 21st Century, a documentary featuring some of America's most talented and influential leaders debating the rights and responsibilities of citizenship. The one-hour special will show highlights of the Dialogues in Democracy project that By the People is undertaking in partnership with the Colonial Williamsburg Foundation. A major focus of the broadcast is the By the People convocation that took place in Williamsburg, Virginia, from November 8 through 11, with the goal of creating thoughts for a new "Declaration of Citizenship in the 21st Century." The convocation brought together a diverse group of approximately 50 influential Americans, reflecting diverse perspectives. Among the participants were: Nathan Baxter, Bishop of the Episcopal Diocese of Central Pennsylvania; David Davenport, former president of Pepperdine University; Lisa Madigan, Illinois Attorney General; Leo Melamed, Chairman Emeritus, Chicago Mercantile Exchange; Robert Moses, founder of The Algebra Project; Craig Newmark, founder of Craigslist; and Indianapolis 500 driver Janet Guthrie.

Version: SD-Base
Length: 30
Airdate: 1/14/2008 9:30:00 PM/502
Service: PBS
Format: Documentary

In 1932, a remarkable event occurred in Washington, D.C. In the darkest days of the Depression, unemployed World War I veterans marched on Washington, looking for an advance on the bonus compensation promised to them years earlier. After camping throughout Washington for two months, the veterans were driven out by force, as rising military figures General Douglas MacArthur, Major Dwight Eisenhower and Major George Patton cleared out the "Bonus Army" and burned their camps. By the time the clashes were over, two marchers and two children were dead, and the Bonus Army incident had become a political liability for President Hebert Hoover.

Episode Title: The Race for Absolute Zero
Version: SD-Base
Length: 60
Airdate: 1/15/08 8:00 PM / 501
Service: PBS
Format: Documentary

NOVA brings the history of this frosty subject to life with historical recreations of great moments in low-temperature research and interviews with noted historians and scientists, including Simon Schaffer of the University of Cambridge, and Nobel laureates Eric Cornell and Carl Wieman of the University of Colorado at Boulder and Wolfgang Ketterle of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. Part Two, "The Race For Absolute Zero," picks up the story in the late 19th century, when researchers plunged cold science to new lows as they succeeded in reaching the forbidding realm at which oxygen and then nitrogen liquefy. The master of this technology was Scottish chemist James Dewar, who pursued the holy grail of the field--liquefying hydrogen at minus 253 C, just 20 degrees above absolute zero. When he succeeded, he faced the unexpected and even more daunting challenge of liquefying the newly discovered gas helium at a mere 5 degrees above absolute zero. However, he had a talented competitor--Danish physicist Heike Onnes--and the ensuing race to the bottom of the temperature scale was as zealous as the contemporaneous race to the Earth's poles. The end of the 20th century produced another low-temperature contest. No one had ever seen an exotic form of matter called a Bose-Einstein condensate, which only forms at temperatures vanishingly close to absolute zero. But new techniques developed in the 1990s by Daniel Kleppner at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology set the stage for a race to create this truly bizarre substance--and with it win the latest heat in the quest for cold.

"When they passed out talent," Broadway star Carol Channing says of composer and lyricist Jerry Herman, "Jerry stood in line twice." Herman wrote the words and music for some of the greatest Broadway musicals ever mounted, including "Hello, Dolly!," "Mame" and "La Cage aux Folles." "Words and Music by Jerry Herman" uses insightful on-camera interviews, behind-the-scenes rehearsal sessions, rare photographs and never-before-seen archival footage of original Broadway performances to create a warm, humorous and moving portrait of a living theater legend. Five years in the making, this documentary by award-winning filmmaker Amber Edwards chronicles Herman's rapid rise from witty, topical off-Broadway revues during the 1950s to his first Broadway hits in the 1960s ("Milk and Honey," followed quickly by the record-breaking "Dolly" and then "Mame") through the less successful shows of the 1970s ("Dear World," "Mack & Mabel" and "The Grand Tour") to his triumphant return in 1983 with "La Cage aux Folles," which made social and political history.

TODAY'S MAN tells the story of Nicky Gottlieb, a former child genius who, at age 21, is diagnosed with Asperger Syndrome. People with Asperger's, which is a form of autism, tend to be highly intelligent, often geniuses in certain subjects, but are unable to pick up on social cues. The subtleties of body language, facial expression, tones or gestures are lost to Nicky, and his own behavior can be considered by others to be bizarre and inappropriate. TODAY'S MAN follows Nicky as he struggles to leave the safety of his family's home and the comfort of his favorite TV shows in order to find a job and an apartment. Made by Nicky's sister Lizzie Gottlieb, the film is a sister's search to understand her brother's mysterious inner life and a larger effort to comprehend Asperger Syndrome and the people who struggle with it.

Ten years ago, stimulants like Ritalin and Adderall were the drugs of choice to treat behavioral issues in children. Today children as young as four years old are being prescribed more powerful anti-psychotic medications that are much less understood. The drugs can cause serious side effects, and virtually nothing is known about their long-term impact. The increase in the use of anti-psychotics is directly tied to the rising incidence of one particular diagnosis - bipolar disorder. Experts estimate that the number of kids with the diagnosis is now more than a million and rising. As the debate over medicating children continues to grow, FRONTLINE producer Marcela Gaviria confronts psychiatrists, researchers and big pharma about the risks and benefits of prescription drugs for troubled children.

A biography of America's seventh president, ANDREW JACKSON: GOOD, EVIL AND THE PRESIDENCY explores whether Americans should celebrate Jackson or apologize for him. Viewers discover that Jackson fought in the Revolutionary War when he was 13 years old and that he used the skills learned in battle to kill a man over a gambling debt; that Jackson led the American army to the most surprising victory in its history in the Battle of New Orleans, but that he also launched an unauthorized invasion of Florida; that Jackson was the first great champion of the common white man and owned more than a hundred black Americans; that Jackson dramatically expanded the United States and did so by brutally wresting vast regions of the south from Native Americans; that Jackson, in one of the boldest political strokes in history, founded the Democratic Party, yet was viewed by his enemies as an American Napoleon. The film concludes with the words of Jackson's first biographer, James Parton: "Andrew Jackson was a patriot, and a traitor. He was the greatest of generals, and wholly ignorant of the art of war. He was the most candid of men, and capable of the profoundest dissimulation. He was a democratic autocrat, an urbane savage, an atrocious saint." Martin Sheen narrates.

In 1932, a remarkable event occurred in Washington, D.C. In the darkest days of the Depression, unemployed World War I veterans marched on Washington, looking for an advance on the bonus compensation promised to them years earlier. After camping throughout Washington for two months, the veterans were driven out by force, as rising military figures General Douglas MacArthur, Major Dwight Eisenhower and Major George Patton cleared out the "Bonus Army" and burned their camps. By the time the clashes were over, two marchers and two children were dead, and the Bonus Army incident had become a political liability for President Hebert Hoover.

The Iowa caucuses make history and are history. Now it's up to New Hampshire. We are here in the Granite State, on the road tonight on "Washington Week." Sen. Barack Obama (D-IL) said, "They said this day would never come. They said our sights were set too high. We are one nation. We are one people. And our time for change has come." John Edwards said, "The status quo lost and change won." Sen. Hillary Clinton (D-NY) said, "This is a great night for Democrats. Today we're sending a clear message that we are going to have change and that change will be a Democratic president in the White House in 2009." Unprecedented turnout. A call for change in both parties. Mike Huckabee said, "Tonight what we have seen is a new day in American politics. And tonight it starts in Iowa, but it doesn't end here. It goes to all the other states and ends at 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue." Mitt Romney said, "You win the silver in one event, it doesn't mean you're not going to come back and win the gold in the final event, and that we're going to do." In the end, change trumped experience, and Iowa voters sent the campaign to New Hampshire with a bounce, and a few political casualties. The political world, upside down. We look at why, how, and what happens next with Dan Balz of The Washington Post, John Dickerson of Slate Magazine, John Harwood of CNBC and The New York Times and Karen Tumulty of Time Magazine.

There is only one word to describe this week: wow. We'll have a few more words, too, tonight on "Washington Week." Sen. John McCain (R-AZ) said, "We sure showed them what a comeback looks like." Sen. Hillary Clinton (D-NY) said, "Let's give America the kind of comeback that New Hampshire has just given me." Talk about a shock to the system. New Hampshire voters deliver a message to the pollsters and the pundits: we'll make up our own minds, thank you. So the scramble begins anew. Gov. Mike Huckabee (R-AR) said, "The Air Force have a saying that says that if you're not catching flak, you're not over the target. I'm catching the flak. I must be over the target." Gov. Mitt Romney (R-MA) said, "I believe that it's time to send somebody to Washington who will actually get the job done." Sen. Barack Obama (D-IL) said, "I am still fired up and ready to go." Sen. John Edwards (D-NC) said, "Two races down, 48 states left to go." A remarkable week in American politics defines a remarkable race for president. Covering the campaign: Peter Baker of Washington Post, James Barnes of National Journal, Jackie Calmes of the Wall Street Journal, and Michael Duffy of Time magazine.

In 1932, a remarkable event occurred in Washington, D.C. In the darkest days of the Depression, unemployed World War I veterans marched on Washington, looking for an advance on the bonus compensation promised to them years earlier. After camping throughout Washington for two months, the veterans were driven out by force, as rising military figures General Douglas MacArthur, Major Dwight Eisenhower and Major George Patton cleared out the "Bonus Army" and burned their camps. Jim Lehrer hosts By the People: Citizenship in the 21st Century, a documentary featuring some of America's most talented and influential leaders debating the rights and responsibilities of citizenship. The one-hour special will show highlights of the Dialogues in Democracy project that By the People is undertaking in partnership with the Colonial Williamsburg Foundation. A major focus of the broadcast is the By the People convocation that took place in Williamsburg, Virginia, from November 8 through 11, with the goal of creating thoughts for a new "Declaration of Citizenship in the 21st Century." The convocation brought together a diverse group of approximately 50 influential Americans, reflecting diverse perspectives. Among the participants were: Nathan Baxter, Bishop of the Episcopal Diocese of Central Pennsylvania; David Davenport, former president of Pepperdine University; Lisa Madigan, Illinois Attorney General; Leo Melamed, Chairman Emeritus, Chicago Mercantile Exchange; Robert Moses, founder of The Algebra Project; Craig Newmark, founder of Craigslist; and Indianapolis 500 driver Janet Guthrie.

On October 19, 1901, the people of Paris turned out by the thousands to watch a dashing, impeccably dressed Brazilian-born inventor, Alberto Santos-Dumont, conquer skies. His fragile, gas-powered balloon made an astounding half-hour flight over the city and around the Eiffel Tower, and later, he piloted Europe's first- ever airplane flight. For a brief moment of glory, Santos-Dumont was the toast of Paris and acclaimed around the world. Then, eclipsed by the growing fame of the Wright Brothers, Santos-Dumont began slipping into illness and depression. During World War I, the airplane, which he believed to be his own invention, became a lethal weapon, eventually driving him to despair and suicide. Featuring captivating recreations and replicas of Santos' pioneering balloons and airplanes, NOVA reveals the daring flights and dramatic life of a neglected genius.

NOVA brings the history of this frosty subject to life with historical recreations of great moments in low-temperature research and interviews with noted historians and scientists, including Simon Schaffer of the University of Cambridge, and Nobel laureates Eric Cornell and Carl Wieman of the University of Colorado at Boulder and Wolfgang Ketterle of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. Part One, "The Conquest of Cold," opens in the 1600s when the nature of cold and even heat were a complete mystery. Are they different phenomena or aspects of some unified feature of nature? Are they added to a substance or qualities of the substance itself? The experiments that settled these questions helped stoke the Industrial Revolution, which exploited such fundamental insights as that heat always flows from hot to cold.

NOVA brings the history of this frosty subject to life with historical recreations of great moments in low-temperature research and interviews with noted historians and scientists, including Simon Schaffer of the University of Cambridge, and Nobel laureates Eric Cornell and Carl Wieman of the University of Colorado at Boulder and Wolfgang Ketterle of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. Part Two, "The Race For Absolute Zero," picks up the story in the late 19th century, when researchers plunged cold science to new lows as they succeeded in reaching the forbidding realm at which oxygen and then nitrogen liquefy. The master of this technology was Scottish chemist James Dewar, who pursued the holy grail of the field--liquefying hydrogen at minus 253 C, just 20 degrees above absolute zero. When he succeeded, he faced the unexpected and even more daunting challenge of liquefying the newly discovered gas helium at a mere 5 degrees above absolute zero. However, he had a talented competitor--Danish physicist Heike Onnes--and the ensuing race to the bottom of the temperature scale was as zealous as the contemporaneous race to the Earth's poles. The end of the 20th century produced another low-temperature contest. No one had ever seen an exotic form of matter called a Bose-Einstein condensate, which only forms at temperatures vanishingly close to absolute zero. But new techniques developed in the 1990s by Daniel Kleppner at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology set the stage for a race to create this truly bizarre substance--and with it win the latest heat in the quest for cold.

In 1932, a remarkable event occurred in Washington, D.C. In the darkest days of the Depression, unemployed World War I veterans marched on Washington, looking for an advance on the bonus compensation promised to them years earlier. After camping throughout Washington for two months, the veterans were driven out by force, as rising military figures General Douglas MacArthur, Major Dwight Eisenhower and Major George Patton cleared out the "Bonus Army" and burned their camps. By the time the clashes were over, two marchers and two children were dead, and the Bonus Army incident had become a political liability for President Hebert Hoover.

Ten years ago, stimulants like Ritalin and Adderall were the drugs of choice to treat behavioral issues in children. Today children as young as four years old are being prescribed more powerful anti-psychotic medications that are much less understood. The drugs can cause serious side effects, and virtually nothing is known about their long-term impact. The increase in the use of anti-psychotics is directly tied to the rising incidence of one particular diagnosis - bipolar disorder. Experts estimate that the number of kids with the diagnosis is now more than a million and rising. As the debate over medicating children continues to grow, FRONTLINE producer Marcela Gaviria confronts psychiatrists, researchers and big pharma about the risks and benefits of prescription drugs for troubled children.

Peace Corps, VISTA, Community Action, Head Start, Legal Services for the Poor, Youth Corps, Job Corps, and more. Sargent Shriver invented a string of social initiatives that shaped an era and dared millions of young Americans to live out their ideals. Those who knew him--Bill Moyers, Andrew Young, political commentator Mark Shields, and so many others--have spoken of Shriver in the same breath as Martin Luther King, Jr., calling him a visionary of deep humanity who helped create a more just society. American Idealist brings Shriver's story to life in a new film premiering nationally on PBS, primetime January 21, 2008. A powerful 90-minute depiction of practical activism, it offers a hopeful vision of what this nation could be and could do, based on the experience of what it once did when pushed by the civil rights movement and guided by the War on Poverty.

The feds try to fix the economy and showdown time in two critical states, South Carolina and Florida, on "Washington Week." Speaker Nancy Pelosi (D-CA) said, "The stimulus package will put money in the hands of hard working Americans." Sec. Henry Paulson said, "I'm looking forward to working with the Senate and working with the House to get a package as soon as possible because, again, speed is of the essence." There's nothing like a crashing stock market, a housing slump, and slipping consumer confidence to get Republicans and Democrats to the table. But will the new economic rescue plan do the trick? On the campaign trail, the Democrats squabble. Sen. Hillary Clinton (D-NY) said, "I did not mention his name." Sen. Barack Obama (D-IL) said, "Your husband did." She replied, "Well, I'm here. He's not." He answered, "Okay, well, I can't tell who I'm running against sometimes." While Republicans seek peace. Sen. John McCain (R-AZ) said, "All these are good people who are running here and I respect them." Which side has the tougher challenge? The voters are speaking, candidates are falling by the wayside, and the answer is no more clear. Covering the week, Michael Viqueira of NBC News, Wayne Washington of The State newspaper, Michael Duffy of Time magazine and Gloria Berger of CNN and U.S. News.

If you thought New Hampshire scrambled the field, wait till you hear what happened since. Tonight on "Washington Week," the Democrats make nice. Sen. Hillary Clinton (D-NY) said, "We're all family in the Democratic Party." Sen. Barack Obama (D-IL) said, "What we want to do is make sure that we focus on the issues." Sen. John Edwards (D-NC) said, "I'm proud of the fact that we have a woman and an African American who are very, very serious candidates for the presidency." But not for long. Mr. Bill Clinton said, "Don't be accusatory with me. I had nothing to do with this lawsuit." As voters prepare to go to the polls in Nevada and South Carolina, every candidate is scrapping for every advantage. Sen. John McCain (R-AZ) said, "This is a pivotal election. You know that a lot of nasty things are going on. Ignore that kind of stuff." Gov. Mitt Romney said, "And it is time finally to recognize that an insider will never be able to turn Washington inside out." Gov. Mike Huckabee (R-AR) said, "If I had all the polls and consultants and focus groups and all the television ads and the headquarters and everything that some of these other guys had, I might be as far behind as some of them are." And all turn their eyes to a previously neglected subject, the state of the economy, as Republicans and Democrats actually talk of working together. Pres. George W. Bush said, "The economy has a solid foundation, but that there are areas of real concern." Speaker Nancy Pelosi (D-CA) said, "We hope to work in a bipartisan way for an initiative that is targeted, that is timely, and is temporary." President Bush was also abroad this week promising to achieve peace in the Middle East within a year. A lot happening this week. We have the reporters covering it. Doyle McManus of the Los Angeles Times, John Harris of Politico, John Maggs of National Journal and Martha Raddatz of ABC News.

The feds try to fix the economy and showdown time in two critical states, South Carolina and Florida, on "Washington Week." Speaker Nancy Pelosi (D-CA) said, "The stimulus package will put money in the hands of hard working Americans." Sec. Henry Paulson said, "I'm looking forward to working with the Senate and working with the House to get a package as soon as possible because, again, speed is of the essence." There's nothing like a crashing stock market, a housing slump, and slipping consumer confidence to get Republicans and Democrats to the table. But will the new economic rescue plan do the trick? On the campaign trail, the Democrats squabble. Sen. Hillary Clinton (D-NY) said, "I did not mention his name." Sen. Barack Obama (D-IL) said, "Your husband did." She replied, "Well, I'm here. He's not." He answered, "Okay, well, I can't tell who I'm running against sometimes." While Republicans seek peace. Sen. John McCain (R-AZ) said, "All these are good people who are running here and I respect them." Which side has the tougher challenge? The voters are speaking, candidates are falling by the wayside, and the answer is no more clear. Covering the week, Michael Viqueira of NBC News, Wayne Washington of The State newspaper, Michael Duffy of Time magazine and Gloria Borger of CNN and U.S. News.

With the primary season underway, America is focused on whether the next president will be Democrat or Republican. Meanwhile, within the Democratic Party another struggle is unfolding. NOW on PBS reports on a rift between progressives who believe the party has sold out its liberal values and centrists eager to capture a broad swath of the more conservative voters. It's a struggle that is taking place at all levels of government. In Maryland, six-term incumbent Al Wynn is facing a tough challenge from newcomer Donna Edwards. According to Edwards, Wynn has sold out to big business and the Bush agenda, including a vote for the war in Iraq and the 2005 energy bill. Wynn says his challenger is naïve and doesn't understand that there are choices in politics between compromise and doing nothing. Fueling candidates like Edwards are the foot soldiers of the progressive battle--bloggers and other political outsiders like Matt Stoller of OpenLeft.com who are drumming up national support on the Internet. Maria Hinojosa speaks with the candidates and Matt Bai, author of "The Argument: Billionaires, Bloggers, and the Battle To Remake Democratic Politics."

The feds try to fix the economy and showdown time in two critical states, South Carolina and Florida, on "Washington Week." Speaker Nancy Pelosi (D-CA) said, "The stimulus package will put money in the hands of hard working Americans." Sec. Henry Paulson said, "I'm looking forward to working with the Senate and working with the House to get a package as soon as possible because, again, speed is of the essence." There's nothing like a crashing stock market, a housing slump, and slipping consumer confidence to get Republicans and Democrats to the table. But will the new economic rescue plan do the trick? On the campaign trail, the Democrats squabble. Sen. Hillary Clinton (D-NY) said, "I did not mention his name." Sen. Barack Obama (D-IL) said, "Your husband did." She replied, "Well, I'm here. He's not." He answered, "Okay, well, I can't tell who I'm running against sometimes." While Republicans seek peace. Sen. John McCain (R-AZ) said, "All these are good people who are running here and I respect them." Which side has the tougher challenge? The voters are speaking, candidates are falling by the wayside, and the answer is no more clear. Covering the week, Michael Viqueira of NBC News, Wayne Washington of The State newspaper, Michael Duffy of Time magazine and Gloria Berger of CNN and U.S. News.

Service: PBS
Format: Documentary

Peace Corps, VISTA, Community Action, Head Start, Legal Services for the Poor, Youth Corps, Job Corps, and more. Sargent Shriver invented a string of social initiatives that shaped an era and dared millions of young Americans to live out their ideals. Those who knew him--Bill Moyers, Andrew Young, political commentator Mark Shields, and so many others--have spoken of Shriver in the same breath as Martin Luther King, Jr., calling him a visionary of deep humanity who helped create a more just society. American Idealist brings Shriver's story to life in a new film premiering nationally on PBS, primetime January 21, 2008. A powerful 90-minute depiction of practical activism, it offers a hopeful vision of what this nation could be and could do, based on the experience of what it once did when pushed by the civil rights movement and guided by the War on Poverty.

With the primary season underway, America is focused on whether the next president will be Democrat or Republican. Meanwhile, within the Democratic Party another struggle is unfolding. NOW on PBS reports on a rift between progressives who believe the party has sold out its liberal values and centrists eager to capture a broad swath of the more conservative voters. It's a struggle that is taking place at all levels of government. In Maryland, six-term incumbent Al Wynn is facing a tough challenge from newcomer Donna Edwards. According to Edwards, Wynn has sold out to big business and the Bush agenda, including a vote for the war in Iraq and the 2005 energy bill. Wynn says his challenger is naïve and doesn't understand that there are choices in politics between compromise and doing nothing. Fueling candidates like Edwards are the foot soldiers of the progressive battle--bloggers and other political outsiders like Matt Stoller of OpenLeft.com who are drumming up national support on the Internet. Maria Hinojosa speaks with the candidates and Matt Bai, author of "The Argument: Billionaires, Bloggers, and the Battle To Remake Democratic Politics."

If you thought New Hampshire scrambled the field, wait till you hear what happened since. Tonight on "Washington Week," the Democrats make nice. Sen. Hillary Clinton (D-NY) said, "We're all family in the Democratic Party." Sen. Barack Obama (D-IL) said, "What we want to do is make sure that we focus on the issues." Sen. John Edwards (D-NC) said, "I'm proud of the fact that we have a woman and an African American who are very, very serious candidates for the presidency." But not for long. Mr. Bill Clinton said, "Don't be accusatory with me. I had nothing to do with this lawsuit." As voters prepare to go to the polls in Nevada and South Carolina, every candidate is scrapping for every advantage. Sen. John McCain (R-AZ) said, "This is a pivotal election. You know that a lot of nasty things are going on. Ignore that kind of stuff." Gov. Mitt Romney said, "And it is time finally to recognize that an insider will never be able to turn Washington inside out." Gov. Mike Huckabee (R-AR) said, "If I had all the polls and consultants and focus groups and all the television ads and the headquarters and everything that some of these other guys had, I might be as far behind as some of them are." And all turn their eyes to a previously neglected subject, the state of the economy, as Republicans and Democrats actually talk of working together. Pres. George W. Bush said, "The economy has a solid foundation, but that there are areas of real concern." Speaker Nancy Pelosi (D-CA) said, "We hope to work in a bipartisan way for an initiative that is targeted, that is timely, and is temporary." President Bush was also abroad this week promising to achieve peace in the Middle East within a year. A lot happening this week. We have the reporters covering it. Doyle McManus of the Los Angeles Times, John Harris of Politico, John Maggs of National Journal and Martha Raddatz of ABC News.

The feds try to fix the economy and showdown time in two critical states, South Carolina and Florida, on "Washington Week." Speaker Nancy Pelosi (D-CA) said, "The stimulus package will put money in the hands of hard working Americans." Sec. Henry Paulson said, "I'm looking forward to working with the Senate and working with the House to get a package as soon as possible because, again, speed is of the essence." There's nothing like a crashing stock market, a housing slump, and slipping consumer confidence to get Republicans and Democrats to the table. But will the new economic rescue plan do the trick? On the campaign trail, the Democrats squabble. Sen. Hillary Clinton (D-NY) said, "I did not mention his name." Sen. Barack Obama (D-IL) said, "Your husband did." She replied, "Well, I'm here. He's not." He answered, "Okay, well, I can't tell who I'm running against sometimes." While Republicans seek peace. Sen. John McCain (R-AZ) said, "All these are good people who are running here and I respect them." Which side has the tougher challenge? The voters are speaking, candidates are falling by the wayside, and the answer is no more clear. Covering the week, Michael Viqueira of NBC News, Wayne Washington of The State newspaper, Michael Duffy of Time magazine and Gloria Borger of CNN and U.S. News.

FRONTLINE reports from the lawless Pakistani tribal areas along the Afghanistan-Pakistan border and reveals how the area has fallen under the control of a resurgent Taliban militia, which uses it as a launching pad for attacks on U.S. and coalition forces in Afghanistan. Despite the presence of more than 70,000 Pakistani troops, the Taliban has claimed two tribal agencies, North and South Waziristan, as Taliban republics. The area, off limits to U.S. troops by agreement with Pakistan's president and long suspected of harboring Osama bin Laden and his deputy Ayman al-Zawahiri, is now considered a failed state. President Pervez Musharraf tells FRONTLINE reporter Martin Smith that Pakistan's strategy, which includes cash payments to militants who lay down their arms, has clearly foundered. In a region little understood because it is closed to most observers, FRONTLINE investigates a secret front in the war on terror.

"Prince Among Slaves" is the inspiring true story of an African prince who survived 40 years of enslavement in America before finally regaining his freedom. Winner of the Best Documentary at the 2007 American Black Film Festival, the film tells the compelling story of Abdul Rahman, an African Muslim prince, through feature-film styled re-enactments directed by Andrea Kalin and Emmy-Award-winner Bill Duke; contemporary artworks, archival letters and diaries; and on-camera interviews with distinguished scholars and experts. Narrated by actor and hip-hop artist Mos Def, "Prince Among Slaves" is based on Dr. Terry Alford's biography of the same name.

Temporary workers and independent contractors make up nearly a third of the U.S. workforce, and represent a growing asset to companies who rely on freelance flexibility. But corporations are using the designation "freelancer" to avoid paying health care and other benefits, even though many of these workers put in the same hours as their covered counterparts. NOW looks at the effect of this tactic on the lives and personal economy of freelance workers. We also examine an Enterprising Idea to help independent workers manage their personal needs, including benefits, networking and investment help. Freelancers Union, founded by former labor lawyer and MacArthur grant recipient Sara Horowitz, provides a safety net for over 60,000 workers, but how is it viewed by the traditional labor movement?

Are politicians listening to middle-class families on the edge of economic collapse? Leading up to the Super Tuesday primaries, polls indicate that the economy ranks as the number one issue on the minds of Americans, beating out immigration, global warming, even terrorism. NOW on PBS heads to America's heartland -- Illinois -- to investigate rampant anxiety among America's middle class. How did families on the edge of financial collapse get to this point, and which presidential candidate do they think can restore economic hope and stability?

Temporary workers and independent contractors make up nearly a third of the U.S. workforce, and represent a growing asset to companies who rely on freelance flexibility. But corporations are using the designation "freelancer" to avoid paying health care and other benefits, even though many of these workers put in the same hours as their covered counterparts. NOW looks at the effect of this tactic on the lives and personal economy of freelance workers. We also examine an Enterprising Idea to help independent workers manage their personal needs, including benefits, networking and investment help. Freelancers Union, founded by former labor lawyer and MacArthur grant recipient Sara Horowitz, provides a safety net for over 60,000 workers, but how is it viewed by the traditional labor movement?

Temporary workers and independent contractors make up nearly a third of the U.S. workforce, and represent a growing asset to companies who rely on freelance flexibility. But corporations are using the designation "freelancer" to avoid paying health care and other benefits, even though many of these workers put in the same hours as their covered counterparts. NOW looks at the effect of this tactic on the lives and personal economy of freelance workers. We also examine an Enterprising Idea to help independent workers manage their personal needs, including benefits, networking and investment help. Freelancers Union, founded by former labor lawyer and MacArthur grant recipient Sara Horowitz, provides a safety net for over 60,000 workers, but how is it viewed by the traditional labor movement?

Fannie Lou Hamer attended the 1964 Democratic National Convention as a member of the Mississippi Democratic Freedom Party and challenged the all-white Mississippi delegation. Her spirited plea for justice was captured by network television and struck a cord throughout the country. Many credit her presence at the Convention as the impetus for the passage of the 1965 Voting Rights Act. This program steps back into that period of time and explores the struggles and presents personal recollections from those who worked side by side with this extraordinary woman. Interviews include Congresswoman Eleanor Holmes Norton (D-DC); Dorothy Height, president of the National Council of Negro Woman; Rutgers University history professor Clement Price; and numerous members of the Mississippi Freedom Democratic Party.

Only four days until the Super Tuesday primaries. A race that began with more than a dozen candidates is down to just a handful, and some of each party's biggest names - Ted Kennedy, Arnold Schwarzenegger - have made their choices. Who knew things could get so exciting. I'm here in Los Angeles with 1,000 of my closest friends, tonight on "Washington Week." The Democrats are all sweetness and light. Sen. Hillary Clinton (D-NY) said, "And you know, it did take a Clinton to clean after the first Bush and I think it might take another one to clean up after the second Bush." Sen. Barack Obama (D-IL) said, "I don't think the choice is between black and white or it's about gender or religion. I don't think it's about young or old. I think what is at stake right now is whether we are looking backwards or we are looking forward." The Republicans, not so sweet, not so light. Gov. Mitt Romney (R-MA) said, "What does that mean? What does that mean, we don't want them-" Sen. John McCain (R-AZ) replied, "It means a timetable for until we leave." Gov. Romney said, "Listen, senator, let's-" Anderson Cooper said, "Let me jump in, because the quote that I have-" Gov. Romney said, "Is it not fair, is it not fair to have the person who's being accused of having a position he doesn't have be the expert on what his position is?" The field just keeps on shrinking. Sen. John Edwards (D-NC) said "It's time for me to step aside so that history can blaze its path." Sen. Edward Kennedy (D-MA) said, "It is time now for Barack Obama." While the big endorsements keep rolling in, the race for president transformed as voters in 22 states head for the polls this Tuesday. Who will be left standing? We assess the state of this unexpected and unpredictable campaign year with Peter Baker of the Washington Post, John Harwood of CNBC and the New York Times, Doyle McManus of the Los Angeles Times and Karen Tumulty of Time Magazine.

Stick a fork in it, the Republican race is done - kind of. The Democratic race is most definitely not. We look at the ups, the downs, and the spoils of Super Tuesday, tonight on "Washington Week." Sen. Barack Obama (D-IL) said, "We're turning out to be a scrappy little team." Sen. Hillary Clinton (D-NY) said, "There's not a lot of time to catch your breath, so we are full speed ahead." For the Democrats, the neck-and-neck campaign continues. For Republicans, the choice gets clearer after Gov. Mitt Romney (R-MA), who spent $50 million of his own money, drops out. He said, "Frankly, in this time of war, I simply cannot let my campaign be a part of aiding a surrender to terror." And the troops settle on a nominee. Sen. John McCain (R-AZ) said "We must get used to the idea that we are the Republican Party frontrunner for the nomination." But grudgingly. He continues, "On the issue of illegal immigration, a position which-" "Boooo" responds the crowd. And Gov. Mike Huckabee (R-AR) forges on. He said, "I know how hard it is to get in and sometimes it's even harder to get out." The results, the challenges ahead, the money, candidates trying to seal the deal. We look at the current state of the race with four reporters who stayed up late Tuesday night. Dan Balz of the Washington Post, Jackie Calmes of the Wall Street Journal, John Dickerson of Slate magazine and Michael Duffy of Time magazine.

We are in sunny Florida for the next in our series of election year road-shows. More drama, more questions. We'll try to answer them all tonight on "Washington Week." The frontrunner, Sen. Barack Obama (D-IL), said, "We have now won East and West, North and South, and across the heartland of this country we love." The candidate in search of a firewall, Sen. Hillary Clinton (D-NY), said, "I'm tested. I'm ready. Let's make it happen." And the likely Republican nominee, Sen. John McCain (R-AZ), said, "My friends, I promise you, I am fired up and ready to go." Which one had the best week? The campaigns head to the next big tests in Wisconsin, Ohio, Texas, and Pennsylvania. But what about the loose ends like Gov. Mike Huckabee (R-AR)? He commented, "You stay and you keep playing until the last second of the clock has sounded." And Michigan and Florida? We are here in Florida looking for some of the answers with Jim Barnes of National Journal, Gloria Borger of CNN and U.S. News, Jeanne Cummings of Politico and Todd Purdum of Vanity Fair.

Fannie Lou Hamer attended the 1964 Democratic National Convention as a member of the Mississippi Democratic Freedom Party and challenged the all-white Mississippi delegation. Her spirited plea for justice was captured by network television and struck a cord throughout the country. Many credit her presence at the Convention as the impetus for the passage of the 1965 Voting Rights Act. This program steps back into that period of time and explores the struggles and presents personal recollections from those who worked side by side with this extraordinary woman. Interviews include Congresswoman Eleanor Holmes Norton (D-DC); Dorothy Height, president of the National Council of Negro Woman; Rutgers University history professor Clement Price; and numerous members of the Mississippi Freedom Democratic Party.

Only four days until the Super Tuesday primaries. A race that began with more than a dozen candidates is down to just a handful, and some of each party's biggest names - Ted Kennedy, Arnold Schwarzenegger - have made their choices. Who knew things could get so exciting. I'm here in Los Angeles with 1,000 of my closest friends, tonight on "Washington Week." The Democrats are all sweetness and light. Sen. Hillary Clinton (D-NY) said, "And you know, it did take a Clinton to clean after the first Bush and I think it might take another one to clean up after the second Bush." Sen. Barack Obama (D-IL) said, "I don't think the choice is between black and white or it's about gender or religion. I don't think it's about young or old. I think what is at stake right now is whether we are looking backwards or we are looking forward." The Republicans, not so sweet, not so light. Gov. Mitt Romney (R-MA) said, "What does that mean? What does that mean, we don't want them-" Sen. John McCain (R-AZ) replied, "It means a timetable for until we leave." Gov. Romney said, "Listen, senator, let's-" Anderson Cooper said, "Let me jump in, because the quote that I have-" Gov. Romney said, "Is it not fair, is it not fair to have the person who's being accused of having a position he doesn't have be the expert on what his position is?" The field just keeps on shrinking. Sen. John Edwards (D-NC) said "It's time for me to step aside so that history can blaze its path." Sen. Edward Kennedy (D-MA) said, "It is time now for Barack Obama." While the big endorsements keep rolling in, the race for president transformed as voters in 22 states head for the polls this Tuesday. Who will be left standing? We assess the state of this unexpected and unpredictable campaign year with Peter Baker of the Washington Post, John Harwood of CNBC and the New York Times, Doyle McManus of the Los Angeles Times and Karen Tumulty of Time Magazine.

Stick a fork in it, the Republican race is done - kind of. The Democratic race is most definitely not. We look at the ups, the downs, and the spoils of Super Tuesday, tonight on "Washington Week." Sen. Barack Obama (D-IL) said, "We're turning out to be a scrappy little team." Sen. Hillary Clinton (D-NY) said, "There's not a lot of time to catch your breath, so we are full speed ahead." For the Democrats, the neck-and-neck campaign continues. For Republicans, the choice gets clearer after Gov. Mitt Romney (R-MA), who spent $50 million of his own money, drops out. He said, "Frankly, in this time of war, I simply cannot let my campaign be a part of aiding a surrender to terror." And the troops settle on a nominee. Sen. John McCain (R-AZ) said "We must get used to the idea that we are the Republican Party frontrunner for the nomination." But grudgingly. He continues, "On the issue of illegal immigration, a position which-" "Boooo" responds the crowd. And Gov. Mike Huckabee (R-AR) forges on. He said, "I know how hard it is to get in and sometimes it's even harder to get out." The results, the challenges ahead, the money, candidates trying to seal the deal. We look at the current state of the race with four reporters who stayed up late Tuesday night. Dan Balz of the Washington Post, Jackie Calmes of the Wall Street Journal, John Dickerson of Slate magazine and Michael Duffy of Time magazine.

We are in sunny Florida for the next in our series of election year road-shows. More drama, more questions. We'll try to answer them all tonight on "Washington Week." The frontrunner, Sen. Barack Obama (D-IL), said, "We have now won East and West, North and South, and across the heartland of this country we love." The candidate in search of a firewall, Sen. Hillary Clinton (D-NY), said, "I'm tested. I'm ready. Let's make it happen." And the likely Republican nominee, Sen. John McCain (R-AZ), said, "My friends, I promise you, I am fired up and ready to go." Which one had the best week? The campaigns head to the next big tests in Wisconsin, Ohio, Texas, and Pennsylvania. But what about the loose ends like Gov. Mike Huckabee (R-AR)? He commented, "You stay and you keep playing until the last second of the clock has sounded." And Michigan and Florida? We are here in Florida looking for some of the answers with Jim Barnes of National Journal, Gloria Borger of CNN and U.S. News, Jeanne Cummings of Politico and Todd Purdum of Vanity Fair.

Fannie Lou Hamer attended the 1964 Democratic National Convention as a member of the Mississippi Democratic Freedom Party and challenged the all-white Mississippi delegation. Her spirited plea for justice was captured by network television and struck a cord throughout the country. Many credit her presence at the Convention as the impetus for the passage of the 1965 Voting Rights Act. This program steps back into that period of time and explores the struggles and presents personal recollections from those who worked side by side with this extraordinary woman. A hundred years ago, in communities across the U.S., white residents forced thousands of black families to flee their homes. Even a century later, these towns remain almost entirely white. "Banished" tells the story of three of these communities and their black descendants, who return to learn their shocking histories. By investigating this little-known chapter in American history, the film takes a contemporary look at the legacy of racial cleansing. Through conversations with current residents and the descendants of those who were driven out, "Banished" contemplates questions of privilege, responsibility, denial, healing, reparations and identity. What can be done to redress past injustices? What is the ongoing impact of the expulsions on families and communities today? In the stories of black families whose land and livelihood were stolen, the film illustrates the limits of the American legal system and the need for creative forms of repair.

Will a Bush Administration effort open hundreds of thousands of acres of public land to private development? Signed by President Bill Clinton in 2001, the Roadless Area Conservation Rule protects nearly 60 million acres of the country's national forest lands from most road building, mining and logging. Over the last seven years, the Bush administration has tried to amend or repeal the landmark regulation to give states more flexibility. NOW travels to southeast Idaho to investigate how a proposed change in the rule threatens to open thousands of acres of pristine public lands to private development. In the report, NOW speaks to representatives from the ranching, environmental, and mining communities, as well an administration official. Who gets to control the fate of Idaho's vast roadless forests? Find out how you can help shape the answer.

Countdown to Texas and Ohio. The charges, the countercharges and the warm-up to the general election campaign, this week on "Washington Week." The candidates are taking their best shots. Sen. John McCain (R-AZ) said, "As you may have noticed, I'm not the youngest candidate in the race. I am the most experienced and I think I have the judgment necessary to lead." Sen. Hillary Clinton (D-NY) said, "Celestial choirs will be singing and everyone will know we should do the right thing and the world will be perfect." Sen. Barack Obama (D-IL) said, "When I hear George Bush saying that he didn't think we're in a recession, then it's a sign that we have a Washington that is out of touch." But is time running out? Voters are worried about healthcare, jobs, and the economy. Which candidate will best answer those questions? Tuesday may tell the tale. Humans have had a unique relationship with raptors, nature's aerial killing machines, for more than four thousand years, first through the ancient sport of falconry, and, more recently, as scientists and engineers have turned to these mighty birds--from golden eagles, red-tailed hawks, and turkey vultures, to great gray owls and the peregrine falcon--as the inspiration for the latest in aircraft design. Using the tricks and tactics of raptors as their model, engineers have devised fighter jets with unprecedented maneuverability and stealth.

Long ago in the age of dinosaurs, a volcano in eastern China erupted and buried a host of strange creatures in ash, creating exquisite fossils that preserved a big surprise--many dinosaurs were covered in feathers. In The Four-Winged Dinosaur, NOVA investigates the most bizarre of these feathered dinosaurs, which has rekindled a fierce, decades-long debate over the origin of bird flight. The central character in this drama is a strange little dinosaur with wings on its legs as well as its arms. The pigeon-sized Microraptor is the smallest adult dinosaur ever found, perhaps the first known tree-dweller. But could it really fly? NOVA assembles a team of top paleontologists, aeronautical engineers, and paleo-artists to reconstruct Microraptor and build a sophisticated model for a wind tunnel experiment. The results have surprising implications for long-accepted ideas about how winged flight began.

At a research site in Fongoli, Senegal, a female chimpanzee breaks off a branch, chews the end to make it sharp, then uses this rudimentary spear to skewer a tasty bushbaby hiding inside a hollow tree. The footage represents an astonishing breakthrough for primate researchers: It's the first time anyone has documented a chimpanzee wielding a carefully prepared, preplanned weapon. But it's only the latest in a slew of extraordinary new findings about ape behavior. The more researchers learn about the great apes -- chimpanzees, bonobos, gorillas, and orangutans -- the more evidence they find of creative intelligence. What, then, is the essential difference between us and them? "Ape Genius," a NOVA-National Geographic special, explores that provocative question and examines research that is illuminating the ape mind.

Will a Bush Administration effort open hundreds of thousands of acres of public land to private development? Signed by President Bill Clinton in 2001, the Roadless Area Conservation Rule protects nearly 60 million acres of the country's national forest lands from most road building, mining and logging. Over the last seven years, the Bush administration has tried to amend or repeal the landmark regulation to give states more flexibility. NOW travels to southeast Idaho to investigate how a proposed change in the rule threatens to open thousands of acres of pristine public lands to private development. In the report, NOW speaks to representatives from the ranching, environmental, and mining communities, as well an administration official. Who gets to control the fate of Idaho's vast roadless forests? Find out how you can help shape the answer.

A hundred years ago, in communities across the U.S., white residents forced thousands of black families to flee their homes. Even a century later, these towns remain almost entirely white. "Banished" tells the story of three of these communities and their black descendants, who return to learn their shocking histories. By investigating this little-known chapter in American history, the film takes a contemporary look at the legacy of racial cleansing. Through conversations with current residents and the descendants of those who were driven out, "Banished" contemplates questions of privilege, responsibility, denial, healing, reparations and identity. What can be done to redress past injustices? What is the ongoing impact of the expulsions on families and communities today? In the stories of black families whose land and livelihood were stolen, the film illustrates the limits of the American legal system and the need for creative forms of repair.

Momentum, one Democrat has it, another could use it. Plus, John McCain and the lobbyists, and Castro resigns this week on "Washington Week." Who can be your president? Take your pick. Sen. Hillary Clinton (D-NY) stated, "I am better prepared to be the president and commander-in-chief that we need right now." Sen. Barack Obama (D-IL) said, "What I believe was the single most important foreign policy decision of this generation - whether or not to go to war in Iraq - I believe I showed the judgment of a commander-in-chief." For Democrats it's which claim to believe. The stakes are crystal clear. Former Pres. Bill Clinton said to voters, "If she wins Texas and Ohio, I think she'll be the nominee. If you don't deliver for her, I don't think she can be. It's all on you." While they battle it out, the likely Republican nominee squared off on another front. Sen. John McCain (R-AZ) stated, "At no time have I ever done anything that would betray the public trust nor make a decision which in any way would not be in the public interest and that would favor anyone or any organization." What do John McCain's Washington connections tell us about how government works and how it doesn't? And nearly half a century after he claimed power, Cuba's Fidel Castro resigns. What happens next? Covering the week, Karen Tumulty of Time magazine, Jeff Zeleny of the New York Times, Eamon Javers of BusinessWeek, and Tom Gjelten of National Public Radio.

Countdown to Texas and Ohio. The charges, the countercharges and the warm-up to the general election campaign, this week on "Washington Week." The candidates are taking their best shots. Sen. John McCain (R-AZ) said, "As you may have noticed, I'm not the youngest candidate in the race. I am the most experienced and I think I have the judgment necessary to lead." Sen. Hillary Clinton (D-NY) said, "Celestial choirs will be singing and everyone will know we should do the right thing and the world will be perfect." Sen. Barack Obama (D-IL) said, "When I hear George Bush saying that he didn't think we're in a recession, then it's a sign that we have a Washington that is out of touch." But is time running out? Voters are worried about healthcare, jobs, and the economy. Which candidate will best answer those questions? Tuesday may tell the tale. Covering the week, Ohio native Jackie Calmes of the Wall Street Journal, Texas native Gebe Martinez of Politico, and John Harwood of CNBC and the New York Times.

Will a Bush Administration effort open hundreds of thousands of acres of public land to private development? Signed by President Bill Clinton in 2001, the Roadless Area Conservation Rule protects nearly 60 million acres of the country's national forest lands from most road building, mining and logging. Over the last seven years, the Bush administration has tried to amend or repeal the landmark regulation to give states more flexibility. NOW travels to southeast Idaho to investigate how a proposed change in the rule threatens to open thousands of acres of pristine public lands to private development. In the report, NOW speaks to representatives from the ranching, environmental, and mining communities, as well an administration official. Who gets to control the fate of Idaho's vast roadless forests? Find out how you can help shape the answer.

Momentum, one Democrat has it, another could use it. Plus, John McCain and the lobbyists, and Castro resigns this week on "Washington Week." Who can be your president? Take your pick. Sen. Hillary Clinton (D-NY) stated, "I am better prepared to be the president and commander-in-chief that we need right now." Sen. Barack Obama (D-IL) said, "What I believe was the single most important foreign policy decision of this generation - whether or not to go to war in Iraq - I believe I showed the judgment of a commander-in-chief." For Democrats it's which claim to believe. The stakes are crystal clear. Former Pres. Bill Clinton said to voters, "If she wins Texas and Ohio, I think she'll be the nominee. If you don't deliver for her, I don't think she can be. It's all on you." While they battle it out, the likely Republican nominee squared off on another front. Sen. John McCain (R-AZ) stated, "At no time have I ever done anything that would betray the public trust nor make a decision which in any way would not be in the public interest and that would favor anyone or any organization." What do John McCain's Washington connections tell us about how government works and how it doesn't? And nearly half a century after he claimed power, Cuba's Fidel Castro resigns. What happens next? Covering the week, Karen Tumulty of Time magazine, Jeff Zeleny of the New York Times, Eamon Javers of BusinessWeek, and Tom Gjelten of National Public Radio.

Countdown to Texas and Ohio. The charges, the countercharges and the warm-up to the general election campaign, this week on "Washington Week." The candidates are taking their best shots. Sen. John McCain (R-AZ) said, "As you may have noticed, I'm not the youngest candidate in the race. I am the most experienced and I think I have the judgment necessary to lead." Sen. Hillary Clinton (D-NY) said, "Celestial choirs will be singing and everyone will know we should do the right thing and the world will be perfect." Sen. Barack Obama (D-IL) said, "When I hear George Bush saying that he didn't think we're in a recession, then it's a sign that we have a Washington that is out of touch." But is time running out? Voters are worried about healthcare, jobs, and the economy. Which candidate will best answer those questions? Tuesday may tell the tale. Covering the week, Ohio native Jackie Calmes of the Wall Street Journal, Texas native Gebe Martinez of Politico, and John Harwood of CNBC and the New York Times.

Long ago in the age of dinosaurs, a volcano in eastern China erupted and buried a host of strange creatures in ash, creating exquisite fossils that preserved a big surprise--many dinosaurs were covered in feathers. In The Four-Winged Dinosaur, NOVA investigates the most bizarre of these feathered dinosaurs, which has rekindled a fierce, decades-long debate over the origin of bird flight. The central character in this drama is a strange little dinosaur with wings on its legs as well as its arms. The pigeon-sized Microraptor is the smallest adult dinosaur ever found, perhaps the first known tree-dweller. But could it really fly? NOVA assembles a team of top paleontologists, aeronautical engineers, and paleo-artists to reconstruct Microraptor and build a sophisticated model for a wind tunnel experiment. The results have surprising implications for long-accepted ideas about how winged flight began.

And you thought maybe it was going to be over? We'll tell you why the 2008 presidential campaign may just be beginning. This week on "Washington Week:" the big rebound. Responding to applause, Sen. Hillary Clinton (D-NY) said, "Thank you, Ohio. We're going on, we're going strong, and we're going all the way." She breaks her losing streak after Sen. Barack Obama (D-IL) fails to close the deal. But then there's the math. Obama said, "No matter what happens tonight, we have nearly the same delegate lead as we did this morning and we are on our way to winning this nomination." The Democrats deadlocked. Who has the momentum? Who has the money? Who has Michigan and Florida? Sen. Bill Nelson (D-FL) said, "We've got a major train wreck." All those questions are answered on the Republican side as Sen. John McCain (R-AZ) officially clinches the nomination. He said, "My background and my judgment allow me to do the thing that's most important for America: to inspire a generation of Americans to serve a cause greater than their self-interest." President George Bush is on board. He said to McCain, "I wish you all the best and I'm proud to be your friend." Will that help or will it hurt? Deciphering the week: Dan Balz of the Washington Post, John Dickerson of Slate magazine, and Karen Tumulty of Time magazine.

Race, gender, governors, and generals. All that and more this week on "Washington Week." Who is winning? Sen. Barack Obama (D-IL) said, "I've won twice as many states as Senator Clinton. I've won more of the popular vote than Senator Clinton. I have more delegates than Senator Clinton." Sen. Hillary Clinton (D-NY) said to the public, "I don't want you voting on a leap of faith. I want you to look at the record. I want you to look at the results, and then I want you to vote for the person you think can deliver that." And who's losing? Geraldine Ferraro said, "They'd better just lay off me. I am outraged that they would think I'm racist - absolutely outraged." Gov. Eliot Spitzer (D-NY) said, "I'm resigning from the office of governor." Plus, the lead military commander in the Middle East steps down. What does that tell us about U.S. policy in Iraq and in Iran? Covering the stories: Michael Duffy of Time magazine, Todd Purdum of Vanity Fair, and Martha Raddatz of ABC News.

And you thought maybe it was going to be over? We'll tell you why the 2008 presidential campaign may just be beginning. This week on "Washington Week:" the big rebound. Responding to applause, Sen. Hillary Clinton (D-NY) said, "Thank you, Ohio. We're going on, we're going strong, and we're going all the way." She breaks her losing streak after Sen. Barack Obama (D-IL) fails to close the deal. But then there's the math. Obama said, "No matter what happens tonight, we have nearly the same delegate lead as we did this morning and we are on our way to winning this nomination." The Democrats deadlocked. Who has the momentum? Who has the money? Who has Michigan and Florida? Sen. Bill Nelson (D-FL) said, "We've got a major train wreck." All those questions are answered on the Republican side as Sen. John McCain (R-AZ) officially clinches the nomination. He said, "My background and my judgment allow me to do the thing that's most important for America: to inspire a generation of Americans to serve a cause greater than their self-interest." President George Bush is on board. He said to McCain, "I wish you all the best and I'm proud to be your friend." Will that help or will it hurt? Deciphering the week: Dan Balz of the Washington Post, John Dickerson of Slate magazine, and Karen Tumulty of Time magazine.

Race, gender, governors, and generals. All that and more this week on "Washington Week." Who is winning? Sen. Barack Obama (D-IL) said, "I've won twice as many states as Senator Clinton. I've won more of the popular vote than Senator Clinton. I have more delegates than Senator Clinton." Sen. Hillary Clinton (D-NY) said to the public, "I don't want you voting on a leap of faith. I want you to look at the record. I want you to look at the results, and then I want you to vote for the person you think can deliver that." And who's losing? Geraldine Ferraro said, "They'd better just lay off me. I am outraged that they would think I'm racist - absolutely outraged." Gov. Eliot Spitzer (D-NY) said, "I'm resigning from the office of governor." Plus, the lead military commander in the Middle East steps down. What does that tell us about U.S. policy in Iraq and in Iran? Why does the United States remain one of the few developed countries to allow children to play with toys that some scientists say may cause infertility in boys? The toys in question contain substances called phthalates (pronounced "thal-ates"). While the European Union has banned these substances in products meant for children, there is powerful resistance from the chemical and toy industries to doing the same here. NOW Senior Correspondent Maria Hinojosa travels from California, where citizens have successfully gotten the state to pass a ban on phthalates in children's toys, to New York City's prestigious Toy Fair, and to Washington, D.C., to uncover some answers.

Big debates over big issues that could have a direct effect on your life, this week on "Washington Week." Fasten your seat belts: high gas prices, collapsing credit, and big Wall Street bailouts. A consumer said, "Everybody is watching the price of gas. Nobody is talking about the price of a gallon of milk. I got two kids and a gallon of milk is almost $5." Pres. George W. Bush said, "In the long run our economy is going to be fine. Right now we are dealing with a difficult situation." The nation's economy is rocking and rolling but not in a good way. Who pays the price? Sooner or later the presidential candidates will have to deal with all that, but first they've got an election to win. Sen. Barack Obama (D-IL) spent the week wading in and through one of the nation's most confused and painful debates - race. He said, "The anger is real. It is powerful. And to simply wish it away, to condemn it without understanding its roots only serves to widen the chasm of misunderstanding that exists between the races." Did Obama manage to change the subject from the topic of his controversial pastor? Can he keep his critics at bay? And will a last-minute Bill Richardson endorsement help? For Sen. Hillary Clinton (D-NY) the answer to those questions may come in Michigan and Florida. She said, "We won't achieve universal health care. We won't end the housing crisis and get the economy moving again unless we win in Michigan and Florida in November." The Democratic primary by the numbers. And at the Supreme Court, gun control: front and center. Is an outright weapons ban constitutional? The arguments pro and con. Covering the stories this week: David Wessel of The Wall Street Journal, John Harris of Politico, Alexis Simendinger of National Journal, and Linda Greenhouse of The New York Times.

The average American family today carries 10 credit cards. Credit card debt and personal bankruptcies are now at an all time high. With no legal limit on the amount of interest or fees that can be charged, credit cards have become the most profitable sector of the American banking industry: more than $30 billion in profits last year alone. FRONTLINE and the New York Times examine how the credit card industry became so pervasive, so lucrative and so politically powerful.

As the Earth heats up at a dangerous rate and fossil fuels become scarcer, ordinary citizens and businesses are bypassing the federal government to lead the way in exploring a clean, renewable source of power: the sun. In this report, NOVA shines a light on how and why people across America and the world are "going solar," using radiant energy of the sun to power homes, businesses, and even entire communities. But can everyday people really make a difference by using solar power? And can solar technologies, with their high cost and logistical challenges, truly play a bigger role in powering the future of humanity? The grand hopes, latest innovations, roiling controversies, and practical realities of solar power all come to the forefront in this program.

Big debates over big issues that could have a direct effect on your life, this week on "Washington Week." Fasten your seat belts: high gas prices, collapsing credit, and big Wall Street bailouts. A consumer said, "Everybody is watching the price of gas. Nobody is talking about the price of a gallon of milk. I got two kids and a gallon of milk is almost $5." Pres. George W. Bush said, "In the long run our economy is going to be fine. Right now we are dealing with a difficult situation." The nation's economy is rocking and rolling but not in a good way. Who pays the price? Sooner or later the presidential candidates will have to deal with all that, but first they've got an election to win. Sen. Barack Obama (D-IL) spent the week wading in and through one of the nation's most confused and painful debates - race. He said, "The anger is real. It is powerful. And to simply wish it away, to condemn it without understanding its roots only serves to widen the chasm of misunderstanding that exists between the races." Did Obama manage to change the subject from the topic of his controversial pastor? Can he keep his critics at bay? And will a last-minute Bill Richardson endorsement help? For Sen. Hillary Clinton (D-NY) the answer to those questions may come in Michigan and Florida. She said, "We won't achieve universal health care. We won't end the housing crisis and get the economy moving again unless we win in Michigan and Florida in November." The Democratic primary by the numbers. And at the Supreme Court, gun control: front and center. Is an outright weapons ban constitutional? The arguments pro and con. Covering the stories this week: David Wessel of The Wall Street Journal, John Harris of Politico, Alexis Simendinger of National Journal, and Linda Greenhouse of The New York Times.

As the Earth heats up at a dangerous rate and fossil fuels become scarcer, ordinary citizens and businesses are bypassing the federal government to lead the way in exploring a clean, renewable source of power: the sun. In this report, NOVA shines a light on how and why people across America and the world are "going solar," using radiant energy of the sun to power homes, businesses, and even entire communities. But can everyday people really make a difference by using solar power? And can solar technologies, with their high cost and logistical challenges, truly play a bigger role in powering the future of humanity? The grand hopes, latest innovations, roiling controversies, and practical realities of solar power all come to the forefront in this program.

Why does the United States remain one of the few developed countries to allow children to play with toys that some scientists say may cause infertility in boys? The toys in question contain substances called phthalates (pronounced "thal-ates"). While the European Union has banned these substances in products meant for children, there is powerful resistance from the chemical and toy industries to doing the same here. NOW Senior Correspondent Maria Hinojosa travels from California, where citizens have successfully gotten the state to pass a ban on phthalates in children's toys, to New York City's prestigious Toy Fair, and to Washington, D.C., to uncover some answers.

Who wins and how? That's the question facing all three campaigns. We explain why, this week on "Washington Week." Sen. Hillary Clinton (D-NY) stated, "I know there are some in Washington and there are some in the media who want this race to be over. Well, I disagree." Sen. Barack Obama (D-IL) said, "If I've got the American people behind me, then I fear no man and I fear no woman." The Democratic primary campaign - is it turning into a death match? And if it does, who really wins? The trends, the scenarios for victory, the issues. What are we learning from these candidates about the topics voters care about, like the economy? Sen. John McCain (R-AZ) said, "In this crisis, as in all I may face in the future, I will not allow dogma to override common sense." Sen. Obama said, "George Bush called this the ownership society. But what he really meant was you're on your own society." Sen. Clinton said, "The last time we had fiscal responsibility, a balanced budget and a surplus, it was a Democrat in the White House." The big plans, the big games, the unforced errors. We look at them all with the reporters covering the week: Doyle McManus of the Los Angeles Times, Jeanne Cummings of Politico, James Barnes of National Journal, and Charles Babington of the Associated Press.

Could a new effort to fight global warming save money and create jobs at the same time? NOW looks at a city-wide plan in Cambridge, Massachusetts, to make all its buildings more energy efficient. Up to 80 percent of emissions in many urban cities comes from buildings. Cambridge hopes that this unprecedented effort to green its buildings will reduce greenhouse gas emissions by 10 percent in just five years, the equivalent of taking 33,000 cars off the road. If every major city in America took the same approach, it would have a significant impact on the carbon footprint of the United States -- and it would generate tens of millions of new "green" jobs.

Who wins and how? That's the question facing all three campaigns. We explain why, this week on "Washington Week." Sen. Hillary Clinton (D-NY) stated, "I know there are some in Washington and there are some in the media who want this race to be over. Well, I disagree." Sen. Barack Obama (D-IL) said, "If I've got the American people behind me, then I fear no man and I fear no woman." The Democratic primary campaign - is it turning into a death match? And if it does, who really wins? The trends, the scenarios for victory, the issues. What are we learning from these candidates about the topics voters care about, like the economy? Sen. John McCain (R-AZ) said, "In this crisis, as in all I may face in the future, I will not allow dogma to override common sense." Sen. Obama said, "George Bush called this the ownership society. But what he really meant was you're on your own society." Sen. Clinton said, "The last time we had fiscal responsibility, a balanced budget and a surplus, it was a Democrat in the White House." The big plans, the big games, the unforced errors. We look at them all with the reporters covering the week: Doyle McManus of the Los Angeles Times, Jeanne Cummings of Politico, James Barnes of National Journal, and Charles Babington of the Associated Press.

Who wins and how? That's the question facing all three campaigns. We explain why, this week on "Washington Week." Sen. Hillary Clinton (D-NY) stated, "I know there are some in Washington and there are some in the media who want this race to be over. Well, I disagree." Sen. Barack Obama (D-IL) said, "If I've got the American people behind me, then I fear no man and I fear no woman." The Democratic primary campaign - is it turning into a death match? And if it does, who really wins? The trends, the scenarios for victory, the issues. What are we learning from these candidates about the topics voters care about, like the economy? Sen. John McCain (R-AZ) said, "In this crisis, as in all I may face in the future, I will not allow dogma to override common sense." Sen. Obama said, "George Bush called this the ownership society. But what he really meant was you're on your own society." Sen. Clinton said, "The last time we had fiscal responsibility, a balanced budget and a surplus, it was a Democrat in the White House." The big plans, the big games, the unforced errors. We look at them all with the reporters covering the week: Doyle McManus of the Los Angeles Times, Jeanne Cummings of Politico, James Barnes of National Journal, and Charles Babington of the Associated Press.

Could a new effort to fight global warming save money and create jobs at the same time? NOW looks at a city-wide plan in Cambridge, Massachusetts, to make all its buildings more energy efficient. Up to 80 percent of emissions in many urban cities comes from buildings. Cambridge hopes that this unprecedented effort to green its buildings will reduce greenhouse gas emissions by 10 percent in just five years, the equivalent of taking 33,000 cars off the road. If every major city in America took the same approach, it would have a significant impact on the carbon footprint of the United States -- and it would generate tens of millions of new "green" jobs.
