Wicked in Concert

Join us as we celebrate the music of one of the most successful productions in Broadway history: Wicked. At its heart, Wicked is a story of personal empowerment, of an unlikely friendship and what it means to be different.

Kristin Chenoweth and Idina Menzel will be our guides in this concert version of the famed musical as we explore the story of Elphaba and Glinda, the journey of two young women that continues to provide inspiration to young and old, in every culture, and in all walks of life.

Featuring an all-star cast and fresh orchestral arrangements of iconic songs like “Dancing Through Life,” “Popular,” “Defying Gravity” and many more, Wicked in Concert explores these themes and reimagines this remarkable musical in an intimate concert setting.

Great Performances

Broadway — Beyond the Golden Age

SDPB1: Friday, Aug. 20, 7pm (6 MT)

Filmmaker Rick McKay’s film Broadway: The Golden Age delighted theater fans with its compilation of intimate interviews with the stars of Broadway’s “Golden Age” in the 1940s and 50s, creating an invaluable first-hand archive of fascinating backstage stories and reminiscences. The insider’s history of Broadway from 1959 through the early 1980s captured the theater scene during a tumultuous time both onstage and off U.S. history.

McKay was long at work compiling a sequel before his untimely death in 2018 disrupted its completion. But in great news for Broadway fans craving theater after the long COVID-19 pandemic shutdown, a new team of producers has undertaken the film to finally bring it to fruition.

The program touches on a variety of classic Broadway shows and a galaxy of stars including Bea Arthur, Elizabeth Ashley, Alec Baldwin, Carol Burnett, Glenn Close, André De Shields, Charles Durning, Celeste Holm, Jane Fonda, Robert Goulet, Robert Guillaume, Cherry Jones, Donna McKechnie, Liza Minnelli, Robert Morse, James Naughton, Jerry Orbach, Elaine Paige, Robert Redford, Chita Rivera, Liev Schreiber, Elaine Stritch, Dick Van Dyke, Ben Vereen, Lesley Ann Warren and more.

Guest vocalist: Kaija Bonde

Fit as Fiddles

SDPB's Fiddles and Friends returns this August with three live concerts. A fan favorite since its inception in 2015, Fiddles and Friends features the fiddlers three: Kenny Putnam, Tom Schaefer and Owen DeJong. This year the performances include vocalist Kaija Bonde and beloved backing musicians.

Owen DeJong plays throughout South Dakota with the Poker Alice Band and the Public Domain Tune Band. Tom Schaefer is a former South Dakota State Fiddle Champion and belongs to several regional bands. Kenny Putnam is a member of the Red Willow Band and toured the United States as a member of Roy Clark's band. Kaija Bonde is a vocalist with the harmony-rich East of Westerville and starred in Always, Patsy Cline.

"These three fiddle players have known each other a long time, are very accomplished in their own styles of professional music and in other careers, and these three guys are like our 'Three Tenors,' says Larry Rohrer, SDPB Director of Content and bassist. "It's just magic. Everyone is great friends and there's so much musical talent."

The group has worked three-part fiddles into classics like "Goodbye Liza Jane," "I Am a Pilgrim," "Stumblin'," "Sure Beats Me," "Battle of New Orleans," "Sweet Georgia Brown," and theme music from Ken Burns' PBS series Lewis & Clark. ♡

JESSE OWENS

AMERICAN EXPERIENCE

SDPB August Listings

On April 2, 1936, when 22-year-old Jesse Owens entered the Olympic Stadium in Berlin, he was barely able to control his anger because of the insults that Hitler and the other German leaders had hurled at him and his teammates on the Olympic squad. The young athlete would channel his raw emotions into some of the most remarkable achievements in the history of athletics, winning four gold medals. American Experience Jesse Owens begins in the poor Cleveland neighborhood where the young athlete grew up; details his early career; describes Adolf Hitler's outsized ambitions for the 1936 Olympics; explores the movement in Western democracies to boycott the event; and explains the pressures on Owens to attend, yet representing a country still so entrenched in racism.

Home or Classroom

SDPB Is Here to Help All Students Succeed

SDPB has created SDPB Learners Connection and more free, online K-12 ed resources to help South Dakota students and teachers at-home and in the classroom.

SDPB.org/LearnersConnection

Here, teachers and caregivers will find a bounty of free resources: lesson plans and distance learning activities for K-12 students, crafts for kids, kitchen classroom ideas, free learning apps, selected online articles, and links to resources for early learners.

e-Newsletters for Educators & Caregivers

SDPB's resident education experts specialize in providing online resources to support educators, parents, and learners. Our electronic newsletters bring curated resources straight to your inbox, so you don't have to endlessly hunt and scroll for quality content. Visit SDPB.org and click "Email Sign-up" to join.

Parenting Minutes

Short videos focus on key topics related to early childhood learning and raising children. Each video contains shareable tips, facts, and links to more FREE resources and information. Find them at SDPB.org/parentingminutes

Native American Studies Videos

Want to learn more about Native American boarding schools, reservations, and land stewardship? What are Winter Counts and how are they crucial to understanding Great Plains history? For PreK-4, SDPB's Steven Rokusek assisted in the development of a Native American Studies video series in close partnership with Technology & Innovation in Education (TIE) and the WoLakota Project in Rapid City, a program supporting students in rural, high-need schools and incorporating Oceti Sakowin Essential Understandings, a curriculum and coursework in South Dakota American Indian history and culture. Access these videos to jumpstart crucial local cultural learning activities.

A Push in the Right Direction

Even in the era of GPS, knowing west from east develops spatial reasoning and confidence in kids. This engaging animated video series for PreK-4 social studies concepts includes cardinal and intermediate directions, map-reading, and the time concepts of past, present, and future.

Dissection 101

SDPB adds to its well-received Dissection 101 series with more videos, lesson plans and quizzes on dissections of crayfish, clams, earthworms and more. The video series provides an alternative teaching tool for classrooms with limited resources or the faint-of-heart.

Art Basics with Dick Termes

Fun for all ages, Art Basics with Dick Termes: Drawing is a multi-part video series featuring renowned South Dakota "Termesphere" artist Dick Termes teaching basic drawing techniques. Features 5+ hours of content in 20 individual videos, activities, a teacher's guide, and lesson plans.

Parents and educators can also contact an SDPB Education staff member to help with any questions about resources from SDPB and PBS.

tiny desk 20 CONTEST 21

by Katy Beem

Reed Two Bulls, vocals & keys
Douglas Two Bulls, guitar
Dan Carroll, bass
Micheal Two Bulls, drums

According to founding member Micheal Two Bulls, The Wake Singers emerged in 2009 in Tewa territory (aka Santa Fe), metamorphosing from Micheal and Douglas Two Bulls' previous band called Chocolate Helicopter. Micheal says many iterations of the group have existed but he and Douglas have endured.

Their younger cousin Reed Two Bulls has sung lead vocals for the past five years. Reed's voice at the center of their Tiny Desk Contest entry "Mirrors over Skies" is notable – refreshingly low-pitched, unaffected, and somewhat reminiscent of 1980s/90s Concrete Blonde lead vocalist Johnette Napolitano. Reed's throat-rich vocals, Douglas's raw-toned guitar and the tune's unrushed rhythm make for a pleasingly grainy texture: it's atmospheric and broody in the "hurts so good" vein of the best basement rock love songs.

To create "Mirrors over Skies," the band says they packed up everything and spent a week writing and recording, intensely and intentionally, in Red Shirt Table. "It started out as a letter to someone I used to know," says Douglas. "The last time I saw her I was taking her to the airport seven years ago. She wanted love; I wanted all tomorrow's parties. It took me a long time to see what she meant." That original letter gets delivered. The wistful music and lyrics encourage the listener toward play, pine, repeat. Each member brings song sketches to the table that the group develops collaboratively. Douglas, long passionate about writing and poetry, often contributes lyrical content.

Douglas says he gets his inspiration from Red Shirt Table. When not writing and recording there, the band members call Mni Luzahan Otunwahe (aka Rapid City) home. Reed was born in New York City, and lived in Los Angeles and Minneapolis before moving onto homelands. "I'm not separate from my homelands," says Micheal. "My homelands ground me and are present in everything I do and create." Reed concurs: "Music and homelands will always be tied as one for me. The Wake Singers are blood. Family is Red Shirt Table, music is family." Bassist Dan Carroll says he first fell in love with music as a passive and active participant in South Dakota. "As far as how it's expressed? Probably me saying 'ope' a lot."

The band name sounds like what it is. Douglas and Micheal say they imagined actual wake singers and thought of relatives who would do just that – sing at wakes for family. Rose, another member of Chocolate Helicopter, interpreted the band name as an invitation to awakening. Micheal says at this point in life, the name has an element of remembrance and commemoration of relatives who have passed on, often too young.

Not quite as lovelorn as “Mirrors over Skies,” another Wake Singers tune, “Master of Your Own Age,” provides a bittersweet, jangly guitared ride with echoes of longing and social criticism.

*Sweet kisses on the lips
You terrorize / in your own eyes
You turned it off in your own mind*

The blues-jazzy “No Amulet for Violence,” grounded by resounding bass, tipped in horns, and featuring Reed in excellent voice, demonstrates Doors-esque keyboard and enjoyably spins into free jazz.

*They’ll pay you to Lobotomized your reason why
If you can’t commit to what you buy*

The members are working artists and musicians. Carroll is currently doing carpentry. Reed runs a hand-painted earring business. They practice in their recording/art studio and most of their performances have been virtual for the past year, but they’ll be playing the Native POP Festival in downtown Rapid City and other venues as the pandemic allows, as well as releasing their debut album.

From USD to Tokyo, Chris Nilsen Qualifies for the Olympics

University of South Dakota alum and pole vault standout Chris Nilsen has qualified for the Tokyo Olympic Games.

Nilsen won gold at the Olympic Trials event in Eugene, Oregon to punch his ticket to the big show. He cleared 19-4 ¼ to win the competition. "I have been thinking of this day for the last five years, and even more so the last two months. It is such an honor to be able to represent the University of South Dakota here on the big stage," stated Nilsen. "Tonight, I get to go to bed as an Olympian."

"Coach [Derek Miles] told me, 'Don't think about pole vault, don't think about winning, don't think about top three – just go out there and have fun.' That probably sounds cliché, but that was probably the only time he's actually said that to me," explained Nilsen. "After I won, he congratulated me and gave me a hug."

Music Matters

Lucas Hoge & Dallas Chief Eagle

Music Matters, a new digital series from SDPB and Levitt at the Falls, explores the origins and inspiration of the musical artists performing this concert season at the Levitt Shell in downtown Sioux Falls. Host Apolonia Davalos takes us onstage and backstage to explore the how and why music matters to our communities and the featured artists.

Lucas Hoge

Originally from Hubbell, Nebraska (population 44), the country music artist Lucas Hoge's album Dirty South debuted at No. 5 on Billboard's overall Country Albums chart.

"To me, music is a universal language," says Hoge. "It breaks down barriers for communication in other ways that normally you might not be able to communicate with that person or that group of people. But as soon as you start playing some music, it's just a different language. It speaks to everyone."

Hoge regularly performs for U.S. troops overseas. With many family members in the military, but not feeling "wired" for the military himself, Hoge says he wants to give back by directly thanking and showing his appreciation to servicemen and servicewomen where they are stationed. "The loyalty, the dedication, the sacrifice, that all these men and women do for us is beyond compare. Getting to see exactly what they go through day in and day out intensifies my respect for what they do for us."

Dallas Chief Eagle

Dallas Chief Eagle (Rosebud Lakota) is a K-12 art teacher with a Master's degree in guidance counseling and personal services. A recognized hoop dancer, Chief Eagle presents and teaches stories, dances, and song that help people from all cultures navigate difficulties and face fears. "Our people were very good at developing songs, a language, and a way of life that was very close to nature," says Chief Eagle. "It was interrupted, so what we are doing ourselves is we are re-emerging that part of our culture in our schools and in our homes."

Chief Eagle discusses the spirit that can be found in the world around us, including "Grandpa Rock," a stone he uses to help students improve self-awareness and self-management exercises. "How does this rock teach us? It's not moving, so we're not going to move, we're not going to make noise. I teach the students how to turn off all the channels in their brain and we go into spirit. Eventually, they can turn off their brain and their spirit gets most of the attention. Then we can start to see nature and other people as spirits and start treating them that way."👇

Before she assumed principal duties at Sioux Falls Lutheran School three years ago, Brenda Bernard worked as an elementary special education teacher and administrator for Sioux Falls Public Schools, including nine years as an early childhood administrator at Hawthorne Elementary School. She grew up on a farm south of Canton and attended the University of South Dakota. "Pretty much I have been a South Dakota girl all my life," says Bernard.

Bernard has been partnering with SDPB's Early Learning Initiative to incorporate Sesame Street in Communities (SSIC) into Sioux Falls Lutheran's curriculum. "I was really excited to get connected with Sesame Street in Communities. I noticed early on that we had very common goals in serving families, and the top three focus on helping families stay healthy and stay connected, and helping our teachers have access to high quality materials that are developmentally appropriate for the ages of kids we serve."

Bernard explains why Sesame Street in Communities is so impactful. "In our program, we spend a lot of time talking about brain development. Research tells us that learning is more likely to be stored in long-term memory when it's paired with a high level of excitement or emotion, be it happy or sad. And who else has higher emotions than Elmo? And is so excited about learning? Part of why Sesame Street works so well is that we can intentionally insert a high level of emotion while we're helping our kids learn or helping them to overcome something. We can be assured it will stick in their learning."

Kids respond to Sesame Street characters for multiple reasons, says Bernard, and Sioux Falls Lutheran plans to more fully integrate SSIC and SDPB's early learning resources into their family nights and learning events this fall. "They really speak on a child's level. There's a level of trust that the kids have with these characters and a level of stability. We're excited for our families to get connected and feel supported in helping their children. And it doesn't take a purchased program that costs a lot of money."

"Sesame Street engages in what's going on in current times and connects with families by paying attention to what is going on right now in the world. As I've worked in special education, I was thrilled to see the character Julia who has autism come to life to acknowledge and validate our families who have special needs. My daughter is 25 and has cerebral palsy and uses a wheelchair. My personal connection is the characters who have a disability. When she was young, it was important for her to see other kids like her." ▼

Rapid City's Emily Graslie Co-Hosts New PBS Nature Series

Emily Graslie, born and raised in Rapid City, announced she is back online and onscreen as a co-host of a new special limited series In Our Nature, as part of the PBS It's Okay To Be Smart franchise found on the PBS Video App and Passport.

The digital short-form documentary series explores how seemingly distant ecosystems, even half a world apart, are connected in surprising ways. Emily joins Trace Dominguez and It's Okay To Be Smart host Dr. Joe Hanson looking at the universal rules of life that tie together Earth's living ecosystem.

Episode one takes Emily back home to South Dakota as she travels to the Pine Ridge Indian Reservation to learn how the bison is being restored to the native prairie ecosystem and its people. She and co-hosts examine how large mammals like the bison in North America and the wildebeest in Africa are cornerstones to their respective grassland environments.

In 2020, she made her broadcast television debut on PBS in Prehistoric Road Trip, an original three-part series exploring the paleontology and natural history of the Dakotas, Montana and Wyoming. Prehistoric Road Trip rebroadcasts on SDPB in August.

Find It's Okay To Be Smart on the PBS Video App, PBS Passport, or at YouTube.com/itsokaytobesmart.

Watch Prehistoric Road Trip on SDPB2: Thursdays, August 5, 12 and 19 at 8pm (7 MT).

Discover startling revelations about the ancient ancestors of animals still alive today. One early croc relative was built like a greyhound, and ancient whales really did walk on four legs. Birds arose from feathered dinosaurs — in fact, they are dinosaurs — and went on to colonize the natural world as well as the urban spaces created by humans. Exploring the mystery and majesty of these amazing animals, When Whales Walked reminds us that their future lies in the hands of humans.
