It is one of the most memorable presidential elections in decades. It is a race that pits the iconoclast John McCain against the newcomer Barack Obama; the heroic former prisoner of war against the first African-American major party nominee. For two hours, "The Choice," celebrating its 20th anniversary, examines the rich personal and political biographies of these men and goes behind the headlines to discover how they arrived at this moment and what their different candidacies say about America.

Format: Documentary
Segment Length: 00:56:46

LATINOS '08 examines the 2008 election through the prism of ethnic politics. Latinos are less cohesive than other voting blocs, and they do not fit the black/white racial binary that has long shaped American politics. This documentary will examine how today's candidates and advocacy groups are trying to mobilize and attract this unpredictable group of voters. Will McCain manage to win back Latino defectors, in light of his party's harsh rhetoric on immigration? Will Obama succeed in securing the votes of the many Latinos who supported Hillary Clinton during the primaries? Another subject of inquiry will be the effectiveness - or lack thereof - of Latino politicians in advancing Latino interests and promoting Latino unity. As these politicians enter the upper echelons of American politics, they face inevitable pressure to abandon their ethnic identity and constituencies. Will the Latino electorate coalesce nonetheless, united around the immigration issue and hemispheric foreign policy considerations? Or will ethnic considerations be trumped by class, education and other factors?

The big bailout, the big debate - we take it all apart and put it together again, tonight on "Washington Week." Gov. Sarah Palin (R-AK) said, "Nice to meet you. Can I call you Joe?" The vice presidential debate. Both candidates came with talking points prepared. Gov. Palin said, "I may not answer the questions the way that either the moderator or you want to hear, but I'm going to talk straight to the American people and let them know my track record also. Sen. Joe Biden (D-DE) said, "Vice President Cheney has been the most dangerous president we've had probably in American history." And they met against the backdrop of another dramatic debate: this one in Washington. Pres. George Bush said, "There were moments this week when some thought that the federal government could not rise to the challenge." But after a week of acrimony and news of bad new job numbers, Congress finally passed the financial bailout bill. We look at the week's drama with the reporters covering it: Charles Babington of the Associated Press, Jeanne Cummings of Politico, John Dickerson of Slate magazine, and Jeff Zeleny of the New York Times.

Less than a month before the election and the global financial markets are up in upheaval. Tonight, how the government, Wall Street, and Main Street voters are reacting. I'm Pete Williams sitting in for Gwen Ifill this week on "Washington Week." Sec. of the Treasury Henry Paulson said, "U.S. and global financial markets continue to be severely strained." And nowhere is that more evident than on Wall Street. It's also topic A for voters. Question at debate: "What's the fastest, most positive solution to bail these people out of the economic ruin?" Question at Debate: "During this economic crisis, I was wondering, what it is that's going to actually help those people out?" Question at debate: "How can we trust either of you with our money when both parties got us into this global economic crisis?" But there's something different going on out on the campaign trail. Gov. Sarah Palin (R-AK) said, "Our opponent is someone who sees America as imperfect enough to pal around with terrorists who targeted their own country." Sen. John McCain (R-AZ) said, "Who is the real Senator Obama?" Sen. Joe Biden (D-DE) said, "What a majority of the American people are looking for - a steady hand, leadership, an optimist, not an angry man lurching from one position to another." Sen. Barack Obama (D-IL) said, "This is the kind of erratic behavior we've been seeing out of Senator McCain." Character and the economy, and how they're framing the election that's just 25 days away, with the reporters who are covering the stories: David Wessel of the Wall Street Journal, Karen Tumulty of Time magazine, James Barnes of National Journal, and Dan Balz of the Washington Post.

With gas prices spiking and home values crumbling, the American dream of commuting to work from the fringes of suburbia has become an American nightmare. Many are facing a hard choice: Paying for gas or paying the mortgage. How did it come to this? It's not just about America's financial crisis; it's also about big problems with our national infrastructure. Overstressed highways and too few public transportation options are wreaking havoc on people's lives and hitting the brakes on our already-stretched economy. This week, NOW on PBS takes a close-up look at our inadequate transportation network and visits some people paying a high price - in both dollars and quality of life - just to get to work. Do we have the means to modernize both our infrastructure and our lifestyles? This is the first installment in "Blueprint America," a year-long, PBS-wide series focusing on the nation's infrastructure. "Blueprint America" is an initiative of Thirteen/WNET.

This program follows the courtroom drama surrounding the trial of Iraq's former president, revealing a tainted procedural that can be seen as a microcosm of the challenges and dysfunctions of forming the Iraqi government itself. The divisions between Iraq's Shia, Sunnis and Kurds throughout the country are represented in the courtroom. The documentary closely examines, for the first time, the full process of trying, convicting and sentencing Saddam Hussein, highlighting the lawyers involved, the multiple judges who presided over the case, the verdict and the sentence - execution. With evidence of tampering and claims of mischaracterization of justice, was this truly a model of judiciary practice for a fledgling democracy?

With gas prices spiking and home values crumbling, the American dream of commuting to work from the fringes of suburbia has become an American nightmare. Many are facing a hard choice: Paying for gas or paying the mortgage. How did it come to this? It's not just about America's financial crisis; it's also about big problems with our national infrastructure. Overstressed highways and too few public transportation options are wreaking havoc on people's lives and hitting the brakes on our already-stretched economy. This week, NOW on PBS takes a close-up look at our inadequate transportation network and visits some people paying a high price - in both dollars and quality of life - just to get to work. Do we have the means to modernize both our infrastructure and our lifestyles? This is the first installment in "Blueprint America," a year-long, PBS-wide series focusing on the nation's infrastructure. "Blueprint America" is an initiative of Thirteen/WNET.

The big bailout, the big debate - we take it all apart and put it together again, tonight on "Washington Week." Gov. Sarah Palin (R-AK) said, "Nice to meet you. Can I call you Joe?" The vice presidential debate. Both candidates came with talking points prepared. Gov. Palin said, "I may not answer the questions the way that either the moderator or you want to hear, but I'm going to talk straight to the American people and let them know my track record also. Sen. Joe Biden (D-DE) said, "Vice President Cheney has been the most dangerous president we've had probably in American history." And they met against the backdrop of another dramatic debate: this one in Washington. Pres. George Bush said, "There were moments this week when some thought that the federal government could not rise to the challenge." But after a week of acrimony and news of bad new job numbers, Congress finally passed the financial bailout bill. We look at the week's drama with the reporters covering it: Charles Babington of the Associated Press, Jeanne Cummings of Politico, John Dickerson of Slate magazine, and Jeff Zeleny of the New York Times.

Less than a month before the election and the global financial markets are up in upheaval. Tonight, how the government, Wall Street, and Main Street voters are reacting. I'm Pete Williams sitting in for Gwen Ifill this week on "Washington Week." Sec. of the Treasury Henry Paulson said, "U.S. and global financial markets continue to be severely strained." And nowhere is that more evident than on Wall Street. It's also topic A for voters. Question at debate: "What's the fastest, most positive solution to bail these people out of the economic ruin?" Question at Debate: "During this economic crisis, I was wondering, what it is that's going to actually help those people out?" Question at debate: "How can we trust either of you with our money when both parties got us into this global economic crisis?" But there's something different going on out on the campaign trail. Gov. Sarah Palin (R-AK) said, "Our opponent is someone who sees America as imperfect enough to pal around with terrorists who targeted their own country." Sen. John McCain (R-AZ) said, "Who is the real Senator Obama?" Sen. Joe Biden (D-DE) said, "What a majority of the American people are looking for - a steady hand, leadership, an optimist, not an angry man lurching from one position to another." Sen. Barack Obama (D-IL) said, "This is the kind of erratic behavior we've been seeing out of Senator McCain." Character and the economy, and how they're framing the election that's just 25 days away, with the reporters who are covering the stories: David Wessel of the Wall Street Journal, Karen Tumulty of Time magazine, James Barnes of National Journal, and Dan Balz of the Washington Post.

This election year, the most crucial battleground states may fall far west of the Mississippi. Strategists say New Mexico, Nevada, and Colorado are pivotal to Senator McCain's success, so how are these voters being courted? This week, NOW on PBS travels to New Mexico to see how both campaigns are hoping to attract - and secure - first time voters on college campuses, as well as voters in New Mexico's large Hispanic population. It's clearly anyone's game - this southwestern state was won by fewer than 400 votes in 2000, and 6,000 votes in 2004. NOW sits down with New Mexico Governor Bill Richardson, a supporter of Barack Obama and a former 2008 presidential contender himself, who affirms the political importance of the "New West." "Had Kerry won those states [in 2004]," Richardson tells Maria Hinojosa, "even having lost Ohio, he'd be President." Will the New West play a key role in determining the fate of the country?

Some working dogs are able to use their skills to perform tasks they were bred for; there are still jobs today for herders, hunters and guard dogs. But as we multiply and transform the many breeds of dogs, honing their looks and their sizes, we also change our relationship with them, and theirs with us. How can we learn to cope with the hard-wired instincts of our pets, and what roles can they play in a world their ancestors would hardly recognize?

Now, a unique field expedition, covered exclusively by NOVA, will set out for Alaska's North Slope to defrost a jackpot of new fossil clues. With the help of stunning CGI, NOVA will breathe life into the polar dinosaurs' lives and environment in vivid detail. The team of researchers will combine extreme engineering and perilous fossil hunting, including digging a tunnel into the permafrost in order to collect the dinosaur bones. With Alaska's spectacular wilderness as a backdrop, this program will reveal a prehistoric lost world for the first time on television.

With gas prices spiking and home values crumbling, the American dream of commuting to work from the fringes of suburbia has become an American nightmare. Many are facing a hard choice: Paying for gas or paying the mortgage. How did it come to this? It's not just about America's financial crisis; it's also about big problems with our national infrastructure. Overstressed highways and too few public transportation options are wreaking havoc on people's lives and hitting the brakes on our already-stretched economy. This week, NOW on PBS takes a close-up look at our inadequate transportation network and visits some people paying a high price - in both dollars and quality of life - just to get to work. Do we have the means to modernize both our infrastructure and our lifestyles? This is the first installment in "Blueprint America," a year-long, PBS-wide series focusing on the nation's infrastructure. "Blueprint America" is an initiative of Thirteen/WNET.

LATINOS '08 examines the 2008 election through the prism of ethnic politics. Latinos are less cohesive than other voting blocs, and they do not fit the black/white racial binary that has long shaped American politics. This documentary will examine how today's candidates and advocacy groups are trying to mobilize and attract this unpredictable group of voters. Will McCain manage to win back Latino defectors, in light of his party's harsh rhetoric on immigration? Will Obama succeed in securing the votes of the many Latinos who supported Hillary Clinton during the primaries? Another subject of inquiry will be the effectiveness - or lack thereof - of Latino politicians in advancing Latino interests and promoting Latino unity. As these politicians enter the upper echelons of American politics, they face inevitable pressure to abandon their ethnic identity and constituencies. Will the Latino electorate coalesce nonetheless, united around the immigration issue and hemispheric foreign policy considerations? Or will ethnic considerations be trumped by class, education and other factors?

This election year, the most crucial battleground states may fall far west of the Mississippi. Strategists say New Mexico, Nevada, and Colorado are pivotal to Senator McCain's success, so how are these voters being courted? This week, NOW on PBS travels to New Mexico to see how both campaigns are hoping to attract - and secure - first time voters on college campuses, as well as voters in New Mexico's large Hispanic population. It's clearly anyone's game - this southwestern state was won by fewer than 400 votes in 2000, and 6,000 votes in 2004. NOW sits down with New Mexico Governor Bill Richardson, a supporter of Barack Obama and a former 2008 presidential contender himself, who affirms the political importance of the "New West." "Had Kerry won those states [in 2004]," Richardson tells Maria Hinojosa, "even having lost Ohio, he'd be President." Will the New West play a key role in determining the fate of the country?

Less than a month before the election and the global financial markets are up in upheaval. Tonight, how the government, Wall Street, and Main Street voters are reacting. I'm Pete Williams sitting in for Gwen Ifill this week on "Washington Week." Sec. of the Treasury Henry Paulson said, "U.S. and global financial markets continue to be severely strained." And nowhere is that more evident than on Wall Street. It's also topic A for voters. Question at debate: "What's the fastest, most positive solution to bail these people out of the economic ruin?" Question at Debate: "During this economic crisis, I was wondering, what it is that's going to actually help those people out?" Question at debate: "How can we trust either of you with our money when both parties got us into this global economic crisis?" But there's something different going on out on the campaign trail. Gov. Sarah Palin (R-AK) said, "Our opponent is someone who sees America as imperfect enough to pal around with terrorists who targeted their own country." Sen. John McCain (R-AZ) said, "Who is the real Senator Obama?" Sen. Joe Biden (D-DE) said, "What a majority of the American people are looking for - a steady hand, leadership, an optimist, not an angry man lurching from one position to another." Sen. Barack Obama (D-IL) said, "This is the kind of erratic behavior we've been seeing out of Senator McCain." Character and the economy, and how they're framing the election that's just 25 days away, with the reporters who are covering the stories: David Wessel of the Wall Street Journal, Karen Tumulty of Time magazine, James Barnes of National Journal, and Dan Balz of the Washington Post.

This program follows the courtroom drama surrounding the trial of Iraq's former president, revealing a tainted procedural that can be seen as a microcosm of the challenges and dysfunctions of forming the Iraqi government itself. The divisions between Iraq's Shia, Sunnis and Kurds throughout the country are represented in the courtroom. The documentary closely examines, for the first time, the full process of trying, convicting and sentencing Saddam Hussein, highlighting the lawyers involved, the multiple judges who presided over the case, the verdict and the sentence - execution. With evidence of tampering and claims of mischaracterization of justice, was this truly a model of judiciary practice for a fledgling democracy?

This election year, the most crucial battleground states may fall far west of the Mississippi. Strategists say New Mexico, Nevada, and Colorado are pivotal to Senator McCain's success, so how are these voters being courted? This week, NOW on PBS travels to New Mexico to see how both campaigns are hoping to attract - and secure - first time voters on college campuses, as well as voters in New Mexico's large Hispanic population. It's clearly anyone's game - this southwestern state was won by fewer than 400 votes in 2000, and 6,000 votes in 2004. NOW sits down with New Mexico Governor Bill Richardson, a supporter of Barack Obama and a former 2008 presidential contender himself, who affirms the political importance of the "New West." "Had Kerry won those states [in 2004]," Richardson tells Maria Hinojosa, "even having lost Ohio, he'd be President." Will the New West play a key role in determining the fate of the country?

The big bailout, the big debate - we take it all apart and put it together again, tonight on "Washington Week." Gov. Sarah Palin (R-AK) said, "Nice to meet you. Can I call you Joe?" The vice presidential debate. Both candidates came with talking points prepared. Gov. Palin said, "I may not answer the questions the way that either the moderator or you want to hear, but I'm going to talk straight to the American people and let them know my track record also. Sen. Joe Biden (D-DE) said, "Vice President Cheney has been the most dangerous president we've had probably in American history." And they met against the backdrop of another dramatic debate: this one in Washington. Pres. George Bush said, "There were moments this week when some thought that the federal government could not rise to the challenge." But after a week of acrimony and news of bad new job numbers, Congress finally passed the financial bailout bill. We look at the week's drama with the reporters covering it: Charles Babington of the Associated Press, Jeanne Cummings of Politico, John Dickerson of Slate magazine, and Jeff Zeleny of the New York Times.

Less than a month before the election and the global financial markets are up in upheaval. Tonight, how the government, Wall Street, and Main Street voters are reacting. I'm Pete Williams sitting in for Gwen Ifill this week on "Washington Week." Sec. of the Treasury Henry Paulson said, "U.S. and global financial markets continue to be severely strained." And nowhere is that more evident than on Wall Street. It's also topic A for voters. Question at debate: "What's the fastest, most positive solution to bail these people out of the economic ruin?" Question at Debate: "During this economic crisis, I was wondering, what it is that's going to actually help those people out?" Question at debate: "How can we trust either of you with our money when both parties got us into this global economic crisis?" But there's something different going on out on the campaign trail. Gov. Sarah Palin (R-AK) said, "Our opponent is someone who sees America as imperfect enough to pal around with terrorists who targeted their own country." Sen. John McCain (R-AZ) said, "Who is the real Senator Obama?" Sen. Joe Biden (D-DE) said, "What a majority of the American people are looking for - a steady hand, leadership, an optimist, not an angry man lurching from one position to another." Sen. Barack Obama (D-IL) said, "This is the kind of erratic behavior we've been seeing out of Senator McCain." Character and the economy, and how they're framing the election that's just 25 days away, with the reporters who are covering the stories: David Wessel of the Wall Street Journal, Karen Tumulty of Time magazine, James Barnes of National Journal, and Dan Balz of the Washington Post.

Nearing completion, China's massive Three Gorges Dam is altering the landscape and the lives of people living along the fabled Yangtze River. Countless ancient villages and historic locales will be submerged, and two million people will lose their homes and livelihoods. The Yu family desperately seeks a reprieve by sending their 16-year-old daughter to work in the cruise ship industry that has sprung up to give tourists a last glimpse of the legendary river valley. With cinematic sweep, "Up the Yangtze" explores lives transformed by the biggest hydroelectric dam in history, a hotly contested symbol of the Chinese economic miracle. How is it that dinosaurs managed to survive and even thrive in the gloom of the dark and frigid polar regions? This is one of today's most intriguing, little-known enigmas in paleontology. Now, a unique field expedition, covered exclusively by NOVA, will set out for Alaska's North Slope to defrost a jackpot of new fossil clues. With the help of stunning CGI, NOVA will breathe life into the polar dinosaurs' lives and environment in vivid detail. The team of researchers will combine extreme engineering and perilous fossil hunting, including digging a tunnel into the permafrost in order to collect the dinosaur bones. With Alaska's spectacular wilderness as a backdrop, this program will reveal a prehistoric lost world for the first time on television.

With gas prices spiking and home values crumbling, the American dream of commuting to work from the fringes of suburbia has become an American nightmare. Many are facing a hard choice: Paying for gas or paying the mortgage. How did it come to this? It's not just about America's financial crisis; it's also about big problems with our national infrastructure. Overstressed highways and too few public transportation options are wreaking havoc on people's lives and hitting the brakes on our already-stretched economy. This week, NOW on PBS takes a close-up look at our inadequate transportation network and visits some people paying a high price - in both dollars and quality of life - just to get to work. Do we have the means to modernize both our infrastructure and our lifestyles? This is the first installment in "Blueprint America," a year-long, PBS-wide series focusing on the nation's infrastructure. "Blueprint America" is an initiative of Thirteen/WNET.

This program follows the courtroom drama surrounding the trial of Iraq's former president, revealing a tainted procedural that can be seen as a microcosm of the challenges and dysfunctions of forming the Iraqi government itself. The divisions between Iraq's Shia, Sunnis and Kurds throughout the country are represented in the courtroom. The documentary closely examines, for the first time, the full process of trying, convicting and sentencing Saddam Hussein, highlighting the lawyers involved, the multiple judges who presided over the case, the verdict and the sentence - execution. With evidence of tampering and claims of mischaracterization of justice, was this truly a model of judiciary practice for a fledgling democracy?

According to a government study, by the year 2020, there could be a nationwide shortage of up to one million nurses, which could result in substandard treatment for hundreds of thousands of patients. Just as alarming, fewer nurses are choosing to teach the next generation of professionals, resulting in tens of thousands of applicants being turned away from the nation's nursing schools. "If there was ever a time in the history of this country when one thought about the match between a profession and the changing needs of people in the country, this is the time," Dr. Mary Naylor of the University of Pennsylvania School of Nursing tells NOW on PBS. Dr. Naylor points out the growing population of older people, many of whom are living with chronic conditions, is significantly increasing the demand for nurses. This week, NOW on PBS takes a hard look at how the shortage of nurses is placing strains on the entire medical system, as well as innovative efforts to reverse the trend. Can America solve its nursing crisis?

Mark Oliver Everett, better known as E, is the lead singer of U.S. cult band the EELS. What most of his fans don't know is that Mark's father, Hugh Everett III, was one of America's top quantum physicists. In 1957, Hugh Everett came up with a revolutionary theory that predicted the existence of parallel universes. The idea quickly seeped into popular culture, but only recently has it been accepted by mainstream physicists. The film follows the wry and charismatic Mark, who had been estranged from his father, as he travels across America to learn about the father he never knew. It is only by entering the paradoxical world of quantum mechanics that Mark can hope to understand why he was such a stranger to his own father.

For years, big business - from oil and coal companies to electric utilities to car manufacturers - has resisted change to environmental policy and stifled the debate over climate change in America and around the globe. Now, facing rising pressure from governments, green groups and investors alike, big business is promising to reshape its approach to the environment, fundamentally transforming the politics of the debate. FRONTLINE producer Martin Smith travels the globe to size up the climate problem firsthand and to test what big business is really doing to solve one of the most urgent issues of our time.

According to a government study, by the year 2020, there could be a nationwide shortage of up to one million nurses, which could result in substandard treatment for hundreds of thousands of patients. Just as alarming, fewer nurses are choosing to teach the next generation of professionals, resulting in tens of thousands of applicants being turned away from the nation's nursing schools. "If there was ever a time in the history of this country when one thought about the match between a profession and the changing needs of people in the country, this is the time," Dr. Mary Naylor of the University of Pennsylvania School of Nursing tells NOW on PBS. Dr. Naylor points out the growing population of older people, many of whom are living with chronic conditions, is significantly increasing the demand for nurses. This week, NOW on PBS takes a hard look at how the shortage of nurses is placing strains on the entire medical system, as well as innovative efforts to reverse the trend. Can America solve its nursing crisis?

Battleground Virginia: Could a reliably Republican state turn blue? The state of Virginia has not voted for a Democratic President since 1964, but this year its 13 electoral votes are up for grabs as late polls show the race too close to call. This week, NOW on PBS goes behind the national polls and punditry and into the living rooms of real Virginia voters to learn how they'll be making their decisions. Military families, retirees, and blue-collar workers of all political stripes share their concerns about faith, the war, and making ends meet in troubling economic times.

Election 2008: Tough decisions for undecided women voters in the swing states. There are roughly eight million more female voters than male, and more women than men say they are still undecided. Senator Hillary Clinton and Governor Sarah Palin have undoubtedly changed the debate for many women voters, but the question is: how will they ultimately respond in the booth? This week, NOW on PBS travels to the swing state of Colorado to get insight from a diverse group of women. These pro-choice, pro-gun women don't fit into neat categories, but they do respond to issues built around working moms: pay equity, family leave, and child care. On the show, NOW also interviews former Vice Presidential Candidate Geraldine Ferraro for her take on the role of women in this election. Will the women's vote decide the election?

The final showdown between McCain and Obama, the government adds a bank bailout to its portfolio, and why attempts to register new voters might just become a federal case. I'm Gloria Borger sitting in for Gwen Ifill tonight on "Washington Week." With 18 days to go before the election, the candidates are sharpening their messages making an appeal to middle class voters. For John McCain the symbol has become - "My old buddy Joe." Sen. John McCain (R-AZ) said, "Joe the Plumber," "Joe the Plumber," "Joe the Plumber." Combined with new energy. Sen. McCain said, "I'm an American and I choose to fight, fight for a new direction for our country. Fight for what's right for America." But can McCain's new focus slow down Obama's momentum? Sen. Barack Obama (D-IL) said, "You can't pay attention to polls. We've got to keep making our case for change. We've got to keep fighting for every vote. We've got to keep running through the finish line." The battle lines are clear. Meanwhile, here in Washington, the government is trying to stabilize an ailing economy this time propping up banks. Pres. George W. Bush said, "But these are not ordinary circumstances. We took this measure as a last resort." But is it enough? And while states prepare for what could be record voter turnout, a controversy about methods and tactics in registering new voters. A man in Ohio said, "We've seen in some communities as many as 12 applications from the same individual - different signatures, different handwriting." How bad a problem is it? Covering these stories this week, Doyle McManus of the Los Angeles Times, Jackie Calmes of the New York Times, John Maggs of National Journal, and Michael Duffy of Time Magazine.

Boo! Tonight, Halloween brings us ghosts of the campaign past and the goblins of the election coming up. We'll give you a sneak peek tonight on "Washington Week." Sen. Barack Obama (D-IL) said, "How many people have early voted? That's what I'm talking about." Sen. John McCain (R-AZ) said, "You vote for me, get out our vote, carry Ohio, win this election. I will never, never let you down." Gov. Sarah Palin (R-AK) said, "Only John McCain has the wisdom and experience to get our economy back on the right track." Sen. Joe Biden (D-DE) said, "I know Halloween is coming, but John McCain dressed up as an agent of change - that costume just doesn't fit, folks." It's down to hand-to-hand, vote-for-vote combat in a handful of critical states, as the candidates race from Ohio to Florida to Indiana to Pennsylvania, trying for a landslide or a comeback. We'll tell you what to watch for on Tuesday night with David Broder of the Washington Post, John Harwood of CNBC and the New York Times, Doyle McManus of the Los Angeles Times, and Karen Tumulty of Time Magazine.

Battleground Virginia: Could a reliably Republican state turn blue? The state of Virginia has not voted for a Democratic President since 1964, but this year its 13 electoral votes are up for grabs as late polls show the race too close to call. This week, NOW on PBS goes behind the national polls and punditry and into the living rooms of real Virginia voters to learn how they'll be making their decisions. Military families, retirees, and blue-collar workers of all political stripes share their concerns about faith, the war, and making ends meet in troubling economic times.

The final showdown between McCain and Obama, the government adds a bank bailout to its portfolio, and why attempts to register new voters might just become a federal case. I'm Gloria Borger sitting in for Gwen Ifill tonight on "Washington Week." With 18 days to go before the election, the candidates are sharpening their messages making an appeal to middle class voters. For John McCain the symbol has become - "My old buddy Joe." Sen. John McCain (R-AZ) said, "Joe the Plumber," "Joe the Plumber," "Joe the Plumber." Combined with new energy. Sen. McCain said, "I'm an American and I choose to fight, fight for a new direction for our country. Fight for what's right for America." But can McCain's new focus slow down Obama's momentum? Sen. Barack Obama (D-IL) said, "You can't pay attention to polls. We've got to keep making our case for change. We've got to keep fighting for every vote. We've got to keep running through the finish line." The battle lines are clear. Meanwhile, here in Washington, the government is trying to stabilize an ailing economy this time propping up banks. Pres. George W. Bush said, "But these are not ordinary circumstances. We took this measure as a last resort." But is it enough? And while states prepare for what could be record voter turnout, a controversy about methods and tactics in registering new voters. A man in Ohio said, "We've seen in some communities as many as 12 applications from the same individual - different signatures, different handwriting." How bad a problem is it? Covering these stories this week, Doyle McManus of the Los Angeles Times, Jackie Calmes of the New York Times, John Maggs of National Journal, and Michael Duffy of Time Magazine.

Under a dozen days to go. We look at battlegrounds, trends, and what to watch for on the final march to Election Day, tonight on "Washington Week." The sounds of the season. Sen. Barack Obama (D-IL) said, "I feel like we've got a righteous wind at our backs here, but we're going to have to work." Sen. John McCain (R-AZ) said, "Thirteen days to go to the election and he changed his tax plan because the American people had learned the truth about it and they didn't like it. He'll say anything to get elected." Sen. Obama said, "He's been on the attack. That's what you do when you're out of ideas, when you're out of touch, and you're running out of time." Sen. McCain said, "We don't want a president who invites testing from the world at a time when our economy is in a crisis and Americans are already fighting in two wars." Add to that, Joe the plumber, Sarah Palin's price tags, and Joe Biden's assertion that Obama would face a crisis once elected. A critical week, a critical time, and the balance of power in Congress at stake as well. We'll talk about it all with David Shribman of the Pittsburgh Post-Gazette, Jeanne Cummings of Politico, John Dickerson of Slate Magazine, Shailagh Murray of the Washington Post, and Michael Viqueira of NBC News.

Boo! Tonight, Halloween brings us ghosts of the campaign past and the goblins of the election coming up. We'll give you a sneak peek tonight on "Washington Week." Sen. Barack Obama (D-IL) said, "How many people have early voted? That's what I'm talking about." Sen. John McCain (R-AZ) said, "You vote for me, get out our vote, carry Ohio, win this election. I will never, never let you down." Gov. Sarah Palin (R-AK) said, "Only John McCain has the wisdom and experience to get our economy back on the right track." Sen. Joe Biden (D-DE) said, "I know Halloween is coming, but John McCain dressed up as an agent of change - that costume just doesn't fit, folks." It's down to hand-to-hand, vote-for-vote combat in a handful of critical states, as the candidates race from Ohio to Florida to Indiana to Pennsylvania, trying for a landslide or a comeback. We'll tell you what to watch for on Tuesday night with David Broder of the Washington Post, John Harwood of CNBC and the New York Times, Doyle McManus of the Los Angeles Times, and Karen Tumulty of Time Magazine.

What do movie special effects, the stock market, heart attacks and the rings of Saturn have in common? They're all connected by a revolutionary new branch of math called fractals, which has changed the way we see the world and opened up a vast new territory to scientific analysis and understanding. NOVA tells the dramatic story of a group of pioneering mathematicians who developed fractals from a curiosity that few took seriously to an approach that is touching nearly every branch of understanding - including what happened after the Big Bang and the ultimate fate of our universe.

According to a government study, by the year 2020, there could be a nationwide shortage of up to one million nurses, which could result in substandard treatment for hundreds of thousands of patients. Just as alarming, fewer nurses are choosing to teach the next generation of professionals, resulting in tens of thousands of applicants being turned away from the nation's nursing schools. "If there was ever a time in the history of this country when one thought about the match between a profession and the changing needs of people in the country, this is the time," Dr. Mary Naylor of the University of Pennsylvania School of Nursing tells NOW on PBS. Dr. Naylor points out the growing population of older people, many of whom are living with chronic conditions, is significantly increasing the demand for nurses. This week, NOW on PBS takes a hard look at how the shortage of nurses is placing strains on the entire medical system, as well as innovative efforts to reverse the trend. Can America solve its nursing crisis?

Election 2008: Tough decisions for undecided women voters in the swing states. There are roughly eight million more female voters than male, and more women than men say they are still undecided. Senator Hillary Clinton and Governor Sarah Palin have undoubtedly changed the debate for many women voters, but the question is: how will they ultimately respond in the booth? This week, NOW on PBS travels to the swing state of Colorado to get insight from a diverse group of women. These pro-choice, pro-gun women don't fit into neat categories, but they do respond to issues built around working moms: pay equity, family leave, and child care. On the show, NOW also interviews former Vice Presidential Candidate Geraldine Ferraro for her take on the role of women in this election. Will the women's vote decide the election?

Mark Oliver Everett, better known as E, is the lead singer of U.S. cult band the EELS. What most of his fans don't know is that Mark's father, Hugh Everett III, was one of America's top quantum physicists. In 1957, Hugh Everett came up with a revolutionary theory that predicted the existence of parallel universes. The idea quickly seeped into popular culture, but only recently has it been accepted by mainstream physicists. The film follows the wry and charismatic Mark, who had been estranged from his father, as he travels across America to learn about the father he never knew. It is only by entering the paradoxical world of quantum mechanics that Mark can hope to understand why he was such a stranger to his own father.

"Chicago 10" takes a stylized, innovative approach that gives contemporary history a forced perspective. Filmmaker Brett Morgen boldly mixes original animation with extraordinary archival footage to explore the buildup to and unraveling of the infamous conspiracy trial of the Chicago Seven. Set to the music of revolution then and now, "Chicago 10" is a parable of hope, courage and challenge as it portrays the struggle of young Americans attempting to confront an oppressive and armed government - their own. Terrence Howard hosts.

The final showdown between McCain and Obama, the government adds a bank bailout to its portfolio, and why attempts to register new voters might just become a federal case. I'm Gloria Borger sitting in for Gwen Ifill tonight on "Washington Week." With 18 days to go before the election, the candidates are sharpening their messages making an appeal to middle class voters. For John McCain the symbol has become - "My old buddy Joe." Sen. John McCain (R-AZ) said, "Joe the Plumber," "Joe the Plumber," "Joe the Plumber." Combined with new energy. Sen. McCain said, "I'm an American and I choose to fight, fight for a new direction for our country. Fight for what's right for America." But can McCain's new focus slow down Obama's momentum? Sen. Barack Obama (D-IL) said, "You can't pay attention to polls. We've got to keep making our case for change. We've got to keep fighting for every vote. We've got to keep running through the finish line." The battle lines are clear. Meanwhile, here in Washington, the government is trying to stabilize an ailing economy this time propping up banks. Pres. George W. Bush said, "But these are not ordinary circumstances. We took this measure as a last resort." But is it enough? And while states prepare for what could be record voter turnout, a controversy about methods and tactics in registering new voters. A man in Ohio said, "We've seen in some communities as many as 12 applications from the same individual - different signatures, different handwriting." How bad a problem is it? Covering these stories this week, Doyle McManus of the Los Angeles Times, Jackie Calmes of the New York Times, John Maggs of National Journal, and Michael Duffy of Time Magazine.

Under a dozen days to go. We look at battlegrounds, trends, and what to watch for on the final march to Election Day, tonight on "Washington Week." The sounds of the season. Sen. Barack Obama (D-IL) said, "I feel like we've got a righteous wind at our backs here, but we're going to have to work." Sen. John McCain (R-AZ) said, "Thirteen days to go to the election and he changed his tax plan because the American people had learned the truth about it and they didn't like it. He'll say anything to get elected." Sen. Obama said, "He's been on the attack. That's what you do when you're out of ideas, when you're out of touch, and you're running out of time." Sen. McCain said, "We don't want a president who invites testing from the world at a time when our economy is in a crisis and Americans are already fighting in two wars." Add to that, Joe the plumber, Sarah Palin's price tags, and Joe Biden's assertion that Obama would face a crisis once elected. A critical week, a critical time, and the balance of power in Congress at stake as well. We'll talk about it all with David Shribman of the Pittsburgh Post-Gazette, Jeanne Cummings of Politico, John Dickerson of Slate Magazine, Shailagh Murray of the Washington Post, and Michael Viqueira of NBC News.

Battleground Virginia: Could a reliably Republican state turn blue? The state of Virginia has not voted for a Democratic President since 1964, but this year its 13 electoral votes are up for grabs as late polls show the race too close to call. This week, NOW on PBS goes behind the national polls and punditry and into the living rooms of real Virginia voters to learn how they'll be making their decisions. Military families, retirees, and blue-collar workers of all political stripes share their concerns about faith, the war, and making ends meet in troubling economic times.

Election 2008: Tough decisions for undecided women voters in the swing states. There are roughly eight million more female voters than male, and more women than men say they are still undecided. Senator Hillary Clinton and Governor Sarah Palin have undoubtedly changed the debate for many women voters, but the question is: how will they ultimately respond in the booth? This week, NOW on PBS travels to the swing state of Colorado to get insight from a diverse group of women. These pro-choice, pro-gun women don't fit into neat categories, but they do respond to issues built around working moms: pay equity, family leave, and child care. On the show, NOW also interviews former Vice Presidential Candidate Geraldine Ferraro for her take on the role of women in this election. Will the women's vote decide the election?

The final showdown between McCain and Obama, the government adds a bank bailout to its portfolio, and why attempts to register new voters might just become a federal case. I'm Gloria Borger sitting in for Gwen Ifill tonight on "Washington Week." With 18 days to go before the election, the candidates are sharpening their messages making an appeal to middle class voters. For John McCain the symbol has become - "My old buddy Joe." Sen. John McCain (R-AZ) said, "Joe the Plumber," "Joe the Plumber," "Joe the Plumber." Combined with new energy. Sen. McCain said, "I'm an American and I choose to fight, fight for a new direction for our country. Fight for what's right for America." But can McCain's new focus slow down Obama's momentum? Sen. Barack Obama (D-IL) said, "You can't pay attention to polls. We've got to keep making our case for change. We've got to keep fighting for every vote. We've got to keep running through the finish line." The battle lines are clear. Meanwhile, here in Washington, the government is trying to stabilize an ailing economy this time propping up banks. Pres. George W. Bush said, "But these are not ordinary circumstances. We took this measure as a last resort." But is it enough? And while states prepare for what could be record voter turnout, a controversy about methods and tactics in registering new voters. A man in Ohio said, "We've seen in some communities as many as 12 applications from the same individual - different signatures, different handwriting." How bad a problem is it? Covering these stories this week, Doyle McManus of the Los Angeles Times, Jackie Calmes of the New York Times, John Maggs of National Journal, and Michael Duffy of Time Magazine.

Under a dozen days to go. We look at battlegrounds, trends, and what to watch for on the final march to Election Day, tonight on "Washington Week." The sounds of the season. Sen. Barack Obama (D-IL) said, "I feel like we've got a righteous wind at our backs here, but we're going to have to work." Sen. John McCain (R-AZ) said, "Thirteen days to go to the election and he changed his tax plan because the American people had learned the truth about it and they didn't like it. He'll say anything to get elected." Sen. Obama said, "He's been on the attack. That's what you do when you're out of ideas, when you're out of touch, and you're running out of time." Sen. McCain said, "We don't want a president who invites testing from the world at a time when our economy is in a crisis and Americans are already fighting in two wars." Add to that, Joe the plumber, Sarah Palin's price tags, and Joe Biden's assertion that Obama would face a crisis once elected. A critical week, a critical time, and the balance of power in Congress at stake as well. We'll talk about it all with David Shribman of the Pittsburgh Post-Gazette, Jeanne Cummings of Politico, John Dickerson of Slate Magazine, Shailagh Murray of the Washington Post, and Michael Viqueira of NBC News.

Boo! Tonight, Halloween brings us ghosts of the campaign past and the goblins of the election coming up. We'll give you a sneak peek tonight on "Washington Week." Sen. Barack Obama (D-IL) said, "How many people have early voted? That's what I'm talking about." Sen. John McCain (R-AZ) said, "You vote for me, get out our vote, carry Ohio, win this election. I will never, never let you down." Gov. Sarah Palin (R-AK) said, "Only John McCain has the wisdom and experience to get our economy back on the right track." Sen. Joe Biden (D-DE) said, "I know Halloween is coming, but John McCain dressed up as an agent of change - that costume just doesn't fit, folks." It's down to hand-to-hand, vote-for-vote combat in a handful of critical states, as the candidates race from Ohio to Florida to Indiana to Pennsylvania, trying for a landslide or a comeback. We'll tell you what to watch for on Tuesday night with David Broder of the Washington Post, John Harwood of CNBC and the New York Times, Doyle McManus of the Los Angeles Times, and Karen Tumulty of Time Magazine.

When is it right to kill? In the midst of war, is it right to refuse? Eight U.S. soldiers today, some who killed and some who said no, reveal their moral dilemmas in "Soldiers of Conscience." Made with official permission of the U.S. Army, the film transcends politics to explore the tension between spiritual values and military orders. The program follows the stories of both conscientious objectors and those who criticize them. Through this clash of views, the film discovers a surprising common ground: all soldiers are "soldiers of conscience," torn between the demands of duty and the call of conscience.

Mark Oliver Everett, better known as E, is the lead singer of U.S. cult band the EELS. What most of his fans don't know is that Mark's father, Hugh Everett III, was one of America's top quantum physicists. In 1957, Hugh Everett came up with a revolutionary theory that predicted the existence of parallel universes. The idea quickly seeped into popular culture, but only recently has it been accepted by mainstream physicists. The film follows the wry and charismatic Mark, who had been estranged from his father, as he travels across America to learn about the father he never knew. It is only by entering the paradoxical world of quantum mechanics that Mark can hope to understand why he was such a stranger to his own father.

Election 2008: Tough decisions for undecided women voters in the swing states. There are roughly eight million more female voters than male, and more women than men say they are still undecided. Senator Hillary Clinton and Governor Sarah Palin have undoubtedly changed the debate for many women voters, but the question is: how will they ultimately respond in the booth? This week, NOW on PBS travels to the swing state of Colorado to get insight from a diverse group of women. These pro-choice, pro-gun women don't fit into neat categories, but they do respond to issues built around working moms: pay equity, family leave, and child care. On the show, NOW also interviews former Vice Presidential Candidate Geraldine Ferraro for her take on the role of women in this election. Will the women's vote decide the election?

In the wake of yet another hard-fought and bitter presidential campaign, FRONTLINE presents a biography of Lee Atwater, the charming, Machiavellian godfather of modern take-no-prisoners Republican political campaigns. Through eye-opening interviews with Atwater's closest friends and adversaries, the film explores the life of the controversial political operative who mentored Karl Rove and George W. Bush, led the GOP to historic victories, and wrote the party's winning playbook. The story tracks Atwater's rise from his beginnings in South Carolina as a high school election kingmaker all the way to the White House and his subsequent battle with cancer and final search for forgiveness and redemption. To Democrats, Atwater was a political assassin who one Congresswoman dubbed "the most evil man in America," but to Republicans he remains a hero for his deep understanding of the American voter and his unapologetic vision of politics as warfare.

The economy - what's working? What's not? And the transition. Who's up? Who's down? Tonight, on "Washington Week." Pres. George W. Bush said, "History has shown that the greater threat to economic prosperity is not too little government involvement in the market. It is too much government involvement in the market." But the government is involved, called on to rescue banks, mortgage holders, and automakers. The next big debate in Washington, where does it all end? The other big debate - the Obama transition. Sen. Joe Biden (D-DE) said, "There is absolutely, absolutely total, complete, unadulterated cooperation and movement as if it's seamless." The president-elect comes to Washington, then retreats to Chicago. Can you stand the wait? Congress can't as they either set the stage or steal the march on his policy priorities. We take a look with Greg Ip of the Economist, Karen Tumulty of Time Magazine, Dan Balz of the Washington Post, and Janet Hook of the Los Angeles Times.

On October 29, 1929, the lifelong dreams of hundreds of thousands of stock market investors -- middle-class secretaries, clerks, small businessmen -- vanished in a few hours, along with their hard-earned savings. Decades later, the events of this day still haunt the American psyche. This program examines the boom before the crash, whether the crash was predictable, and if it precipitated the Great Depression of the 1930's.

Can something as common as building materials represent an opportunity to create jobs, help the needy, and save the planet? This week, NOW looks at two "green" projects keeping furniture, paint, cabinets, and other building supplies out of landfills and getting them into the hands of those who need them most. Will they be devastated by the economic meltdown, or do they signal a possible way out? Based in the Bronx, New York, Greenworker Co-operatives aims to set up worker-owned green businesses. The first of these is Rebuilders Source, a store that sells recycled and donated building materials at affordable prices-items that would otherwise have ended up in a landfill. "My vision now is a completely green South Bronx," says Bronx-born entrepreneur Omar Freilla, the founder of Greenworker Co-operatives, "with businesses throughout the area that are owned and run by people living in the area together." On the other side of the country, in Southern California, Materials Matter matches donations of furniture and high quality building materials with individuals, organizations, and homeless shelters that use the materials to literally rebuild lives. But the faltering economy has had an impact. "We have to decide whether the value of that donation will be worth the cost of transportation," says Materials Matter co-founder Alison Riback on her blog. "[The economic downturn] put a huge dent in our 'always say yes to a donation' philosophy." This show is part of Enterprising Ideas, NOW's continuing spotlight on social entrepreneurs working to improve the world through self-sustaining innovation.

President-Elect Barack Obama. Need I say more? Tonight, on "Washington Week." President-Elect Barack Obama said, "If there is anyone out there who still doubts that America is a place where all things are possible, who still wonders if the dream of our founders is alive in our time, who still questions the power of our democracy, tonight is your answer." From Tuesday's uplift to Friday's reality. Obama said, "Immediately after I become president, I'm going to confront this economic crisis head on." Obama's convincing victory as wide as it was deep. Sen. John McCain (R-AZ) said, "We fought. We fought as hard as we could. And though we fell short, the failure is mine, not yours." How did the Democrat do it? And what does he do now? We look back at a remarkable campaign and ahead to a challenging transition with the reporters who've been covering it: James Barnes of National Journal, Jeanne Cummings of Politico, John Dickerson of Slate magazine, and Jeff Zeleny of the New York Times.

The economy - what's working? What's not? And the transition. Who's up? Who's down? Tonight, on "Washington Week." Pres. George W. Bush said, "History has shown that the greater threat to economic prosperity is not too little government involvement in the market. It is too much government involvement in the market." But the government is involved, called on to rescue banks, mortgage holders, and automakers. The next big debate in Washington, where does it all end? The other big debate - the Obama transition. Sen. Joe Biden (D-DE) said, "There is absolutely, absolutely total, complete, unadulterated cooperation and movement as if it's seamless." The president-elect comes to Washington, then retreats to Chicago. Can you stand the wait? Congress can't as they either set the stage or steal the march on his policy priorities. We take a look with Greg Ip of the Economist, Karen Tumulty of Time Magazine, Dan Balz of the Washington Post, and Janet Hook of the Los Angeles Times.

"Dissonance and Harmony: Arabic Music Goes West" offers new imagery of Arabs, not as patently anti-American, not as terrorists, but as artists, universally familiar in their struggle to share their talent and ideas. The film follows an eclectic mix of Middle Eastern musicians from their own specific turf in the Middle East to the United States. In Los Angeles, they collaborate with other gifted musicians from the West, finding common ground between two cultures in conflict.

In the wake of yet another hard-fought and bitter presidential campaign, FRONTLINE presents a biography of Lee Atwater, the charming, Machiavellian godfather of modern take-no-prisoners Republican political campaigns. Through eye-opening interviews with Atwater's closest friends and adversaries, the film explores the life of the controversial political operative who mentored Karl Rove and George W. Bush, led the GOP to historic victories, and wrote the party's winning playbook. The story tracks Atwater's rise from his beginnings in South Carolina as a high school election kingmaker all the way to the White House and his subsequent battle with cancer and final search for forgiveness and redemption. To Democrats, Atwater was a political assassin who one Congresswoman dubbed "the most evil man in America," but to Republicans he remains a hero for his deep understanding of the American voter and his unapologetic vision of politics as warfare.

President-Elect Barack Obama. Need I say more? Tonight, on "Washington Week." President-Elect Barack Obama said, "If there is anyone out there who still doubts that America is a place where all things are possible, who still wonders if the dream of our founders is alive in our time, who still questions the power of our democracy, tonight is your answer." From Tuesday's uplift to Friday's reality. Obama said, "Immediately after I become president, I'm going to confront this economic crisis head on." Obama's convincing victory as wide as it was deep. Sen. John McCain (R-AZ) said, "We fought. We fought as hard as we could. And though we fell short, the failure is mine, not yours." How did the Democrat do it? And what does he do now? We look back at a remarkable campaign and ahead to a challenging transition with the reporters who've been covering it: James Barnes of National Journal, Jeanne Cummings of Politico, John Dickerson of Slate magazine, and Jeff Zeleny of the New York Times.

The economy - what's working? What's not? And the transition. Who's up? Who's down? Tonight, on "Washington Week." Pres. George W. Bush said, "History has shown that the greater threat to economic prosperity is not too little government involvement in the market. It is too much government involvement in the market." But the government is involved, called on to rescue banks, mortgage holders, and automakers. The next big debate in Washington, where does it all end? The other big debate - the Obama transition. Sen. Joe Biden (D-DE) said, "There is absolutely, absolutely total, complete, unadulterated cooperation and movement as if it's seamless." The president-elect comes to Washington, then retreats to Chicago. Can you stand the wait? Congress can't as they either set the stage or steal the march on his policy priorities. We take a look with Greg Ip of the Economist, Karen Tumulty of Time Magazine, Dan Balz of the Washington Post, and Janet Hook of the Los Angeles Times.

It is one of the most memorable presidential elections in decades. It is a race that pits the iconoclast John McCain against the newcomer Barack Obama; the heroic former prisoner of war against the first African-American major party nominee. For two hours, "The Choice," celebrating its 20th anniversary, examines the rich personal and political biographies of these men and goes behind the headlines to discover how they arrived at this moment and what their different candidacies say about America.

In the wake of yet another hard-fought and bitter presidential campaign, FRONTLINE presents a biography of Lee Atwater, the charming, Machiavellian godfather of modern take-no-prisoners Republican political campaigns. Through eye-opening interviews with Atwater's closest friends and adversaries, the film explores the life of the controversial political operative who mentored Karl Rove and George W. Bush, led the GOP to historic victories, and wrote the party's winning playbook. The story tracks Atwater's rise from his beginnings in South Carolina as a high school election kingmaker all the way to the White House and his subsequent battle with cancer and final search for forgiveness and redemption. To Democrats, Atwater was a political assassin who one Congresswoman dubbed "the most evil man in America," but to Republicans he remains a hero for his deep understanding of the American voter and his unapologetic vision of politics as warfare.

With the campaign and the election finally behind him, President-elect Barack Obama is now focusing on governing, but in which direction will he take the country? Charles Ogletree is in a unique position to know. The Harvard professor was an adviser to the university's Black Law Students Association when Obama was a member, and Ogletree has been a trusted advisor to Obama ever since. This week, David Brancaccio sits down with Ogletree, who some say is being considered for a top Justice Department position, to get early insight on what we might expect from an Obama Administration; Also, President-elect Barack Obama faces formidable challenges overseas. From the wars in Afghanistan and Iraq to national security issues such as the Iranian nuclear standoff and Middle East peace, Obama certainly has his work cut out for him. Obama has promised to fundamentally remake America's image in the world while addressing these issues, but can he succeed? George Packer, a staff writer and frequent war correspondent for The New Yorker Magazine, talks to NOW's David Brancaccio about the opportunities, challenges and uphill battles facing the president-elect.

President-Elect Barack Obama. Need I say more? Tonight, on "Washington Week." President-Elect Barack Obama said, "If there is anyone out there who still doubts that America is a place where all things are possible, who still wonders if the dream of our founders is alive in our time, who still questions the power of our democracy, tonight is your answer." From Tuesday's uplift to Friday's reality. Obama said, "Immediately after I become president, I'm going to confront this economic crisis head on." Obama's convincing victory as wide as it was deep. Sen. John McCain (R-AZ) said, "We fought. We fought as hard as we could. And though we fell short, the failure is mine, not yours." How did the Democrat do it? And what does he do now? We look back at a remarkable campaign and ahead to a challenging transition with the reporters who've been covering it: James Barnes of National Journal, Jeanne Cummings of Politico, John Dickerson of Slate magazine, and Jeff Zeleny of the New York Times.

The economy - what's working? What's not? And the transition. Who's up? Who's down? Tonight, on "Washington Week." Pres. George W. Bush said, "History has shown that the greater threat to economic prosperity is not too little government involvement in the market.

It is too much government involvement in the market." But the government is involved, called on to rescue banks, mortgage holders, and automakers. The next big debate in Washington, where does it all end? The other big debate - the Obama transition. Sen. Joe Biden (D-DE) said, "There is absolutely, absolutely total, complete, unadulterated cooperation and movement as if it's seamless." The president-elect comes to Washington, then retreats to Chicago. Can you stand the wait? Congress can't as they either set the stage or steal the march on his policy priorities. We take a look with Greg Ip of the Economist, Karen Tumulty of Time Magazine, Dan Balz of the Washington Post, and Janet Hook of the Los Angeles Times.

Can something as common as building materials represent an opportunity to create jobs, help the needy, and save the planet? This week, NOW looks at two "green" projects keeping furniture, paint, cabinets, and other building supplies out of landfills and getting them into the hands of those who need them most. Will they be devastated by the economic meltdown, or do they signal a possible way out? Based in the Bronx, New York, Greenworker Co-operatives aims to set up worker-owned green businesses. The first of these is Rebuilders Source, a store that sells recycled and donated building materials at affordable prices-items that would otherwise have ended up in a landfill. "My vision now is a completely green South Bronx," says Bronx-born entrepreneur Omar Freilla, the founder of Greenworker Co-operatives, "with businesses throughout the area that are owned and run by people living in the area together." On the other side of the country, in Southern California, Materials Matter matches donations of furniture and high quality building materials with individuals, organizations, and homeless shelters that use the materials to literally rebuild lives. But the faltering economy has had an impact. "We have to decide whether the value of that donation will be worth the cost of transportation," says Materials Matter co-founder Alison Riback on her blog. "[The economic downturn] put a huge dent in our 'always say yes to a donation' philosophy." This show is part of Enterprising Ideas, NOW's continuing spotlight on social entrepreneurs working to improve the world through self-sustaining innovation.

Hour one examines how Judaism and the Roman empire shaped Jesus' life. Jesus was an ordinary Jewish resident of his time, but new archaeological findings show that Jesus was probably not the humble village peasant often portrayed. Nazareth, where he grew up, was about four miles from the cosmopolitan urban center of Sepphoris, one of the Roman provincial cities. While Rome defined one dimension of Jesus' world, the other was symbolized by the great Temple in Jerusalem. Jesus was born, lived, and died a Jew, and he was influenced by the diversity and tensions of Judaism at that time. Jesus was most likely arrested and executed by Roman authorities whose principal concern was to keep peace in the empire. Rome had little tolerance for those it judged disruptive of the Pax Romana (Roman peace), punishing them in many ways, including crucifixion. The death of Jesus was a Roman act; there was little if any notice taken by Jewish people. Jesus was another victim of the Pax Romana.

Hour three follows the story of the first attempts to write the life of Jesus - The Gospels. The Gospels were products of social and religious reconstruction in the period after the war, ranging from roughly 70 to after 100 C.E. The program looks at how these stories were passed down before they were written and how the writing of each Gospel reflects the experiences and circumstances of early Christians. They do not all tell the same story of Jesus because each one is responding to a different audience and circumstances. For example, Matthew's gospel is clearly written for a Jewish Christian audience; it is the most Jewish of all the gospels. During this time, a growing tension appeared between the emergent Christian groups and their Jewish neighbors. The result was a process of debate, identity, and separation that shaped both religious traditions forever. And there were still other external forces, including a second, devastating Jewish war, the Bar Kochbah revolt, which erupted in 132 C.E.

THE JOURNEY TO PALOMAR is the story of American astronomer George Ellery Hale's dramatic public and private struggle to build the four largest telescopes in the world, which set the stage for astronomy and space exploration throughout the 20th century, revealing the greatest discoveries since Galileo and Copernicus. More than five years in the making, the documentary traces Hale's lifelong struggle to build these great instruments, culminating with the million-pound telescope on Palomar mountain - the most famous telescope in the world. The combination of Hale's dramatic personal story set against the backdrop of American history and humankind's reach into the far corners of the universe creates a film with appeal to viewers of all ages.

"March Point" follows the journey of three teens from the Swinomish Tribe who have been asked to make a film about the threat their people face from two local oil refineries. In the late 1950s, two refineries were built on March Point, an area that was once part of the Swinomish reservation by treaty. This is the story of the boys' awakening to the destruction these refineries have wrought in their communities. Ambivalent environmental ambassadors at the onset, the boys grapple with their assignment through humor, sarcasm and a candid self-knowledge. But as their filmmaking evolves, they experience the need to understand and tell their stories, and the power of this process to change their lives. By Tracy Rector and Annie Silverstein.

THE RAPE OF EUROPA relates how Europe's art treasures survived the systematic theft and deliberate destruction perpetrated by Germany's Third Reich during World War II. For 12 years, the Nazis looted and destroyed art on a scale unprecedented in history, but heroic young art historians and curators from America and Europe fought to rescue and return millions of lost, hidden and stolen treasures. The legacy of this tragic time in history continues to play out today as families recover looted works of art and nations fight over the ill-gotten spoils of war. Joan Allen narrates.

What role did the credit rating agencies play in the current economic crisis? This week, a former managing director at Standard & Poor's speaks out on U.S. television for the first time about how he was pressured to compromise standards in a push for profits. Frank Raiter reveals what was really going on behind closed doors at the credit rating agencies the public relies on to evaluate the safety of their investments. "During this period, profit was primary; analytics were secondary," Raiter tells NOW Senior Correspondent Maria Hinojosa. Who was watching the watchers? Surprising new revelations about the economic debacle, this week on NOW.

As President-elect Barack Obama unveils his top economic team, a leading progressive thinker challenges America's next leader with a controversial plan for economic recovery. Robert Kuttner, author of the new book "Obama's Challenge," talks to NOW on PBS about the enormous obstacles to -- and potential solutions for -- getting America's economy back on track. Kuttner offers his advice on how Obama should stimulate a recovery: spending $600-700 billion per year over several years to fundamentally change the economy. "We need the government big time to prevent this from becoming the Great Depression II," Kuttner tells NOW's David Brancaccio. Will Obama usher in the most sweeping reforms since the New Deal to get the economy working again?

Congress bails out of the auto bailout, and Barack Obama's cabinet begins to take shape, tonight on "Washington Week." Rick Wagoner said, "This is all about a lot more than just Detroit. It's about saving the U.S. economy from a catastrophic collapse." The auto companies come to town hat in hand. Rep. Gary Ackerman (D-NY) said, "It's almost like seeing the guy show up at the soup kitchen in high-hat and tuxedo." But where was the love? Rep. Nancy Pelosi (D-CA), Speaker of the House, said, "Until they show us the plan, we cannot show them the money." Sen. Christopher Dodd (D-CT) said, "No one can say that they didn't see this coming. Their companies have been struggling for years." Iraq, a hard place and a struggling economy even as the new cabinet begins to take shape with familiar faces and even more familiar ones. What do these first picks tell us about the incoming president? We'll ask the reporters covering it: Eamon Javers of Politico, Helene Cooper of the New York Times, Ceci Connolly of the Washington Post, and Pete Williams of NBC News.

As President-elect Barack Obama unveils his top economic team, a leading progressive thinker challenges America's next leader with a controversial plan for economic recovery. Robert Kuttner, author of the new book "Obama's Challenge," talks to NOW on PBS about the enormous obstacles to -- and potential solutions for -- getting America's economy back on track. Kuttner offers his advice on how Obama should stimulate a recovery: spending $600-700 billion per year over several years to fundamentally change the economy. "We need the government big time to prevent this from becoming the Great Depression II," Kuttner tells NOW's David Brancaccio. Will Obama usher in the most sweeping reforms since the New Deal to get the economy working again?

Congress bails out of the auto bailout, and Barack Obama's cabinet begins to take shape, tonight on "Washington Week." Rick Wagoner said, "This is all about a lot more than just Detroit. It's about saving the U.S. economy from a catastrophic collapse." The auto companies come to town hat in hand. Rep. Gary Ackerman (D-NY) said, "It's almost like seeing the guy show up at the soup kitchen in high-hat and tuxedo." But where was the love? Rep. Nancy Pelosi (D-CA), Speaker of the House, said, "Until they show us the plan, we cannot show them the money." Sen. Christopher Dodd (D-CT) said, "No one can say that they didn't see this coming. Their companies have been struggling for years." Iraq, a hard place and a struggling economy even as the new cabinet begins to take shape with familiar faces and even more familiar ones. What do these first picks tell us about the incoming president? We'll ask the reporters covering it: Eamon Javers of Politico, Helene Cooper of the New York Times, Ceci Connolly of the Washington Post, and Pete Williams of NBC News.

"March Point" follows the journey of three teens from the Swinomish Tribe who have been asked to make a film about the threat their people face from two local oil refineries. In the late 1950s, two refineries were built on March Point, an area that was once part of the Swinomish reservation by treaty. This is the story of the boys' awakening to the destruction these refineries have wrought in their communities. Ambivalent environmental ambassadors at the onset, the boys grapple with their assignment through humor, sarcasm and a candid self-knowledge. But as their filmmaking evolves, they experience the need to understand and tell their stories, and the power of this process to change their lives. By Tracy Rector and Annie Silverstein.

THE RAPE OF EUROPA relates how Europe's art treasures survived the systematic theft and deliberate destruction perpetrated by Germany's Third Reich during World War II. For 12 years, the Nazis looted and destroyed art on a scale unprecedented in history, but heroic young art historians and curators from America and Europe fought to rescue and return millions of lost, hidden and stolen treasures. The legacy of this tragic time in history continues to play out today as families recover looted works of art and nations fight over the ill-gotten spoils of war. Joan Allen narrates.

As President-elect Barack Obama unveils his top economic team, a leading progressive thinker challenges America's next leader with a controversial plan for economic recovery. Robert Kuttner, author of the new book "Obama's Challenge," talks to NOW on PBS about the enormous obstacles to -- and potential solutions for -- getting America's economy back on track. Kuttner offers his advice on how Obama should stimulate a recovery: spending $600-700 billion per year over several years to fundamentally change the economy. "We need the government big time to prevent this from becoming the Great Depression II," Kuttner tells NOW's David Brancaccio. Will Obama usher in the most sweeping reforms since the New Deal to get the economy working again?

Congress bails out of the auto bailout, and Barack Obama's cabinet begins to take shape, tonight on "Washington Week." Rick Wagoner said, "This is all about a lot more than just Detroit. It's about saving the U.S. economy from a catastrophic collapse." The auto companies come to town hat in hand. Rep. Gary Ackerman (D-NY) said, "It's almost like seeing the guy show up at the soup kitchen in high-hat and tuxedo." But where was the love? Rep. Nancy Pelosi (D-CA), Speaker of the House, said, "Until they show us the plan, we cannot show them the money." Sen. Christopher Dodd (D-CT) said, "No one can say that they didn't see this coming. Their companies have been struggling for years." Iraq, a hard place and a struggling economy even as the new cabinet begins to take shape with familiar faces and even more familiar ones. What do these first picks tell us about the incoming president? We'll ask the reporters covering it: Eamon Javers of Politico, Helene Cooper of the New York Times, Ceci Connolly of the Washington Post, and Pete Williams of NBC News.

THE RAPE OF EUROPA relates how Europe's art treasures survived the systematic theft and deliberate destruction perpetrated by Germany's Third Reich during World War II. For 12 years, the Nazis looted and destroyed art on a scale unprecedented in history, but heroic young art historians and curators from America and Europe fought to rescue and return millions of lost, hidden and stolen treasures. The legacy of this tragic time in history continues to play out today as families recover looted works of art and nations fight over the ill-gotten spoils of war. Joan Allen narrates.

Congress bails out of the auto bailout, and Barack Obama's cabinet begins to take shape, tonight on "Washington Week." Rick Wagoner said, "This is all about a lot more than just Detroit. It's about saving the U.S. economy from a catastrophic collapse." The auto companies come to town hat in hand. Rep. Gary Ackerman (D-NY) said, "It's almost like seeing the guy show up at the soup kitchen in high-hat and tuxedo." But where was the love? Rep. Nancy Pelosi (D-CA), Speaker of the House, said, "Until they show us the plan, we cannot show them the money." Sen. Christopher Dodd (D-CT) said, "No one can say that they didn't see this coming. Their companies have been struggling for years." Iraq, a hard place and a struggling economy even as the new cabinet begins to take shape with familiar faces and even more familiar ones. What do these first picks tell us about the incoming president? We'll ask the reporters covering it: Eamon Javers of Politico, Helene Cooper of the New York Times, Ceci Connolly of the Washington Post, and Pete Williams of NBC News.

"March Point" follows the journey of three teens from the Swinomish Tribe who have been asked to make a film about the threat their people face from two local oil refineries. In the late 1950s, two refineries were built on March Point, an area that was once part of the Swinomish reservation by treaty. This is the story of the boys' awakening to the destruction these refineries have wrought in their communities. Ambivalent environmental ambassadors at the onset, the boys grapple with their assignment through humor, sarcasm and a candid self-knowledge. But as their filmmaking evolves, they experience the need to understand and tell their stories, and the power of this process to change their lives. By Tracy Rector and Annie Silverstein.

"The Boomer Century: 1946-2046" is a two-hour documentary that looks to the baby boomers' past for clues to how this generation of 78 million Americans will shape the future. Hosted by gerontologist and psychologist Dr. Ken Dychtwald, the program focuses on the boomers' formative years to reveal the personality traits of a generation that has since rewritten the rules for work, marriage and parenthood, and is now redefining retirement and aging. The final question the program poses, is what kind of future will the baby boomers lead and leave for succeeding generations?

The bailout blowout and the strange twisted tale of a Senate seat for sale, tonight on "Washington Week." Sen. Mitch McConnell (R-KY) said, "We simply cannot ask the American taxpayer to subsidize failure." Rep. Emanuel Cleaver (D-MO) said, "Closing down the automobile industry in this country is not an option. No one would burn down their house to get rid of a rat." The surprise late-night collapse of the auto bailout - Detroit reels. And the White House considers stepping in after all. In Illinois, the corrupt and the profane. Federal Prosecutor Patrick Fitzgerald said, "The conduct would make Lincoln roll over in his grave." The FBI's Robert Grant said, "If it isn't the most corrupt state in the United States, it's certainly one hell of a competitor." As the feds take aim at Governor Rod Blagojevich. What did the President-elect know and when did he know it? President-elect Barack Obama said, "What I'm absolutely certain about is that our office had no involvement in any deal-making around my Senate seat." And the jobs picture, deeper and bleaker than it even looks. What can a new president do about it? America's aging baby boomers are headed for a shock as they near retirement. In addition to Social Security, the pillars of retirement income for Americans have been either lifetime corporate pensions or employee-contribution plans such as 401Ks. But both retirement strategies are in trouble. Buffeted by pension cuts, corporate bankruptcies, and the 2001-2002 stock market crash, most boomers now expect to be working into their retirement years.

The bailout blowout and the strange twisted tale of a Senate seat for sale, tonight on "Washington Week." Sen. Mitch McConnell (R-KY) said, "We simply cannot ask the American taxpayer to subsidize failure." Rep. Emanuel Cleaver (D-MO) said, "Closing down the automobile industry in this country is not an option. No one would burn down their house to get rid of a rat." The surprise late-night collapse of the auto bailout - Detroit reels. And the White House considers stepping in after all. In Illinois, the corrupt and the profane. Federal Prosecutor Patrick Fitzgerald said, "The conduct would make Lincoln roll over in his grave." The FBI's Robert Grant said, "If it isn't the most corrupt state in the United States, it's certainly one hell of a competitor." As the feds take aim at Governor Rod Blagojevich. What did the President-elect know and when did he know it? President-elect Barack Obama said, "What I'm absolutely certain about is that our office had no involvement in any deal-making around my Senate seat." And the jobs picture, deeper and bleaker than it even looks. What can a new president do about it? Covering the week, David Sanger of the New York Times, Pete Williams of NBC News, Christi Parsons of the Chicago Tribune, and John Maggs of National Journal.

Just this week, a top UN official predicted that by the middle of this century, the world should expect six million people a year to be displaced by increasingly severe storms and floods caused by climate change. But for many island nations in the South Pacific, climate change is already more than just a theory - it is a pressing, menacing reality. These small, low-lying islands are frighteningly vulnerable to rising temperatures and sea levels that could cause flooding and contaminate their fresh water wells. Within 50 years, some of them could be under water. This week, NOW travels to the nation of Kiribati to see up close how these changes affect residents' daily lives and how they are dealing with the reality that both their land and culture could disappear from the Earth. We also travel to New Zealand to visit an I-Kiribati community that has already left its home, and to the Pacific Island Forum in Niue to see how the rest of the region is coping with the here-and-now crisis of climate change.

Imagine watching Schindler's List and knowing the sadistic Nazi camp commandant played by Ralph Fiennes was your father. "Inheritance" is the story of Monika Hertwig, the daughter of mass murderer Amon Goeth. Hertwig has spent her life in the shadow of her father's sins, trying to come to terms with her "inheritance." She seeks out Helen Jonas-Rosenzweig, who was enslaved by Goeth and who is one of the few living eyewitnesses to his unspeakable brutality. The women's raw, emotional meeting unearths terrible truths and lingering questions about how the actions of parents can continue to ripple through generations.

"The Boomer Century: 1946-2046" is a two-hour documentary that looks to the baby boomers' past for clues to how this generation of 78 million Americans will shape the future. Hosted by gerontologist and psychologist Dr. Ken Dychtwald, the program focuses on the boomers' formative years to reveal the personality traits of a generation that has since rewritten the rules for work, marriage and parenthood, and is now redefining retirement and aging. The final question the program poses, is what kind of future will the baby boomers lead and leave for succeeding generations?

Emanuel Cleaver (D-MO) said, "Closing down the automobile industry in this country is not an option. No one would burn down their house to get rid of a rat." The surprise late-night collapse of the auto bailout - Detroit reels. And the White House considers stepping in after all. In Illinois, the corrupt and the profane. Federal Prosecutor Patrick Fitzgerald said, "The conduct would make Lincoln roll over in his grave." The FBI's Robert Grant said, "If it isn't the most corrupt state in the United States, it's certainly one hell of a competitor." As the feds take aim at Governor Rod Blagojevich. What did the President-elect know and when did he know it? President-elect Barack Obama said, "What I'm absolutely certain about is that our office had no involvement in any deal-making around my Senate seat." And the jobs picture, deeper and bleaker than it even looks. What can a new president do about it? Covering the week, David Sanger of the New York Times, Pete Williams of NBC News, Christi Parsons of the Chicago Tribune, and John Maggs of National Journal.

How should President-elect Barack Obama handle our tricky relations with Pakistan? This week, David Brancaccio sits down with author and journalist Tariq Ali, who grew up in Pakistan, to discuss what he thinks team Obama should do to improve its standing in Pakistan in particular and the region as a whole. "I think it should back off militarily. That's the key," Ali tells NOW. Ali says the U.S.'s roughly 20 reported attacks against Al Qaeda inside Pakistan's borders since late August are doing more harm than good because they "mainly have hit civilian targets." The question of how to handle nuclear-armed Pakistan has become especially difficult amidst Indian claims of Pakistani links to the recent terrorist attacks in Mumbai, which left at least 170 people dead. What's the best strategy for the U.S. in Pakistan and how will it impact the war in Afghanistan, where Obama has said he plans to send more troops? Watch for an insider's view of how the president-elect should proceed; Also this week, Tehran-born author Hooman Majd talks to NOW's David Brancaccio about America's thorny relationship with Iran and how he thinks Obama should handle the problematic issue of Iran's nuclear program. "I think the main issue for Americans, and certainly for the [Obama Administration,] is how do we persuade Iran to not take that step? We can't take the knowledge away from them anymore," says Majd, who grew up in American and Britain, but often returns to Iran. Iran has produced enough nuclear material to produce a nuclear bomb, according to a report released last month from the International Atomic Energy Agency. Although Iran denies that its nuclear program has military aspirations, it has called for wiping out the state of Israel. What's the best way forward with this unpredictable country in Middle East?

Just this week, a top UN official predicted that by the middle of this century, the world should expect six million people a year to be displaced by increasingly severe storms and floods caused by climate change. But for many island nations in the South Pacific, climate change is already more than just a theory - it is a pressing, menacing reality. These small, low-lying islands are frighteningly vulnerable to rising temperatures and sea levels that could cause flooding and contaminate their fresh water wells. Within 50 years, some of them could be under water. This week, NOW travels to the nation of Kiribati to see up close how these changes affect residents' daily lives and how they are dealing with the reality that both their land and culture could disappear from the Earth. We also travel to New Zealand to visit an I-Kiribati community that has already left its home, and to the Pacific Island Forum in Niue to see how the rest of the region is coping with the here-and-now crisis of climate change.

The bailout blowout and the strange twisted tale of a Senate seat for sale, tonight on "Washington Week." Sen. Mitch McConnell (R-KY) said, "We simply cannot ask the American taxpayer to subsidize failure." Rep. Emanuel Cleaver (D-MO) said, "Closing down the automobile industry in this country is not an option. No one would burn down their house to get rid of a rat." The surprise late-night collapse of the auto bailout - Detroit reels. And the White House considers stepping in after all. In Illinois, the corrupt and the profane. Federal Prosecutor Patrick Fitzgerald said, "The conduct would make Lincoln roll over in his grave." The FBI's Robert Grant said, "If it isn't the most corrupt state in the United States, it's certainly one hell of a competitor." As the feds take aim at Governor Rod Blagojevich. What did the President-elect know and when did he know it? President-elect Barack Obama said, "What I'm absolutely certain about is that our office had no involvement in any deal-making around my Senate seat." And the jobs picture, deeper and bleaker than it even looks. What can a new president do about it? Covering the week, David Sanger of the New York Times, Pete Williams of NBC News, Christi Parsons of the Chicago Tribune, and John Maggs of National Journal.

Imagine watching Schindler's List and knowing the sadistic Nazi camp commandant played by Ralph Fiennes was your father. "Inheritance" is the story of Monika Hertwig, the daughter of mass murderer Amon Goeth. Hertwig has spent her life in the shadow of her father's sins, trying to come to terms with her "inheritance." She seeks out Helen Jonas-Rosenzweig, who was enslaved by Goeth and who is one of the few living eyewitnesses to his unspeakable brutality. The women's raw, emotional meeting unearths terrible truths and lingering questions about how the actions of parents can continue to ripple through generations.

How should President-elect Barack Obama handle our tricky relations with Pakistan? This week, David Brancaccio sits down with author and journalist Tariq Ali, who grew up in Pakistan, to discuss what he thinks team Obama should do to improve its standing in Pakistan in particular and the region as a whole. "I think it should back off militarily. That's the key," Ali tells NOW. Ali says the U.S.'s roughly 20 reported attacks against Al Qaeda inside Pakistan's borders since late August are doing more harm than good because they "mainly have hit civilian targets." The question of how to handle nuclear-armed Pakistan has become especially difficult amidst Indian claims of Pakistani links to the recent terrorist attacks in Mumbai, which left at least 170 people dead. What's the best strategy for the U.S. in Pakistan and how will it impact the war in Afghanistan, where Obama has said he plans to send more troops? Watch for an insider's view of how the president-elect should proceed; Also this week, Tehran-born author Hooman Majd talks to NOW's David Brancaccio about America's thorny relationship with Iran and how he thinks Obama should handle the problematic issue of Iran's nuclear program. "I think the main issue for Americans, and certainly for the [Obama Administration,] is how do we persuade Iran to not take that step? We can't take the knowledge away from them anymore," says Majd, who grew up in American and Britain, but often returns to Iran. Iran has produced enough nuclear material to produce a nuclear bomb, according to a report released last month from the International Atomic Energy Agency. Although Iran denies that its nuclear program has military aspirations, it has called for wiping out the state of Israel. What's the best way forward with this unpredictable country in Middle East?

On May 13, 1607, three English sailing vessels drop anchor beside a small island fringed by swamps in the James River, Virginia. On board: 104 colonists who will establish the first successful English settlement in the New World at Jamestown. The exploits of one colonist -- the brash, swashbuckling John Smith; the venerable chief Powhatan; and his infatuated daughter Pocahontas will be recited, retold, and embroidered until they gather the status of an epic founding myth of the new nation. Now, 400 years later, science is investigating the truth behind the myth. Virginia archaeologists recently discovered the site of Chief Powhatan's capital, Werowocomoco, some 17 miles from Jamestown. This is the very spot where the smitten Pocahontas begged her father to spare the neck of the captive John Smith - or so Smith claimed. Join NOVA on this exclusive investigation of the archaeological clues that are revealing the Native American side of the Jamestown story for the first time.

An innovative program in Nepal is helping to free young girls that live as modern day slaves. Unable to make ends meet, many families in western Nepal have been forced to sell their daughters, some as young as six, to work far from home as bonded servants in private homes. With living conditions entirely at the discretion of their employers, these girls seldom attend school and are sometimes forced into prostitution. This week NOW travels to Nepal during the Maghe Sankranti holiday, when labor contractors come to the villages of the area to "buy" the children. There, we meet the Nepalese Youth Opportunity Foundation, which is trying to break the cycle of poverty and pain with an Enterprising Idea. They're providing desperate families with an incentive to keep their daughters: a piglet or a goat that can ultimately be sold for a sum equivalent to that of their child's labor. The organization says it has brought thousands of girls home to live with their families, but many cultural and political challenges still stand in their way. This is part of NOW's continuing series on innovative and sustainable solutions to world problems, what we call Enterprising Ideas.

Santa Claus is coming to town, especially for GM and Chrysler. Plus, more of the naughty and the nice tonight on "Washington Week." Pres. George W. Bush said, "Under ordinary economic circumstances, I would say this is the price that failed companies must pay. These are not ordinary circumstances." The White House rides to the rescue with $17 billion for the auto industry. Pres. Elect Barack Obama said, "My top priority in this administration is going to be to create 2.5 million new jobs. And I want some of those jobs to be in the auto industry." Will it be the shot in the arm the economy needs? And as Barack Obama's cabinet and inauguration plans take shape, we take stock of the hits and the misses. Meanwhile, on Capitol Hill the number of open Senate seats are piling up. Who's in line? Caroline Kennedy said, "I told Governor Paterson that I'd be honored to be considered for the position of U.S. senator." And who's making things complicated? Gov. Rod Blagojevich (D-IL) said, "I'm here to tell you right off the bat that I am not guilty of any criminal wrongdoing, that I intend to stay on the job, and I will fight this thing every step of the way." Also does a democratically controlled Congress automatically make life easier for the Democrat in the White House? If you said yes, you haven't been paying attention. Covering the stories this week John Harwood of CNBC and the New York Times, Michael Fletcher of the Washington Post, John Dickerson of Slate Magazine, and Janet Hook of the Los Angeles Times.

On May 13, 1607, three English sailing vessels drop anchor beside a small island fringed by swamps in the James River, Virginia. On board: 104 colonists who will establish the first successful English settlement in the New World at Jamestown. The exploits of one colonist -- the brash, swashbuckling John Smith; the venerable chief Powhatan; and his infatuated daughter Pocahontas will be recited, retold, and embroidered until they gather the status of an epic founding myth of the new nation. Now, 400 years later, science is investigating the truth behind the myth. Virginia archaeologists recently discovered the site of Chief Powhatan's capital, Werowocomoco, some 17 miles from Jamestown. This is the very spot where the smitten Pocahontas begged her father to spare the neck of the captive John Smith - or so Smith claimed. Join NOVA on this exclusive investigation of the archaeological clues that are revealing the Native American side of the Jamestown story for the first time.

Santa Claus is coming to town, especially for GM and Chrysler. Plus, more of the naughty and the nice tonight on "Washington Week." Pres. George W. Bush said, "Under ordinary economic circumstances, I would say this is the price that failed companies must pay. These are not ordinary circumstances." The White House rides to the rescue with $17 billion for the auto industry. Pres. Elect Barack Obama said, "My top priority in this administration is going to be to create 2.5 million new jobs. And I want some of those jobs to be in the auto industry." Will it be the shot in the arm the economy needs? And as Barack Obama's cabinet and inauguration plans take shape, we take stock of the hits and the misses. Meanwhile, on Capitol Hill the number of open Senate seats are piling up. Who's in line? Caroline Kennedy said, "I told Governor Paterson that I'd be honored to be considered for the position of U.S. senator." And who's making things complicated? Gov. Rod Blagojevich (D-IL) said, "I'm here to tell you right off the bat that I am not guilty of any criminal wrongdoing, that I intend to stay on the job, and I will fight this thing every step of the way." Also does a democratically controlled Congress automatically make life easier for the Democrat in the White House? If you said yes, you haven't been paying attention. Covering the stories this week John Harwood of CNBC and the New York Times, Michael Fletcher of the Washington Post, John Dickerson of Slate Magazine, and Janet Hook of the Los Angeles Times.

As snow falls and Christmas lights glow in Jackson Hole, a holiday season of a different sort settles in just beyond the town, in the great winter world of Yellowstone. Breathtaking landscapes frame intimate scenes of wolves and coyotes, elk and bison, bears and otters as they make their way through their most challenging season of the year. NATURE journeys in the footsteps of the men who first explored the park, and travels with their modern-day counterpart on his own journey of discovery. From the unique crystals of individual snowflakes to the grand sweep of Yellowstone's Hayden Valley, this is a Christmas like no other.

An innovative program in Nepal is helping to free young girls that live as modern day slaves. Unable to make ends meet, many families in western Nepal have been forced to sell their daughters, some as young as six, to work far from home as bonded servants in private homes. With living conditions entirely at the discretion of their employers, these girls seldom attend school and are sometimes forced into prostitution. This week NOW travels to Nepal during the Maghe Sankranti holiday, when labor contractors come to the villages of the area to "buy" the children. There, we meet the Nepalese Youth Opportunity Foundation, which is trying to break the cycle of poverty and pain with an Enterprising Idea. They're providing desperate families with an incentive to keep their daughters: a piglet or a goat that can ultimately be sold for a sum equivalent to that of their child's labor. The organization says it has brought thousands of girls home to live with their families, but many cultural and political challenges still stand in their way. This is part of NOW's continuing series on innovative and sustainable solutions to world problems, what we call Enterprising Ideas.

Santa Claus is coming to town, especially for GM and Chrysler. Plus, more of the naughty and the nice tonight on "Washington Week." Pres. George W. Bush said, "Under ordinary economic circumstances, I would say this is the price that failed companies must pay. These are not ordinary circumstances." The White House rides to the rescue with $17 billion for the auto industry. Pres. Elect Barack Obama said, "My top priority in this administration is going to be to create 2.5 million new jobs. And I want some of those jobs to be in the auto industry." Will it be the shot in the arm the economy needs? And as Barack Obama's cabinet and inauguration plans take shape, we take stock of the hits and the misses. Meanwhile, on Capitol Hill the number of open Senate seats are piling up. Who's in line? Caroline Kennedy said, "I told Governor Paterson that I'd be honored to be considered for the position of U.S. senator." And who's making things complicated? Gov. Rod Blagojevich (D-IL) said, "I'm here to tell you right off the bat that I am not guilty of any criminal wrongdoing, that I intend to stay on the job, and I will fight this thing every step of the way." Also does a democratically controlled Congress automatically make life easier for the Democrat in the White House? If you said yes, you haven't been paying attention. Covering the stories this week John Harwood of CNBC and the New York Times, Michael Fletcher of the Washington Post, John Dickerson of Slate Magazine, and Janet Hook of the Los Angeles Times.

An innovative program in Nepal is helping to free young girls that live as modern day slaves. Unable to make ends meet, many families in western Nepal have been forced to sell their daughters, some as young as six, to work far from home as bonded servants in private homes. With living conditions entirely at the discretion of their employers, these girls seldom attend school and are sometimes forced into prostitution. This week NOW travels to Nepal during the Maghe Sankranti holiday, when labor contractors come to the villages of the area to "buy" the children. There, we meet the Nepalese Youth Opportunity Foundation, which is trying to break the cycle of poverty and pain with an Enterprising Idea. They're providing desperate families with an incentive to keep their daughters: a piglet or a goat that can ultimately be sold for a sum equivalent to that of their child's labor. The organization says it has brought thousands of girls home to live with their families, but many cultural and political challenges still stand in their way. This is part of NOW's continuing series on innovative and sustainable solutions to world problems, what we call Enterprising Ideas.

On May 13, 1607, three English sailing vessels drop anchor beside a small island fringed by swamps in the James River, Virginia. On board: 104 colonists who will establish the first successful English settlement in the New World at Jamestown. The exploits of one colonist -- the brash, swashbuckling John Smith; the venerable chief Powhatan; and his infatuated daughter Pocahontas will be recited, retold, and embroidered until they gather the status of an epic founding myth of the new nation. Now, 400 years later, science is investigating the truth behind the myth. Virginia archaeologists recently discovered the site of Chief Powhatan's capital, Werowocomoco, some 17 miles from Jamestown. This is the very spot where the smitten Pocahontas begged her father to spare the neck of the captive John Smith - or so Smith claimed. Join NOVA on this exclusive investigation of the archaeological clues that are revealing the Native American side of the Jamestown story for the first time.

An innovative program in Nepal is helping to free young girls that live as modern day slaves. Unable to make ends meet, many families in western Nepal have been forced to sell their daughters, some as young as six, to work far from home as bonded servants in private homes. With living conditions entirely at the discretion of their employers, these girls seldom attend school and are sometimes forced into prostitution. This week NOW travels to Nepal during the Maghe Sankranti holiday, when labor contractors come to the villages of the area to "buy" the children. There, we meet the Nepalese Youth Opportunity Foundation, which is trying to break the cycle of poverty and pain with an Enterprising Idea. They're providing desperate families with an incentive to keep their daughters: a piglet or a goat that can ultimately be sold for a sum equivalent to that of their child's labor. The organization says it has brought thousands of girls home to live with their families, but many cultural and political challenges still stand in their way. This is part of NOW's continuing series on innovative and sustainable solutions to world problems, what we call Enterprising Ideas.

An historic election, an economic meltdown, and continuing challenges abroad - hard to imagine it all happened in one year, one for the history books: 2008, the year in review tonight on "Washington Week." Karen Tumulty of Time Magazine said, "The fact is this election was determined in the first three weeks of September." Dan Balz of the Washington Post said, "The key to the Obama campaign was a sense of a strategy of how you get there and a discipline to stick with it." Eamon Javers of BusinessWeek said, "This was the year that the bottom fell out of Wall Street." John Maggs of the National Journal said, "It's truly amazing how a legacy that seemed so focused on Iraq and the war on terror is now, I think, going to be in people's mind about this terrible, terrible recession that we're in." This was the year that was, the ups and the downs. Pres. Elect Barack Obama said, "I know the promise of America because I've lived it." Sen. John McCain said, "The fundamentals of our economy are strong." Pres. George Bush said, "The economy is in recession." With history playing out right in front of our eyes, we look back and ahead with the reporters who have been covering the election, the economy, the wars, and the legacy of George W. Bush.

An historic election, an economic meltdown, and continuing challenges abroad - hard to imagine it all happened in one year, one for the history books: 2008, the year in review tonight on "Washington Week." Karen Tumulty of Time Magazine said, "The fact is this election was determined in the first three weeks of September." Dan Balz of the Washington Post said, "The key to the Obama campaign was a sense of a strategy of how you get there and a discipline to stick with it." Eamon Javers of BusinessWeek said, "This was the year that the bottom fell out of Wall Street." John Maggs of the National Journal said, "It's truly amazing how a legacy that seemed so focused on Iraq and the war on terror is now, I think, going to be in people's mind about this terrible, terrible recession that we're in." This was the year that was, the ups and the downs. Pres. Elect Barack Obama said, "I know the promise of America because I've lived it." Sen. John McCain said, "The fundamentals of our economy are strong." Pres. George Bush said, "The economy is in recession." With history playing out right in front of our eyes, we look back and ahead with the reporters who have been covering the election, the economy, the wars, and the legacy of George W. Bush.

An historic election, an economic meltdown, and continuing challenges abroad - hard to imagine it all happened in one year, one for the history books: 2008, the year in review tonight on "Washington Week." Karen Tumulty of Time Magazine said, "The fact is this election was determined in the first three weeks of September." Dan Balz of the Washington Post said, "The key to the Obama campaign was a sense of a strategy of how you get there and a discipline to stick with it." Eamon Javers of BusinessWeek said, "This was the year that the bottom fell out of Wall Street." John Maggs of the National Journal said, "It's truly amazing how a legacy that seemed so focused on Iraq and the war on terror is now, I think, going to be in people's mind about this terrible, terrible recession that we're in." This was the year that was, the ups and the downs. Pres. Elect Barack Obama said, "I know the promise of America because I've lived it." Sen. John McCain said, "The fundamentals of our economy are strong." Pres. George Bush said, "The economy is in recession." With history playing out right in front of our eyes, we look back and ahead with the reporters who have been covering the election, the economy, the wars, and the legacy of George W. Bush.

More than four years after they landed on Mars, NASA's twin robot explorers, Spirit and Opportunity, have lasted 16 times longer and driven 20 times farther than expected. Along the way, they've endured the worst Martian storm ever recorded and survived near-fatal software glitches, a broken wheel and hair-raising climbs and descents on steep slopes. And since May 25, 2008, they've had new company on the red planet: NASA's Phoenix probe, which dramatically "tasted" water ice on the planet in July. NOVA "Is There Life on Mars?" showcases the latest scientific results from the rovers and Phoenix, which are poised to reveal provocative new clues in the tantalizing search for water and life on the Red Planet.
