An Oklahoma resident discovered an unusual bison skull while fossil hunting in a dry riverbed. Lodged in the bone was a handmade point, which the contributor believes dates back to the Calf Creek culture, around 3000 B.C. Could this be just another hoax or an incredible archeological discovery? The Detectives learn more about this group of nomadic hunter-gatherers, while putting this handmade point through the extreme rigors of modern forensic testing.

Over the past decade, India has emerged as the leader in the global market for white-collar "outsourcing" jobs - a notable component of India's rapid economic growth. This dramatic and personal film explores the experience of young Indian men and women who have been recruited into these new jobs requiring 80-hour work weeks and a westernized mindset. The film reveals the human and cultural impact of a sweeping global trend, exploring its effect on Indian family life, on the evolving landscape of Indian cities and towns, and on the aspirations and daily lives of young Indians, especially women, entering the work force.

The standoff in Israel and Lebanon, the bad news from Iraq, and twists and turns in Congress, tonight on Washington Week. Hezbollah promises to attack Tel Aviv; Israel does attack Beirut. Senator Chuck Hagel (R-NE) declares, "The war with no end in sight. President Bush must call for an immediate ceasefire. This madness must stop." Condoleezza Rice: "Certainly we're talking about days not weeks before we are able to get a ceasefire." Is a breakthrough even possible? On Iraq, top generals admit things on the ground are getting no better. "It is possible that Iraq could move towards civil war.", says General John Abizaid. Will U.S. troops ever get home? Meanwhile Congress tackles wages, taxes and pensions. Did they get anything done? Covering these stories this week from Jerusalem tonight is Janine Zacharia of Bloomberg News. In Washington, Helene Cooper of the New York Times, John Harwood of CNBC and the Wall Street Journal, and Jeffrey Birnbaum of the Washington Post.

NOVA's team spent weeks living day and night with the doctors, surgeons, and military staff of the 21st Combat Support Hospital in Iraq. The film follows the daily drama of life and death in a tented hospital in the deserts north of Baghdad. Building a state-of-the-art hospital in the dust and heat is a remarkable achievement, but it represents only the start of the difficulties faced by the doctors and nurses of the 21st CSH. Relief at the lack of military casualties is soon replaced by high drama and difficult ethical decisions as Iraqi victims arrive, many of them children with horrific injuries caused by unexploded weapons. NOVA shows how innovations in battlefield medicine have transformed the survival prospects of such casualties, and provides an intimate story of the struggle for survival in a combat hospital.

NOW Interview: Orville Schell - Is the press still fulfilling its obligation to the truth? NOW's David Brancaccio talks with Orville Schell, dean of the Graduate School of Journalism at the University of California, Berkeley, about the role of the press as a democracy watchdog. Some say the Fourth Estate has lost its teeth and is being manipulated into biased coverage of the war on terror and the White House in particular. Who's pulling the press' strings?

The standoff in Israel and Lebanon, the bad news from Iraq, and twists and turns in Congress, tonight on Washington Week. Hezbollah promises to attack Tel Aviv; Israel does attack Beirut. Senator Chuck Hagel (R-NE) declares, "The war with no end in sight. President Bush must call for an immediate ceasefire. This madness must stop." Condoleezza Rice: "Certainly we're talking about days not weeks before we are able to get a ceasefire." Is a breakthrough even possible? On Iraq, top generals admit things on the ground are getting no better. "It is possible that Iraq could move towards civil war.", says General John Abizaid. Will U.S. troops ever get home? Meanwhile Congress tackles wages, taxes and pensions. Did they get anything done? Covering these stories this week from Jerusalem tonight is Janine Zacharia of Bloomberg News. In Washington, Helene Cooper of the New York Times, John Harwood of CNBC and the Wall Street Journal, and Jeffrey Birnbaum of the Washington Post.

The foiled terror plot, the politics of terror, and the politics of politics, tonight on "Washington Week." Mr. Paul Stephenson declaims, "We are confident we prevented an attempt to commit mass murder, as I've said, on an unimaginable scale." The foiled airline terror plot was a jolt: a reminder of all the fears, insecurity, and unpredictability that arose after 9/11. And it raised questions: who's behind it? What else do we know? What else don't we know? A lot of other questions raised on the domestic political front as a high-profile Democratic goliath is felled by an unknown David. "I'm disappointed not just because I lost, but because the old politics of partisan polarization won today.", says Senator Joseph Lieberman (D-CT). Ned Lamont says, "Let's send some leaders to Washington, D.C., to start fighting for the common interest, to start fighting for the common good." Why the Connecticut Senate race isn't over. And we examine the intersection where politics and security meet. Which party is staking its claim to the high ground? Covering these stories this week: Pete Williams of NBC News. Dan Balz of the Washington Post. and Karen Tumulty of Time Magazine.

NOVA's team spent weeks living day and night with the doctors, surgeons, and military staff of the 21st Combat Support Hospital in Iraq. The film follows the daily drama of life and death in a tented hospital in the deserts north of Baghdad. Building a state-of-the-art hospital in the dust and heat is a remarkable achievement, but it represents only the start of the difficulties faced by the doctors and nurses of the 21st CSH. Relief at the lack of military casualties is soon replaced by high drama and difficult ethical decisions as Iraqi victims arrive, many of them children with horrific injuries caused by unexploded weapons. NOVA shows how innovations in battlefield medicine have transformed the survival prospects of such casualties, and provides an intimate story of the struggle for survival in a combat hospital.

The standoff in Israel and Lebanon, the bad news from Iraq, and twists and turns in Congress, tonight on Washington Week. Hezbollah promises to attack Tel Aviv; Israel does attack Beirut. Senator Chuck Hagel (R-NE) declares, "The war with no end in sight. President Bush must call for an immediate ceasefire. This madness must stop." Condoleezza Rice: "Certainly we're talking about days not weeks before we are able to get a ceasefire." Is a breakthrough even possible? On Iraq, top generals admit things on the ground are getting no better. "It is possible that Iraq could move towards civil war.", says General John Abizaid. Will U.S. troops ever get home? Meanwhile Congress tackles wages, taxes and pensions. Did they get anything done? Covering these stories this week from Jerusalem tonight is Janine Zacharia of Bloomberg News. In Washington, Helene Cooper of the New York Times, John Harwood of CNBC and the Wall Street Journal, and Jeffrey Birnbaum of the Washington Post.

The foiled terror plot, the politics of terror, and the politics of politics, tonight on "Washington Week." Mr. Paul Stephenson declaims, "We are confident we prevented an attempt to commit mass murder, as I've said, on an unimaginable scale." The foiled airline terror plot was a jolt: a reminder of all the fears, insecurity, and unpredictability that arose after 9/11. And it raised questions: who's behind it? What else do we know? What else don't we know? A lot of other questions raised on the domestic political front as a high-profile Democratic goliath is felled by an unknown David. "I'm disappointed not just because I lost, but because the old politics of partisan polarization won today.", says Senator Joseph Lieberman (D-CT). Ned Lamont says, "Let's send some leaders to Washington, D.C., to start fighting for the common interest, to start fighting for the common good." Why the Connecticut Senate race isn't over. And we examine the intersection where politics and security meet. Which party is staking its claim to the high ground? Covering these stories this week: Pete Williams of NBC News. Dan Balz of the Washington Post. and Karen Tumulty of Time Magazine.

Danish artist Simone Aaberg Kærn encountered resistance when she flew her canvas-covered propeller airplane to Kabul in search of the Afghan teenage girl whose dream of being a fighter pilot Kærn had read about in the newspaper. Although women had played an integral role in the physical and intellectual health of Afghanistan, when the Taliban came to power in 1996 women were eliminated from its public sphere entirely. The fall of the Taliban in late 2001 ushered in a new era of reforms aimed at reintegrating Afghanistan's women into the nation's schools, political institutions and workplaces; however, as Kærn discovered, Afghan culture remains deeply rooted in conservative religious traditions.

In this portrait of the world's most famous physicist, Albert Einstein's other roles as humanitarian and philosopher are examined. A tireless defender of individual liberties, Einstein stuck tenaciously to unique ideals both in the human sphere and in his scientific inquiries. This film explores Einstein's unswerving idealism through the groundbreaking work in physics that gained him international acclaim to his life in America after being forced to leave Germany in 1933. The unknown physicist who shocked the world with his revolutionary theories as well as the older man who witnessed the catastrophic consequences of these theories with the making and use of the atomic bomb are portrayed.

Elia Kazan got an Oscar for Lifetime Achievement at the 1999 Academy Awards. The world was stunned by the breadth of the controversy it generated and the depth of the old wounds it salted. Kazan's impressive directorial body of work includes "On the Waterfront," "East of Eden," "A Streetcar Named Desire," "Gentleman's Agreement" and "A Face in the Crowd." But, in 1952, when he "named names" before the House Un-American Activities Committee, he destroyed careers and lives and relationships. One of those destroyed relationships was with playwright Arthur Miller, the author of an equally impressive body of work -- including "All My Sons," "Death of a Salesman," "A View From the Bridge," "The Crucible" and "After the Fall." Best friends -- both involved with the actress Marilyn Monroe -- and collaborators for many years before Kazan's testimony, Miller didn't speak to him again for 10 years. By exploring their personal and artistic relationship, as well as its inevitable rupture, the Miller-Kazan story is an examination of one of the darkest times in America's cultural history.

Hollywood -- it is stamped as a virtual imprint on our imaginations, a celluloid image frozen in time. Judy Garland also had one of the most frequently recorded voices of the last century. She was magic, almost mythical. She is as iconic as she is misunderstood. There were her problems, to be sure, but the proof is in the performances. From "The Wizard of Oz" to the Palladium, from the Oscars to the Grammys. With singular entree to the MGM library, including vaulted screen tests and rehearsal footage, the film is wrapped in Judy's voice, actually telling her story in her own words. So many outsiders have tried to tell this story and so many friends and family have weighed in -- now Judy gets center stage, all to herself. This is her ultimate comeback.

Mystery Motorcycle - A man in Flemington, New Jersey, has recently purchased a beautiful old Harley-Davidson motorcycle and is eager to learn more about the machine's early history. Grace Kelly Automobile - In 1955, famed director Alfred Hitchcock was at the top of his game with the release of To Catch a Thief, a romantic thriller starring Cary Grant and Grace Kelly. But for some Hitchcock fans, the real star of the film is the Sunbeam Alpine, a sleek, sexy 1953 convertible. The car was already popular in elite automotive circles, but its Hitchcock film cameo would transform this car into a cult object. Now, a man in Los Angeles believes he has the original Sunbeam Alpine used in the film. HISTORY DETECTIVES heads to California to revisit the glamour of 1950s Hollywood and rub elbows with some of the key players who worked side by side with the Master of Suspense. HISTORY DETECTIVES heads to Ohio, Maryland and Pennsylvania to investigate the history of Civil War photography and discover how confederate and union prisoners, officers and enlisted men, were treated during wartime.

Lou Gehrig Autograph - An Oregon man has a baseball ticket that bears a "Lou Gehrig" autograph and a scribbled date: July 4, 1939. The contributor's mother was an avid Yankees fan who regularly paid homage to the team at their home stadium in the Bronx. The date is one of the most famous in baseball, when Gehrig announced his retirement, stating to a Yankee Stadium crowd of 62,000 that he was "the luckiest man on the face of the earth." For months, unbeknownst to Gehrig and his fans, he had been suffering the progressive effects of amyotrophic lateral sclerosis (ALS), a degenerative disease. HISTORY DETECTIVES heads to Yankee Stadium and Cooperstown's Baseball Hall of Fame to learn whether this ticket was in fact signed by Lou Gehrig and to explore how the athlete once known as the "Iron Horse" was memorialized by fans and by his own family. Cleveland Electric Car - A Cleveland man with a passion for trains has long wondered about an electric street car in his city's transit museum. He is curious to learn what happened to the city's once extensive and highly praised electric trolley car network. Streetcars were once the most popular form of urban transportation in the country - by World War I, most cities of more than 10,000 people had an electric railway system. But by the 1950s, this form of transportation had all but disappeared. HISTORY DETECTIVES hits the road to Washington, DC, and Cleveland, Ohio, to track the evolution of urban mass transit systems, and investigate the fate of downtown areas and the rise of suburban sprawl. Philadelphia Freedom Paper - A Bronx, New York, man with a longtime interest in African-American history recently purchased an intriguing document at a flea market; he believes it is a "freedom paper" for an African-American man named John Jubilee Jackson. The paper was issued in Philadelphia in 1821, and indicates that Jackson was from Virginia, a state where, by 1780, nearly half of all slaves resided. HISTORY DETECTIVES heads to Philadelphia, Mystic, Connecticut, and New York City to investigate the document and the life of John Jubilee Jackson, uncovering the remarkable and contradictory reality of free blacks struggling to get by in a racist society.

The war on terror and the wars on the ground: does the president have any maneuvering room left? Tonight, on "Washington Week," in the courts, a federal judge says no to government wiretapping of overseas calls, but the president pushes back. President George Bush declaims, "Those who herald this decision simply do not understand the nature of the world in which we live." In the Middle East, a fragile ceasefire holds, but was Hezbollah or its leader, Sheik Nasrallah, really defeated? In Iraq, record casualties in July as the insurgency grows stronger, not weaker. And military leaders sound more pessimistic: Maj. Gen. William Caldwell [Coalition Spokesman]: The sectarian violence in and around Baghdad defines the framework of the ongoing conflict in Iraq. And in domestic politics, another New England senator is in trouble with his own party. This time it's a Republican. Covering these stories this week: Martha Raddatz of ABC News, Andrea Mitchell of NBC News, Linda Robinson of U.S. News and World Report, and Jeanne Cummings of the Wall Street Journal.

Format: Documentary

This celebration of cemeteries across America takes an unusual and informative look at graves, monuments, family plots, sculpture and the way cemeteries interconnect with many aspects of modern American culture. Traveling from Key West to central Alaska, the program features examples of burial grounds as special sites where history and art are preserved, where flowers and trees can be important attractions, where people make pilgrimages to the final resting places of the famous and the familial, and where old and new traditions often combine in fascinating ways. Rick Sebak (A Program About Unusual Buildings, A Hot Dog Program, A Flea Market Documentary and Sandwiches That You Will Like) narrates.

Stuck in neutral in Lebanon and Iraq, and domestically in the housing market and on the Gulf Coast. Tonight on "Washington Week." Keeping the peace along the Israeli-Lebanese border turns out to be very complicated: which countries will send-troops, where will they go, and can Hezbollah be disarmed? Iran's nuclear ambitions cause consternation as well, and President Bush sees a connection. "Iran is obviously part of the problem. They sponsor Hezbollah.", said President George W. Bush. But can anyone get Iran to back down? At home, it's suddenly a buyer's market as real estate prices drop and supply increases: the economy braces for the domino effect. And one year after Katrina, what ever happened to the federal money that was supposed to rebuild the Gulf Coast? Covering these stores tonight: Janine Zacharia of Bloomberg News, Helene Cooper of the New York Times. David Wessel of the Wall Street Journal, and Paul Singer of National Journal.

Stuck in neutral in Lebanon and Iraq, and domestically in the housing market and on the Gulf Coast. Tonight on "Washington Week." Keeping the peace along the Israeli-Lebanese border turns out to be very complicated: which countries will send troops, where will they go, and can Hezbollah be disarmed? Iran's nuclear ambitions cause consternation as well, and President Bush sees a connection. "Iran is obviously part of the problem. They sponsor Hezbollah.", said President George W. Bush. But can anyone get Iran to back down? At home, it's suddenly a buyer's market as real estate prices drop and supply increases: the economy braces for the domino effect. This celebration of cemeteries across America takes an unusual and informative look at graves, monuments, family plots, sculpture and the way cemeteries interconnect with many aspects of modern American culture. Traveling from Key West to central Alaska, the program features examples of burial grounds as special sites where history and art are preserved, where flowers and trees can be important attractions, where people make pilgrimages to the final resting places of the famous and the familial, and where old and new traditions often combine in fascinating ways. Rick Sebak (A Program About Unusual Buildings, A Hot Dog Program, A Flea Market Documentary and Sandwiches That You Will Like) narrates.

A Closer Walk" is the first film to depict humankind's confrontation with the global AIDS epidemic. It encompasses the broad spectrum of the global AIDS experience and includes people with HIV/AIDS from all walks of life: AIDS children and orphans and those caring for them; doctors, nurses and social workers; human rights advocates; and prominent scientists, economists, researchers, government leaders and NGO officials. More than 50 women, men and young people were interviewed or profiled in the following regions and locations: Uganda, South Africa, Haiti, Switzerland, India, Nepal, Ukraine, Cambodia and various locations in the United States, including New York City, Kansas City, San Francisco and Cambridge. The film's basic themes address the underlying causes of AIDS; the relationship between health, dignity and human rights; and the universal need for action, compassion and commitment to counter what has become the worst plague in human history.

Lou Gehrig Autograph - An Oregon man has a baseball ticket that bears a "Lou Gehrig" autograph and a scribbled date: July 4, 1939. The contributor's mother was an avid Yankees fan who regularly paid homage to the team at their home stadium in the Bronx. The date is one of the most famous in baseball, when Gehrig announced his retirement, stating to a Yankee Stadium crowd of 62,000 that he was "the luckiest man on the face of the earth." For months, unbeknownst to Gehrig and his fans, he had been suffering the progressive effects of amyotrophic lateral sclerosis (ALS), a degenerative disease. HISTORY DETECTIVES heads to Yankee Stadium and Cooperstown's Baseball Hall of Fame to learn whether this ticket was in fact signed by Lou Gehrig and to explore how the athlete once known as the "Iron Horse" was memorialized by fans and by his own family. Cleveland Electric Car - A Cleveland man with a passion for trains has long wondered about an electric street car in his city's transit museum. He is curious to learn what happened to the city's once extensive and highly praised electric trolley car network. Streetcars were once the most popular form of urban transportation in the country - by World War I, most cities of more than 10,000 people had an electric railway system. But by the 1950s, this form of transportation had all but disappeared. HISTORY DETECTIVES hits the road to Washington, DC, and Cleveland, Ohio, to track the evolution of urban mass transit systems, and investigate the fate of downtown areas and the rise of suburban sprawl.

Philadelphia Freedom Paper - A Bronx, New York, man with a longtime interest in African-American history recently purchased an intriguing document at a flea market; he believes it is a "freedom paper" for an African-American man named John Jubilee Jackson. The paper was issued in Philadelphia in 1821, and indicates that Jackson was from Virginia, a state where, by 1780, nearly half of all slaves resided. HISTORY DETECTIVES heads to Philadelphia, Mystic, Connecticut, and New York City to investigate the document and the life of John Jubilee Jackson, uncovering the remarkable and contradictory reality of free blacks struggling to get by in a racist society.

Elia Kazan got an Oscar for Lifetime Achievement at the 1999 Academy Awards. The world was stunned by the breadth of the controversy it generated and the depth of the old wounds it salted. Kazan's impressive directorial body of work includes "On the Waterfront," "East of Eden," "A Streetcar Named Desire," "Gentleman's Agreement" and "A Face in the Crowd." But, in 1952, when he "named names" before the House Un-American Activities Committee, he destroyed careers and lives and relationships. One of those destroyed relationships was with playwright Arthur Miller, the author of an equally impressive body of work -- including "All My Sons," "Death of a Salesman," "A View From the Bridge," "The Crucible" and "After the Fall." Best friends -- both involved with the actress Marilyn Monroe -- and collaborators for many years before Kazan's testimony, Miller didn't speak to him again for 10 years. By exploring their personal and artistic relationship, as well as its inevitable rupture, the Miller-Kazan story is an examination of one of the darkest times in America's cultural history.

The war on terror and the wars on the ground: does the president have any maneuvering room left? Tonight, on "Washington Week," in the courts, a federal judge says no to government wiretapping of overseas calls, but the president pushes back. President George Bush declaims, "Those who herald this decision simply do not understand the nature of the world in which we live." In the Middle East, a fragile ceasefire holds, but was Hezbollah or its leader, Sheik Nasrallah, really defeated? In Iraq, record casualties in July as the insurgency grows stronger, not weaker. And military leaders sound more pessimistic: Maj. Gen. William Caldwell [Coalition Spokesman]: The sectarian violence in and around Baghdad defines the framework of the ongoing conflict in Iraq. And in domestic politics, another New England senator is in trouble with his own party. This time it's a Republican. Covering these stories this week: Martha Raddatz of ABC News, Andrea Mitchell of NBC News, Linda Robinson of U.S. News and World Report, and Jeanne Cummings of the Wall Street Journal.

Stuck in neutral in Lebanon and Iraq, and domestically in the housing market and on the Gulf Coast. Tonight on "Washington Week." Keeping the peace along the Israeli-Lebanese border turns out to be very complicated: which countries will send troops, where will they go, and can Hezbollah be disarmed? Iran's nuclear ambitions cause consternation as well, and President Bush sees a connection. "Iran is obviously part of the problem. They sponsor Hezbollah.", said President George W. Bush. But can anyone get Iran to back down? At home, it's suddenly a buyer's market as real estate prices drop and supply increases: the economy braces for the domino effect. And one year after Katrina, what ever happened to the federal money that was supposed to rebuild the Gulf Coast? Lou Gehrig Autograph - An Oregon man has a baseball ticket that bears a "Lou Gehrig" autograph and a scribbled date: July 4, 1939. The contributor's mother was an avid Yankees fan who regularly paid homage to the team at their home stadium in the Bronx. The date is one of the most famous in baseball, when Gehrig announced his retirement, stating to a Yankee Stadium crowd of 62,000 that he was "the luckiest man on the face of the earth." For months, unbeknownst to Gehrig and his fans, he had been suffering the progressive effects of amyotrophic lateral sclerosis (ALS), a degenerative disease. HISTORY DETECTIVES heads to Yankee Stadium and Cooperstown's Baseball Hall of Fame to learn whether this ticket was in fact signed by Lou Gehrig and to explore how the athlete once known as the "Iron Horse" was memorialized by fans and by his own family. Cleveland Electric Car - A Cleveland man with a passion for trains has long wondered about an electric street car in his city's transit museum. He is curious to learn what happened to the city's once extensive and highly praised electric trolley car network. Streetcars were once the most popular form of urban transportation in the country - by World War I, most cities of more than 10,000 people had an electric railway system. But by the 1950s, this form of transportation had all but disappeared. HISTORY DETECTIVES hits the road to Washington, DC, and Cleveland, Ohio, to track the evolution of urban mass transit systems, and investigate the fate of downtown areas and the rise of suburban sprawl. Philadelphia Freedom Paper - A Bronx, New York, man with a longtime interest in African-American history recently purchased an intriguing document at a flea market; he believes it is a "freedom paper" for an African-American man named John Jubilee Jackson. The paper was issued in Philadelphia in 1821, and indicates that Jackson was from Virginia, a state where, by 1780, nearly half of all slaves resided. HISTORY DETECTIVES heads to Philadelphia, Mystic, Connecticut, and New York City to investigate the document and the life of John Jubilee Jackson, uncovering the remarkable and contradictory reality of free blacks struggling to get by in a racist society.

Lawmakers or Lawbreakers? Do voters see their representatives as lawmakers or lawbreakers? From the decisions by Congressmen Tom DeLay and Bob Ney to step aside, to questions surrounding other powerful members of Congress like Jerry Lewis and Alan Mollohan, ethics has become a big issue in this year's campaign. On August 25 at 8:30 p.m. NOW begins a season of election coverage by asking if allegations of impropriety will affect how people vote this fall. Republican Rep. Christopher Shays tells NOW, "People who are basically corrupt are as good as traitors. And I don't think the public always understands that."

In this portrait of the world's most famous physicist, Albert Einstein's other roles as humanitarian and philosopher are examined. A tireless defender of individual liberties, Einstein stuck tenaciously to unique ideals both in the human sphere and in his scientific inquiries. This film explores Einstein's unswerving idealism through the groundbreaking work in physics that gained him international acclaim to his life in America after being forced to leave Germany in 1933. The unknown physicist who shocked the world with his revolutionary theories as well as the older man who witnessed the catastrophic consequences of these theories with the making and use of the atomic bomb are portrayed.

Segment Length: 00:56:46

An intriguing story about the lives and times of Lise Meitner and Otto Hahn, two remarkable scientists whose extraordinary collaboration culminated in the discovery of nuclear fission in 1938, turning Einstein's "theory" into atomic science. Not only did these two revolutionize the history of science and the role of women in physics and chemistry, their tale also parallels the social changes and turbulent history of their times. It involves the war against memory, Nazi intimidation, forced exile, betrayal, and a Nobel Prize awarded only in chemistry that to this day distorts science history. This documentary explores the development of atomic science in the first part of the twentieth century. It captures Meitner's efforts to make her way in the male-dominated world of physics, Hahn's early work and independent discoveries, their collaboration, the racial and political discrimination that forced Meitner to live in exile, and ongoing speculation about her exclusion from the Nobel Prize. These elements are explored through photos, letters, notes, stock footage, and maps; interviews with writers, scientists, and historians; and music of the day. Sound effects and animated graphics are employed in the presentation of the science.

On April 21st, 1918, Manfred von Richthofen, Germany's most feared fighter ace, known as the "Red Baron," took off on patrol over the Somme valley with his notorious red-painted "Flying Circus." What happened next has divided historians and air buffs for decades. NOVA's exciting new investigation of the Red Baron's death presents newly discovered documents that overturn the conventional theory of von Richthofen's demise. In accounting for the Baron's singular success, NOVA explores the origins of the first fighter planes and the evolution of aerial tactics. The show features thrilling re-enactments of hair-raising duels between the fragile fighters of World War I.

The war on terror and the wars on the ground: does the president have any maneuvering room left? Tonight, on "Washington Week," in the courts, a federal judge says no to government wiretapping of overseas calls, but the president pushes back. President George Bush declaims, "Those who herald this decision simply do not understand the nature of the world in which we live." In the Middle East, a fragile ceasefire holds, but was Hezbollah or its leader, Sheik Nasrallah, really defeated? In Iraq, record casualties in July as the insurgency grows stronger, not weaker. And military leaders sound more pessimistic: Maj. Gen. William Caldwell [Coalition Spokesman]: The sectarian violence in and around Baghdad defines the framework of the ongoing conflict in Iraq. And in domestic politics, another New England senator is in trouble with his own party. This time it's a Republican. Covering these stories this week: Martha Raddatz of ABC News, Andrea Mitchell of NBC News, Linda Robinson of U.S. News and World Report, and Jeanne Cummings of the Wall Street Journal.

Stuck in neutral in Lebanon and Iraq, and domestically in the housing market and on the Gulf Coast. Tonight on "Washington Week." Keeping the peace along the Israeli-Lebanese border turns out to be very complicated: which countries will send troops, where will they go, and can Hezbollah be disarmed? Iran's nuclear ambitions cause consternation as well, and President Bush sees a connection. "Iran is obviously part of the problem. They sponsor Hezbollah," said President George W. Bush. But can anyone get Iran to back down? At home, it's suddenly a buyer's market as real estate prices drop and supply increases: the economy braces for the domino effect. And one year after Katrina, what ever happened to the federal money that was supposed to rebuild the Gulf Coast? Covering these stores tonight: Janine Zacharia of Bloomberg News, Helene Cooper of the New York Times. David Wessel of the Wall Street Journal, and Paul Singer of National Journal.

An intriguing story about the lives and times of Lise Meitner and Otto Hahn, two remarkable scientists whose extraordinary collaboration culminated in the discovery of nuclear fission in 1938, turning Einstein's "theory" into atomic science. Not only did these two revolutionize the history of science and the role of women in physics and chemistry, their tale also parallels the social changes and turbulent history of their times. It involves the war against memory, Nazi intimidation, forced exile, betrayal, and a Nobel Prize awarded only in chemistry that to this day distorts science history. This documentary explores the development of atomic science in the first part of the twentieth century. It captures Meitner's efforts to make her way in the male-dominated world of physics, Hahn's early work and independent discoveries, their collaboration, the racial and political discrimination that forced Meitner to live in exile, and ongoing speculation about her exclusion from the Nobel Prize. These elements are explored through photos, letters, notes, stock footage, and maps; interviews with writers, scientists, and historians; and music of the day. Sound effects and animated graphics are employed in the presentation of the science.

Every prescription medicine you take is tested on humans before it's approved for sale and use by the Food and Drug Administration. But if you assumed those tests are always done smartly, safely and ethically under the watchful eye of expert regulators, you would be very, very wrong. Perhaps even dead wrong. That's what a team of investigative reporters from Bloomberg Markets magazine discovered in a yearlong investigation culminating in a devastating, award-winning report called "Big Pharma's Shameful Secret." The magazine, an award-winning publication about business and finance published monthly by Bloomberg News, shared the closely-held secret that "across the US, the centers that do the testing -- and the regulators who watch them -- allow scores of people to be injured or killed." 3.7 million people in the U.S. have enrolled in drug tests sponsored by the world's largest pharmaceutical companies. Each test requires stringent scientific and ethical standards. But the nation's biggest drug companies now farm out 75 percent of experimental drug trials to for-profit centers whose practices are monitored by other for-profit companies, all of them paid by "Big Pharma." This conflict of interest, the magazine reports, has led to egregious incidents. AIR vividly brings the magazine's explosive findings to life in interviews with victims and their families. Equally disturbing is the story of volunteers who enroll in more than one clinical trial at a time, in clear violation of both scientific and ethical protocol. AIR also includes an interview with an Argentine immigrant who says he received over $13,000 for participating in three clinical trials during the same period at two Miami testing companies, one of which was SFBC. When the report was published, SFBC threatened this man with deportation if he did not recant his statements to the magazine. Bloomberg Markets' investigation into the seamy underside of clinical drug-trials won a coveted Investigative Reporters and Editors Certificate, as well as a George Polk Award for Health Reporting, led to a congressional investigation into human testing, and to the resignation of some top executives at SFBC.

"Block the Vote" Your right to vote -- is it under assault? Across the nation, states have enacted new laws supposedly designed to prevent voter fraud and avoid election day debacles, but qualified voters may also be left out in the cold, especially minorities, the poor, the elderly and the disabled. NOW looks at several states where these new rules may keep voters away from the polls in November. Many of these laws have been approved by the Department of Justice, which is charged with protecting the rights of all voters. "This is a concerted effort to make sure that certain people don't have the opportunity to vote, that they don't have the opportunity to participate in their own democracy", Georgia state representative Alisha Thomas Morgan told NOW.

Will new voting machines cure election headaches or cause them? The Help America Vote Act divided $3.1 billion among all 50 states to update their voting systems with new technology. On Friday September 8, NOW takes a close look at one Michigan county on Primary Day to see how the new machines are working, but also checks in on other states, including Texas, Iowa, New Mexico, and - you guessed it - Ohio. What we found was alarming - computer and human error, nonexistent contingency plans, and extreme vulnerability to tampering. "We are no more certain today than we were in 2000 that we will not have an embarrassing moment and a tragic outcome in this year's election," Deforest Soaries, former Chairman of the Election Assistance Commission, told NOW. Soaries and electronic voting experts say the government's requirement to use the new machines has been implemented too quickly and without careful scrutiny, resulting in a dangerously flawed technology delivering on democracy's greatest promise.

Every prescription medicine you take is tested on humans before it's approved for sale and use by the Food and Drug Administration. But if you assumed those tests are always done smartly, safely and ethically under the watchful eye of expert regulators, you would be very, very wrong. Perhaps even dead wrong. That's what a team of investigative reporters from Bloomberg Markets magazine discovered in a yearlong investigation culminating in a devastating, award-winning report called "Big Pharma's Shameful Secret." The magazine, an award-winning publication about business and finance published monthly by Bloomberg News, shared the closely-held secret that "across the US, the centers that do the testing -- and the regulators who watch them -- allow scores of people to be injured or killed." 3.7 million people in the U.S. have enrolled in drug tests sponsored by the world's largest pharmaceutical companies. Each test requires stringent scientific and ethical standards. But the nation's biggest drug companies now farm out 75 percent of experimental drug trials to for-profit centers whose practices are monitored by other for-profit companies, all of them paid by "Big Pharma." This conflict of interest, the magazine reports, has led to egregious incidents. AIR vividly brings the magazine's explosive findings to life in interviews with victims and their families. Equally disturbing is the story of volunteers who enroll in more than one clinical trial at a time, in clear violation of both scientific and ethical protocol. AIR also includes an interview with an Argentine immigrant who says he received over $13,000 for participating in three clinical trials during the same period at two Miami testing companies, one of which was SFBC. When the report was published, SFBC threatened this man with deportation if he did not recant his statements to the magazine. Bloomberg Markets' investigation into the seamy underside of clinical drug-trials won a coveted Investigative Reporters and Editors Certificate, as well as a George Polk Award for Health Reporting, led to a congressional investigation into human testing, and to the resignation of some top executives at SFBC.

In the spring of 2004, the abuse of prisoners was front page news across the country. Attack dogs used on prisoners, assaults committed by guards, even deaths in custody. But while most of the media was focusing on those kinds of abuses in a faraway prison complex named Abu Ghraib, a veteran investigative journalist was finding the exact same thing in decidedly less exotic locales. Places like New Jersey and Louisiana. AIR traces a journey that began in the spring of 2004, when National Public Radio investigative reporter Daniel Zwerdling received a tip from an immigration lawyer. This began an award-winning reporting odyssey that would lead to the end of the practice of using attack dogs on prisoners at one prison, and highlight the scandal of a Jamaican man who died while being held in another. In his 18-month investigation, Zwerdling faced obstacle after obstacle. The Department of Homeland Security didn't want him investigating; the prisons didn't want him visiting. But Zwerdling persevered, and five months after his initial inquiry, he visited the detention center at Passaic County Jail in northern New Jersey. There he met with prisoners who described being beaten by prison guards and terrorized by dogs. NPR broadcast Zwerdling's report on immigrant detainees on November 17-18, 2004. The next day, the Department of Homeland Security announced it had sent a memo to all facilities holding immigrant detainees: Stop using dogs. By then Zwerdling knew he had only scratched the story's surface. He started collecting testimony from jails around the country, and tracking down eyewitnesses. Cultivating the trust of immigrant detainees proved the key to exposing the circumstances of the horrifying death of Richard Rust, a 34-year-old Jamaican. Rust died of a heart attack in the recreation yard of a Louisiana prison - a tragedy that could have been avoided if he had simply receive timely and adequate medical attention. Zwerdling was able to report on the lengthy delay in getting medical treatment for Rust, in violation of Federal rules. But he never could have done so if he hadn't cultivated key sources inside the prison walls, men who courageously - with everything to lose - gave eyewitness testimony that allowed Zwerdling to uncover the truth behind Rust's death. In An Inside Job, AIR reports from Washington D.C., Louisiana and Jamaica on a story that changed federal government policy and gave detainees a voice to demand their own better treatment.

African-American boys have a one-in-ten chance of being incarcerated or killed before they reach adulthood. In Baltimore, one of the country's most poverty-stricken cities for inner-city residents, the Baraka School project was founded to break the cycle of violence through an innovative education program that removed young boys from low-performing public schools and unstable home environments. The film follows 20 boys as they travel to rural Kenya in East Africa, where a teacher-student ratio of one to five, a strict disciplinary program and a comprehensive curriculum form the core of an extraordinary new journey in their transformation to men.

Republicans are at war with each other. Tonight on "Washington Week." "We must put aside our differences and work together to meet the test that history has given us", says President George W. Bush. But the differences are big ones and they are within the president's own party as splits emerge on the issue of how to treat suspected terrorists. Senator John Warner (R-VA) says, "There are honest differences of opinion with respect to very complicated legal issues surrounding this case". And conservatives worry why their party would support a liberal Republican - "Thank you. Thank you", says Senator Lincoln Chafee (R-RI), and try to defeat a conservative one. Amid all these fresh discord, new questions about the power and the clout of Vice President Dick Cheney, plus your answers to last week's "What were they thinking?" Covering these stories this week: Karen Tumulty of TIME Magazine, Alexis Simendinger of National Journal, Jeanne Cummings of The Wall Street Journal, and David Sanger of the New York Times.

African-American boys have a one-in-ten chance of being incarcerated or killed before they reach adulthood. In Baltimore, one of the country's most poverty-stricken cities for inner-city residents, the Baraka School project was founded to break the cycle of violence through an innovative education program that removed young boys from low-performing public schools and unstable home environments. The film follows 20 boys as they travel to rural Kenya in East Africa, where a teacher-student ratio of one to five, a strict disciplinary program and a comprehensive curriculum form the core of an extraordinary new journey in their transformation to men.

In 2003, Wide Angle profiled seven children from seven different countries as they started their first year of school in the unprecedented multi-year documentary project Time for School. This year, Back to School checks in on the students, now in third grade, some with their future education almost assured and others clearly in danger of dropping out. Like Michael Apted's 7-Up film series, Wide Angle will periodically visit these children through 2015 to update the events of their lives and their progress. How many will successfully graduate? How many will drop out, and why? What differences will we see between the boys and the girls? These children's stories will offer rich insight to American audiences about the striking disparities of circumstance and opportunity in different countries around the world.

The hurricane season of 2004 is categorized as one of the most active on record. It begins with an uneventful June and July then suddenly turns violent in August. Forecasters at the National Hurricane Center in Miami are confronted with satellite images showing a steady stream of tropical storms spinning across the Atlantic from Africa. Combining their experience with the latest technology they focus on making the most accurate predictions. As Hurricane Specialist Jack Bevens says, "If you get it wrong you can get a lot of people killed." No one wants to risk a wrong forecast. Anatomy of a Hurricane goes behind the scenes at the National Hurricane Center to see forecasters on a mission to save lives and property. It is a look at the stressful work of a dedicated staff as they track Charley, Frances, Ivan and Jeanne - all major hurricanes with unexpected challenges. It is also a look at the complicated dynamics of the atmosphere - why these hurricanes form and where they go.

Every prescription medicine you take is tested on humans before it's approved for sale and use by the Food and Drug Administration. But if you assumed those tests are always done smartly, safely and ethically under the watchful eye of expert regulators, you would be very, very wrong. Perhaps even dead wrong. That's what a team of investigative reporters from Bloomberg Markets magazine discovered in a yearlong investigation culminating in a devastating, award-winning report called "Big Pharma's Shameful Secret." The magazine, an award-winning publication about business and finance published monthly by Bloomberg News, shared the closely-held secret that "across the US, the centers that do the testing -- and the regulators who watch them -- allow scores of people to be injured or killed." 3.7 million people in the U.S. have enrolled in drug tests sponsored by the world's largest pharmaceutical companies. Each test requires stringent scientific and ethical standards. But the nation's biggest drug companies now farm out 75 percent of experimental drug trials to for-profit centers whose practices are monitored by other for-profit companies, all of them paid by "Big Pharma." This conflict of interest, the magazine reports, has led to egregious incidents. AIR vividly brings the magazine's explosive findings to life in interviews with victims and their families. Equally disturbing is the story of volunteers who enroll in more than one clinical trial at a time, in clear violation of both scientific and ethical protocol. AIR also includes an interview with an Argentine immigrant who says he received over $13,000 for participating in three clinical trials during the same period at two Miami testing companies, one of which was SFBC. When the report was published, SFBC threatened this man with deportation if he did not recant his statements to the magazine. Bloomberg Markets' investigation into the seamy underside of clinical drug-trials won a coveted Investigative Reporters and Editors Certificate, as well as a George Polk Award for Health Reporting, led to a congressional investigation into human testing, and to the resignation of some top executives at SFBC.

In the spring of 2004, the abuse of prisoners was front page news across the country. Attack dogs used on prisoners, assaults committed by guards, even deaths in custody. But while most of the media was focusing on those kinds of abuses in a faraway prison complex named Abu Ghraib, a veteran investigative journalist was finding the exact same thing in decidedly less exotic locales. Places like New Jersey and Louisiana. AIR traces a journey that began in the spring of 2004, when National Public Radio investigative reporter Daniel Zwerdling received a tip from an immigration lawyer. This began an award-winning reporting odyssey that would lead to the end of the practice of using attack dogs on prisoners at one prison, and highlight the scandal of a Jamaican man who died while being held in another. In his 18-month investigation, Zwerdling faced obstacle after obstacle. The Department of Homeland Security didn't want him investigating; the prisons didn't want him visiting. But Zwerdling persevered, and five months after his initial inquiry, he visited the detention center at Passaic County Jail in northern New Jersey. There he met with prisoners who described being beaten by prison guards and terrorized by dogs. NPR broadcast Zwerdling's report on immigrant detainees on November 17-18, 2004. The next day, the Department of Homeland Security announced it had sent a memo to all facilities holding immigrant detainees: Stop using dogs. By then Zwerdling knew he had only scratched the story's surface. He started collecting testimony from jails around the country, and tracking down eyewitnesses. Cultivating the trust of immigrant detainees proved the key to exposing the circumstances of the horrifying death of Richard Rust, a 34-year-old Jamaican. Rust died of a heart attack in the recreation yard of a Louisiana prison - a tragedy that could have been avoided if he had simply receive timely and adequate medical attention. Zwerdling was able to report on the lengthy delay in getting medical treatment for Rust, in violation of Federal rules. But he never could have done so if he hadn't cultivated key sources inside the prison walls, men who courageously - with everything to lose - gave eyewitness testimony that allowed Zwerdling to uncover the truth behind Rust's death. In An Inside Job, AIR reports from Washington D.C., Louisiana and Jamaica on a story that changed federal government policy and gave detainees a voice to demand their own better treatment.

A healthy democracy requires an informed public. Yet just outside the din of daily media, the plethora of "news" shows on TV and the mega-mall information overload of the Internet, there are things going on behind closed doors every day that adversely affect the interests of the American people. Whether government corruption, corporate malfeasance, or any other abuse of power by institutions or individuals entrusted with the public good, these acts all share one thing in common: the people committing them want to keep you in the dark. That's where investigative journalism comes in.

Left-leaning political bloggers are determined to demonstrate their real world influence in the upcoming mid-term elections. But will they finally make political headway, or just more hype? NOW visits a major political blogging convention to find out. One of the bloggers' favorite national candidates is Montana Democrat Jon Tester, who's now locked in a close race for the US Senate seat held by Republican Conrad Burns. How much of a role did bloggers play in Tester's initial success? Will they be able to push him on to victory in November? "You have a couple million people reading liberal blogs and they're looking for ways to get involved. And they're looking for ways to participate and take hold of their own democracy. And that is powerful," says Markos Moulitsas, founder of DailyKos, one of the Internet's most popular blogs, to NOW. NOW meets the real people behind some of the Internet's most opinionated and widely-read liberal blogs to find out if they can really move the political needle.

African-American boys have a one-in-ten chance of being incarcerated or killed before they reach adulthood. In Baltimore, one of the country's most poverty-stricken cities for inner-city residents, the Baraka School project was founded to break the cycle of violence through an innovative education program that removed young boys from low-performing public schools and unstable home environments. The film follows 20 boys as they travel to rural Kenya in East Africa, where a teacher-student ratio of one to five, a strict disciplinary program and a comprehensive curriculum form the core of an extraordinary new journey in their transformation to men.

Every prescription medicine you take is tested on humans before it's approved for sale and use by the Food and Drug Administration. But if you assumed those tests are always done smartly, safely and ethically under the watchful eye of expert regulators, you would be very, very wrong. Perhaps even dead wrong. That's what a team of investigative reporters from Bloomberg Markets magazine discovered in a yearlong investigation culminating in a devastating, award-winning report called "Big Pharma's Shameful Secret." The magazine, an award-winning publication about business and finance published monthly by Bloomberg News, shared the closely-held secret that "across the US, the centers that do the testing -- and the regulators who watch them -- allow scores of people to be injured or killed." 3.7 million people in the U.S. have enrolled in drug tests sponsored by the world's largest pharmaceutical companies. Each test requires stringent scientific and ethical standards. But the nation's biggest drug companies now farm out 75 percent of experimental drug trials to for-profit centers whose practices are monitored by other for-profit companies, all of them paid by "Big Pharma." This conflict of interest, the magazine reports, has led to egregious incidents. AIR vividly brings the magazine's explosive findings to life in interviews with victims and their families. Equally disturbing is the story of volunteers who enroll in more than one clinical trial at a time, in clear violation of both scientific and ethical protocol. AIR also includes an interview with an Argentine immigrant who says he received over $13,000 for participating in three clinical trials during the same period at two Miami testing companies, one of which was SFBC. When the report was published, SFBC threatened this man with deportation if he did not recant his statements to the magazine. Bloomberg Markets' investigation into the seamy underside of clinical drug-trials won a coveted Investigative Reporters and Editors Certificate, as well as a George Polk Award for Health Reporting, led to a congressional investigation into human testing, and to the resignation of some top executives at SFBC.

"Block the Vote" Your right to vote — is it under assault? Across the nation, states have enacted new laws supposedly designed to prevent voter fraud and avoid election day debacles, but qualified voters may also be left out in the cold, especially minorities, the poor, the elderly and the disabled. NOW looks at several states where these new rules may keep voters away from the polls in November. Many of these laws have been approved by the Department of Justice, which is charged with protecting the rights of all voters. "This is a concerted effort to make sure that certain people don't have the opportunity to vote, that they don't have the opportunity to participate in their own democracy", Georgia state representative Alisha Thomas Morgan told NOW.

Will new voting machines cure election headaches or cause them? The Help America Vote Act divided $3.1 billion among all 50 states to update their voting systems with new technology. On Friday September 8, NOW takes a close look at one Michigan county on Primary Day to see how the new machines are working, but also checks in on other states, including Texas, Iowa, New Mexico, and - you guessed it - Ohio. What we found was alarming - computer and human error, nonexistent contingency plans, and extreme vulnerability to tampering. "We are no more certain today than we were in 2000 that we will not have an embarrassing moment and a tragic outcome in this year's election," Deforest Soaries, former Chairman of the Election Assistance Commission, told NOW. Soaries and electronic voting experts say the government's requirement to use the new machines has been implemented too quickly and without careful scrutiny, resulting in a dangerously flawed technology delivering on democracy's greatest promise.

Left-leaning political bloggers are determined to demonstrate their real world influence in the upcoming mid-term elections. But will they finally make political headway, or just more hype? NOW visits a major political blogging convention to find out. One of the bloggers' favorite national candidates is Montana Democrat Jon Tester, who's now locked in a close race for the US Senate seat held by Republican Conrad Burns. How much of a role did bloggers play in Tester's initial success? Will they be able to push him on to victory in November? "You have a couple million people reading liberal blogs and they're looking for ways to get involved. And they're looking for ways to participate and take hold of their own democracy. And that is powerful," says Markos Moulitsas, founder of DailyKos, one of the Internet's most popular blogs, to NOW. NOW meets the real people behind some of the Internet's most opinionated and widely-read liberal blogs to find out if they can really move the political needle.

Measuring the Democrats' opportunity in campaign 2006 and the Republicans' ability to fight back, tonight on "Washington Week." "Elections are won based upon economic issues and national security issues, and there's a fundamental difference between many of the Democrats and my party", says President George W. Bush. But after three years of war in Iraq, the president's adversaries say that strategy is obsolete. "We have seen the Republicans going back to their same old play book. You can't trust Democrats to defend America. This time that's not going to work", said Howard Dean. American political campaigns never really stop, but they're about to move a lot faster after Labor Day. The polls look ominous for Republicans. Can President Bush do anything to change them? Some Republican House and Senate seats are plainly in danger, but are there enough for a Democratic majority? The GOP's turnout machine outperformed Democrats two years ago. Can they do it again? And already filling the 2006 landscape are candidates to succeed President Bush in 2008. Who stands to gain or lose from what happens on November 7th? Labor Day has come and gone. Now the fall focus comes into view: it's all about security, security, security, tonight on "Washington Week." "Many Americans look at these events and ask the same question: five years after 9/11 are we safer? The answer is yes. America is safer," claims President George W. Bush. "America is less safe, facing greater threats, and unprepared for the dangerous world in which we live," says Senator Harry Reid (D-NV). Who's right? President Bush with his plans to close secret prisons, prosecute terrorists at Guantanamo, and continue wiretapping, or Democrats and some Republicans who say the president may be falling short of the mark? Is Congress, back in town for a less than a month before returning home to campaign, prepared to stake its own security claim? "Thankfully there have been no attacks on our soil since 9/11, but we should not take false comfort from that fact," declares Sen. Joe Biden (D-DE.). Will Monday's 9/11 anniversary bring all this - politics and policy - into focus? Republicans are at war with each other. Tonight on "Washington Week." "We must put aside our differences and work together to meet the test that history has given us", says President George W. Bush. But the differences are big ones and they are within the president's own party as splits emerge on the issue of how to treat suspected terrorists. Senator John Warner (R-VA) says, "There are honest differences of opinion with respect to very complicated legal issues surrounding this case". And conservatives worry why their party would support a liberal Republican - "Thank you. Thank you", says Senator Lincoln Chafee (R-RI), and try to defeat a conservative one. African-American boys have a one-in-ten chance of being incarcerated or killed before they reach adulthood. In Baltimore, one of the country's most poverty-stricken cities for inner-city residents, the Baraka School project was founded to break the cycle of violence through an innovative education program that removed young boys from low-performing public schools and unstable home environments. The film follows 20 boys as they travel to rural Kenya in East Africa, where a teacher-student ratio of one to five, a strict disciplinary program and a comprehensive curriculum form the core of an extraordinary new journey in their transformation to men.

The hurricane season of 2004 is categorized as one of the most active on record. It begins with an uneventful June and July then suddenly turns violent in August. Forecasters at the National Hurricane Center in Miami are confronted with satellite images showing a steady stream of tropical storms spinning across the Atlantic from Africa. Combining their experience with the latest technology they focus on making the most accurate predictions. As Hurricane Specialist Jack Bevens says, "If you get it wrong you can get a lot of people killed." No one wants to risk a wrong forecast. Anatomy of a Hurricane goes behind the scenes at the National Hurricane Center to see forecasters on a mission to save lives and property. It is a look at the stressful work of a dedicated staff as they track Charley, Frances, Ivan and Jeanne - all major hurricanes with unexpected challenges. It is also a look at the complicated dynamics of the atmosphere - why these hurricanes form and where they go.

NOVA presents a minute-by-minute eyewitness account of the Hurricane Katrina disaster, exploring why the flood defenses and disaster relief planning failed to match Katrina's fury. What made this storm so deadly? How accurately did scientists predict its impact? And why are powerful hurricanes like Katrina likely to strike more often? The program will investigate the immense challenges posed by rebuilding New Orleans, and why-despite all the knowledge of the peril faced by its citizens-the city was so tragically unprepared when the long-feared disaster finally struck.

Will new voting machines cure election headaches or cause them? The Help America Vote Act divided $3.1 billion among all 50 states to update their voting systems with new technology. On Friday September 8, NOW takes a close look at one Michigan county on Primary Day to see how the new machines are working, but also checks in on other states, including Texas, Iowa, New Mexico, and - you guessed it - Ohio. What we found was alarming - computer and human error, nonexistent contingency plans, and extreme vulnerability to tampering. "We are no more certain today than we were in 2000 that we will not have an embarrassing moment and a tragic outcome in this year's election," DeForest Soaries, former Chairman of the Election Assistance Commission, told NOW. Soaries and electronic voting experts say the government's requirement to use the new machines has been implemented too quickly and without careful scrutiny, resulting in a dangerously flawed technology delivering on democracy's greatest promise.

Left-leaning political bloggers are determined to demonstrate their real world influence in the upcoming mid-term elections. But will they finally make political headway, or just more hype? NOW visits a major political blogging convention to find out. One of the bloggers' favorite national candidates is Montana Democrat Jon Tester, who's now locked in a close race for the US Senate seat held by Republican Conrad Burns. How much of a role did bloggers play in Tester's initial success? Will they be able to push him on to victory in November? "You have a couple million people reading liberal blogs and they're looking for ways to get involved. And they're looking for ways to participate and take hold of their own democracy. And that is powerful," says Markos Moulitsas, founder of DailyKos, one of the Internet's most popular blogs, to NOW. NOW meets the real people behind some of the Internet's most opinionated and widely-read liberal blogs to find out if they can really move the political needle.

African-American boys have a one-in-ten chance of being incarcerated or killed before they reach adulthood. In Baltimore, one of the country's most poverty-stricken cities for inner-city residents, the Baraka School project was founded to break the cycle of violence through an innovative education program that removed young boys from low-performing public schools and unstable home environments. The film follows 20 boys as they travel to rural Kenya in East Africa, where a teacher-student ratio of one to five, a strict disciplinary program and a comprehensive curriculum form the core of an extraordinary new journey in their transformation to men.

In the spring of 2004, the abuse of prisoners was front page news across the country. Attack dogs used on prisoners, assaults committed by guards, even deaths in custody. But while most of the media was focusing on those kinds of abuses in a faraway prison complex named Abu Ghraib, a veteran investigative journalist was finding the exact same thing in decidedly less exotic locales. Places like New Jersey and Louisiana. AIR traces a journey that began in the spring of 2004, when National Public Radio investigative reporter Daniel Zwerdling received a tip from an immigration lawyer. This began an award-winning reporting odyssey that would lead to the end of the practice of using attack dogs on prisoners at one prison, and highlight the scandal of a Jamaican man who died while being held in another. In his 18-month investigation, Zwerdling faced obstacle after obstacle. The Department of Homeland Security didn't want him investigating; the prisons didn't want him visiting. But Zwerdling persevered, and five months after his initial inquiry, he visited the detention center at Passaic County Jail in northern New Jersey. There he met with prisoners who described being beaten by prison guards and terrorized by dogs. NPR broadcast Zwerdling's report on immigrant detainees on November 17-18, 2004. The next day, the Department of Homeland Security announced it had sent a memo to all facilities holding immigrant detainees: Stop using dogs. By then Zwerdling knew he had only scratched the story's surface. He started collecting testimony from jails around the country, and tracking down eyewitnesses. Cultivating the trust of immigrant detainees proved the key to exposing the circumstances of the horrifying death of Richard Rust, a 34-year-old Jamaican. Rust died of a heart attack in the recreation yard of a Louisiana prison - a tragedy that could have been avoided if he had simply receive timely and adequate medical attention. Zwerdling was able to report on the lengthy delay in getting medical treatment for Rust, in violation of Federal rules. But he never could have done so if he hadn't cultivated key sources inside the prison walls, men who courageously - with everything to lose - gave eyewitness testimony that allowed Zwerdling to uncover the truth behind Rust's death. In An Inside Job, AIR reports from Washington D.C., Louisiana and Jamaica on a story that changed federal government policy and gave detainees a voice to demand their own better treatment.

Measuring the Democrats' opportunity in campaign 2006 and the Republicans' ability to fight back, tonight on "Washington Week." "Elections are won based upon economic issues and national security issues, and there's a fundamental difference between many of the Democrats and my party", says President George W. Bush. But after three years of war in Iraq, the president's adversaries say that strategy is obsolete. "We have seen the Republicans going back to their same old play book. You can't trust Democrats to defend America. This time that's not going to work", said Howard Dean. American political campaigns never really stop, but they're about to move a lot faster after Labor Day. The polls look ominous for Republicans. Can President Bush do anything to change them? Some Republican House and Senate seats are plainly in danger, but are there enough for a Democratic majority? The GOP's turnout machine outperformed Democrats two years ago. Can they do it again? And already filling the 2006 landscape are candidates to succeed President Bush in 2008. Who stands to gain or lose from what happens on November 7th? Covering these stories this week: Richard Kell of Bloomberg News, Jeanne Cummings of the Wall Street Journal, John Harris of the Washington Post, and James Barnes of National Journal.

Labor Day has come and gone. Now the fall focus comes into view: it's all about security, security, security, tonight on "Washington Week." "Many Americans looks at these events and ask the same question: five years after 9/11 are we safer? The answer is yes. America is safer," claims President George W. Bush. "America is less safe, facing greater threats, and unprepared for the dangerous world in which we live," says Senator Harry Reid (D-NV). Who's right? President Bush with his plans to close secret prisons, prosecute terrorists at Guantanamo, and continue wiretapping, or Democrats and some Republicans who say the president may be falling short of the mark? Is Congress, back in town for a less than a month before returning home to campaign, prepared to stake its own security claim? "Thankfully there have been no attacks on our soil since 9/11, but we should not take false comfort from that fact," declares Sen. Joe Biden (D-DE.). Will Monday's 9/11 anniversary bring all this - politics and policy - into focus? Tackling some of these questions tonight: Dana Priest of the Washington Post, Michael Duffy of Time Magazine, Gloria Borger of CBS News and U.S. News, and Doyle McManus of the Los Angeles Times.

Republicans are at war with each other. Tonight on "Washington Week." "We must put aside our differences and work together to meet the test that history has given us", says President George W. Bush. But the differences are big ones and they are within the president's own party as splits emerge on the issue of how to treat suspected terrorists. Senator John Warner (R-VA) says, "There are honest differences of opinion with respect to very complicated legal issues surrounding this case". And conservatives worry why their party would support a liberal Republican - "Thank you. Thank you", says Senator Lincoln Chafee (R-RI), and try to defeat a conservative one. Amid all these fresh discord, new questions about the power and the clout of Vice President Dick Cheney, plus your answers to last week's "What were they thinking?" Covering these stories this week: Karen Tumulty of TIME Magazine, Alexis Simendinger of National Journal, Jeanne Cummings of The Wall Street Journal, and David Sanger of the New York Times.

African-American boys have a one-in-ten chance of being incarcerated or killed before they reach adulthood. In Baltimore, one of the country's most poverty-stricken cities for inner-city residents, the Baraka School project was founded to break the cycle of violence through an innovative education program that removed young boys from low-performing public schools and unstable home environments. The film follows 20 boys as they travel to rural Kenya in East Africa, where a teacher-student ratio of one to five, a strict disciplinary program and a comprehensive curriculum form the core of an extraordinary new journey in their transformation to men.

In 2003, Wide Angle profiled seven children from seven different countries as they started their first year of school in the unprecedented multi-year documentary project Time for School. This year, Back to School checks in on the students, now in third grade, some with their future education almost assured and others clearly in danger of dropping out. Like Michael Apted's 7-Up film series, Wide Angle will periodically visit these children through 2015 to update the events of their lives and their progress. How many will successfully graduate? How many will drop out, and why? What differences will we see between the boys and the girls? These children's stories will offer rich insight to American audiences about the striking disparities of circumstance and opportunity in different countries around the world.
