The search for 14-year-old Victoria Caine is over tonight....This story obviously has a good ending but raises important questions about a system designed to help find missing children quickly. The Amber Alert System was not activated for Victoria Caine yesterday, a fact that troubles her father, William Caine. But officials say they follow strict guidelines on deciding when and when not to issue Amber Alerts. Florida Police issued a missing child alert for Victoria Caine saying she did not meet the Amber Alert criteria because she was considered a willful runaway. Jeff Moore, Executive Director of the SC Sheriff's Association, says it's import to have strict guidelines – "If we were to issue an Amber Alert for every missing child we would have about ten to twenty a day". Here in South Carolina Amber Alerts focus on motor vehicle abductions – generally, for kids under seventeen. Moore says the goal is to get the driving public to help police.

A new effort to solve a serious problem in South Carolina Domestic Abuse. South Carolina is near the top of the list for domestic violence in this country. The state ranks 6th in The Nation and Law Enforcement Agencies get about 36 thousand domestic violence calls a year. In addition, some of those cases end up being deadly. The State Attorney General’s Office is teaming up with retail Giant Wal-Mart to help fight domestic abuse. You’ll see Wal-Mart’s investment in the effort while you shop Break The Silence was initiated in Wal-Mart stores in the Pee Dee Region during the first 3-months of the campaign organizers say the number of calls to the victim Hotline increase 60-percent. The message of hope has made its way to the Midlands. Organizers hope the response will take South Carolina off the list of States with the highest domestic violence rates. The Garners Ferry location is the first in the Columbia area to put the campaign into action.

It has called the Hummingbird and it is new technology that could help solve Midlands missing person’s cases. The Richland County Sheriff’s Department officially unveiled it today. The Kristen Foundation donated the “Hummingbird”. It can help find bodies in Lakes that could help solve two current missing people’s cases.” I’d love to find them both alive somewhere that’s what our goal would be but if we can’t I think we need to find them so we can bring them home and have closure for their families.” Hummingbirds’ cost $1600 each. The Sheriff’s Department is the second agency in the country to have one donated. Richland County is buying one as well.

Health care is expensive and for many folks paying for doctors visits are tough. Now there is another option. A free clinic is by. The Midlands Community Health Center opened its doors today. There were guest speakers free health screenings and some entertainment. The Director Bill Lloyd says the clinic is much needed because there are not many physicians in the Bluff and Atlas road area. Lloyd says the center is a general practice but anyone can come. Lloyd suggests people call and make an appointment before coming. That number is 647-9111.

A bill to raise the state cigarette tax has cleared yet another hurdle tonight – the Ways And Means Committee is sending it to the full House for debate. If the bill being considered becomes law, it will cost smokers an extra $3.00 per carton to light up. Kelly Davis represents the South Carolina Tobacco Collaborative – she says preventing kids from starting the addictive habit will prevent a lifetime of disease and possibly death. Some of the additional revenue from the tax would go to healthcare - $70 million. 70 percent of voters told state lawmakers they support a higher cigarette tax. Davis sees adults ditching the habit as a positive thing – “As they’re cutting out smoking, people are spending their money in other places and if people spend their cigarette money elsewhere, that could drive some other part of the state’s economy.”

The Columbia Police Department is making an impact internationally. The Department is the first in the nation to train Afghan officers. Small groups of civilian police officers from Afghanistan will spend the next few months working with the Department. The officers will practice hands-on training, such as ride-along and practice at firing ranges. The Department of Defense may expand to other police departments after the completion of this pilot project.

Federal Housing Officials are taking an interest in some Columbia Neighborhoods. The group’s Deputy Secretary Roy Bernardi toured city neighborhoods along with Mayor Bob Coble and Councilmen this afternoon. The team focused on the impact of a block grant program. Bernardi stressed that good communities work together “when a neighborhood is strong, when the people care about one another, when the neighborhood is kept clean, when it’s kept safe by neighborhood watch, by the Municipality itself everyone ends up winning”. HUD’s mission is to increase homeownership and support community development

Attention Lexington county shoppers you may soon be able to shop on Sunday mornings if one local law maker has his way. District 69 Representative Ted Pitts introduced a one-year exemption for all state counties from the blue Laws. Currently the law restricts counties making less than 900,000.00 in accommodations tax revenue. Lexington County falls under this restriction. Pitts feels business owners should be able to decide when they open for business. Pitts is encountering opposition from Lexington County leaders, but he's waiting to see if Governor Mark Sanford vetoes the budget provision,
