SLUG: BUDGET RELEASED January 8

10-10:35 PM

Governor Mark Sanford's first budget proposal is out tonight. And it's a plan he says could nearly eliminate the state deficit. The plan eliminates 15 state agencies and consolidates many others. The budget does increase spending for education, state prisons and healthcare. And the governor also says his plan does it without raising taxes. Part of the plan includes selling off surplus state property that Sanford says could save the state millions. I think that what you've got to do and these are tough budget times and they force these decisions, is to look at what are the core functions of government? The governor's budget also proposes the creation of an inspector general to eliminate waste and abuse and proposes having the governor and lieutenant governor run on the same ticket.

SLUG: BOSCH LAYOFF January 24

10-10:35 PM

By the middle of next year those 4-hundred affected employees will be forced to look for another job. Company officials blame the lay-off on not being able to make high profits during an economic slump. Bosch plans to move the "brake manufacturing" section of the plant to Mexico. One worker tells us, company officials read a 5 minute statement about the lay-off. Some workers cried. Many are now devastated. One employee, who talked with us, wanted to hide her identity for fear of ridicule. We were a family not just employees. They said they will look after us, 1 for all and all for 1 but it doesn't seem that way Monday. Bosch officials will meet with employees to discuss job possibilities and severance packages.

SLUG: PORTABLE SIGNS February 4

10-10:35 PM

Columbia City Council is considering a ban on mobile advertising signs. The city plans to take up the issue at next month's council meeting and that has some business owners angry. Lu Frierson says portable signs are cheaper than larger permanent signs and without them his business might not survive. I'm rather appalled at it. As a small business owner, we try to help our community and our portable signs are a major player as far as our advertising. They are vital to us. City planners say the signs are unsafe because they're often too close to the road and impair driver's vision. The city plans to make an exemption for signs aimed at pedestrians or announcing business grand openings.

SLUG: VISIT

February 6

10-10:35 PM

Blue Cross National unemployment figures are out for January tonight. And they're down. Last month the jobless rate dropped to just over five and half percent. 112-thousand new jobs were created. Mostly construction and service positions, here in the midlands. That drop means little to more than 15-hundred people receiving pink slips from Blue Cross-Blue Shield. The insurance giant is cutting positions statewide: 756 in Columbia, 700 in Florence, 92 in Camden, and 31 in Surfside. The layoff came after Blue Cross-Blue Shield lost government contracts to handle military insurance claims.
