CW Television Network Children's Programming -Commercial Information

The CW Television Network Children's Programming

Attached is a list of 1st Quarter 2014 CW Children's Programming for your public files.

Statement

This statement is designed to furnish you with additional information concerning the commercial matter contained in the network's children's programs, and to enable you to more easily comply with the requirements of the Children's Television Act of 1990.

The following is a list of all CW Television Network programs which were produced and broadcast with the intention of primarily reaching an audience of children twelve years old and younger that were scheduled for broadcast during the first quarter of 2014. Each of these programs were formatted to allow for no more than 10.5 minutes of commercial time per hour on weekends. The actual number of network commercial minutes were included in the network traffic reports for the first quarter of 2014, which each affiliated station has received heretofore.

Mission Statement

The Saturday morning Vortexx programming block on the CW features two E/I programs. The on-air icon (E/I) will indicate that each program is "educational and informational" for children. The E/I symbol will be displayed throughout each episode of Rescue Heroes and The Adventures of Chuck and Friends. Rescue Heroes is designed to meet the educational and information needs of children 6 – 11 while The Adventures of Chuck and Friends is created to meet the education and information needs of children 4 – 7 year olds, particularly boys.

The Adventures of Chuck and Friends, scheduled at 7:00 A.M., is 30 minutes program comprised of two 11 minutes episodes. This half hour is an action-comedy to inspire children, to approach playtime as an exciting, limitless adventure, in which everyone learns how to solve problems creatively, compassionately, and with a sense of humor. CHUCK's storylines and characters aim to spark young children's imaginations, and encourage them to think of fun ways of turning their daydreams into action-packed adventures and games with their real-life friends. Chuck and his friends will use problem-solving strategies such as teamwork, thinking creatively, taking responsibilities for their actions, perseverance when they encounter obstacles and to ask for help when trying to handle a frustrating situation.

Rescue Heroes, scheduled for 7:30 A.M. is 30 minutes. The program was designed to serve the education and information needs of children ages 6-11. Each week the Rescue Heroes are called into action to mobilize themselves in any part of the globe to protect the world from natural and man-made disasters. Each half hour is comprised of two 11 minutes episodes. Social and emotional character stories are embedded in the stories using action and humor to convey messages of keeping an open mind, asking for help, facing your fears, persistence pays off, preparedness, procedure, training and teamwork. At the end of each episode the Rescue Heroes reinforce various safety tips, and information relating to the educational message portrayed in the story.

The Adventures of Chuck and Friends

Series Description

The New Adventures of Chuck and Friends is an action-comedy to inspire children, especially 4-7 year-old boys to approach playtime as an exciting, limitless adventure, in which everyone learns how to solve problems creatively, compassionately, and with a sense of humor. CHUCK's storylines and characters aim to spark young children's imaginations, and encourage them to think of fun ways of turning their daydreams into action-packed adventures and games with their real-life friends.

To support this mission, the characters and stories will inspire children to be good friends to their peers at home and at school by approaching social situations with self-confidence and a willingness to try new things. Through each week's stories Chuck and his friends will use problem-solving strategies such as teamwork, thinking creatively, taking responsibilities for their actions, perseverance when they encounter obstacles and to ask for help when trying to handle a frustrating situation.

Each week's stories will demonstrate through creative storytelling by acknowledging that making mistakes is a natural part of any problem-solving, and everyone has strengths and weaknesses.

The Saturday morning Vortexx programming block on the CW features one hour of E/I programming. The hour is comprised of two half-hours program blocks of Rescue Heroes that is designed to meet the educational and information needs of children 6 – 11. The on-air icon (E/I) symbol will be displayed throughout each program indicating each half hour program is "educational and informational" for children.

Rescue Heroes, scheduled at 7:00 A.M. and 7:30 A.M. is two thirty-minute programs designed to serve the education and information needs of children ages 6-11. Each week the Rescue Heroes are called into action to mobilize around the globe to protect the world from natural and man-made disasters. Each half hour is comprised of two 11 minutes episodes. Social and emotional character stories are embedded in the stories using action and humor to convey messages to keep an open mind, ask for help, face your fears, persistence pays off, be prepared, and emphasizes procedure, training and teamwork. At the end of each episode the Rescue Heroes reinforce various safety tips, and information relating to the educational message portrayed in the story.

Series Review

August 2011

Program: On The Spot
Episodes reviewed: Episode 101
Episode 102
Program length: 30 minutes

Series Summary:

Longneedle maintains the concept of a program with all the content, engagement, and age-level appropriateness for a solid E/I rated series while adapting a format that makes the program genuinely interesting to the extended general audiences. It has expanded the education value of the program with video inserts, graphs and maps for deeper explanation, and a format respecting the knowledge of its participants.

Summary: Educational Value of "On The Spot"

On The Spot is a series tapping knowledge across a series of subject areas: geography, art, technology, science, math, history, language, music, and sports. It also addresses general cultural knowledge. The format is a series of seemingly random questions to individuals who are either of school age or adults past the age of high school graduation. There are three fundamental educational benefits to this format. First, it taps into fact retrieval in the curriculum. Second, and more important, it expands the information beyond fact retrieval. Third, and most important, it addresses what educators call non-cognitive factors for student success. These are factors that can measurably improve student achievement without specifically involving material to be tested. These include self-esteem and frames in which students see learning occurring. By removing information from the academic silos where it is generally taught and moving it, literally, to the mall, it forces a synthesis that is difficult to achieve in an academic setting. The fact that correct answers are giving by diverse ethnicities and ages, by both genders, and not by stereotypes of 'smart people' is essential. It means that anyone can own information. The fact that young people will see this on television in a non-academic setting is also very important. Whatever the curriculum or information, knowledge becomes the star—and is demonstrated by every type of person.

Episode: 101

This episode summarizes the benefits of the On The Spot approach to entertainment, education, and information. It's central theme is the automobile which ties to several curriculum all of which open through the On The Spot's series of fact retrieval questions which then lead to deeper understanding of the information. Horsepower, RPM, the cultural importance of Henry Ford's industrial revolution are all covered in depth following simple "man on the street" questions. The average weight of a car, driving habits (speed=gasoline consumed), and vulcanization of rubber are also topics targeted in the fast-paced flow of information. The consistent high level of graphics supports the content. For example, 3D animated renderings of car motors in action and 3D graphics of cultural migrations across globe add a necessary mix to people answering questions. In addition to the automobile, a range of topics from Christopher Columbus to the Vikings and the indigenous food of the New World all are delivered with humor and solid follow-up information. On The Spot takes the familiar, like cars and Columbus, and tests the knowledge of passerby's from a nice variety of demographics. The message is entertaining while giving viewers in the target audience (ages 13-16) a reason to commit to memory material from inside and outside school. There is no question that the information and presentation would also interest adults. This would be an ideal show for families to watch together. Parents would only hope for a sneak peek before viewing with their children. This series is a solid, entertaining, educational program.

Episode: 102

The episode is rich in video follow-ups to questions like "Are insects animals?" and "Do dogs sweat?" A quick tour of the animal kingdom refreshes the notion of what that kingdom really means and how it interrelates—includes the insect animals. Dog sweating leads to a discussion of a prime human advantage: the ability to lower body temperature through respiration. A more detailed question on the number of mammal species leads to a nice overview of the number of species on the planet—and makes that very important piece of information relevant. Straightforward geography questions like "What states border the Pacific," and "What are the biggest countries in North America," cascade into information about history, the size of states and nations, the names of capitals, and food. Responders with incorrect answers are not belittled, hints are given, right answers applauded, and viewers can identify with both responders—and with correct information. The maps and graphs are 3-D and contemporary and the videos well chosen.

Applicable Common Core Standards

In 2011, there are only Common Core State Standards Initiatives for English Language Arts & Literacy in a variety of contexts (including History/Social Studies, Science, and technical Subjects) online at <http://www.corestandards.org/>, published in June 2010 by the National Governors Association and the Council of Chief State School Officers.

Reading Standards for Literacy in Science and Technical Subjects 6–12 (condensed)

Presentation of Knowledge and Ideas

SL.CCR.4 - Present information, findings, and supporting evidence such that listeners can follow the line of reasoning and the organization, development, and style are appropriate to task, purpose, and audience.

SL.CCR.5 - Make strategic use of digital media and visual displays of data to express information and enhance understanding of presentations.

SL.CCR.6 - Adapt speech to a variety of contexts and communicative tasks, demonstrating command of formal English when indicated or appropriate.

Also:

Students establish a base of knowledge across a wide range of subject matter by engaging with works of quality and substance.

3.A - Mathematically proficient students understand and use stated assumptions, definitions, and previously established results in constructing arguments. They make conjectures and build a logical progression of statements to explore the truth of their constructions.

1.A - Mathematically proficient students start by explaining to themselves the meaning of a problem and looking for entry points to its solution. They analyze givens, constraints, relationships, and goals. They make conjectures about the form and meaning

Program: On The Spot
Episodes reviewed: "Health, Science, History (Ep. 219)"
"Animals, History, People" (Ep. 220)"
Program length: 30 minutes

Summary:

The opening sequence from On The Spot boldly lays claim to a wide range of education and information topics: Transportation, Geography, Technology, Culture, Environment, Government, Money, Sports, Food, Art, History, Music, Science, Math, Health, and Language. Then, in the thirty-minute program that follows, it delivers the goods. It succeeds in making a program that is essentially information-based engaging to the targeted 13-18 year-old audience. It succeeds through the strategy of an extremely fast-paced presentation linked with eye-catching visuals, a pounding soundtrack, and an amazing array of information glued together by a genial, self-amused narration. It is a perfect match for the 21st Century learner. The information comes at the viewer like potato chips—you can't seem to take just one and it is impossible to put down the remote.

The visuals cuts are a fast, visually arresting 2-3 seconds long yet the narrative is not rushed. It pulls the viewer in with information reasonably covered at the secondary school level (and therefore accessible to the general public), but is a long way from the didactic presentation in a textbook. Try pulling away from questions like these: Can smiling cause happiness? Can someone detect a smile during a cellphone call? What is the loudest animal? What are the happiest professions—and the unhappiest? Or turning away from facts like these: There are ten million desert locusts in a swarm, 19 billion chickens on earth, and a running cheetah is faster than a racing sailfish in the sea.

Despite the enormous amount of information, the tone is never salacious or sarcastic but maintains a sense of basic wry astonishment at the workings of the world. For the target audience, this is important. Too often shows appealing for attention from this group outside school rely on snarky attitudes or comfortable stereotyping. On The Spot keeps a good distance from either of those approaches.

Although the series as a whole will cover the listed topics of Transportation, Geography, Technology, Culture, Environment, Government, Money, Sports, Food, Art, History, Music, Science, Math, Health, and Language, each episode concentrates the information and education into three main subgroups. For example, reviewed episode 219 features "Health, Science, History" while reviewed episode 220 features "Animals, History, People"

Episode: "Health, Science, History" (#219)

Facts about health issues relating to happiness are bundled together in a fast-moving overview from smiling to the happiest professions to the happiest countries. The details are important here. Rather than just displaying the facts about which countries are the happiest, the episode also covers the criterion that determines the selection: safety, freedom, education, and health. This is important for the (healthy) skepticism of the 13-18 year-old viewer, who statistically will most to the UK, Scandinavia, and other parts of the world are important for perspective and this episode does that.

Episode: “Animals, History, People” (#220)

Here again interesting pieces of information are strung like pearls along strings of themes that are good television, while offering information and education to young viewers. A discussion of plants vs. animals leads past all the species in between in a fast and fun way. “You’re not going to like this” is the unwritten theme of the episode, often stated by the narrator as it is revealed that 40% of mammal species are rats (rodents, really), and 25% are bats. Wonderfully scary stuff. Comparing polar bears and Siberian tigers is just fun, and the notion of ‘sweating’ gets lots of play in discussing who and what does it and why. Typically, the episode offers information about topics that it is hard to turn away from. And quickly. Even the clouds in the videos move fast. If you don’t like primates, just wait a few seconds and you’ll be hearing about the large numbers of animals that we eat (19 billion chickens, 1.4 billion cows, 1 billion pigs). Wait another minute and you’ll hear that if you drive straight up for just 70 miles you’re in outer space. 50 miles and you’re an astronaut, says NASA. Another nice touch is that the visual of the ‘way back’ machine ticks off years in BCE and CE, instead of BC and AD. Viewers 13-18 will know those terms (Before the Common Era and the Common Era), which are now in textbooks.

Education Summary:

Information is the beginning of knowledge creation and the episodes in On The Spot manage to deliver a great deal of information very quickly in an interesting way. Mainly, the show is entertaining and it is not hard to imagine that this program and the popcorn nature of its fast moving content would be equally appealing to adults. The mood, tone, and open quality of the program makes viewing it as much fun as watching a good game show. But it moves faster than a game show—perfect for young viewers in the mid-21st Century.

Content Standards Applicable for On The Spot

Common Core

The Common Core Content Standards (adopted by all but four states) at the current date are outlined for English Language arts & Literacy in History/Social Studies, Science, and technical Subjects (<http://www.corestandards.org/>, published in June 2010 by the National Governors Association and the Council of Chief State School Officers.) They address core learning standards but not yet all specific subject areas. A comparison of the Common Core elements “Key Points” below make the educational and information value of On The Spot clear.

Key Points in English Language Arts

- Speaking and Listening: The standards require that students gain, evaluate, and present increasingly complex information, ideas, and evidence through listening and speaking as well as through media.

of conversations, direct instruction, and reading. The standards will help students determine word meanings, appreciate the nuances of words, and steadily expand their repertoire of words and phrases.

Key Points in Mathematics

- The standards stress not only procedural skill but also conceptual understanding.
- The high school standards call on students to practice applying mathematical ways of thinking to real world issues and challenges; they prepare students to think and reason mathematically.
- The high school standards emphasize mathematical modeling, the use of mathematics and statistics to analyze empirical situations, understand them better... Quantities and their relationships in physical, economic, public policy, social and everyday situations can be modeled using mathematical and statistical methods

Research and media skills blended into the Standards as a whole

- To be ready for college, workforce training, and life in a technological society, students need the ability to gather, comprehend, evaluate, synthesize, and report on information and ideas, ...and to analyze and create a high volume and extensive range of print and nonprint texts in media forms old and new. The need to conduct research and to produce and consume media is embedded into every aspect of today's curriculum.

Reading Standards for Information Text 6-12

- Integrate and evaluate multiple sources of information presented in different media or formats (e.g., visually, quantitatively) as well as in words in order to address a question or solve a problem.

Speaking and Listening Standards for 6-12

- Interpret information presented in diverse media and formats (e.g., visually, quantitatively, orally) and explain how it contributes to a topic, text, or issue under study.

Reading Standards for Literacy in History/Social Studies 6-12

- Integrate and evaluate multiple sources of information presented in diverse formats and media
- (e.g., visually, quantitatively, as well as in words) in order to address a question or solve a problem. Integrate information from diverse sources, both primary and secondary, into a coherent understanding of an idea or event, noting discrepancies among sources.

Program: Animal Atlas 6
Episodes reviewed: "Bones?! Who Needs 'Em?!"
" "S" is for Species"
Program length: 30 minutes

Animal Atlas remains on course as a program that is entertaining and engaging to a wide audience while managing to deliver information that would be very welcome in a middle or high school classroom. The series matches the evolved visual intelligence of the young 21st century audience by building content with short clips, five-seconds or less in length, and weaving them together in a narrative that keeps a viewer engaged with a compelling narrative overview. The animal kingdom has an innate richness of color, form, and motion and Animal Atlas episodes are built from this richness. The thread that links the clips together is the connection between the differing members of the animal kingdom---including our own species. In a compelling blend, animal examples are pulled from both common experience, such as the horse and cat, and exotic animals like the clouded leopard and the red panda. As the nature of animals is explored, the content and clarity create a program of exception education value.

The "Bones?! Who Needs 'Em?!'" episode moves colorfully from undulating invertebrate jellyfish to galloping horses, delivering physiological and behavioral information that, while entertaining, contains real biological explanations. It covers the diverse kinds of skeletal material, for example, exploring the difference between sharks, land mammals, and reptiles. The program is punctuated with Animal Facts segments that don't just demand recall—they require thinking. Which makes them more fun. The narrative refreshingly avoids talking down to its audience. Like "House", the program understands that real information does not get in the way of entertainment. From the names of turtle shell plates ("scutes") to the water-filled nature of leech skeletons ("hydrostatic"), real information is mixed with humor and some very pretty photography.

In ""S" is for Species", quick cuts, music, and the clever narration make great sense out of the entertaining blend of images and motion through the taxonomy laid out by scientists—the perfect way to make the amazing visuals of nature even more fascinating. The infectious and irreverent attitude of the narration neatly targets adolescents without putting off the broader audience. But even with hundreds of video image, there is great attention to information detail. Whether the screen shows the black tongue of a giraffe, the big eyes of the equine family, or tours the faces of the predatory cats, there is not an animal that isn't fully identified. The program encourages thought while it entertains. The Animal Facts segment typifies the value placed on knowledge and curiosity.

The habitats of the animals explored in the program includes savannahs, rivers, underwater, deserts, jungles, the arctic and rain forests. The rich diversity of life blended with music and a narration that is both fun and intelligent makes this a program well worth watching.

It remains a great exemplar for the use of broadcast media for entertainment and enrichment.

Content Standards:

Content standards were pulled from a random state (Illinois) and matched with the program. The two programs reviewed satisfactorily addressed the standards below. Both the state Assessment Frameworks and the Learning Standard were cross-matched.

Science > Performance Descriptors > 12A.3 - Apply scientific inquiries or technological designs to compare evolutionary trends between kingdoms and phyla, exploring natural and applied hybridization, explaining the increasing sophistication of body systems correlating embryological, structural, and functional development, or exploring the impact of environmental factors on these trends.

Grade(s) 6-8, 9-12

Science > Assessment Framework > 12.7.01 - Understand how scientists classify organisms. Identify common insects, ... birds, reptiles, and mammals using a dichotomous key.

Grade(s) 6-8

Science > Learning Standards > 12.A.3c - Compare and contrast how different forms and structures reflect different functions (e.g., similarities and differences among animals that fly, walk or swim; structures of plant cells and animal cells).

Grade(s) 6-8

Science > Learning Standards > 12.A.1b - Categorize living organisms using a variety of observable features (e.g., size, color, shape, backbone).

Grade(s) K-2, 3-5

Science > Learning Standards > 12.B.1a - Describe and compare characteristics of living things in relationship to their environments.

Grade(s) K-2, 3-5

Science > Assessment Framework > 12.4.02 - Identify the basic divisions of animals and their common characteristics (e.g., define mammal, fish, bird, reptile, amphibian, insect, arachnid; give examples of each).

Grade(s) 3-5

Science > Learning Standards > 12.B.3b - Compare and assess features of organisms for their adaptive, competitive and survival potential (e.g., appendages, reproductive rates, camouflage, defensive structures).

Grade(s) 6-8

Series Review
August 2012

Program: Zoo Clues
Episodes reviewed: "Animal Senses (Ep. 101)"
"Animal Olympians" (Ep. 102)"
Program length: 30 minutes

Summary:

The series Zoo Clues will keep 13-16 year-old viewers engaged for 30 minutes with the nearly infinite visual richness, animal characteristics, and wild range of animal behaviors. Beyond its target audience, both older and younger audiences should find this look across the amazing world of animals fascinating. Beyond basic engagement, Zoo Clues will leave viewers with a meaningful perspective about animals and meaningful comparisons to their own human characteristics. The variety of the animal kingdom is truly odd and bizarre enough to read like fiction, but the clever narration of Zoo Clues links disparate information together in a way that always makes clear that what viewers see is real, natural, and relates to their own life in the real world.

Grouping animal behaviors and physical characteristics into groups from a human point of view holds the series thematically together. Episode 101 explains how animals use their extraordinary senses in ways that we can't. Episode 102 creates an animal "Olympics" where animals are put together in an athletic competition based upon their statistics. It is always kept in perspective by putting the feats in human terms, such as when the leaping ability of a flea is compared to a human high jump of hundreds of feet.

The music is cinematic and supportive. The narrator's everyday tone keeps everything in perspective for adolescent viewers (examples: "sounds complicated, doesn't it?" and "let's investigate!") while keeping it interesting for adults. The pull of the Mystery Animal visual quizzes and the fun of Animal Oddities make the show more interactive and will no doubt lead to interesting social media posts by viewers. The information presented is so rich and mindboggling that Zoo Clues is one of those rare programs that would work visually with the sound off—or as a radio show with no visuals at all.

Episode: "Animal Senses (Ep. 101)"

Amazing facts about animals seem to be continually uncovered by science and they are in evidence in this episode. The surprising fact that bears have the best sense of smell is wonderful when added to footage of campsites—and suddenly bear-proof containers makes sense. The shots of bears sniffing the water are something few people would know to look for. And the cascade of information about bears, especially their close relation to dogs, grows nicely from the hook of their exemplary animal sense. Echolocation in bats is nicely explained and ties in later to bugs that have behaviors to defeat this predatory bat tool. Another featured animal, the owl, should probably have its own show. In addition to the bird's extraordinary abilities, nicely demonstrated here, its visual impact in high definition will have viewers grabbing the remote to freeze-frame. Dense, complex plumage is reason enough to have high definition television.

Episode: "Animal Olympians" (Ep. 102)"

Whether in an Olympic year or not, the matching of animals in a mythical competition is fun. Imagine a sailfish, cheetah, pronghorn sheep and a wildebeest competing in a dash. The winners are surprising—and lead to even more surprising information. An animal going 200 miles per hour is almost beyond belief—but the program uses that fact to explore the difficulties of anything, animal or machine, hitting that speed. It shows how the falcon's speedster adaptations the signature strengths of the program. Other marvelous facts include the sperm whale's 2-hour underwater dives without breathing, the twenty-hour sleep cycle of the sloth, and the revelation that the migratory tern gets more sunlight in its life than any other animal on the planet—including man.

Education Summary:

In an age of high definition video, animals make very good television and pull a young learner in by the eyes. This program's presentation mix of narration, visuals, and very well chosen topics delivers education and information while it entertains. In the current method of assessing education, particularly with the emergence of Common Core standards now in all but four states, information should never be presented in isolation but always in a context upon which knowledge can be based. With media, information must also be entertaining enough to keep a viewer watching. In an age when studies show the average young person 8-18 years consumes nearly eight hours of media every day—more than ten of multitasking is included—it's extremely important for programs to provide both meaningful content and entertainment. Zoo Clues does this.

Target audience (13-16 year-olds) for tone, program content, and learning concepts:

- Middle and high school (ages 13-16)

General Category of Learning:

- Biological sciences
- Thinking skills

There are also marginal links to the mathematics standards in the programs that compare animal and human performance.

Content Standards Applicable for "Zoo Clues"

Common Core

The Common Core Content Standards (adopted by all but four states) at the current date are outlined for English Language arts & Literacy in History/Social Studies, Science, and technical Subjects (<http://www.corestandards.org/>, published in June 2010 by the National Governors Association and the Council of Chief State School Officers.) The most appropriate for Zoo Clues are in the sciences although mathematics applies to instances in single episodes. In addition to Common Core links below, some examples from a non-Common Core state are referenced—in this case, those from Texas.

Reading Standards for Literacy in Science and Technical Subjects 6–12 (condensed)

Key Ideas and Details> Determine the central ideas or conclusions; provide an accurate summary distinct from prior knowledge or opinions. Grades 6-8

Key Ideas and Details> Cite evidence to support analysis of science explanations> Determine the central ideas or conclusions; summarize complex concepts, processes, or information presented by paraphrasing them in simpler but still accurate terms. Grades 9-10, 11-12

Craft and Structure> Determine the meaning of symbols, key terms, and other domain-specific words and phrases as they are used in a specific scientific or technical context. Grades 9-10

Craft and Structure > Analyze how the text structures information or ideas into categories or hierarchies, demonstrating understanding of the information or ideas. Grades 11-12

Integration of Knowledge and Ideas> Translate quantitative or technical information expressed in words into visual form. Grades 9-10

Integration of Knowledge and Ideas> Distinguish among facts, reasoned judgment based on research findings, and speculation. Grades 6-8

Integration of Knowledge and Ideas> Compare and contrast the information gained from experiments, simulations, video, or multimedia sources with that gained from reading a text on the same topic. Grades 6-8

Mathematics: High School: Modeling: Real-world situations are not organized and labeled for analysis; formulating tractable models, representing such models, and analyzing them is appropriately a creative process. Like every such process, this depends on acquired expertise as well as creativity.

State Standards (e.g., Illinois)

Science Standards (Secondary, Grades 6-12):

Science > Assessment Framework > 12.11.03 - Identify the following basic animal types by their common characteristics: sponges, cnidarians, flatworms and roundworms, mollusks, arthropods, echinoderms, invertebrate chordates, and vertebrates.

Science > Assessment Framework > 12.11.27 - Understand that variation within a species increases the likelihood that at least some members of a species will survive and reproduce under changed environmental conditions.

Science > Assessment Framework > 12.11.28 - Understand that reproductive or geographic isolation can lead to speciation.

Science > Assessment Framework > 12.B.4a - Compare physical, ecological and behavioral factors that influence interactions and interdependence of organisms. Students understand that a complex set of interactions within an ecosystem can maintain the number and types of organisms in an ecosystem that is relatively constant over long periods of time. (Essential Knowledge & Performance Expectations, Illinois Assessment Framework – 12.11.31; 12.11.35)

Science > Assessment Framework > 12.B.4b (LS.3.1 Living Systems and the Physical Environment) Students understand that in all ecosystems, living organisms interact with and depend on the physical (abiotic) conditions of their environment for survival. (Essential Knowledge & Performance Expectations)

Science > Assessment Framework > 12.B.4b (LS.3.2 Interactions of Living Systems) Students understand that organisms in all ecosystems interact with and depend on each other, and that organisms with similar needs compete for limited resources. (Essential Knowledge & Performance Expectations, Illinois Assessment Framework – 12.11.32; 12.11.36)

Science>Assessment Framework > 7 12 A - Know and apply concepts that explain how living things function, adapt and change.

Science>Assessment Framework > 12B - Know and apply concepts that describe how living things interact with each other and with their environment.

From Illinois State Board of Education and documents from Olympia (Illinois district)

Hall Davidson served as Director of Education Services at PBS station KOCE-TV for 15 years, where he also was executive director of the media consortium Telecommunications of Orange County (TOC) serving over 400,000 students. Prior to that, he worked in educational media at PBS station KLCS-TV in Los Angeles. He was president of Video-Using Educators and is currently chairman of the school site council at a public elementary school in Los Angeles. He is director of the nation's oldest student media festival, the California Student Media & Multimedia Festival, and served on the board of directors of California's largest technology user group, Computer-Using Educators (CUE). He is an Emmy-nominated producer of educational programs. He was classroom teacher in the public school system and began teaching on television at night on an Emmy-winning program before leaving the classroom for a position providing staff development for teachers on media use in the classroom.
