The Wis. Department of Agriculture,	Central Time	1/1/20 @ 3:15 pm Trade and Consumer Protection is moving forward with a process to revisit some of the regulations that govern Wisconsin's livestock siting rules. With the smell of large-scale farms being a local flash point in the debate, learn about the science of smell and how determinations are made about the odor of concentrated animal feeding operations. (Duration: 11 min, 37 sec)

A dairy marketing and policy expert discusses a record loss in Wisconsin dairy herds in 2019. Also, a look at the context of major U.S. milk seller Borden Dairy Co. filing for bankruptcy. (Duration: 10 min, 8 sec)	Central Time	1/7/20 @ 3:30 pm
Federal farm subsidies shot up to a 14-year high in 2019, but Wisconsin wasn't among the top recipients. Hear how the money got distributed and what farmers are saying about the trade disputes that marked the past year. (Duration: 9 min, 58 sec)	Central Time	1/10/20 @ 3:15 pm
Many people idealize the benefits of small-scale organic farming, but research shows its requirement for land is a strike against it when it comes to climate change. Learn about pros and cons of small-scale organic farming. (Duration: 11 min)	Central Time	1/21/20 @ 3:30 pm
Many large-scale chicken farmers take on debt to get started in the business and find it tough to repay. We talk with an animal rights activist who's working with farmers to find new revenue streams and reform the chicken industry. (Duration: 12 min, 15 sec)	Central Time	1/31/20 @ 3:45 pm
